AN

INSTITUTION OF GENERAL O 9.16

HISTORY

BEING

A Complear body thereof,

From the beginning of the World till the Monarchy of Constantine the Great.

WHEREIN

Are described the several Empires, and the Contemporaries with them, all distinctly and by themselves, and yet linked together by Synchronisms:

As allo.

The Forms and Models of Governments, with the Power and Nature of their respective Magistrates, Customs, Laws, and Antiquities;

All in fuch unbroken Order and Method as yet never was Extant.

(With a Table now added to the whole work.)

By William Howel, of Cambridge.

'Η γάρ ω της isopias μαθκοις έτοιμοτατη συώρθασις, η άληθενοτάτη σαιδεία. Polybius.

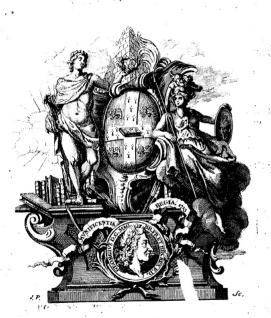

Mescire quid antequam natus sit acciderit, id est semper esse puerum. Cicero.

unde facilius quam ex Aanalium Monumentis aut ves bellica aut omnis Reipub, difciplina cognofcetur? Idem, LONDON.

Printed for Henry Herringman, and are to be fold in his shop, at the Anchor in the lower Walk in the New Exchange, 1662.

3.

1971:91

To the KINGs most Excellent and most sacred

MAJESTY.

SIR.

Lthough the quality of this work be truely such, that, considering the brightnesse of Royal Majesty, and the obscurity of its own extraction, it cannot expect a bare acceptance, much lesse plead any merit in this addresse, yet doth it find more reason for hope than despair; for as much as the whole World hath taken notice that your Majesty's Grace and Clemency is founded more upon the transcendent goodnesse of your own Disposition than the qualifications of your Subjects. Allowance hereby being made for what is mine, it were needlesse to infist upon the Nobility and usefulnesse of the subject, the excellency whereof as humane transcendeth not your Orb, and the utmost improvement of which is within the sphear of your activity. It were a piece of pedantry to shew to your Majesty that History is the store-house whence Precedents may be fetched for all forts of Actions, Publick and Private, Military and Civil, that it is a Mirrour of prudence to shew both their beauty and deformity, a Touchstone to discover deceits, an incentive to virtue, and a terror unto vice; that in it are contained the Prudence of times, imbecillity and strength of Nations, Reasons of State, Councils of Peace, and Stratagems of War: that in it Monarchy triumpheth over the Contusions, Alterations, and Seditions of Popular Government. And should I go about to instance in the various helps it affoardeth to the management of Civil matters, I might justly incurre more than the censure that light upon him, who was so impertinent as to read a Lecture of the Art of a General in the presence of Hannibal. For it may justly be faid that your Majesty hath improved History to the utmost;

utmost; that your actions have so far imitated antient Patterns as to exceed them. Others have wasted and destroyed Nations, you have recovered and restored three dying ones. Others have raged with fire and fword, have rooted out, overturned, and made defolate; your Majesty by Mercy and Grace hath replanted, settled, and inriched. Alexander Conquered the effeminate Persians, and subdued other Nations whom their own unfitnesse for Military matters helped him to overcome. Casar tamed the naked Galls, and painted Britains, whom fool-hardinesse and barbarism had armed against themselves; or if there be any other Atchievements of them, or others, which feem more glorious, yet the valour of their Soldiers, the experience of their times, and viciflitude of humane affairs, challenge to themselves the greatest share of reputation. Your Majesty hath subdued those things which are beyond Mars his reach: You have tamed wild and extravagant passions of men, Conquered stubborn and perverse dispositions, laid low prejudice, and convinced such, whom all these distempers had rendred affectedly ignorant and disobedient. Your Majesty's Conquests therefore so much more excell the commendations of others, as it is more glorious to cure than kill, to restore than to destroy, to follow the dictates of Compassion and Mercy, then of indignation and revenge, to Conquer the mind than the body; and indeed to overcome one's felf than subdue others. That this is no flattery History will ascertain future times, and both the mouths and hearts of your People at present do testifie, which, though in other matters they may difagree, yet all unite in this concent, that you are the True Father of your Countrey. In our acclamations during those solemnities of your Majesty's Royal Coronation, seeing there is no need of wishing you the Goodnesse of Trajan, we so much the more pray that the Happinesse of Augustus may light upon you, and that those solemnities may in one part imitate the Sacular ones amongst the Romans, that though some of us have heretofore seen the like, yet through the length of your happy reign none of us may do it for the time to come. I for my part, though a vvell-wisher to History, unfeignedly defire, that not till after very many years so great an accesfion of glory may come to it, as will accrue from the passages of your Majesty's Government; and that in the mean time your Majesty may be as happy in the love and loyalty of your People, as they are in your Princely clemency and care. To this, both a fense of merit and duty binds me, being

Your Majesties most loyal, and most humble subject and servant,

Will, Howel.

PREFACE.

He French (who first Introduced this enston into the World of writing Prefaces before the works of others) have used that liberty with so much excesse in the commendation of their friends, that they have rendered it not onely suspected to the Reader, but prejudicial to their repute whom they intended to honour by it. But as I cannot approve the indiferest zeal of those persons that would rather abrogate a good Office when abus'd, than indeavour to reform it, I would neither wave an imployment which gave me the occasion of hinting to the Reader some such things as may be of concernment to him in the perusal of this work and which the modesty of the Author would not permit him to communicate, neither on the other fide would I willingly recede from the strictnesse and severity of truth. So that what soever shall fall from me to his advantage shall not need any favourable construction to make it passe, nor shall I take that freedom to mix fiction and History together: The use of this latter is so obvious to every eye, that it is needlesse to speak much of it, it shall suffice me in short to say, that by the knowledge of History we are taught wildom, and led to vertue, there being nothing in the Actions or Fortunes, either of publick or private persons, to which somewhat in former Ages bore not a resemblance, and which by a due consideration of the circumstances we may not with profit apply to our present occasions. How much we are excited to virtue by it, they that know the power of Emulation in noble minds will eafily conclude: which is manifest by the famous examples of Themistocles, whom the wictories of Miltyades robbed of his repose, of Alexander, who was stirred up to the defire of glory by reading the actions of Achilles, as Calar by reflecting upon his; add to this, that such persons whom these Precedents of wertue will not encourage to it, are an'd by History from running headlong into vice, when they cannot but look on the writers of the present Age to be set as spies upon their Actions, and must expect when they are dead to be exposed without fear or flattery to the Impartial censure of the living. For who is there that would would so much value the pleasure of a glasse of Wine, as not to abstain from drinking it, if he knew it had been all night steep'd in Antimony.

Ikefe, be fides many others, are the benefits which accrue to us by the know-lege of History in general, but that I may inform the World how much it is acknowleging to the worthy Author of this Institution in particular, and wherein those excellencies of his consist, which distinguish him from the ordinary crowd of Historians, Ut possit digito monstrari & dicier hic est, I must take leave to insist upon these ensuing heads, wherein I shall plainly make appear to the equal and candid Reader, that History is reduced by him in this work to such order, and exact Method, as never yet in any Language.

For, first you have here all the Empires in distinct Chapters by themselves, with the Contemporaries of them distinguished in the same manner from each other, and from the Empire to which they were Coataneous. Whereas both in Systems and in larger Volumes of General History they are mingled together with a strange consussion, like the several ingredients of an Olio in the same Dish, where the variety of the Meats destroy the taste of one another, and he that would read any History by it self, finds it immediately embroyld and interwoven with the affairs of other Nations, so that he will not easily form a perfect Idea in his mind of that which is given him but in parcels.

In the next place this Author has furnished you with a general Description of Greece, its antient Kingdoms and Commonwealths, from their first Originals, the successions of Kings, changes of Government, and forms of the several Republicks, with the power and nature of their respective Magistrates and Officers, not omitting the most considerable Customs, Laws, and Antiquities of each of them, deduced from the best Historians, whom you still find quoted in the Margent; this, as it hath never been intirely performed by any Author heretofore, so ought it to set a peculiar mark of Honor upon ours, who hath been carefull to give us an exact account of that Countrey, which was the Mother of Arts and Sciences.

After this, if we will turn our eyes upon the Macedonian Empire, and the several parts and branches of it, as the Kingdoms of Syria, of Macedon, and Egypt, we shall still have greater occasion to admire the learn'd diligence of the Author. The Gracian Monarchy after the decease of Alexander not being more dismembred and rent in pieces by his Successors, than by those Writers who have transmitted the memory of it to posterity, particularly, the Asian and Egyptian Kingdoms under the Seleucida and Ptolomies have never been compiled in one History, and I have often wondred in my perusal of this Institution, by what means the Author of it could arive at so clear a knowledge of those perplex'd successions, it was certainly a work of great labour to compare Historians, and to weave these several Arguments and loose pieces into one entire Loom, which I the rather mind the Reader of, because it is not easily perceived by every ordinary capacity, for the uniformity of the style, and the unbroken order of the whole is such, that they onely who are conversant in Antiquities are able to judge what travel and study were required to it.

The Roman History next invites our observation; wherein the successe of this Author hath sufficiently recompenced his worthy pains: I dare confidently affirm, No modern Pen hath yet carried it on with fo great light from the Original of the Citie to the time of Constantine. For from the banishment of Tarquin to the new modeling of the Government by Augustus, you have all the Intermediate Changes, Alterations, and Seditions of it, while yet a State, as the contests of the Patricians and Commons, with the several motives of them , The displacing and restoring of Annual Magistrates, the Description of their Offices, the Rites and Ceremonies of their Religion; all collected with great diligence from the Fathers of Roman History, but never given us in one body by antient Authors, or by any of later dayes. I confesse I have read a French Historian, who from the reign of Augustus almost to that of Justinian hath given me the greatest satisfaction of any man; Yet he often amufeth himself (as some of our bad Chroniclers at home have done with passages of small concernment, below the Dignity of an Historian to relate: and from the Foundation of the Citie to Augustus, pays his Readers with a bare Translation of Florus. Sr. Walter Rawleigh (never to be mentioned without honour) concludes his History with the end of the Macedonian War, and the conversion of that Kingdominto a Roman Province: much about the same time we are forsaken by our best Guide Livy, whose Decads from the Captivity of Perseus to the time of Octavius Casar (whose Contemporary he was) are wholly loft: for in the conclusion of his 43th Book (the last which is left us) he introduces King Prusias speaking to the Romans, whom he came to visit, in these words; Deos qui urbem Romam incolerent Senatumque & Populum Romanum salutatum se venisse, & gratulatum quod Persea Gentiumque Reges vicissent, Macedonibusque & Illyriis in Ditionem redactis, auxissent Imperium. But as this Author hath supplied the Defects of Livy, and continued the Roman History five hundred years beyond Sir W. Rawleigh , so in the alteration of the Government from a Commonwealth to a Monarchy by Augustus, the reasons which induced the Emperour to make that change, the manner how, and the form of it, are delivered with so great care, and describ'd with fo much life. That I could not but take a particular notice of it; and (with the civility of those that carve to others where themselves best like) invite the Reader to a more exact observation of that which hath given me so great contentment.

Neither hath he deserved lesse of Christian than prophane History : for from the Primitive times till Constantine the Great he hath deduced the Successions of Bishops in the principal Sees, with the practice of the Christians, and a faithfull relation of their sufferings in all the persecutions.

For what concerns our own Island. I think he hath perform d the part of a true English-man, and a lover of his Countrey : for he hath vindicated the Antiquity of its first Discovery by the Phoenicians, and that not onely by, the probable reasons alleged by that great person Bochartus for the Etymology of the word Britannia, but by other indeniable, and convincing circumstances, which as it redounds to the honour of our Nation, so reflects a part of that glory to our Author.

One particular of no slight consequence I had almost omitted: That as the Reader may without any intervening matters impertinent to his present purpose read the History of any Empire, or Kingdom Contemporary to it, by it self, so he may likewise observe that the principal passages in all of them are linek'd together by Synchronisms, not onely placed in the Margent, but in the beginning or end of every notable Occurrence.

Thus I have briefly, and with much fincerity couch'd together fome of those Excellencies, which among st many others I have observed in this Institution of History: of which if I may presume to give my private opinion, (though I am conscious to my self how little it aught to fignific to the World) I think the work taken all together is for the order of it handsomly and judiciously contrived, for its style perspicuous, and for the learning in the several parts of History, Antiquity, and Chronology, uncommon. Those who desire a greater politenesse in the style may consider, that the florid way of writing, which hath undefervedly acquired so great a name to some of our own Age and Nation, is nothing proper to an Historian, and that our Author busied himself in matters more serious, and of greater use, he chose rather the plain but comely strength of the Dorique Pillar, than the Effeninate, though curious shape of the Corinthian. For my own part, I confesse that plainnesse and unaffected simplicity is pleasing to me : and I think no Intelligent Person that goes upon businesse, will leap Hedges out of the open and direct Road, to Travel over Flowry Fields, or painted Meadows.

INSTITUTION

Generall History.

The First Part. BOOK I.

CHAP. I.

From the beginning of the world, to the beginning of the first Empire.

Man created.

Falleth.

N (a) the beginning God created the Heaven and the (a) Gen. 1. 1. Earth. By (b) Faith we understand that they were (b) Heb. 1. 3. framed by his Word, so that things which are seen, were not made of things which do appear.

2. Mans habitation being made and convenient- Gen. 1. &c.; ly furnished the fixth day; then (and not till then) was he made of the dust of the Earth, and, God breathing into his nothing the breath of life, he became a living Soul. Being placed in the Garden of Edon, and a meet help wanting to him, Evo was framed of one of his ribs. Of all the Trees of the Garden, except that of the knowledge of Good and Evil, they might fairly eare; and at such time as they should eat it, they were surely to dye. But the Serpent beguiled the woman, who did ear thereof, and giving to her Husband, he also did ear, Hereby they rendred themselves guilty of temporall and eternall death; they were condemned to labour and forrow; and those not confined to their own persons, but extended to their whole posterity, involved with them in the same guilt: the demonstrating whereof might seem the Scope of this present Work; nothing having succeeded but wanty and vexation of spirit: nothing but labour and travail under the

3. Adam, being expelled Paradife to till the ground, be jut of Eve his others Cyprefs,

cain Killeth

Seth's birth.

wife Cam and Abel; though in what years is not expressed. Abel was a Keeper of Sheep, and Csin a Tiller of the Ground. By Fairh, Abel offered to God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained wirnesse that he was righteous, and contracted fuch envy, that his Brother flew him in the field. The voice of his blood cryed to God from the ground , and drew down this punishment upon Cain, (besides that of the ground formerly laid upon his Father) to be a Fugitive and Vagabond in the Earth: Then de * pride More. laid upon his Father) to be a Fugiriye and Vagadoud in the Eard of Nod, fum is Con. t. parted he from the prefence of the Lord, and went into the Land of Nod, fum is Con. t. where he built a City, and called it Enoch, after the name of his Son. His & Percium. Where he built a City, and called it Enoch, after the name of his Son. His & (a) Gon. t. Family was propagated to Lameeb, the fifthin defcent from himselfe, by (a) Gon. t. Whom the Jews Have thought him to have been flain, by reason of Lameebs. Here the words to his two wives : that he had flain a man to his wounding, and a young word began, is man to his hare: if Cain should be avenged seven fold, then Lamech Seventy to be underand feven fold. After the death of Abel, Adam begat Seth, in the hundred frood in the and thirrieth year of his Age, as Moles (c) maketh expresse mention; negand controlled year of the Bamily of Cain, because his wicked race the Hebre lecting the account of time in the Family of Cain, because his wicked race the Hebre perished in the Flood the Church of God being to be continued in the po-Greek yenar, Rerity of Seth, of whom also (as to the flesh) his Son himselfe was to and the Latin proceed.

From the beginning of the world

4. In the race of (4) Seth, is laid down the account of years from the Mother as

And posterity. Creation to the Deluge. For Seth, being born when Adams was 130 years well as to Faold, begat * Enos at the age of toy; Enos being 90, begat Cainan, and ther, and be-Cainan when he was 70, begat Mehalelec. From the birth of Mehalelec to token birth that of his fon Fared passed 65, from Jared's to Henoch's 162, and thence rather than that of his fon Jared patied 65, from Jared 8 to 11 enoun 8 102. and thence conception, to that of Methufalah 65. Methufalah when he begat Lamech, was aged The Latin 187 years; Lamech when he begat Noah was 182, and Noah at the time word gesitus of the Flood had lived 600 years, all which amount to the summe of 1656; and natus, sigof the Flood had lived 600 years, an which amount to the hinth of his Son, and halfs, including each year of the Father's age being supposed complete at the birth of his Son, the farme All these by divine providence, for the propagation of Mankind, obtained thing. Time All these by divine upon the Earth. Though Enoth had the shortest, yet he avery long time upon the Earth. never died, being taken up by God, after he had walked with him 365 years. Anchifa Alma Methu alab his fon of all others, arrived at the greatest age, being 969 when Venus Physica he died. Yet, in a certain sense, Adam lived longer than he; for being genuit Simone died. Yet, in a certain terme, and fit for generation, he had the advantage wide den 40. of 60 years, before which age we read none of them to have had any chil- 20, Mar. 11.1. dren; Nature then requiring a longer time for maturity. If 60 mow be ad- Luc. 1. 47. ded to 930 years, which he lived, the number exceeds that of Methujala's 1 Pet. 2. 2. age by 21. Seeing the World required it, it cannot but be prefumed, that Vide Plin, lib. each of these begat other children, and some of them before these here men. 7. cap. 8. tioned. But fuch being but collarerall to that line, which was to be brought Gen 5. down to Noah, (who was to continue the generation of Mankind, and to re- A. M. 1656. people the Earth) Moses upon that account, had no occasion to make "Some inte-5. In the 480 year of the life of Noah, God feeing all theft to have than which no kednesse corrupted it selfe, and as well the posterity of Seth, as that of the wood is stronger to be given up to all wickednesse; it repented him that he had made Man, ger; of which He refolved not alwaies to strive with him, yet gave him the space of 120 the doors of He resolved not always to itrive with min, yet gave min the space of 120 the Temple years to repent in. If no amendment appeared in that time he fully determine of Epheshawere years to repent in. of Epischiawere ned by an universall Deluge to destroy Man and Beast, with the creeping made, the cofthing, and the Fowls of the air. Yet Noab a just man found grace in his fins of those Work and his fight, and being a Preacher of righteouinesse to the wicked World, the Lord that died in family preferved in the

Ark.

Ark.

The family preferand a feed, out of which Mankind and his Church might be propagared and repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into
repaired. He commanded him to build an Ark of "Gopher Wood, into repaired. He commanded him to b which he was to take his wife, his fons and their wives, with fome of every Babylon and living thing of all fleth; of the clean by feven, and the unclean by two. On All fleth, The order of living Creatures into the Ark: On the feventh after, he entred it; and on him is Chima by Deluce. The Place day the renth day of the feventh after, he entred it; and on him is Chima by Deluce. The large day the rain because fall, and for continued for any days and as the Delige. the fame day, the rain began to fall, and fo continued for 40: dayes, and as logic farm.

many nights. For 150 dayes the waters previled upon the Earth, (reckoned from the first fall thereof); infomuch that fifteen Cubits upward the Mountains were covered, and all flesh died that moved upon the Earth, both of Fowl, and of Cattel, and Beaft, and of every Creeping thing that creepeth upon the Earth, and every Man. But God remembring Noah; and every 1: wing thing, and all the Carrell that was with him in the Ark; after the fourty dayes, the windows of Heaven were Ropped, and the rain from Heaven was restrained, and at the end of 110 more (which make up the 150) the waters were abated. This fell out on the 29th day of the 7th moneth, and the 196 of the year confisting of Lunar moneths; or the 17th day of the 7th moneth, if they were Solar. 6 On the 17th, day of the 7th, moneth the Ark rested upon the Mountains fleth on dia- of Ararat, according to the Hebrew; if, in this place, the version of the 70th, fame fenfe as and Hierome in the vulgar, be not rather to be credited (which have the 27th) feeing it is not probable that the Ark should rest the same day, or two dayes before the waters began to decrease. On the first day of the 10th, moneth were the tops of the Mountains feen, and fourty dayes after, Noah fent forth a'Raven which went to and fro untill the waters were dried up from off the earth. The Raven returning no more unto him, seven dayes after he sent forth a Dove to fee if the waters were abated, which finding no reft for the sole of her foot returned unto him. He stay'd yet other seven dayes, and again feat forth the Dove, which in the evening brought in her mouth an Olive leaf; fo that he knew the waters to be abated. Then, seven other dayes pasfed, he fent her out the third time, and the returned not to him any more, the waters being now so much faln, that the ordinary Hills might be uncovered, wherein the might continue and feed; although the Plains and Vallies were fill overwhelmed. On the first day of the first moneth of the 601 year of Noah? life, the waters were dried from off the face of the earth; yet fo, as it fill remained moist and dirry, having been so long a time soaked with such quantity of moisture. Therefore he stay'd yet 55 dayes more, till the 27th. day of the fecond moneth, before he went out of the Ark; so much time having been requifire for drying the ground (especially in low places) and for the growth of graffe, and other things necessary for the sustenance of living Creatures, which had now continued in the Ark 365 dayes, or a full folar year, which exceedeth the lunar eleven dayes.

Where Ararat

The Ark rested aponthe Mountains of Araras; by which place most Vide Bocharti understand Armenia, rejecting the pretended Verses of Sibylla, which place it Phaleg, lib. 1. upon a Mountain of Phrygia, near to the Citie Celana, and our of which the cap. 3. two Rivers Marfyas and Meander do iffue. Some will have it to have refted about Araxene, a Plain of Armenia, through which the River Araxes runnerh, by the foot of the Mountain Taurus. But the far greater number confilling both of Heathens, Jews, and Christians, pitch upon the Mountains of the Gordyaans, otherwise called Cardnehi, Cardiai , Cordyai, Cordueni, Gordi, Cordai, Curdi, Go. the Hill ir felf being variously named Kardu, Cardon, Kurud, Kardynus, Cordyaus, &c. What Hill foever it was, it must have flood Eastward of the Countrey of Shinar or Babylonia, and the Vine must have naturally grown there ; upon which , and other accounts these Gordyaan Mountains are rejected by a learned () Writer of modern times, who affirm- () Sir Waleth that Ararat named by Moses is not any one Hill, so called, no more than ter Raleigh. any one Hill among those Mountains which part Isaly from France, is called lib. cap. 7. See. the Alpes , and will have the same ledge of Hills running from Armenia to 10. India, to keep the same name all along, and even in India, to be called Ara-For that the best Vine naturally groweth on the South-side of the Mountains Caucafiand, because of other excellencies of that foyl, he thinketh it most probable that Noah there settled himself and planted his Vineyard. And he The Testimo-alloweth best of the opinion of Goropius Becanus, who conceived the Ark to then concern-

ay of the Hea- have rested on the highest Mountains of that part of the World. re retted on the highest Mountains of that part of the World.

8. Of this Deluge a tradition remained amongst the Heathen. (e) Berosius Anique, lib. 2. the Caldaan, Priest of Belm, and contemporary with Alexander the Great, cap 3.

wrote of the Ark's refting upon the Cordyaan Mountains of Armenia, and how those that came to see the Reliques of it (which yet were to be seen in his time) plucked off some pitch which they used to carry about them, as an Antidote against infection. Hierome the Agyptian, who wrote the Antiquities of Phanicia, related the same; besides Mnascas, and many others: amongst whom Nicolas of Damajous is considerable, who in his 96 book spake of the Hill Baris, in the Countrey of the Mynians, (a people in Armenia) upon which many faved themselves in a Deluge, and one being carried thither in an Ark, there rested; who might (faith he) be the same man concerning whom Moses the Law-givet of the Jews Wrote, Xispebrus by one (f)is (f) Abydeaus related, being forewarned of a Deluge by Saturn, to have fled by Boat into and Enfebrum, related, being forewarned of a Deiuge by Sainth, to have ned by Dout into praparat. E-Armenia, where, the waters decreasing, he sent out Birds to discover dry vangel lib.9. Land; which, finding none, returned to him again. He is faid by (g) a se- (g) Alexancond to have escaped a great Deluge which hapned in his dayes, (being also der Polyhistor. forewarned by Saturn thereof), by providing an Ark, wherein, with himself, and Cyrill. birds, creeping things, and beafts were preferved. (b) A third brings in an contra Julian. * Experian Priest declaring to Solon, out of the monuments of Antiquity, that (b) Plato in before the particular Ogygian and Dencalionean Deluges, there was an uni- Timzo. verfal one, by which the Earth was much defaced. (i) Another yet telleth a (i) Lucian. in flory like in all things to the Hiftory of Mofes , but that Dencation is placed lib. de dea Syin the room of Noah. The particular Deluges which hapned afterwards in 74 Greece, and other places have by the ancients been confounded with this; and rard. Johan.

(k) fome think they did not in rearrity differ from it.

Voffii. Chro 9. Noah, before the Flood, begat three Sons, Sem, Ham, and Tapher; of nol. Sacr. Ia-

Noah's proge-

which the last in order feemeth to have been the first in Nature, although the gog Differt.4. contrary is defended; and yet fo, as Cham is never accounted the eldest. Vide cuadem (1) Noah is, with great probability, thought to be Sainen, fo much talked of Differt, s.c.t. He is compa- by the Heathen; for many things concur to perswade us to it. He was the (1) Bochart. red with Sa- common father of all mankind after the Flood, which thing is by Orpheus at Phaleg, lib. t. tributed to Saurn. Not onely a just person, as Saurn (m) was, but a preachtributed to Sajurn. Not onely a just person, as Saiurn (m) was, out a preach, (m) Diodorus er of, righteousnesses. From the time of the Plood to the division of the lib.5. & Aure-Earth, he had a natural Dominion over all mankind, which space fitly answer- lius Victor de eth to the Golden Age under Saturn. In that Age, there was but one Lan- orig. Rom. guage, which Mythologists (n) fo far, extended as to make men & beasts to have (n) Plato in spoken in the same Dialect. Noah is called an husband-man, (or, in the He- Polin brew phrase, a man of the Earth); and Saturn's wife, Rhoa, is the same with the Earth: he (a) being also said to have raught Janus the use of the Vine and (o) Servius ia ficle in imitation of Noah, who planted a Vineyard. From Noah's once be- Virgil Senead. ing overtaken with Wine , the liberty of the Saurnals might proceed; and ing overtaken with Wine, the liberty of the Saustraus might proceed; and (p) Athenaus from his curling of Chams with fervitude, the custom (p) observed amongst the lib.14. Romans during that folemnity, of exercising servile Offices. The occasion of the Curfe was Cham's feeing his father's nakednesse, and making a jest thereof; and the Poets (9) feign'd a Law made by Saiurn that none should see the (9) Callimagods naked and go unpunished. Saturn and Rhea are said (r) to have been (r) Plato in begotten of the Ocean and Their, and thence the ancient Romans would have Timeo. (/) the badge of Saturn to be a thip; which things much accord with the Hi- (1) Vide Auftory of Noah. Saurn devoured all his Children but these three , Jugier, relium Vitto-Hory of Noan. Saurn devoured at his Children of the mas did Sem, Cham, rem de orig. Neptune, and Pluto, who divided the World amongst them, as did Sem, Cham, Gentis Rom. and Japher. Of these, Cham the youngest agreeth with Jupiter, being named Jupiter Hammon, Japher with Neptune, for that he had his portion in Islands and Peninfula's. And Sem being for his goodnesse hated by idolaters might by them be condemned to Hell and termed Pluso. 10. Two years after the Flood, Sem being an hundred years old begat Ar-

Cham is Jupi-Faphet Neptune. Sem Pluto.

The posterity phaxad, who is rationally (t) thought his eldest Son; although Elam and Af- (t) Jacobus phaxad, who is rationally (*) thought his electrison; although the same deforming Cappellus in (in be named before him, the Scripture in Genealogies not alwayes observing Hill, sava & the order of birth. Arphaxad at the Age of 35 years begat a Son called Se- Explicate 34. lab, according to the Hebrew; but the Greek Translation of the 72. maketh him at the Age of 135. to have begat Cainan, which is followed by Luke in the Genealogie of Christ. Much is said on both sides for these several readings; but most likely it is that this Cainan was neither thought of by Moses, the 72 Interpreters, nor St. Luke; but that by a militake of the Transcribers he crept into the Copies of Luke, and the 70. Bezin had a Copy of Luke very antient, and now in the publick Library of the University of Camb idge, wherein he is not found; and, what is more, he was not acknowledged by the primitive Church, as appeareth by (u) Irenaus: That the Verhon of the 70. (u) Lib 2. however in Greek, and usually followeth that Translation, nameth him not, I Jacob Capeill.

Book I.

ad initium.

neither doth Epiphanius against Hæresies, nor Hierome in his Heb en Translation. disions, though he there discourseth of the differences betwirt the Hebren crotic pag 35. and Greek Copies. Neither is he read in all Copies of the 1 Chron. 1. In Soc. Moles he is no where to be found, either in the Hebrew Text, or the Chal- Gerard Johan. dean, of Samaritan Versions. Selah (or Schelach) at the Age of thirty years Vostiam in dean, or Samaritan Versions. Setab (or Senerach) at the Age of Unitry years Differt, de gebegat Heber, from whom many think the Hebrews and the Hebrew tongue nere I fa chito be so named. Heber being 34 years old begat Phaleg, so called because si ad ashar, s. in his dayes the Earth was divided.

The building of Babel.

Confusion of Languages.

11. The division of the Earth was occusioned by the confusion of Lan-fur, Isagog. guages, and this by building of the Tower of Babel. (x) Josephus telleth us Gregorium that God had several times admonished men to separate themselves, and in- Anglum in Ohabit the Earth: which they impiously taking in an ill sense, as though he did pusculis. it upon design to destroy them; at the instigation of Nimrod, the son of Chus, Bocharti Phaand Nephew of Cham, (who now ambitiously affected dominion over them) leg. lib., c.13. agreed to build a flarely Citie, and a Tower which hould reach to Heaven, to med facta, c. 6. defend them from danger, in case another Deluge should overwhelm the (x) Antiquit. Earth. They came from the East into the Land of Shinar, and there began lib. L. c. 4. their work. Some put no other diffinction betwixt the Citie and Tower, but will have it onely a Citie adorned with Towers. Others place them at a great distance from each other; but it (1) seemeth evident, that some one nota- (y) Vide Boble Tower was begun, and that in the Citie, which was fituate upon the River leg, lib, 1, cap, 9, Euphrates. To put an end to this defign God confounded their Language, that they understood not one another's speech, and hereupon the Citie was called Babel, fignifying confusion, and the Land of Shinar, afterwards known by the name of Babylonia, fometimes called Babel it felf, and the Citie Babyton, in several Languages. Of this great passage a tradition also remained Mentioned by amongst the Heathen, as appeareth by (2) Abydanus, Histraus, and Sibylla, (2) Aoud Jo-who made mention of it, the Land of Senaar, and of Babylon, which they Et Eufeb was Heathens. acknowledge was fo called from Babel, in the Hebrew tongue fignifying con-parat. Evangel. The fable ral- fusion. Hence also the fable arose concerning the Giants fighting against the lib.9.

sed thereupon gods, and their making a way to Heaven by heaping up Mountains one above by the Poets. another; which attempt was blafted by Jupiter his Thunderbolts.

12. What the fons of men (in opposition to the people of God so called) laboured to prevent in the building of Babel was thereby brought upon them; the Lord scattering them abroad upon the face of the Earth, and yet doing them more good then they intended to do themselves. Some will have the three fons of Noah to have divided the Earth by Lot, which as yet could not be sufficiently known, and at such a Cirie (namely Rhinocoluca) as was (4) Diodorus not built till many Ages after, by (a) Aclifanes, King of Agype and Athio- libi. pag. 38. pia: Nay, one (b) proceedeth fo far as to brand him with Herefie who foever tata doth not believe it. Cham, though the youngest, was advanced by the Hea- (b) Philastrithen above the reft, and named Fupiter: Japhet, as the eldeft, had the pre- us. Haref. 70. Sem's inheri- rogative of birth-right; but Sem for his piety was preferred by his fother, through Gods dispensation, and obtained the choisest inheritance which ex-His five Sons, tended to this, and a better World. He hath five (c) Sons mentioned in Gen 10,22. Scriptute, Elam, Affur, Arphaxad, Lud, and Aram. Of Elam descended the Elamites, or Elymans, Neighbours to the Medes, and whom Luke placeth berwixt Media and Melopotamia; from whom also the Neighbouring (d) De his om-Regions were named. For Susan the Metropolis of the Susans is by Daniel mbnu, vid. Bo-placed in the Province of Elam; and, besides that, (d) Gabriana, Carbiana, charti Phaleg. Mafabilien, and Suffana, as far as to the River Eulaus; near the mouth of lib.2. &c.

guage, calling him otherwise Cahran. From Almodad then, descended the A.-

modeans, by the Greeks called Allumaora, whom Prolomic placeth in the middle of Arabia, near the head of the River Lar, which emptieth it selfe into the Persian Sea. From Saleph the Salapens, who lived more remote upon the borders of Arabia Defere, not far from the foring of the River Berius, From Hatfarmaueth (which word is variously written, and by the Arabians called Hadramanth or Chadramanth) were named the regions id dramyta, Chatramis, Chatramitis, and the Inhabitants Athramotica,

Chairansotita, Chatramota, Atramita, and Adramita, whose Metropolis was anciently called Sabora, Sabbara, Saubara at this day Sebam. From Jerach came the Alilai, a people inhabiting near the Red Sea : Jerachai in Hebren, and Alilas in Arabick, being the Sons of Farlach, Hilal, or the flan gulfe, near the Maca. From Uzal, the Inhabitants of the Kingdom of Alieman (in the eastern part of Arabia) feem to be descended, Sanaa the Metropolis being by the Jews Rill called Uzal. Diela in the Chaldean and Syrian tongues fignifying a Palm ; from him must that part of Arabia have been called, wherein that Tree most grows, inhabited by the Minai. Obal

(in the Arabian conque Aubal and Abal) feameth to have passed over the gulf into Arabia Traglodytica, and to have given name to the mart-Town and

Bay of Abalites of Analites. Abimael was the Father of the Malita, whom Theophralists maketh to have inhabited one of the four Regions fruitfull in spices. Of Seba came the Sabaans properly so called, named also Sacions. Ophir (in Arabick, Auphar, fignifying most rich) gavenameto that part of Arabia near the Sabaans, which was inhabited by the Ceffanita, Chilandres, or Galandra, fo called from the Treasures; gold, for it's plenty, being here in little request. Another Ophir there was also in India; in the Midd Taprobane, as most probable; the Phonicians being accustomed to give old names to new-found places. From Chanila the Son of Foltan (for there was another of this name, Son to Chiu) descended the Chaulonita, called otherwise Carbi, and Carbani, the most warlike of the Arabians, Whose leat is yet called Chaulan. Of Jobab the last of the thirteen, came the Tobabira placed by Prolomy next to the Sachalites. This was the habitation of the Sons of Irelas from Mesha, called otherwise Musa and Muza a famous port upon the Red Sea, as one goeth to Saphar a mountain Eastward,

Where was a City of the same name; both Port and City being well known

16. From Hadoram iffued the Drimanti placed by P.iny upon the Per-which also upon the Persian Gulf, Pliny and others place the El, ma-

3. Affur.

13. From Affur descended the Affyres, called afterwards Affyrians, and Vide Eundem. from him was named Affria, properly fo called, (which was the Countrey lying about Ninas, or Ninive), named also anciently (e) Aturia, and (f) A- (c) Strabo lib. tyria, and in latter times (g) Adiabene. In it Sirabo placeth the Baby- 16 pag. 736.

lonians, Elymans, Paratacans, Gordians, Mesopotamians, Arabians, and (f) Dioin Syrians (from Appet to Poniss, where the Leuco-Syrians dwell) called also Trajano. Affrians. Syria and Affria were of old time promiscuously used; but at (g) Suidas. 3. Aphaxad, length cultom obtained that Euphrates, or Tigris, parted them. From Ar-phazad, Tolephus would have the Chaldeans issued, which as he and others fay were antiently called Arphaxadaans; but in Scripture they are constantly read Chafdim from Chefed, or Chafed fon to Nacher, the brother of Abraham, and therefore owe their Original rather to him; and from Arphaxad feemeth to have received it's appellation a part of Affria, called Arphanitis, and named Arrapachitis by Ptolomy. From Lud came the Lydians anciently also known by the name of Maones, as we have it from Herodoins Lib. 1. 4. Lud. and others; the Carians and My fians also who inhabited the South part of Asia, beyond the River Maander, being reckoned of the same Original by him. Of Aram descended the Arameans and the Arimi, called Syrians, after the growth of the Allyrian Empire. Four fons of Aram are mentio-5. Aram.

ned by Moles, which () elsewhere are reckoned amongst the Sons of Sem, viz. () 1 Chron. Huz, Hull, Gether, and Mas, or Mefech. 14. Huz, or Uz, by general confent of the ancients built Damaseu.

The four Sens of Aram. Huz I.

Hull 2.

Gether 3.

Mas. 4.

There being two besides of the same name; this hath made a consusion amonght Writers. One (h) was the Son of Nachor, the brother of Abraham, (h) Gon, 22.21. whose seat is called Ausius (i) in the Greek, and his posterity Ausita, a people of Arabia the defare, mentioned by Prolomy. (k) Another of the posterity of Efan , or Edom ; who fixed in Arabia the frony, on the Borders of Canaan, from whom Iduman is (1) called the Land of Ux. Hull (by Fofephus (1) Lam. 4.21.

named Oirus) as they fay, inhabited part of Armenia. Gether was the father of the Battrians, according to Josephus; according to Hierome, of the Carians and Acarnanians; and Mercerus strangely joyneth all these Nations fo far diffant in place, together in Original. Mas (called also (m) Mefech) (m) t Chron. is thought by Tolephus to be the founder of the Mesanzans, a people near the 1.17. Camp of Palinus, about the mouths of Tigris. Hierome maketh him the father of the Maones; being the same with the Lydians, whom he himself deriveth elsewhere from Lud. (11) Others will have him to have given Original (11) Junius Boto the people, inhabiting the North part of Syria, between Cilicia and Me- chaitus. Sopotamia, near the Mountain Masins; or to the inhabitants of this Moun-Jounthe fe tain, called Massieni and Massiani. Eber the Son of Selah, besides Phaleg, had another Son named Jottan, whose thirteen Sons Moses relateth, as the scen Sons.

Eber had thir-founders of fo many Nations; Almodad, Sheleph, Hazermaxeth, Ferah. Hadoram, Uzal, Diklah, Obal, Abimael, Sheba, Ophir, Havilah, and Jobab. Their dwelling was from Melha, as thou goeft, faith Moles , unto Sephar, a Mount of the East. They inhabit, faith Josephus, from Cophenes, a River of India, that Countrey of Syria which lieth upon it; as now the Text is: which cannot but be false Geography. And for Syria, Aria is rather to be read, which, as Pliny faith, according to the judgement of others, included three other Provinces of the Gedrofi, Arachora, and Paropamafida, being terminated with the River Cophetes. 15. But neither in this place is there any thing to be met withall like Metha, or Sephar, or any people thereabout of the same name with Jostan, or his Sons; neither could that Ophir, to which Solomon fent for Gold by Sea, and which they also will have denominated from one of the thirteen, be near 4. ria, which lieth at the foot of the Mountain Paropamifas, at a vast distance from the Ocean. Great Bacharens therefore placeth them in the Mediterranean parts of Arabia the happy, the inhabitants whereof, if they may be heard, challenge Jellan for the founder of both the Arabian Nation and Lan-

CHAP. I.

Almodad, 1.

Sheleph. 2.

Feeach.4.

uzal. 6.

Hadoram, S.

Dicklah, 7.

Abimael, 9.

Ophir. IL.

Hauilab, II.

Tobab. 12.

Obal. 8.

Hat farmaueth.

to the Agretians and Achiopians, who used to trade into these parts. This was the inheritance of the Sons of Som, the choisest of all, though contained Japiter's porti- 17. To Japhes fell a very confiderable part of Afia, and all Enrope, the least of the divisions of the Earth, but better improved than the rest, and far more populous; of later times the feat of learning, of two Empires which extended their power to the inwards both of Afia and Africa; and in an especial manner blessed with more than worldly prosperity, since Japhes dwelt in the tents of Sem. The Greeks acknowledged him for their Founder, by the name of interes, than whom they thought nothing more ancient. Most reckoneth seven of his Sons, and as many Nephews. The Sons are Fanhet's 7. (a) Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech and Titas. Jose- (4) Gen. 10.2. phut maketh Gomer the Pather of the Galatians, which if fo, the same Ori-Comer. I.

bate, who dwelt by the Red Sea, betwirt the Mineans and Catabanes, Shebah, 10. which Nations also together with the Chatramora, are by Writers often included amongs the Sabaans. Besides this Seba, there were three others of (0) Gen. 10.7. that name and founders of Nations. As (o) one the Son of Chus, another (f) Gen. 25.3. his Nephew by Ragmah, and the (p) third the Son of fockshan and Ne-Ohew of Abraham, Sebathe Son of Jottan joyned to the Arabian Sea; the rest to the Persian; so that the Sabaans (of whom the Greeks and Roman's know no diffinction) are faid by Pliny, to live from Sea to Sea. The Son of Jokson lived on robberie; but the reft by Commerce with other Na-

Their feat.

ginall must be extended to the Gants, of whom the other were but a colonie; and to some the names of Cimmerii and Cimbri, whereby the Inhabitants of the Western parts have been known, as also those of Knmero, Kumeri and Cymbro, which our antient Britains (of the fame flock with the Gants) Bochartus lib.3. called themselves, seem to own no other originals. But another thinkerh the cap. 8, Land of Gomer to be that part of Phrygia called Catecangemene, lying upon the rivers Cayffer and Mannder and the City Philadelphia; the Plains of which confilt of a burnt kind of Earth like to ashes, and the hilly parts are all stonie, the whole Country being brittle, adust and easie to be inflamed. This he gathereth from the fignification of Gomer and Phrygia, both which import burning; Mojes, (according to his judgment) not alwaies calling the Founders of Nations by their true and proper names, but by the names of the Countries which they planted. Ever when the word is of the plural number, as of the Sons of Tavan, Ciubin, and Rodanim; and all the Sons of M [aim and Canaan (except Sidon and Heth) must needs be names of peorles, not of particular Men. Hatfarmaneth he proveth to be the name of a place onely, for that it fignifierh the region of Death; as Dikla, a place of Palm-trees, Ophir a rich , Jobab fo called from the dafart , and fe-18. Gomer hath three Sons mentioned by Moles ; Alkenaz, Riphath; and

Gomer's three Ashenaz, 1.

Richath, 2.

Togarmah. 3.

Togarmah. From Aihkenaz those descended, according to Tosephus, by the Greeks called Rhegmes; which who they were, is not to be understood; Most probably, by Ashkenaz is fignified Bibbynia, in which is the Bay Aseanins, besides a Lake and River of the same name; or Treas and Phrygiaghe leffe, in which were Afcanea, both Country and City, and Island Afcania. Form Riphat, Josephus deriveth the Paphlagonians, a people of Affa the lefe, neir Ponius, and neighbours to the Mbrygians. Togarma is varioufly expounded by Writers. It appeareth out of Exekjel, (r) that Gomer and (r) chap. 18.

Togarma were not far diffant; both North of Judan and that from Togara & chap. 27. mah come Horses and Mules to be fold at Tyre. Herero well agreeth the v. 14. opinion of Tofephus, who placeth Togarmab in Phrygia, to which Cappadosia wis near adjacent, North to Judea, and excelled in the breed of Horses and 19. From Magog, Tapher's fecond Son, descended the Seythians, ac-

co: ding to Toleshus and others; Gog and Magog, being that part of Soyshia

3. MATOS.

The fame with Promothem.

about Cancelis, which the Colchi and Armenians (whose language was half Chaldean) cilled Gog-hafan, (i.e. the Fort of Gog) and thence the Greeks, Cancafus: to who in alfo Gog arene was known ; which Stephanus describeth to be he ween the Colchi and Eastern Iberi. Marog feemeth to be the same with Prometheus. For as Prometheus was the Son of Japeine, fo Magor of Taphet. Prometheus was feigned to be fixed to Cancafus, and Cancafus was the feat of the Scybians of old time, till they expelled the Commerii, and fucceded them: Prometheus brought down fire from heaven, which might take Original from Magon his finding out of Metals in Colchis and Iberia, And the Fable of his Heart, or Liver, being eaten by an Eagle, may be found in (1) the word Magog, which fignifieth to be diffolived or to decay. Hierapolie. a City in Syria, feemeth to have been called also Magog from him; feeing chartum, lib.t. Deucalion the Scythian, and Son of Promethens, is by Lucian faid to have confecrated the Temple there to the Syrian Goddeffe. From Madai it's generally granted, that the Medes are iffued; the Medes and Perfians being constantly in the Books of Daniel and Efther, named Madai and Paras. From Javan descended the lones , (or all that inhabited Greece, from Thrace to the Isthmus of Corinely the Macedonians being included) Homer calling them Jaones and Alexander being fignified by (1) Daniel under the name of (1) cap. 8. v. at. the King of Tavan. 20. The Sons of Javan were Elifa, Tarshish, Kistim, and Dodanim, from whom four Provinces took their names. From Elifa . Folis, according to Josephus, but rather Elis (the most antient and ample region of Peloponus fus, part whereof is by Homer called Alifum) to be taken for the whole Penin-Sula;

3. Madai.

4. FIVAT.

His 4 Sons. Elifa. I.

Shire.

Cula, Prom Tarfis, Tofephus and others derive Tarfus, the great City in Ci-2. Tarfhish. licia, fome Caribage, another Tunis; but Eufebius and Bocharius understand the Iberians or Spaniards, amongst whom was a place called Tarlesins. Besidesthis, there was another * Tarfis in the Indian Sea, whither ships went * 2 Chron. 20. from Effon-gaber; and indeed, whatever the word originally fignifieth (whether Cilicia or any other place) it is secondarily applied to the Mediterranean Sea, which reacheth unto Phanicia, and fometimes feemeth to denote the Ocean it felfe. Josephus will have Cietim to have possessed himselfe of the

3. Kittim.

CHAD. I.

Island Cyprus, where was a City called Citium, the native place of Zino the Stoick : and hence he faith the Hebrews called all Islands and maritime places by the name of Cheshim. Others will have the Chians, some certain Nations of India, others Cilicia, some Macedonia to be understood by this word. The Romans are by Daniel fignified under this name, and in Ita'y were of old the Cities Ceria, Echeria, and the River Cerus; and Chitties imports the same thing with the word Latium, betokening to lye hid. The opinion therefore of Josephus is very probable, that these Islands and Coasts of the Mediterrenean might be known to the Hebrews, under the name of

4. Dodanim, or Cheshim. Dodanim (omitted in Josephus) by some is interpreted Dardania rather Rhoda- ans, by others Dodanaans. But most antiently it was read Rhodanim, which the Greek rendreth Rhodians, though the name of Rhodes is later than Mofes his time: Bochartus therefore placeth this people in Ganl, about the River Rho. danus (now Rhene) which he proveth, nor to have been so named f om Rhoda, a Town there founded by the Rhodians. Rhodanim, he faith, fignifieth Tellow or Saffron-coloured, which agreeth well with the colour of the hair of the antient Gaules, either naturall or affected ; wherein also the Brittains shewed themselves descended of the same stock, as Fornandes judgeth.

5. Tubal, 6, Mcfech.

21. Tabal and Mefech (the fifth and fixth Sons of Japhet) are joyned in Scripture, most commonly, together; as near to each other. Josephus from them deriveth the Iberians, and Cappadocians, who had a City in his time known by the name of Mazacha, Bocharins understandeth by Mesech and Tubal, the Moschi and Tibareni , which are so joyned together by Hevodotus, as Mefech and Tubal in the Scripture. The Molchi (befides Mofchica properly so called) possessed all from Phasis as far as Ponens of Cappadocia; the Moschian Mountains reaching so far. Then next succeeded the Tibarens, according to Strabo, who extendeth their borders to Pharnacra and Trapezond. the Mosebian and Colchian Mountains; so that they lay betwirt the Traporuntians and Inhabitants of Armenia the lesse. Tubal and Mesech are Chap. 27. noted by Ezechiel, to abound in Slaves, and Brasse, which, by the consent v.13. of Authors, fitly agreeth with the regions of Ponts; especially Cappado-

7. Tiras.

,1 § 1 :

cia. From Thiras most Authors derive Thrace, a woman of which Country was called Threifa; and many names there, both of places and persons, persiwade the same thing. This was the portion of Japhes, answerable to the bleffing of his Father ; that God fhould enlarge bim. For unto it belonged; all Europe how big foever, befides Afia the lefs, Media, part of Armenia, Iberia, Albania, and those vast Traces towards the North, inhabited of old by the Soythians, and now by the Tartars: To fay nothing of the new World, into which it's probable the Scythians passed by the Straits of Anian. To his Posterity belong the Northern parts, which by Fornandes, an Historian of the Goih's, are deservedly termed, The work-houses of people, and heaths of Nations.

22. Curied Cham was not excluded from Earthly bleffings. To his lot fell Agypt, and all Africk, a great part of Syria and Arabia, befides Babylonia, Sufiana, Affyria, and other Countries, which his Grand-son Nimrod possessed himselfe of. David very often calleth Egypt the Land of Cham Plutarch in or Ham: the antient Inhabitants themselves Chamia or Chemia. In Ara- 18ide. bia and Africk the name of Ammon (the aspiration being taken away) was univerfally known, as appeareth by Ammon a River in Arabia, the promontory Ammonium, and the people called Ammonii. In Africk, the Cicy Ammonis upon the River Cinyphus. The Chappell of Ammonis in the Island Meroe. In Marmarica, the City Ammonia vulgarly Paratonium; And the Ammonian Country, where was the famous Oracle of Ammon. Nav all Africk was called Ammonis or Ammonia. Ham fignifieth hor : in which respect it agreeth well with the Greek word Zeus, the name of Jupiter. Ham was Noah's youngest Son; so was Jupiter the youngest of Saturne. From Cham's living in Africk, the hottest part of the World, Inputer may be counted the Lord of Heaven. And Sasurne his being made an Eunuch by his Son Jupiter (or Celin by his Son Saturn , as Macrobius hath it) seemeth to relate to that fault, for which Cham received from his Father & curse instead of a bleffing. Of these things Bocharus giveth abundant satisfaction, to name no more. 23. Four Sons of Cham are recorded by Moses; Chin, Misraim, Phut, and Canaan. From Chus, by a generall mistake, the Æthiopians in Africk have been thought to be descended; whereas by the land of Chas in (a) Vide Bo-Scripture is meant (") part of Arabia, inhabited by the Chufeaus, called also chartum lib. 4. Cutheans: of whom were the Madianites, and Sephora the wife of Mofes, c. 2. who did not flie into Lthiopia and there marry her. They inhabited above Raleium 1. 7. A gypt upon the Per fian Guife, in part of Arabia the flonie and the happy ; c. & fee. to. thought by some to be the same with the antient Scenies, and the moderne Saracens, being called Scenises from dwelling in Tents, and Saracens from their robberies. Ches hath fix Sons mentioned ; viz. Seba, Havilab, Sabsah, Raamah, Sabiecha and Nimrod. Raamah hath two, Shebu and Dedan.

His 4. Sons. Chus. I.

His 6. Sons.

All these inhabited about the Persian Sea. Except Nimred, whom Moses affirmeth to have fixed his feat at Babel. By the name of Mizzaim is to be Their Sear. understood the Father of those who inhabited Agypt, thrise in Scripture called Mafor (the fingular number of the word Mizraim) as it's thought, from the Araightnesse of it, being extended out in length from the Seatowards Syene. From Miaraim, Mofes deriverh seven People or Nations: Ludim, Anamim, Lebabim, Naphinhim, Pathrufim, Cafinhim (out of 24. Josephus will have the eight Sons of Mifraim to have possessed all Aniq. 1, 1. c.c. whom came Philistiim) and Caphtorim.

Mifraim's 8.

the Country lying between Gaza and Agypt, though Philliftin onely gave name to it, from whom the Greeks Cilled it Palaflina. Lybis, he faith. led a colonie into Libya which he named after himfelfe; but as for the reft, he confesseth both their names and affairs to be obscure, their Cities being overrhrown, as he faith, in the Ashiopian War made by Mofis, concerning whichhe bringerh a meer Fable, taken out of Artapania, and the inventions of the Hellenifts. As for Ludim, Bocharus by ten Arguments proveth the Ethiopians to be meant thereby, whom he will have also a colonie of the Egyptians: By Anamim the Nomades of Africk, who inhabited about Ammonis, and in Nasamonius, and for Anamians might easily be called Amonians and Ammonians; they being also a colonie of the Agyptians

Anamim. 2.

Ludim. 1.

and Athiopiani, as appeareth out of Herodoms. Of the fame Original he makerh the Nasamones, Amantes, Hammanientes (who * made their houses of * Solinus car, falt) and the Garamants. Lehabim or the Lehabaans are thought to be the Lehabim. 3. Tame with the Libyani bordering upon Leppt, from whom this denomina-Naphtuhim. 4. tion might passe to these that inhabited the greatest part of Africk. Naphtuhim he placeth in Marmarica upon the Mediterranean Sea; Paibra im in Thebais, a Province of Ægypt, called Pathros, and by many diffinguish-

Pathrusim, 5.

ed from Ægypt, though peopled from it. 25. Callubim he maketh to fignifie the Calchi, though to far distant from Casluhim, 6, Agyps, out of which they descended, and from Paleftime, the Inhabitants whereof descended from thom; both their Language and life in all particulars so absolutely agreed with the Ægypnans, of whom by the Heathen also they have been thought a colonie, left there by Sefeffrie in his expedition, capterim. 7. chough they be of more antiquity then he. The Capterin seems to have been Neighbours to him, from whom also together with them, the Philiftimes defcended, as appeareth from * Scripture. They are therefore to be placed * Jerem. 47. 4, in that part of Cappadocie, which lyeth next to Colchos about Trapezand. Auros 9.4.

It is probable that, upon the report of the richnesse of these places, the . Æ eypsiand fent out a Colonie (for this drew thither Phrixms, Jason, Sosofris, the Medes and Penfans, and of later times the Saracens out of Arabia): which finding the Climate too cold: or the Country not to answer expectation: or perhaps molested by the Scythians and others; part thereof refolved to return home, and in their way feared themselves in Palestine, after they hid expelled thence the * Anims. The Captain of this Expedition feemeth Deut. 11. 23. to have been Typhon, reported by the Greek Poets to have made War against the gods, and to have peirced as far as Cancafus; but, after many battells, being stricken of Jupiter with a thunderbolt, to have fled into Palestine, where he dved at the Lake of Serbonis and there still Iverh buried.

3. Phut.

4. Canaan

Sidon I.

CHAP. I.

26. The third Son of Cham was Phut, who divided Africk with his Brother Mifraim. To Mifraim fell Agype and most of Africk, as far as the Lake of Tritonis, which divideth Africk into two equall parts, To Phut, all from the Lake as far as the Atlantick Ocean, as may be gathered from (x) Herodows. As far as the Lake, he faith, all the Africans used the customes (x) Lib. 4. of Ægypt; but those beyond them towards the West, a far different kind of 6. 186, 187;

life. Some names retained a memoriall of Phat; as the City Patea; a River of Mauritiana; Tengitana, called Phut; and the Haven Phthia, mentioned by Prolomy, Pliny, and others. Canaan is the fourth Son reckoned in order by Mofer. He begat Sidon his first-born, and Heib, the Tebusite,

His Posterity the Ammonite, the Girgafite, the Hivite, the Arkite, the Sinite, the Arvadite, the Zemarite, and the Hamathite. By Canaan was inhabited the Land, which thereupon bore his name, and was afterwards conquered by the Hebrews. His Family was propagated as far as the Sea, the Phanicians being descended of him, as Eupolemus an Heathen Writer, in his Book of the Fems, bare witnesse, saying, That Saturne begat Belus, and Chanaan; and the later begat the Father of the Phanicians : besides, one Cna is said by San- Euseb. prepar. choniathon (a most antient Phanician Writer) to have been the first Man Evang. lib. 9.

that was called Phanician; whence by Stephanus, Phanice is called Cna, and the Phanicians Cnai. Bur, what is more, the Scriprure calleth Phanicia the Land of Canaan.

27. Sidon the first-born of Canaan, was the Father of the Sidonians, or the builder of the City Sidon, which was more antient than Tyre, and the Metropolis to it; the Sidonians having led a Colonie thither, and founded Tyre, according to Trogm (7) before the destruction of Troy; 240 years before Tyre, according to Trogue (7) before the destruction of Troj, 240 years before the building of Solomon's Temple, as Josephus counteth. The children of Heth (2) Aniquib 8.

dwelt in the Land of Canaan, about Hebron and Barfeba towards the South ; cap. 2. Hetb. 2. The Jebusties, and from them the Anakims descended. The Jebusties held Hierusalem, and the Castle of Sion untill David's time. The Ammonstes passed the Mountains of Judea, and passing over Fordan made War upon the Moabites and Ammonite, 4. Ammonites; seized upon Basan, Hesbon, and all the Country lying between the Rivers Fabbok and Arnon: in memory whereof, one of their Poets wrote a Poem which Moses (a) hath inserted into his Writings. The Gergasites (a) Num. 21. Gergafite. 5. seem to have continued about Geresa or Gadara, over against Galile, beyond Jordan, (b) till Chrift's time. The Hivites dwelt in Mount Hermon, to- (b) Mat. 8,28, Hivite, 6.

wards the East of the Land of Canaan, from whom descended the Gibeonites, living nigh to Ferufalem, and the Sichemites dwelling near to Samaria, more towards the West. The Arkites inhabited Area, or Arce, a City in Liba-Arkite. 7. mus, mentioned by Josephus and Ptolomy. The Sinites had a City called Sin, Sinite. 8.

not far from Arce, according to Hierome : but Bocharius placeth them at Pelufum; Sin fignifying mud or clay, as Peles in Greek. The Arnadices Artadite. 9. or Aradites, feized upon the Island Aradus, on the Coast of Phoenice, at the moruh of the River Eleuiberm, and part of the neighbouring Continent, where was Axtaradus, Marathus, and Laodicea. The Zemarites, or Semerites, dwelt as it's thought about Finefa a notable City of Calofyria, upon Zamarite. 10.

the River Orontes, and built Semarajim in the Tribe of Benjamin. And the Hemathites were feated about the City of Syria, called Epiphania, and not Memathite, 11 at Antiochia, which is attoo great a distance. This was the Inheritance of the Sons of Canaan, whose border was from Sidon, as thou comest to Geran unto Gaza, as thou goel unto Sordome and Gomorrah, and Admah and Zeboim, even unto Lafhi; which some interpret Cafaroa Philippi, others Callichoi: but Bocharius thinketh it to be Lyfa, a City of the Arabians, in the mid-way between the Dead and Red Seas.

Thus was the Earth most antiently divided and possessed after the Flood. How it but fince, in the feverall parts of it, changed it's Inhabitants, shall be discovered, upon occasion, as the Work will bear.

CHAP. II.

Of the Babylonian Empire, from the first founding thereof to it's utter Subversion by Cyrus.

The beginning of Nime rod's King-

.2

12

A Prer the division of the Earth; Nimred, as we faid, the Son of Chus A and Nephew of Cham fixed his feat at Babel, and therein first began a Kingdon; having joyned to it (4) Erech, and Accad, and Calneh, in the (4) Gen.10,10. Land of Shinar. By Erech, the ancients understood Edella; and by Accad. Nelibis : But neither the names nor fituation of these Ciries do agree ; they being in that part of Mesopotamia which lyeth towards Armenia, and very far from Bubylon. Therefore Erech is rather to be taken for Arecca a City of Sustana upon Tigris, mentioned by Piblomy, which also seemeth to be (b) Lib. 1. the fame with Arderica or Anderica (b) in Herodotus; Ard in the Perfian c. 185. tongue fignifying great. And well Arecca might fo be called, which was fo long, that failing up the River one should meet with it three severall dayes, one after another; as the Historian relateth. Rochartus thinketh Accad (called also Archad) to have given name to the River Argad, which ran through Surgeona a Province near to Babylonia & fince called Apolloniatis. By Calnet (which is also Calno and Cauno) is to be understood that City, by the Parthians, re-built and called Clasiphon. It flood upon Tigris, three miles from Selencia, being the Metropolis of Chalenitis, a Province denominated from it, and mentioned by Strabo, and others. Babylon was exhausted by the building of Seleucia, as Pliny (c) tellethus; and the Parthians built (orrer (c) Lib. 6.

The beginration of the Affirian Empire.

built) Clesiphen in Chalonitis, three miles off, to drain Seleucia. 2. The duration of this Babylonian or Affirian Empire till Sardanapalue ning and du- is variously affigned; the cause of which seemeth to be, for that some derived the Originali thereof from the birth of Chus, as Cappellus * thinketh, * Ad A. M. and to Harodoins might affign 1520 years to the continuance of its Others 1822. P. 454 from the beginning of the Babylonian Kingdom, as Diodorns, who reckoneth 1400 years to the death of Sardanapalus. Some from the building of Ninive, as Clefias, who hath 1 360. And laftly, others from the death of Belns, as Treque and Enjebins, who give to it 1300 years. That Nimred should begin his Kingdom within an hundred years after the Flood, is not very probable, as neither that the building of the Tower of Babel happened within that rime; which would have been too short a space for the propagation of mankind to so great multitudes. An hundred years after the Deluge, Phaleg was A. M. 759. bont in whose dayes it was that the Earth was divided. Some make the division to have been at the same time of his birth, and thence his name imporfed, as from a thing already done, or in doing. Others affign it to the latter end of his dayes, and will have his name prophetically given by his Father : Lege Voffit But there are not wanting, who take a middle way betweet these two, and Ifag. chron, think the division made, when he was come to ripenesse of age; or in the Differt, s.c. 3, middle of his years; the number of which amounted to 239. When Alexander the great had conquered Rabylon, which fell out about the 3675th year of the World; Callifthenes the Philosopher, who followed him in his Wars, Porphyrlus of the World; Caustinenes the Philosopher, who followed min his was apud Simpliat the define of Aristotle his Kinsman, inquired into the Antiquities of the found in Aristotle his Kinsman, inquired into the Antiquities of the found in Aristotle his was apud Sind Aristotle his was a could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his was a could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his was a could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his was a could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his Kinsman, and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his Kinsman, and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his Kinsman, and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his Kinsman, and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his Kinsman, and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his Kinsman, and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his Kinsman, and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his kinsman, and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his kinsman and could find no observations of any longer date then a 903 lot Aristotle his kinsman and could find no observations of any longer date the second his his and a second his action of the properties of the propert years; which being cast back from the foresaid years, fall in their beginning, lib. >.

into the 1772 from the Creation, the 116th, from the Deluge, and the 16th. of Phaleg's life.

Belus.

Whether he

CHAP. II.

Nimrod named 3. Nimrod, the founder of this Empire, was by his subjects named Be'. or Belus, which fignifieth Lord, or Soveraign. That he was the ancient Belu's, is thence proved; that * most of the old Writers accounted Be us the builder * Semiramie of Babylon, although some attributed it to Semiramis, herein relying upon the cam condiderat, credit of Clesia, which now is deservedly suspected by learned men, and in vel, at plerique no case worthy to stand in Comperition with that of Berosus the samous Baby - lus, casus regia lonian Priest (who, as Pliny faith, had a Statue erected to his memory at offenditur. Athens with a guilded tongue) nor with that of Abydenus, who also collected Curtius like. his Hiftories our of the Chaidean Archives. After Moses hath spoken of cap.t. the four Cities, which were the beginning of Nimroa's Kingdom; we read Berolus apud that out of that Land (of Shinar) Affar went forth and built Niniveh and Joseph, coura that out of that Lana (of Shinar) Affair went forth and outer shinker and Apposen lib the Citie Rehoboth, and Calah, and Pesen, between Niniveh and Calah. Abydenus apud Some, according to this Translation, will have this Affar to have been the fon E feb. prep. built Minuth, of Sem, who having built Niniveh, and founded the Affrian Kingdom, Evang, lib.9. Nimroa dispossed him, or his; or some manner of way obtained, and joyned Dorotheus, it to the Babylonian, as Julius Africanus hith delivered. But others contend that this Affer is the name of the Countrey, and not of a Man, and that Firmicum. it is to be read : And out of that Land went out (Nimrod) into Affur, (1.0. Af-Syria) and builded Ninive, Oc. Otherwise they think it would be our of the way, for Mofes to mention the son of Sem in this place, where he is in hand with the Genealogie of Cham; neither could it be peculiar to him to go out of this Land and build Niniveh, seeing all mankind almost, at the division of the Earth, went out of it. The last reading onely maketh the fense intire; for how else could the four Cities properly be said to be the beginning of Nimrod's Kingdom, except he added more unto it? Lastly, this seemeth very compared with him; things being faid to be such before God, as were so indeed, or in an eminent manner: He judging not according to outward appearance, but as they are in their own natures. By the means of Hunting it is urgent that, in Scripture, Allyria is called the Land of Nimrod. 4. He was amighty Hunter before the Lord, or, therein none was to be Made way to by hunting.

probable that he made way unto his Monarchy. For under pretence of what was very necessary at this time (when men were few, scattered, and lying abroad, without defence against wild beatts, which ever especially abounded about Arabia and Babyton) he might gather a band of men, and by fuch exercifes (which the Heathens (4) by their practice, as well as opinion shewed to (d) Xenobe convenient for breeding of Warriours) train them up, till he converted phon, de venatheir force from beafts to men. What was performed by him feemeth to have tione & in Cybeen attributed to his successors. Ninus is (e) faid to have gathered an Army ropedia. of Arabians, and therewith to have subdued the Babylonians; which seemeth 1,2, 0,64, d. to have related to his Conquest of that Countrey. For being a Chasaan, and confequently an Arabian, he might by the affiftince of his own Countrey-men and Kindred effect it; whom he (f) rewarded with that Region beyond Tigris, which thence was, by the Hebrews, called Chus, by the Caldaans, Chuth; tus 1.4. c.12. Ciffia, by the Greeks; and Chuxestan (i.e. the Province of Chus) by the Perfians. From his usurping the tight of Noah, some think the Fable to have

The true Bac-

Africanus.

fprung, of Saurn being cast out of his Kingdom by Jupiter; the word Nimrod fignifying a Rebell, and answerable to his carriage. He is also judged to be the true Bacobus; this word being little changed from Bar-Chus, that is, the fon of Chus. Bacchus was the fon of Jupiter, and he was the Grand-fon of Jupiter Hammon. The most ancient name of Bacchus was Zagrens, which fignifieth a ftrong hunter, answerable to the Epithete given to Nimrod. He undertook an expedition into the East, wherein seem to be contained the Backs of Nimrod and his Successors. Bacchus was feigned to be born at Nysa Arabia; and Nimrod was also an Arabian. And not unlikely might Nim-

d be thought to be over the Vines, who first raigned at Babylon, where was that most excellent kind of Wine, dignified by the Ancients with the name of Nellar. To the raign of Belus, or Nimrod, 65 years are given by Julius Athenaus,

5. Ninus

The Babylonian Empire.

Book L

Ninus. His Conquests.

3. Ninus his fon succeeded him, and canonized him for a God, which gave, as 'tis faid, the first occasion to Idolatry. He made a confederacy with Ariens, King of Arabia (which Countrey withstood most Conquests); and then invading Armenia, forced Barzanes the King thereof, to submit to his Vaffallage. Next he entred Media, where he took and Crucified Phamus the King; and then, being pricked on by defire of glory, and incouraged by his successe, he subdued all the people of Asia in seventeen years, except the Indians and Baltrians; the latter whereof under Conduct of their King Zoro- (e) Biblioth. aftres (or rather Oxgaries, for Zoronster the great Magician lived many ages 1.2.p.65, ex after) Houtly opposed him, and yet at length were brought under, as we have Creja cuidio. it from Diodorus, who reported also that Ninus built Ninive, which he so Justin lib.i. named after himself. Whether he, his father, or any other built it, A Citie it was of great bignesse, strength, and ornament, being in compasse sixty miles; of a Quadrangular form, incompassed and fortified with a Wall a hundred foot high, and of such a breadth as three Charriots might have been driven together a-breast upon it; adorned also with Towers, 200 foot in height. The place of it is not agreed of, and (b) some think there were two Cities of (b) Lege Bothis name; one upon Euphrates in Comagena, and another in Affria beyond chart. Phaleg. Tigris. As for Ninus, many things done both by his father, and successors feem to be attributed to him, He reigned 52 years; and the manner of his death is diverfly related. (1) One faith, he was shot with a Dart as he lay be- (1) Orosius. fore a Town. (k) Another writeth that Semiramia his wife (whom he had (k) Dinon chosen for her admirable beauty and now doated on) obtained leave to wear and Allian. his Royall Robe, and reign over Affa five dayes; and then, when she had got the power into her hands, commanded one of the Guard to kill him: But a (1) Diodorus (1) third, onely relateth him to have been secured in prison. 6. He left a fon by Semiramis, named Ninyas, who being but young, the D. ex A the-wife counter-put on mans Apparel, and counterfeiting his person as well as Sexe is report- nzo & alia. feiteth her son, ed to have done very great things; part of which might rather be challenged by the two foregoing Kings, and by some that followed her. The resem- Justin. or Troblance of her fon in all the lineaments and proportion of his body took away go. lib. 1. suspicion; for the further prevention whereof, the commanded the same kind Diodorus, ut or Garment to be worn by the people. At length, when she thought she had prins. got fame sufficient, she made her self known, which detracted not from her glorie, but added to the luftre of it. She re-edified and inlarged Babylon, incompassing it with a Wall made up of Brick, Sand, and a certain Clay, or flime clammy, like Pirch, which there abounded : and * restrained, by new works, the violence of Euphrates which formerly was wont to overflow into the Town. Not content with the Empire as her husband left it, she inlarged it by the Conquest of Æthiopia, and made War upon India, though without fuccesse; in which undertaking the onely had Alexander the Great her Æmulator, as Fustin affirmeth. But, after the had reigned 42 years, either for that the would have had to do unlawfully with her fon (being reported exceeding virious of her body), or because he was impatient of her so long retaining the power, he flew her; although some lay, she voluntarily refigned the Kingdom. After her death she was feigned to be turned into a Dove, and worthipped for a Goddesse under that shape; the occasion of which seemeth to have been the bearing of that bird pourtraited in her Enfign.

Nini ve.

His death.

Her acts.

Ninias

7. Ninyas, or Ninus, "(18 Fustin calleth him) succeeding, imitated neither Grand-father, Father, nor Mother; but giving up himself wholly to an effeminate course of life, would be seen by none except Concubines and Eunuchs. Yet to him is afcribed that politick ordering of the Militia, which was imitated constantly by his Successors. A yearly choice was made of Officers and Soul- Diodorus, I.a. diers out of each Province, to Ive in Garrison in the Citie, and to be ready P. 77. A. at all Effayes, there to continue for one year; at the end of which they were fucceeded by new Levies. Hereby, the fubject was contained in obe dience; and yet, by suffering the Souldiers no longer to continue together all conspiracies and plots were prevented, which might else have risen amongst fuch multitudes; the space of a year not being sufficient for such through and intimate acquaintance, as might produce any confiderable stirs. Those that followed Ninger for thirty Generations trod, for the most part, in his paths; nothing either memorable, or certain, remaining of them, except of Tentanne the 20th from Ninyat, to whom Priamus King of Trey, when he was besieged by the Greeks, sent for aid. This Teutamus is said to have sent him a supply of 10000 Athiopians, and as many of the inhabitants of Su-Gana, with 200 Chariors, under the Command of Memnon, who bearing himself very valiantly against the besiegers, was at length by the wiles of the The falians, circumvented and flain. From the beginning of the Affrian Empire, to the destruction of Troy, Eusebin reckoneth 943 years, Cappellus from the building of Nineveh 995.

The Babylonian Empire.

Sardanapa-

Teutamus,

8. The 30th, in order was Tonos-Concoleros, by the Greeks and Romans A.M.3166. called Sardanapalus, ennobled onely above the reft, for his excesse in esteminatenesse, and his ruin caused thereby. He spent all his time amongst women; with whom he would fit and spin, imitating them in all things possible, fo as scarce ever in his whole time was he seen of the other Sex. This extraordinary corruption of minners gave occasion to two of his greatest Of-Belefis & Ar-ficers to compaffe his destruction. For Belefis (or Belochus) the Governour of baces confpire Babylon, a great Magician and Aftrologer, out of the Doctrine of the Starres, against him, foretold to Arbaces Governour of Media, (otherwise called (m) Arbachus, (m) Iustio.

(n) Orbachus, and (o) Pharmaces), that one day he should obtain the whole (n) Straba principality of Bardanapalus, and excited him to attempts suitable to such (0) Gatercuan archievement. Arbases herewith puffed up, promised him the possession of Babylon, if his Prediction should take, and laboured to ingratiate himfelf with the Captains of the several Provinces. Then, having a great defire to see what manner of life the King lived, he hired an Eunuch to bring him into the Pallace, where beholding with his eyes his dissolute carriage, he despifed him, and much more incouraged himself in the hope given him by Belefie. They now resolved, the one to draw the Medes and Persians, and the other the Babylonians to revolt; and Arbaces communicated his design and purpose to the Governour of Arabia his great friend.

9. These things being as diligently put in practice, as readily undertaken, Diodorus. the next year an Army of 400000 men coming up to Niniveb, where the King then lay; under pretence of relieving the former year's Guard, refolved to employ their force in the ruin of the Affyrian Kingdom. Sardanapalus, having rimely notice of the revolt, drew out fuch forces as were in the Citie, and falling upon the Rebels in the Plain, put them to the rout. They flying to the Mountains, and recollecting their courage, came down again and ingaged; but with the same successe : after which they retreated to the fame place. Hereupon Arbaces calling the Officers together to advise what was to be done, all of them were for disbanding the Army and departing home, except Belefis, who utging them with what the Starres portended, prevailed with them to flay; but to no other purpose than that the King might He obraineth gain the third victory, which Crostly happened. Now they fully refolved to be shore vistories gone; when Relesis, his credit being deeply ingaged, spent the whole hight in viewing the Stars; out of the mystery of which he was bold to affirm, that help would come of its own accord, and great changes follow, if they would have parience but five dayes longer. They being yet prevailed with, for this once before the five dayes were expired, news came that great forces were coming from Baltria to the aid of the King. To them Arbaces fent, and eafily persyaded them to joyn with the Conspirators.

10. Serdanapalus knowing nothing of this, and puffed up with his successe, returned to his former course of life; which Arbaces understanding from certain Fugitives, and how his Army lay in a secure and carelesse posture, drew down upon it in the night, made a great flaughter, and drove those that escaped into Niniyeb. Hereupon the King committed the conduct of the Army to Salamenes his wines brother, and rook upon himself the desence of the Citie; but the Rebels twice in the field overthrew his forces, and killed the General with most of his Souldiers. Then was the Citie closely belieged, and ma-

Book L

Ninus.

His Conquests.

y. Ninus his fon succeeded him, and canonized him for a God, which gave, as 'tis faid, the first occasion to Idolatry. He made a confederacy with Ariens, King of Arabia (which Countrey withflood most Conquests); and then invading Armenia, forced Barzanes the King thereof, to submit to his Vasfallage. Next he entred Media, where he took and Crucified Phamus the King; and then, being pricked on by defire of glory, and incouraged by his successe, he subdued all the people of Asia in seventeen years, except the Indians and Baltrians; the latter whereof under Conquet of their King Zoro- (2) Biblioth.

Ninive.

aftres (or rather Oxgartes, for Zoroaster the great Magician lived many ages 1.2.p.65.ex after) Routly opposed him, and yet at length were brought under, as we have Crefia chidio. it from Diodorus, who reporter also that Ninus built Ninive, which he so Julin like. named after himself. Whether he, his father, or any other built it, A Citie it was of great bignesse, strength, and ornament, being in compasse sixty miles; of a Quadrangular form, incompassed and fortified with a Wall a hundred foot high, and of such a breadth as three Charriots might have been driven together a-breast upon it; adorned also with Towers, 200 foot in height. The place of it is not agreed of, and (b) some think there were two Cities of (b) Lege Bothis name; one upon Euphrates in Comagena, and another in Affria beyond chart. Phaleg. Tigris. As for Ninus, many things done both by his father, and fucceffore 14, 6,20. Tigris. As for Ninus, many things done both by his father, and successors feem to be attributed to him, He reigned 52 years; and the manner of his death is diverfly related. (i) One faith, he was shot with a Dart as he lay be- (i) Orosius. fore a Town. () Another writerh that Semiramis his wife (whom he had () Dinon chosen for her admirable beauty and now doated on) obtained leave to wear and Allian. his Royall Robe, and reign over Asia five dayes; and then, when she had got var. Hist. 17.6.1. the power into her hands, commanded one of the Guard to kill him: But a (1) Diodorus (1) third, onely relateth him to have been secured in prison. 6. He left a fon by Semiramis, named Ninyas, who being but young, fine D. ex Atheglorie, but added to the luftre of it. She re-edified and inlarged Babylon, flime clammy, like Pirch, which there abounded : and * restrained, by new works, the violence of Euphraies which formerly was wont to overflow into the Town. Not content with the Empire as her husband left it, she inlarged it by the Conquest of Ethiopia, and made War upon India, though without fuccesse; in which undertaking she onely had Alexander the Great her Æmulator, as Justin affirmeth. But, after the had reigned 42 years, either for that the would have had to do unlawfully with her fon (being reported exceeding vicious of her body), or because he was impatient of her so long retaining the power, he flew her; although some lay, she voluntarily refigned

His death.

wife counter-put on mans Apparel, and counterfeiting his person as well as Sexe is report- nzo & alia. feiteth her son, ed to have done very great things; part of which might rather be challenged

Her acts.

Ninias

the Kingdom. After her death she was feigned to be turned into a Dove, and worshipped for a Goddesse under that shape; the occasion of which seemeth to have been the bearing of that bird pourtraited in her Enfign. 7. Ningas, or Ninus," (18 Tustin calleth him) succeeding, imitated neither Grand-father, Father, nor Mother; but giving up himself wholly to an effeminate course of life, would be seen by none except Concubines and Eunuchs. Yet to him is afcribed that politick ordering of the Militia, which was imitated constantly by his Successors. A yearly choice was made of Officers and Soul- Diodorus, 1,2, diers out of each Province, to Ive in Garrison in the Citie, and to be ready P. 7.7. A. at all Essayes, there to continue for one year; at the end of which they were fucceeded by new Levies. Hereby, the fubject was contained in obtained in obtained in obtained by new Levies. dience; and yet, by suffering the Souldiers no longer to continue together all conspiracies and plots were prevented, which might else have risen amongst fuch multitudes; the space of a year not being sufficient for such through by the two foregoing Kings, and by some that followed her. The resem- Justin. or Troblance of her fon in all the lineaments and proportion of his body took away go. lib.s. suspicion; for the further prevention whereof; the commanded the same kind Diodorus, at or Garment to be worn by the people. At length, when she thought she had prins, got fame sufficient, she made her self known, which detracted not from her incompassing it with a Wall made up of Brick, Sand, and a certain Clay, or

CHAR. II.

and intimate acquaintance, as might produce any confiderable stirs. Those that followed Ninga for thirty Generations trod, for the most part, in his paths; nothing either memorable, or certain, remaining of them, except of Tentamme the 20th from Ninyas, to whom Priamin King of Troy, when he was befieged by the Greeks, fent for aid. This Teutamus is faid to have fent him a supply of 10000 Athiopians, and as many of the inhabitants of Su-Gana, with 200 Chariots, under the Command of Memmon, who bearing himself very valiantly against the besiegers, was at length by the wiles of the The falians, circumvenced and flain. From the beginning of the Affrian

Empire, to the destruction of Troy, Eusebin reckoneth 943 years, Cappellus

Sardanapa-

Tentamus.

from the building of Nineueh oos. 8. The 30th, in order was Tonos-Concoleros, by the Greeks and Romans A.M.3166. called Sardanapalus, ennobled onely above the reft, for his excesse in esteminarenesse, and his ruin caused thereby. He spent all his time amongst women; with whom he would fit and fpin, imitating them in all things possible, fo as scarce ever in his whole time was he seen of the other Sex. This extraordinary corruption of manners gave occasion to two of his greatest Of-Belefis & Ar-ficers to compaffe his destruction. For Belefis (or Belochus) the Governour of baces cossiste Babylon, a great Magician and Astrologer, out of the Doctrine of the Starres, against him, foretold to Arbaces Governous of Additional Control of the Starres, foretold to Arbaces Governour of Media, (otherwise called (m) Arbachus, (m) Justia. (n) Orbachus, and (o) Pharmaces), that one day he should obtain the whole (n) Strabo. principality of Bardanapalus, and excited him to attempts suitable to such (o) Gatercuan archievement. Arbaces herewith puffed up, promifed him the poffession lus. of Babylon, if his Prediction should take, and laboured to ingratiate himfelf with the Captains of the several Provinces. Then, having a great defire to see what manner of life the King lived , he hired an Eunuch to bring him into the Pallace, where beholding with his eyes his diffolute carriage, he despifed him, and much more incouraged himself in the hope given him by Belefie. They now resolved, the one to draw the Medes and Persians, and the other the Rabylonians to revolt; and Arbaces communicated his defign and purpose to the Governour of Arabia his great friend. 9. These things being as diligently put in practice, as readily undertaken, Diodorus.

the next year an Army of 400000 men coming up to Niniveh, where the King then lay; under pretence of relieving the former year's Guard, refolved to employ their force in the ruin of the Affyrian Kingdom. Sardanapalus having timely notice of the revolt, drew out fuch forces as were in the Citie, and falling upon the Rebels in the Plain, put them to the rout. They flying to the Mountains, and recollecting their courage, came down again and ingaged; but with the same successe : after which they retreated to the fame place. Hereupon Arbaces calling the Officers together to advise what was to be done, all of them were for disbanding the Army and departing home, except Belefis, who utging them with what the Starres portended, prevailed with them to flay; but to no other purpose than that the King might He chraineth gain the third victory, which shortly happened. Now they fully resolved to be eyer them.

Amer vistories gone; when Belefis, his credit being deeply ingaged, spent the whole hight in viewing the Stars; out of the mystery of which he was bold to affirm, that help would come of its own accord, and great changes follow, if they would have parience but five dayes longer. They being yet prevailed with, for this once before the five dayes were expired, news came that great forces were coming from Ballria to the aid of the King. To them Arbaces fent, and eafily persivaded them to joyn with the Conspirators.

10. Sardanapalus knowing nothing of this, and puffed up with his successe, returned to his former course of life; which Arbaces understanding from certain Fugitives, and how his Army lay in a fecure and carelesse posture, drew down upon it in the night, made a great flaughter, and drove those that escaped into Ningeh. Hereupon the King committed the conduct of the Army to Salamenes his wines brother, and rook upon himself the desence of the Citie; but the Rebels twice in the field overthrew his forces, and killed the General with most of his Souldiers. Then was the Citie closely belieged, and ma-

15

to Cufias,

Maho tafar.

in good esteem in his Court 16. years, pretending to transcribe his History

my Nations revolted to the confiprators; which the King confidering, and feafible of his condition, fent out his three Sons, and two Daughters, with a great treasure, to Coura, the Governour of Paphlagonia, and, dispatching Courriers into feveral Provinces, took what care he possibly could for the making of new Levies.

11. Neither was he behind hand in providing all things within, that were necessary for resistance. There being no fear of storming the Town, by reafon of the wonderful strength and heighth of the walls. He considered the main danger to lye in the affections of the inhabitants; to whom, that they might have no cause to attempt any new thing, he supplied all necessaries in a plentifull measure. Two years and above he held out, and doubted not but to be able to do it, till relief should come; and the rather, for that they had an Oracle that Ninivie should never be taken, till the River first proved an enemy to it; which he never could suspect. But in the third year fell such rains, swelling with that Euphrates (or Lyons, upon which some conceive that Strabo placeth the rain breaks the wall, Sardanavalus Palace.

City, and not Euphrates, nor Tigris, as others) swelling with abundance of waters, made a breach in the Wall twenty Furlongs in length. At this the King utterly discouraged, as judging the Oracle to be fulfilled, lest he should burneth him fall alive into the hands of his enemies, he built a pile of wood in his Palace, upon which he heaped his treasures, and rich attire; and, making a little room in the midft, wherein he bestowed himselfe, his Concubines and Eunuchs, set fire to the heap, and so perished with this Company and the Palace. Such was the end of him, who placed all his felicity in his fenfuall appetite, which he (p) Athenaus would have also recorded in his (p) Episaph, and advised the Reader to imi- lib. .. tate. He is reported so have built (but rather he restored) two Cities of Cilicia in one day , viz. Tarfus and Anchiala; in the later of which was his (q) Monument to be seen, being a Statue of stone, with the singer and (q) Strabol. thumb of the right hand joyned together as about to give a fillip. Upon the 14. Edit. Monument was written in Affirian Characters: Sardanapalus the Son of Caulaby 672. Anacyndaraca built Anchiales, and Tarfus in one day. As for thee, Friend, Hec habes que Eat, drink, and play: for all thingselfe are not worth this, viz. that fillip. In edi, quaque exhim this line of the Affyrians failed, the Empire being divided into two faturata libido Principalities, after it had continued about 1400 years, reckoned from the Haufit, at illa Principalities, after it had continued about 1400 years, reckneed from the jacent, multa building of Babylon. This fall of Sardanapalus hipned about the year of the practise re-

13. The (r) beliegers understanding what was become of Sardanapalus, & Cicerone presently entired in at the breach, and took the City. Then, investing versum, Tufe. Arbaces made Arbaces with a royall roabe, they created him King; who rewarded them Quid aliud inaccording to their deferts, and allotted the Provinces to their feverall Gover- quit Ariffore-King. nours. Belefis, according to agreement, having received the principality of les, in Bovis,

World 3186, 43 years before the first Olympiad.

Granteth Ba- Babylon, and understanding from an Eunuch how great treasure Sardana. non in Hominis bylor to Belefis, palus had burnt with himfelfe, begged the after of Arbices, under pretence fepulchyo inciof having made a vow, in the heat of the War, to carry them to Babylon, and habere fe dicit. therewith to raise a lasting Monument of the destruction of the Assyrian quane vivus Empire. He, being ignorant of his covetous defign, graunted his request; but quidem diutides when the matter was discovered, referred his judgement to a Councill of babbat, quant Officers who condemned him to death. Yet, being defirous to begin his reign (r) Diodorus mildly, he not onely remitted this punishment, but permitted him to enjoy 1, 2, p. 81, A. all the gold and filver already transported; and, whit remained, which amoun- (f) L. 20.816 ted to many talents, he conveied it to Ech tone the chief City of the Medes. (1) L. 16.p. 737. (f) Diodorus and (t) Strabo tell us how he tevelled Ninus (or Ninive) with (u) 100b. the ground. Some (*) think it was onely the Castle; seeing the City had Hill. Sacr. et afte wards Kings, if not comparable to the reft, yet great and powerfull, Exetica P. 170. which they think might descend from Belesis.

What kind of 13. Herodotus (x) writeth how the Medes, having freed themselves from Chronico ad What kind of 13. Herodotta (2) Writeth now the Meday, arving freed the internetives from Government the Affrian yoak, lived for many Ages without a King, in way of a popu- (2) Life, 120 was in Midia, lar government. But (7) Cresion of Gnidos an Author of Something a later (1) Vide Dres date (who served Cyrus the younger, in his expedition against his Brother derum ut fa-Artaker xes, and being taken prisoner in the Battell, was for his excellent skill pra. p. $4.

Boox I

out of the Records of Persia, reported that Arbaces, after the overthrow Kings of Me- of the Affyrians, reigned 18, years and as he left the dominion of Afia to the dis according Medes, fo also the Soveraignty over them to his Son Mandauces. That Mandauces, having reigned 50. years, left the Kingdom to Sefarmus, who reigned 30. Him followed Arrias, and reigned 50, then Arbians 22, Arfans 40, in whose time the Cadusians revolted through the procurement of Parsodas the President of his Councill, whom he had offended. Ariynes 22. Artibarnes 14 (in whose reign the Parthians revolted, and gave up themfelves to the Saca). And last of all Astrages his Son, who being overthrown by Cyrus, the Empire was thereby devolved upon the Persians.

14. That Cielias out of delign wrote things contrary to Herodotus, is probable enough, and that he is fabulous cannot be denied; yet have we a fuccessi-According to on of Kings elsewhere (2) recorded, though such an one as scarce in one (2) Euseb, in name agreeth with that of his. Sofarmus is faid to have succeeded Arba- Chronico. ces, and continued 30 years, then Medidus 40, Cardiceas 13, and then Deioces, whom Herodoius will have to have first obtained soveraignty over the Medes. For having, as he (a) writeth, an ambition that way, he made (a) Lib. 1. c. 9, himselfe popular by pretence to the love of Justice, which then ran at a low 7, 98, &c. ebbe amongst them, for want of authority. He first took upon him to decide the controversies of his own Village, which performing with much equity and conscience, thence became known to other parts, and at length became so famous, that few would bring their causes before any other Judge than him alone. Being aware of this, he withdrew himself, giving out that no longer could he undergo fuch a burthen, and thereby neglect his private affairs. Hereupon, robberies, violence, and oppression, returned throughout the Country; infomuch, that the people, gathering together from all quarters, after a ferious debate, concluded there was necessity of having a King, under whose protection every man living, might the better minde his domestick matters. Deioces was chosen by universall consent, who, having got the

Deroces how power into his hands, caused them to build a City for his residence, which be got the he called Echatane, and having ruled with abundant feverity 52 years, left Kingdom the Kingdom to his Son I brantes. He, after he had reigned 22, left for Phragites. fuccessor his Son Cyaxares, who having long strugted with various Fortune, (as afterwards will be feen) gave place to his Son Astrages, Father to Man-Checares. dane the Mother of Cyrus.

Alyages. 15. Belefis obtained Babylon, as was faid; but how long he held it, or who fucceeded him immediately, is not known. About 71 years after, Nabona-Hatifis his fucfar, or Nabonassar, obtained the Kingdom there; from the beginning of ceffors. whose reign, that famous Ara, or Epoche, known by the name of Ara

Nabonafari, is derived. It is counted from the first day of that Egyptian month Thoth (Febr. 26.) which fell out 746 Julian years, and 310 dayes, before the Eraof Christ, as Cappellus and others reckon; 424 years before the death of Alexander the Great, according to Ptolomy (b) the Prince of (b) Magn. Protomie's Ca- Mathematicians, in the 8th Olympiaa. This Author hath preferred the names Syntax, 11b. 3.

of such as succeeded Nabonasar, in his Catalogue of Kings. He reigned c. 8. tellogue of Kings, 14 years, after him Nadius 2, then Chezirus or Porus 5, Jugaus, or Ilulaus s, and then Mardocempadus 26. In his time happened the (c) three (c) Idem lib, 4.

most antient Eclipses of the Moon, observed by the Babylonians. The first cap. 6, 7. of them in the first of his reign, and the 28th of the month Thoth, the 27th year of Nabonasar. The second in his 2nd year, on the 18th of Thoth. And 176 dayes, 20 hours and an halfe after this, the third Eclipse fell out, on the 15th day of the month Phamenoth. Scaliger and others, think this Mardokempad to be the same with him, who in the (d) Scripture is called (d) z Kings. Merodach-Baladan, the Son of Baladan. But Cappellus conjectureth there 20, 12, were two Merodach's, Sons of Baladan and Nephews of Nabonafar, whereof the one was called Merodac-Kempad, and the other Merodac-Baladan. 16. Mardokempadus, having reigned 12 years, was succeded by Arki-

a. w., who ruled 5. Then followed an Inter-regnum for two years, after which B. libus obtained the Kingdom for 2, then Apronadus 6, Rigibelus one, Mefessimordak, 4; after whom another Inter-regnum insued for 8 years, he being also written Meseffi cardac. Now the Royall Race seem- (e) ufferium in eth to (e) one, to have failed, and Efarchaddon the King of Affria to have And Vet. agin fubjected the Balylonians to his Kingdom; and his reason is, for this Telament, at he who followed at the end of this Inter-transm is hy Posomy cilled Assarah, M. 3333. he who followed at the end of this Inter-regnum is by Protomy called Allaradinus, which he thinketh to differ onely fron Efarchaddon in the found of feverall Languages. If fo, this is he, who brought out of the East Country, Strangers to inhabite Samaria, whence Sa'maneffer had, 40 or more years be ore, transported the Ephramites. He is also, by the posterity of this new Colonie, called the great and noble Asnapper. But how this Astrian Kingdom had sprung up again, during these two Principalities of the Babylonians and Medes, is to be confidered. 17. It is not probable that the vast Empire of Sardanapa'ns was all (nor perhaps the greatest part) subject to Mexia and Baby on; but thit, al hough The arising Affrian King. Arbaces left not the Medes to their liberty, yet severall people he did for dom. How, want of power to keep them under: Hence in forme time the people beyond when, and by Euphrates, wearie of thu anarchie and confusion, under which they laboured, might be willing to admit of a Prince again, though not of the old flock of Belus; whose successors having far excelled in power and dominion, the G celes accounted Sardanapalis the last King of the Assyrians. Who this new Prince should be, remainest very obscure. One (f) thinkest him that same Phul, who made an incursion into the Land of Israel, inthe time Cappellus ad of Menachem, fixing the beginning of his reign, in the 4th O') moiad, 17 A. M. 3226. years before that of Nabonafar. Another (g) will have i glab-P l.fer (or (g) uffering ad years before that of Nabonajar. Anomaly (3) with the William, he A. M. 3237. Thill gath-Pilnefer, or The giath-Phaiafar) to be the min (in £ ian, he A. M. 3237. Alled Thilganus) whom also he accounted the fame with N nus furfacing the factor of the fame with N nus furfacing the N nus furfacing the fame with N nus furfacing the N nus furfacing t nior, mentioned by Exfebrus (b) having assumed the name of the first foun- (b) In Chron.ex.

Phul.

Tiglash-Pilefar, der of the Assyrian Empire. This Tiglash-Pilefar, at the invitation of cestore Rhodio. Judah, went up against Rezen (i) King of Damascus, and killing him (i)2 Kings. 14. transported his subjects into Kir, a place (as Josephus will have it) of upper 16. Media. He died when he had reigned 19 years, and was succeeded by Salmanaffer; to whom (k) Hofea King of Ifrael refused to pay tribute, en- (k) 17. tring into confederacie with So King of Leppragainst him : But Sa manaffor belieged him in Samaria, and at the end of three years, taking the City, carried the Ifraelites into captivity into Chelach, Cheber, and Nehar-gefan. Cities of Media, where he, as well as his predecessor, might have power, if, (Deioces, as yet not having obtain'd the Kingdom) that Country was Rill subject to a popular Government, or rather in a confused Anarchie. 18. After the subversion of the Kingdom of Ifrael, he overran all Phanicia and Syria. He sent an Army against the Tyrians at such time as Finlaus their King made War upon the Citeans which had rebelled; but a peace was prefently made, and he drew back his Forces. Not long a ter S.don, A ce, Palatyrus, and other Towns revolted from the Tyrians to him; fo that they alone standing out, he returned, and having a supplie of 60 ships from the Phonicians, inguged with them in a Sea-fight; but they having but 12, yet overthrew his Fleet, and thereby obtained great credit. At his return, he set guards upon the River, and water-courses, and there kept them five years together, which constrained them to make a shift with Wells and Pits, as Menunder (1) related out of the Tyrian Annals, translated into the Greek (1) Apud. Ioas Menander (1) related out of the 1 yrian Annais, translated into the oren, fephum Anniq; tongue, wherein the name of Salmanafar was recorded. Salmanafar dying tib. 9. cap. 14. Senacheribhis Son succeeded him, called also Sargon in (m) Scripture, as (m) Isa, 20.1. some think. He infested all Afia and Agypt with War; into the later of Berosus apud which, as he descended, in his rement he sore (") distressed Hezekiah losephum King of Judah, who making his application unto his God, obtained delive. Aniquib. io. rance, to the confusion of the Affrian and his Army, Herodotus telletha story, (1) Kings 18. How when he came to Pelufium, Seihes the Priest of Vulcan then King of (a) Lib. a. c. Ægypt, by his prayer to his god, procured all the habitaments of War to be 141.

Salmanaffer.

eaten with Mice; fo that being rendred unable to fight, he was forced to draw back his Army. But the Prophecies against E ype ascertain us that E say 18. this expedition proved very dyfastrous to it, and that many Captives were thence led away, which the Priests, from whom Herodocus had his information, hid this, and all other things that tended to the dishonour of their

10. Returning from Agypt into Palastine, he besieged (p) Lachilh, and (b) 2 Chron. thence removed to Libnah, where he wrote a blasphemous Letter to Heze- 32. kiab. For hearing that Tirhakah King of Athiopia (or Arab.a) (by Jose- 1 Kings 19. phus called Tharfices, by Strabe, Tearkon) was coming against him in behalf of the Egyptians, he removed for fear, and God fent his Angel into his Camp, who slew in one night 85000 men, which thing as a plague was also recorded by (9) Berofus. Then returned he (as God had promifed Hezekiab) with great confernation into his own Land, where raging against the leads at times Tems that dwelt at Nineveh (if credit be to begiven to the book of 1061) he can. 2. was after 44 dayes flain in the Temple of his idol Nifroch, by his two fons Adramelech and Sharezer, (who fled for it into the Lind of Ararat, or Armenia) and Esarchaddon his son reigned in his stead.

20. This Efarchaddon is thought (and that probably) to be the same with Efarchaddo1 the same with Affar adinus mentioned by Ptolomy in his Catalogue of Kings, and who sub-

CHAP. II.

AsTaradinus.

Saofduchinus.

dued Babylon. It is also thought that (r) this is he, who when he brought a (r) 2 Kings new Colony into Samaria from Babylon, Cathab, Ana, Hamath, and Se-17, pharvaim, at the same time making an into d into Judea, (as 'cis very probable) took (f) Menaffeh the King thereof in the Thorns, and carried him (f) 2 Chron. in Captivity into Babylon; for it appeareth from both these passages men- 33. tioned in Scripture, that at this time that Citie was subject to the King of Affria. After Efarchaddon (or Affaradinus) had reigned thirteen years, Saofduchinus succeeded him according to Prolomy; and not Mero tach whom the general opinion will have, (being King of Babylon) to have killed him, and again overthrown the Empire of the Assyrians. For this succession is founded upon a feigned (t) Author imposed on the World, with several (t) Pfeudoothers of the same credit, and therefore deserveth to be rejected. The time Metalthenes others of the same credit, and therefore deserved to be rejected. The time abud Anniam of this Saofduchinus falling in with that of Deioces (who according to Hero- vir. E-benfem. dottes built Echatane the Metropolis of Media) if any credit be to be given fol. 221. De cue to the book of Judith, we may judge him to be that Nabuchadonofor men- jus fish Autioned there to have overthrown Arphaxad, King of the Medes, and builder thoubus, vide of that Citie, in the great plains of Ragan. After he had taken him in the Joh. Goroof that Citie, in the great plans of Kagan. After the find taken min in the plum Biblioth. Mountains, he flew him; plundred Echatane, and then returned victorious Hispan. Tom. 2. ly unto Niniveh, where he feasted his Army for 120 dayes. The year at pag. 356. Gaf-

Chunitadanus.

off in his Tent. 21. Saofduchinus, (or Saofducmus) having reigned twenty years, Chuni- Chron. 1.17 I.A. ladanus succeeded him, thought also to be the sime with Saracus, men- Won of girmationed by Alexander Polybiffor. Agunst him came (u) Phraories, the son in Tot. Apol. of Discess in revenge of his father's death; after he had first of all others subducd the Persians, and the rest of Asia. But his good fortune here for fook (u) Herodotus him, and he perished with the greatest part of his Army, in the 22 year of lib. 1.102.8c. his reign. His fon Cyaxares succeeding is said to have been more puissant then his Ancestors, and the first that distinguished the people of Afia into feveral Provinces, and Souldiers into their feveral ranks of Pike-men, Horfmen, and those that used Darts. He fought with the Lydians; at which time fo great an Eclipse of the Sun hipned, that the day seemed to be turned into night. Having brought to his obedience all Asia, beyond the River Halys, he githered his forces together, and went against Nineveh with intentions to destroy the Citie. He overthrew the Assyrians in battel and befieged the place; but it hapned at this time that a great Army of Septhians ter, entring into Confultation how to subdue the several Nations about him; par. Barterium. he ordained Holophernes his General, who straitly belieging Bethfara, a ibid, pag. 386. Town of Tudea; by the wisdom and courige of Judith, the Widdow of one seth, Calvis.

Manaffes of the Tribe of Ephraim, was circumvented, and had his head cut 1 fagog. Chronil.

Senacherib. A. M. 3287. Look it.

The Southians having driven the Cimmerians out of Europe, under conduct of Madyes, the obtain Afia 28 fon of Protothya, (called otherwise Judathyr fiss) their King, fill followed them, and from the Lake Maois, leaving the Mountain Caucasis on their right hand, pierced into Media. 22. (jaxares hereby was constrained to raise his siege, went, and gave them battel; but was overthrown, and loft the Dominion of Asia, which the Scythians having obtained, marched straight for Egypt. Pfammetichus the King met them on their way, when they had new entred Palastine, and by good words backed with money prevailed with them to go no further. They enjoyed the Dominion of Asia 28 years; after the expiration of which term, miniging their affairs with as great neglect as formerly they had uted diligence in polling and rifling the Countrey; the greatest part of them being entertained by Cyaxares, were made drunken and flain, and the King recovered his Dominion. During these things , (x) Nabopolassar a Babylonian, (x) Polyhiand General to the Affrian King contracted affinity with Aftrages the fon for and ceof Cyaxares, and Governour of Media: Nebucadnefar the fon of Nabopo- drenum, vide laffar marrying Amylis daughter to Aftyages. The effect of this alliance Ufferium in was that they joyntly fet upon Baracus, or Chynoladanus in Niniteh, and Annaver, Teft.

was that they joyntly fet upon Baracus, or Chynoladanus in Niniteh, and Annaver, Teft.
was that they joyntly fet upon Baracus, or Chynoladanus in Niniteh, and Annay Teft. taki g the Cirie flew him therein , after he had reigned 22 years. At this time the Prophecies against Niniveh feem to be fulfilled in its destruction. For in the latter end of the Greek book of Tobit it is written that Nebuchadonofor and Affuerus took Niniveh, Tobias being yet alive, who is faid to have lived 127 years (or, as the Latine hath it, 99.) 95 having already passed from the taking of Samaria; at which time he was carried Captive with his father into Affyria by Salmanafar.

Nabobolassar.

23. Chynaladanus being dead, Nabopolassar (or Nabulassar) obtained his Kingdom in the 123th year of Nabonafar, according to (7) Ptolomy, (4) Maen. Synwhose Canon of Kings also (as to the term of years collected from the par- tax. 1,5. c.14. ticular reign of each) directly answereth to this account. (2) Against him (2) 2 Kings came up Pharoh Necho, and took Carchemish, a Citie fituate upon Euphra- 23. tes, killing Fosiah the King of Judah, who attempted to stop his passage, a Chron.35. He holding this Town, the (a) Governour of Calosyria and Phanicia re- (a) Berosus volted from the Babylonian, who being now unable to undergo the trouble and fofeth. of War made his fon Nebuchadnefar King with him in his 17th year, and lib.t. coniva of War made his ion Nebuchanejar King with him in his 17 year, and from fent him with an Army to subdue Egypt and Syrie; with him joyned (b) Asi. (b) Alexand. (b) Alexand. (b) Alexand. (c) Alexand. (c probably Afrages his fon. In this expedition he made Jebojakin King of Eufeb prep. E-Jud.h, his tributary and drew him from the obedience of Egypt; which Ne- wang, lib. 9. cho taking in disdain, came up against him and ingaging once more at Carchemilh was overthrown and flain, as may be gathered out of Scripture. (c) Whilest Nebuchadnesar was profecuting his victories, overrunning all (c) Jerem46. from the River of Egypt to the River Emphrages; in the mean (d) time his (d) Berofus father being fick at Babylon, died. After he had reigned 21 years, as it is now apind Joseph. father being fick at Babylon, died. After he had reigned 21 years, as it is now at printing in the Catalogue, for which some learned men think 29 is to be read. He Antiqu. lib. 10, understanding hereof disposed of the affairs of Egypt and other Countreys, cap. 11. and giving order for the conveyance of the Judean, Syrian, Phanician, and A.M. 3410. Egyptian prisoners, he himself made haste through the desart, and took post- Olymp. 46. session of the Government reserved for him by the Caldeans.

Nebuchadrefar.

ploits and buildings.

24. He distributed the Captives into Colonies about Babylon, adorned the Temple of Belus (which Semiramis had built) with the spoyls; repaired His great exand increased the buildings of the Citie, and fortified the Channel of the River, that the Enemy should not make use of it against the Town. He added a new Citie to the old, and compaffed both with three Walls of brick. He raised divers remarkable ædifices, built a new Pallace, and about it a Garden, or Wildernesse, so much celebrated by the Gracians. His wife beirg a Mede, and, according to the nature of her Countrey, delighting in Mountainous Woody prospects, brought him to imitate with Art what was wanting in the plains of Babylov. This Garden was made four-square, ta- Vide Diodor. king up in compasse sixteen Acres, in heighth equalling the Walls, set with lika, p.70.B.

Romæ 159.

fall and beautifull Trees. It was born up by stone-Pillars; upon which a pave- Curtium lib.5. ment of four-fquared stones being laid, Earth was heaped up in great quantity, and Engines were made for the conveying of moilture out of Euphraces to water it. The Trees that grew upon it were (many of them) eight Cubits in compasse at the bole; and fifty foot high, bearing fruit as plentifully as in their Native foyl. Fehojakim the King of Judah rebelling against Nebu- 2 Kings 23, chadnefar, he came up against him, wasted the Countrey, and taking him, cast &c. him out unburied as the Prophet Jeremiah had foretold. Four moneths af- 2 Chron 36, ter, he also carried away Captive, Jechonias, or Jehojachim his son, and Jerem 22. made Mattaniah his Uncle King in his stead. This Mattaniah, whom he named Zedekiah rebelled against him notwithstanding his solemne Oath of fealty taken at his inflitution, and therefore in the eleventh year of his reign he was also taken by the Babylonian, had his eyes put out, and was so carried to Babylon: the Temple and Citie were burnt with fire, and the people led into Captivity, as will appear in its proper place. 25. Nebuchadnesar returning home was exceeding proud, and puffed up at his successe. He erected a great Image of Gold; in the Dedication where- Daniel 3. of all his chief Officers were commanded to fall down and worship; which was obeyed by all except three Jews, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, the companions of Daniel. For their punishment they were cast into a fiery Furnace, heated feven times hotter then usual, and so miraculously preferved from the fury of the flame, that not an hair of their heads was findg'd; though it killed those that cast them in. At this, the King astonished, by publick edict acknowledged Gods power, and forbad the blafpheming of him. Yet repented he not of his pride, and, notwithstanding a sufficient warning given him by God in a dream, exalted himself in the conceit of the greatnesse and splendour of Babel, which he had built for the house of the Kingdom, by the might of his power, and for the honour of his Majesty. But the fame hour, as he was answered by a voice from Heaven, the Kingdom departed from him, he was driven from men, made to eat graffe as Oxen . and his body was wet with the Dew of Heaven, till his hairs were grown as Eagles feathers, and his Nails like Birds Claws; and seven times passed over him, till he knew that the Most High ruleth in the Kingdom of men, and giveth it to whom sever he will. And this time prefixed being expired (seven years as most suppose, though some reckon but three and an half, counting for times, Winter and Summer) his reason returned to him , with the glory of his Kingdom, his Honour, and Brightnesse, his Councellors and his Lords fought unto him, he was established in his Kingdom, and excellent Majelly was added to him. Therefore he shamed not by a publick writing to own the thing; praifed, honoured, and extelled the King of Heaven, all whole works he confessed to be truth, his wayes judgement, and that those that walk in pride he is able to abafe.

His pride.

Punished.

GHAP. II.

What is found recorded of him by the Heathen.

26. Of these strange passages the Heathen were not utterly ignorant. (e) Abydenus wrote, that, being exceeding proud, and going up upon his Pal- (e) Apud Eufeb. lace, he was taken with a Divine fury. This he had our of the Annals of the preo, Evang. Caldaans, who fancied him to have been feized on with a prophetick spirit, ib.9. and so to have vanished. (f) Megasshenes in his fourth book of Judan, en- (f) Apud Jodeavoured to shew how this King in valiant exploits exceeded Hercules by far; that he subdued the chief Citie of Africk, and a good part of Spain. Diocles, in his second book of Persia, made mention of him, and Philostratus both in his Histories of Phanicia and India; writing that he fought against Tre thirteen years, which itis probable, at length he took by compofition and there placed Baal King in the room of Ithobalus. What he did against this Cirie, God, taking as service done to himself, promised him the Ezek.29. Land of Egypt for his wages, which we must accordingly believe to have been paid. At length , having foretold that Babylon should be lost to Cyrus, as Abydenus wrote; he died, after he had reigned 43 years, being in Ptolomies Catalogue of Kings, called Nabocolaffar, which may be corruptly written for Nabosodolassar.

27. Evil-

Cyrus.

Evilmerodach.

Nevigliffor. Laborofardo-Nabosidus.

27. Evilmerodach his Son succeeded him, who listed up the head of Jan hoinkim King of Judah, in the 77th year of his Captivity, spake kindly unto A.M. 3440. hoinkim King of Judah, in the 3th year of his Captivity, ipake kingly in Offmp. 33.0. 4. him, fet his Throne above the Throne of the Kings that were with him in Roma, condit. Baby/on and changing his prifon garments, allowed him a continual diet all 189. the dayes of his life. But for his wickednesse and debaucheries, he continued not long, being circumvented by Nerigliffor his Sifter's Husband, and flain when he had raigned but two years. Neriglissor after his death, reigned

4. After him came his Son Laborofardochus, who being of an untowardly disposition, was mide away by his Relations, after nine months, and they preferred to his place one Nabonidus a Babylonian, by Prolomy called Nabonadius, by others Nabannidochus and Labynitus. [(g) Who reigned 17 (g) Apud Iofeyears, for which some think 27 is to be read. This succession we have from phum lib. I. Berofus the (aldean, attelled by Piolomy, who yet leaveth out Laborofar- cont. Apionem. do hus, either for his small continuance, or because he reigned together with his Father. But learned Men do not agree in the manner of reconciling this Whether the Hiltory with what Daniel hath written of Bellhazar. Some will have Lafame with Bill bynitus or Nabonodus, to be Bellhazar, Nabonodus being the last of the Kings, which Belibazar also seemeth to be; at his death, Babylon being taken by Cyrus, as the interpretation of the writing on the wall hinteth : Peres, thy Kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians. As for Darius the Mede, he seemeth to them to be no other then Cyaxares the Son of Assynges King of Media, and the Lincle of Cyrus, who of his own accord delivered Babylon to him: and they think this sufficient to prove that Laborefurdechus could not bee Belihazar, because hee hath but nine months affigned him by Berofus, whereas we read in Daniel of the third year of Relibazar.

28. Others think they have ground enough to denie Nabonidus to be Bel. Chazar, who is called the Son of Nebuchadnefar; in regard no fuch relation is mentioned by Berofus, that can intitle him to fo much as his grand-child, which Laborofardochus was by his Daughter, being called his Son by a common Hebraism : For the Latin version of Josephus which maketh Nabonodus of the blood; it is in no case agreeable to the Originall which plainly relateth him to have been of the confpiracy. For the 5th year of Bellhanar in The duries with his Father, and, after his Father's death, nine moneths by himfelf. Now the History of Daniel onely relateth Bellhazar to have been slain; not that Babylon was then besieged by Cyrus: it being improbable, say they, that a time of fo great danger, the King and his Nobles should spend in seasting and jollity; but rather likely, that behaving himselfe too insolently in thit drunken fit, he was knocked in the head by his Companions, as Bero- wat Top given fus * hinreth , and the Scripture rather feemeth to approve than contradict. As for the interpretation of the Writing on the wall, it might note what was already determined, and within a little time was to be accomplified concerning Cyrus the Persian, who being at that time known to the World, could not be hid from Daniel, who had met with his name long before in the Prophefic of Isiah, and had his mind, without doubt, fixed upon the 70 years of Captivity foretold by Jeremiah, to which a period should shortly be put by that person. That Darius Medus was of Median descent appeareth, but that he was King of the Medes can no way be evinced; especially seeing that no antient Greek Historian maketh mention of Cyaxares the Son of Afyages, (whom we read to have had but one Daughter) except Xenophon; and (b) Cicero ad . ages, (whom we read to have had but one Daughter) except the purpose feemeth to thwart Herodotus, or to have written his quintum France, Ep. 1. Cyropedia, rather (b) to shew what a Prince ought to be, than what Cyron (i) As the was indeed, and fo to have taken some of that liberty of invention which o- Grand Cruss of thers (i) have done of late upon the fame and other Subjects. But though George de Scu-Toseph Scaliger my seem to show more reason for this later affertion, yet der Governor Pererius truly affirmeth the thing to be obscure, perplexed, and difficult.

29. If Laborofardochus hee taken for Bellhazar, then Nabono- Romance of to. dus must be the same with Darins Medius; whom surther, some would have Volumes to be the Brother of Astrages, not his Son, and yet called Cyaxares. In him the Empire of the Babylomans ceased, and was derived upon the Perfians by Cyrus, whose first beginnings are to be viewed, with the progresse of his actions, which made way to that pitch of greatnesse whereat he arrived. Herein Historians do not relate the same things. That Astrages was his Grand-father is acknowledged by all, except Ctessas, who will have them nothing akin, and calleth him Aftrigas: His Father's name is granted to be Camby fes, his Country Perfia, but his condition is diversly reported of. Herodous Writeth how Allyages dreaming two dreams concerning his Daughwhat Herodo- ter Mandane, (which by the Wizards were interpreted to portend the loffe tus hath writ- of his Kingdom, through the greatnesse of her issue) gave her in marriage and Fortune, rity, fent for her when she was with child, and as soon as the Boy was born. gave him to one Harpagus to be made away. Harpagus fearing he might afterwards be called to an account by the Mother, for violence offered to the Babe, delivered him to the King's Shepherd, to be exposed in the Woods unto the mercie of wild beafts. This being done, and the Shepherd's Wife lately brought to bed of a stil-born child; the prevailed with her Husband to fetch him home; nurfed and brought him up as her own Son amongst the Shepherds. At seven years of age being chosen King of the Boyes in their play, he executed the office with severity, towards such as were disobedient, and for this was complained of by their Parents to the King. Being fent for and accused of the crime, he would acknowledge none, alledging he had done like a King; and standing in his justification without the least change of countenance, Aflyages was struck with admiration, and presently called to mind his dream. Upon examination of the Shepherd, he got out the whole matter; owned him for his Grand-fon, because he thought the dream fulfilled in his boyish reign amongst the Shepherds; onely he thought it good to > 30. But to punish Harpagus for his disobedience, he invited him to supper, and caused to be served up to the table his onely Son; of which, after he had eaten heartily, and approved the mear, he let him see his entertainment, by the head, hands, and feet, reserved in another platter. Harpagus for the present kept down his passion, seeming to acquiesce in the King's bleafure, untill Cyrus came to man's effice. Then, hearing of his aftivity and forwardnesse, he resolved by presents to make him his friend, meditating a convenient way of revenge by the means of this Youth, from whom he expected something answerable to his Grandfather's dreim. Knowing Afryages his cyrannicall carriage towards the Medes, he infinuated himfelf into the chief of them by degrees, and fecretly perswaded them, that it was convenient he should be removed from the Government; especially seeing they might with some plausibility place Cyrus in his Soat. Having thus made War, he wrote Letters to the young Man, into Persia, (which, to prevent discovery, he sowed up in the belly of an Hare) wherein recalling to his memorie what he had suffered from his Grandfather upon his account, he sollicited him to draw the Perstans to revolt; then to come down with an Army into Media, where he might be fure of him or any other the Kings Generals, and so easily become Master of all.

Book I.

fend him out of the way into Persia.

31. Cyrus confidering of a way how to accomplish this businesse, which now he mide no leffe than a defign, called the Perfians together; first give out that he was chosen their Genera'l by Astrages, and then easily perswaded them, by laying open, how much Liberty was to be preferred before that Slavery they now underwent, to close with him and break out into open rebellion. The old Manhearing of this, fent a meffenger for him; but he returned answer, he would come sooner than he should have cause to desire his company; whereupon he armed his Subjects of Media, and forgetting how he had formerly injured Harpagus, committed the Army to his conduct. Harpagus revolting, he lost thereby the first Battell; yet was not daunted, but threatened Cyrus, nailed to crosses the Magicians, who had perswaded

Critis overthre weth Attraces his

him to difmiffe him, and arming all both old and young that were in the City, led them out to a fecond engagement, wherein his successe was worse than before, he being taken prisoner. When Harpagus, boatting of his revenge, insulted over him, he taxed him of imprudence and injustice : of the one, for Grand father, that having power to make himselfe King he should transfer the dignity to another; and of the other, because, for to revenge a private injury, he had enflaved the whole Nation of the Medes, out of which he might rather have chosen one to the Kingdom, refusing it himselfe, than him who would now fo order the matter, that the Perfians, flaves before, should be Lords and Mafters of all. Thus Afrages loft his Kingdom, after he had held it 25 years, enjoying all things else at his Grandson's hands, till his naturall death: And the Medes became subject to the Persians, after they had enjoyed the dominion of Alia beyond the River Halys, the space of 128 years, (except that space wherein the Southians kept them under) in the 24 year of the 55th Olympiad, of the World 3446.

32. Cyrus having obtained the foveraignty of Persia and Media, was A. M. 2448. Provoked by Within a while provoked by Crafus King of Lydia, who at this time was grown Olymp. 55.002 Config King of emineur, having improved the inheritance which descended upon him from with application of Sem, or rather descended of him who by Moses is so called; both he and turn, Phatrix, they having obtained this name from that Country, which from the crooked- 11b 2 can 12 nesse and winding of the River Meander took the appellation of Lud. in the Phanician Language fignifying crooked or winding: The Greeks fay, (4) Houndons that the Lydians were first called Maones; and Lydia Maonia, from lib. e. z. A. Maon, an antient King of Phrygia and Lydia, who was thought to have Strabolith 13. been the Father of Cibeles, Mother of the gods, and that long after him Plint s. a.s. reigned Lydus the Son of Atys, and Brother of Tyrrhenus, from whom Diadonne. they fancie the Country to have been named. Better is the opinion of Ste- Halican, Eth. T. phanus, who deriveth Maonia from the River Maon or Maander. For. Diolomus 1.3. though the Greeks might call them Lydians, yet that their right name was P. . R. Ludians, appeareth from the Latin words, Ludus, Ludo, Ludio, &c. (1) Temple de thence derived; seeing it is granted, that the first Players came form (1) Ly- spelling life; dia into Herraria, so to Rome, as the Lydians (m) boasted themselves to Diangle Halic. have been inventors of those Games, which afterwards were common with like them to the Greeks. Hence it appeareth, that though the Country might be (m) Hencels

Erdia whence to called,

The Lydian Nation was of great antiquity, so named from Lud the Son

the Lydians being accounted the first (o) of all Nations, that busied themfelves in Cookery, infomuch that they became a Proverb for it. 33. The Antiquity of the Lydians appeareth further out of the antient and anti-Fables ; Actis, Tan alus, Pelops, Niobe and Arachne , being of this Country: Their fruitfulnesse, from the Colonies they fent out into Peloponnesus and Caria, into Erruria alfo, as they fay. Their valour and power is shewn Eastehan Chian. to have been of great antiquity from their holding the dominion of the Sea 92 was the name of Lud. After the Posterity of Lydns, reigned the Heraclide or those that were descended from Hercules, by his Son Alcaus. The first was Argon, faith Herodotus, the Son of Ninus, Grand-fon of Belus, and years, which they took from the Creuans about the time of Tepthe, and 1200 years before Christ, losing it again and recovering it afterwards. But Candaules with his Family being extinct, and the Kingdom devolved upon the Mermnade (of whom Crafus descended) the power of the Nation grew greater also at Land. These Heraclida, held it the space of 505 years, through 22 Successors unto this Candaules, who to far being enamoured of his Herotens 1.3. Wife as he effected her the most beautifull of all women, confirmed his as ac. fervant Orges to fee her naked. She espying Grees whilst therein he onely fatisfied his Mafters will, offered him the choice of killing her husband, and marrying called both Lydia and Maonia, from the felfefame thing; yet most ancient great Grand-fon of Alcans; the last was Candantes the Son. of Myrfus. by the Greeks colled Myrsitus. Candaules (n) or Candylas, signified a (1) Administracerrain kind of Lydian meat made of Flowre, Cheefe, Honey, Bread, and Flesh: Plan Sym La. Horodemus litte 1. G. 49.

The Royall Franciscoof E.yaia.

Boox I.

marrying her with the Kingdom, or of fuffering death himfelfe; one of their two lives being the leaft she could require in way of Justice. He, in so great a strair, preferring his own safety before his Master's lite, slew him in his bedchamber, the place where the fault was committed, and fo enjoyed the Queen with the Kingdom; wherein he was confirmed by the Oracle of Delphos, to the sentence of which, he and his adversaries had agreed to stand.

34. Grees reigned 38 years, in which space he made War upon Mile;us. and Smyrna, and took the City Colophon. Ardys his Son and Successor Subdued Priene, fought against Milesus; and in his time the Commerians being expelled their feats by the Scythian Nomades, passed into Asia, and took Sardis, all but the Caltle. He reigned 49 years. His Son Sadyaties 12, Who gave place to Alyanes his Son and Successor. Alyanes waged War with * Cyaxares King of Media, and expelled the Cimmerians out of Asia, *Vide swid patook Smyrna, and fet upon Clazomena. In the 6th year of the War betwixt ragraph, 21. the Median and him, whilst they fought upon equal terms, the Sun was eclipfed, which Thales, one of the 7 wife men, had foretold to his Milefians. Both the armies feing the day beginning to be turned into night, left off fighting and then by the mediation of Syennesis the Cilician, and Labynius the Pabylonian a peace was concluded; Ariena the Daughter of Halyanes being marryed to Altyages the Son of Cyaxares. From the Tables of Pio omy (or of Hipparchus) it appeareth that this Eclipse happened in the 4th year of the 44th Olympiad, the 147th of Nabonafar, the 4th day of the Agyptian month Pachon, (which answereth to the 20th of September) 3 hours and 25 minutes before noone; 9 digits being eclipfed, and the duration almost 2 hours, Halyantes pursued also the War lest him by his Father, against Miletus, the Inhabitants whereof received from him two great blows, for that none of the Ionians helped them, except the Chians, in way of requitall for the aide they had afforded them against the Erythraans. At length, having notice that he intended to fend a messenger into the City, at the command of Thralybulus their Prince, they brought all the provision they had into the marketplace; which appearing to be much, and as such related to Aiyanes, he thinking himselfe mistaken in his former belief of their distressed condition, made Peace with them; and died after he had reigned 57 years. 35. Crasus his Son succeeded him at the age of 35 years. He made War Herod, ubi upon Ephefus, which when he besieged, the Towns-men for their security, surva, c. 26, &c. give up the City to Diana, by a rope fastned from the wall to her Temple; but for all this he brought them under and subdued all the rest of the Greek Cities in the continent. He brought into his subjection all the people of Asia within the River Halis, as the Phrygians, Mysians, Bihymans, Paphlago-nians, the Mariandyni, Chalibes, Thracians, Thyni, Carians, Ionians, Dorians, Lycians, and Cilic ans. Being grown great, and flowing with wealth, and flourishing with glory, the choifest wits of Greece flocked to Sardis, and amongst the rest Solon the Athenian, who being now in his travells, had been with Amelis of Egypt, and now came to visite Crafur. He kindly entertained him, and, shewing him his treasures, out of a vain conceit of his own felicity, demanded of him, Whom he thought the happiest Man. He answered, he esteemed for such, one Tellus an Athenian, who having lived in good credit, and leaving divers Children and Nephews of honest and virtuous cariage, died in the War at Eleusine, after he had first helped to put to flight the enemy; for which he was honoured by his Citizens with a publick and streety funerall. Crassus expecting, if not the first, yet the second place, asked him, Whom he accounted next to Tellus. He replied Cleobis and Riton, two brothers of Argos, who had fufficient to live on, and being very frong, had gotten the better in tryall of Masteries. On a time at the feast of Juno, their Mother being to be drawn in a Chariot to the Temple, and the Heiffers not at hand, they yoked themselves, and drew her thither.

She being much affected with the piery of her Sons, praied the Goddesse that what foever was best for Man, might be bestowed on them, who sleeping that night in the Temple, were found dead in the morning, and honoured by the Argives with two Statues, erected to their memory at Delphos. 36. The King was troubled that his felicity should be so little valued, as not comparable to that of private men. But Solon plainly told him, that all things were uncertain in this life, and no man ought to be accounted happy til his End; for which Philosophy, as strange to the Courtiers, he was dismissed with small reputation for learning. Crassus, growing exceeding proud and irrelagious; to humble him, had a dream, that the choifest of his two Sons, (whereof one was dumb) should be slain with the iron head of some weapon. Hereupon he removed all things of that nature out of the way, looked to him diligently, and marryed him out of hand. But at this time it hapned, that a cerrain wild Boar haunted about the Mountain O'ympus in Mysia, which doing great harm to the Inhabitants, they were in no wife able to master, and therefore sent to Crassus, desiring him to send his Son, accompanied with a sufficient train, to hunt and kill the Wild beaft. He plainly denied, because of his dream, to let him stir from home; but the young Man, having a great defire to the exercise, thereby to approve himselfe for activity to his new married wife, obtained leave to be fent, faying, that no fuch thing would be used in the game as that of which he had dreamed. He committed him then to the care of one Adrastus the Son of Gordins (and he of Midas) King of Phrygia, who having at unawares killed his brother, had been banished by his his Father. When they came into the field, and had dislodged the Boar, Adrathis throwing a dart at him, chanced to hit the young Man, and so fulfilled the dream; for which, offering himselfe to be killed, upon Crassus his refufall, as done without any intention, he yet flew himselfe. Crassus took the accident very heavily, and kept himfelfe in mourning two years. 37. This mourning was broken off by the prosperity of Cyrus, who having now overthrown the Kingdom of the Meder, advanced highly the affairs of Perfia. Herein he found himselfe exceedingly concerned, so as to withstand, if possible, his successe, and make an addition thereby to his own Fortune. For encouragement in this defign, he fent to enquire of the Oracles Croefus Halym far and near; which answering with one consent, that he should overturn a gressia, magnam great Principality, he was much incouraged, not doubting but that of the percentet opun Persians was meant thereby; and much more after the Oracle at Delphos, had wim. (in an iver to his requiry, whether his Empire should long continue) bid him look to himselfe, when a Mule should have possession of the Soveraignty of Media; taking this in a literall tenfe, notwithstanding the constant ambiguity of fuch answers. Now (the Oracle giving way to it) he sent to make a League with the Lacedemonians, who being obliged to him, easily complied; though no supplies do we read of sent to him. For he, being in great hafte, prevented the fending of any; and, with all the force he could make, indeth Cappado- vaded Cappadocia, to revenge, as he pretended, upon Cyrus, the injurie offered to Astrages his Brother in Law; but indeed to lay that fertile Country to his own Dominions. Having passed the River Hayis, he came into a place of Cappadocia called Pteria, the most safe of all the Country, near to the City Sinope, which was fituated upon the Euxine Sea. Taking up his quarters here, he made incursions, took the City of the Pterians, with all the rest round about, and banished the Syrians (so were the Cappadocians called by the Greeks, till subjected to the Persian Empire) though they had nothing ill deserved athis hands.

38. Cyrus coming against him fent to the Ionians, to draw them to his party; but they standing oft, he proceeded, and pitcht his Camp against Crafus. After some skirmishes the Armies ingaged, and a very hot dispute continued till night parted them, many falling on both fides. Crafus, though neither party owned any defeat, was blamed by his Soldiers for ingaging with fo numerous an Army; fo that, Cyrus not stirring our against him the next day, he thought it best to retreat to Sardis, and sent out of hand for aide to Amelis King of Egypt, and Labynitus of Babylon, whom he had by a League obliged to him : to the Lacedamonians also to dispatch their Auxiliarie; within s. month, with which resting that winter, he would re-invade Retreateth to the Persians the following Spring. Accordingly he dismissed all his mercenaries standing then in no need of them, as he thought; which Cyrus hearing, refolved with all speed to follow him to Sardis, hoping he might utterly defeat him before he could recollect his Forces: and accordingly marching into Lydia he prevented any message of his coming. Crassus, though exceedingly perplexed at so unexpected a thing, gathered his subjects together, as time would give leave, and provided for his defence; which the other perceiving, and fearing the power of his Horse (wherein the Lydians excelled all other people of Afia) took off the burthens from all the Camels, that followed the Camp, and ferring Riders upon them, placed them in the front; the fmell of which (when the Armies joyned) the Horses nor enduring, turned aside. Yet were not the Riders thereby deterred from fighting, but, dismounting, performed on Foot what couldbe expected, till over-powered rather with number then valour, they were put to flight, and befieged in the in battel.

CHAP. II.

And belieged. Citie. Crasius thinking he might possibly be able to hold out some considerable time, fent again to his confederates to haften their fuccours. But Cyrus on the fourteenth day of the fiege offering a great reward to him that should first mount the Wall, one Hyraades, a Mardian, having taken notice of a place, which because of its heighth and precipitancy was held impregnable, and therefore neglected by the belieged (where yet he had feen a Souldier come down to ferch his Helmet he had let fall) made means to climb up, and after him more and more followed, till the Citie was thereby Sardis taken. Surprized. All places being full of flaughters, a Souldier not knowing Crafin, was about to kill him; which he neglected, as willing to dye with his Kingdom. But his dumb son, affrighted at the danger he saw him in, is said Vide Herod. to have broken filence (or dumbneffe) with this expression; Man, do not kill lib.s. c.85. Crafus, and thenceforth to have enjoyed the use of his tongue. Thus Crafus Aul. Gellium. overturned a great principality, as the Oracle had fore fold, after he had reigned fourteen years, and been befieged so many dayes. Cyrus adjudged him to 6.4. Ext. Exem. death, and had burnt him alive, but that he, almost too late, remembred the 6

Cræfus con-

His life spa-

words of the wife Law-giver of Athens, and cried out Solon, Solon, Solon! Solinum, c.7. Cyrus commanded the Interpreters to demand of him whom he invocated (thinking it to be some God he mentioned):to which he answered, when compelled to speak, that he named one whom rather then any thing, he would have to speak with all Princes; and, being urged to explain himself, told the whole flory concerning the discourse betwixt him and Solon. Herewith the Conquerour was so affected, that, considering the uncertainty of his own prosperous condition, though the pile was already kindled, yet commanded he the fire to be quenched, and receiving him into his most inward counfels, held him ever most dear, and in great esteem for his wisdom; wherein, after fuch manifold experience, he excelled. This hapned in the fourth A. M 2460. year of the 58 Olympiad, the fifteenth year of the reign of Cyrus. A. M. Olympiss. an 4. 3460.

40. When the Ionians and Lolians heard that Crafus, with so little a Herodotus, lib. 1. ado, was utterly subdued, they sent to Cyrus, offering to put themselves into 6,141. 600. his hands, on the same terms as the Lydians were received; but he returned them no fatisfactory answer, because of their refusal formerly to joyn with him. All of them then, (except the Milesians, those having yielded themfelves) made their application to the Lacedamonians, who refused to grant any aide; but fent fome to make discovery how matters went in Asia. The Messengers finding Cyrus at Sardis, according to order, acquainted him with the pleasure of that Republick, Not to suffer him to molest any of the Greek Cities. He enquiring what the Lacedamonians were, presently fleighted them, and answered, That, if the Gods preserved him, they should have cause to bewail their own calamities, and not busie themselves with what concerned the Ionians. He committed Sardis, to the custody of Tabalus, 2 Persian; to Pattyas a Lydian, the Treasure of Crassiand others : and so fee out for Echatane, making little account of the lonians (against whom he intended to fend some Lieutenant) in comparison of Babylon, the Ballrians, Saca and Egyptians, upon all which he had calt an hungry eye with purpose Pattyas revol- to invade them. After his departure Pattyas revolted, and drawing into Rebellion the Maritime Coasts, besieged Tabatus; whereat Cyrus being angry, as effecting it a plot of the Lydians, Crafus fearing worse things might come upon them, after an excuse of the generality, advised him to take from them the use of Arms, and enure them to effeminate courses whereby they would eafily be kept under. Cyrus, according to his advise, dispatched away with an A my, one Mazares a Mede, who finding Sardis deferred by Pa-Elyas, put in execution what Crassus had advised. By this course was brought to passe, that the Lydians, to whom for valour no Nation in Asia could be compared, grew infamous for effeminatenesse and luxury; so that gluttonous (o) and voluptuous persons, (p) such as made it their profession to went include afford incitementare debauchery, received Epithets from their name, Taken.

C'efus inva-

Chians, who fold him to Mazares. He then reduced fuch as had revolted. (P) A Doobsand harrasing the Countrey of Priene, with that lying upon Meander and rive, Lore Athe-Magnelia, fell fick and died. Harpagus the Mede succeeded him, and out naum, lib, 15. of hand undertook an expedition against the Ionians. The Phoceans being c. 12. first besieged, obtained truce for a day, and then shipping themselves, left their ancient feat and passed over into the Island Chins, and thence (for that the Chians refused to sell them the Islands Oenusa, lest they should thither curry the Traffick) to Cyrnus, where twenty years before, they had built a Citie called Alalia. Here playing the Pirates, they were after five years defeated in a Sea-fight by the Tyrrhenians and Carthaginians, and then those that remained passed over to Rhegium in Italy, where they built a Cirie named Hyela, in the Territories of Oenoria. The Teians also, after their example departed into Thrace; where they built up a Citie called Abaera, the foundations of it being formerly laid by one Temefius a Clazomenian, whom the Thracians thence expelled. The rest of the Ionians stood it out against Harpagus, who yet utterly subdued and forced them to undergo the yoake the second time, having refused to follow the counsel of Bias the Prienaux, (one of the feven wife-men of Greece), who advised them to shun servitude by going to Sardinia, and there planting themselves in one great and common Citie; as they had formerly rejected the advice of Thales the Milesian (another of that number) to set up one common Court at Tens in the middle of Ionia. After the Conquest of the Ionians , Harpagus subdued the Carians, Caumans, and Lycians, and brought all the lower Afia under the Dominion and Soveraignty of Cyrus, who in the mean while not idle, did as much by the upper Provinces; leaving nothing in his way, but rians or Babylenians.

The Ionians

Subdued.

clearing all before him. 42. Having Conquered the rest of the Continent he went against the Affyrians, who, being aware of him, had furnished themselves in Babylon for a And the Ally-long fiege. Coming to the River Gyndes (which rifing in the Mantienean Mountains, runneth through the Countrey of the Dardaneans, and emprieth it felf in Tigris) he could find no foard to passe it, and a certain white Horse, sicred to the Sun, boldly taking the water, was overwhelmed in the Floods. Hereat being exceeding angry, he threatned to reduce it to such a condition, as it should not be knee-deep, and accordingly setting all his Army on work, derived it into 260 Rivolets, in which employment he spent all that Summer. The Spring following he marched for Babylon, the King whereof Labinitus opposed him: but, being defeated, retreated into the Citie, to which he then laid close fiege. In vain for a long time did he attempt the taking of it. At length he divided his Army, and leaving the two ftronger parts of it, the one at that fide of the Town where the River entred, the other there where it came out; with the third he retired into the ad owning Fens, and digging great ditches derived the River into them. Hereby he brought it to fuch an Ebb, that his Souldiers ealily passing it , be-ford incidements to debauchery, received Epithers from their name.

41. Pattyas having fled to Cuma, Mazares sent to demand him of the this voluptati-Citizens; but, they dismissing him, he fled to Mytilene, and thence to the bus deditus.

CHAP. IL. came Masters of the Citie, and he of the Babylonian or Allyrian Empire. This is the fum of what Herodorus hath written concerning the prosperous fortune of Cyrus. 43. Kenophon, contrary to the former story, will have Cambyses his farther no obscure man; but King of Media: not a word from him of his Grand-father's dream or exposing of the Infant. When he was twelve years old, he was fent for by Afryages into Media, where having tarried till almost a man, and being admired for understanding and abilities far above his age : he returned to his father, and entred into the * College of youth, where * Lege de instihe was trained up in all strict Discipline according to the customs of Persia. tutione Persia. Asyages dying, Cyaxares his son succeeded him, at what time the King of rum, Xenooh. Affria having subdued all the Syrians, Arabians, Hyrcanians, and had now Cyroped, I.s. fain upon the Baltryans, promifed himself the absolute Empire of the East; admitium, if he could but bring under the Medes and Persians. He sent therefore to all his Neighbours; to Crassus King of Lydia, the King of Cappadecia, to both the Phrygians, Casians, Paphlagonians, Cilicians, and Indians, accufing these two Nations of ambitious deligns to enslive them all, and procured them to joyn with him in an offensive and defensive league against them. Cyaxares hearing this, defired of Camby fes his Brother-in-law to fend down Cyrow to him with an Army; Cyron being accordingly chosen General by the people, first subdued the Armenians, who because of this combination of the Princes, had denied to pay their accustomed tribute to Cyaxares, and then perswaded his Uncle to invade the Asyrians , to keep the War from his

The fum of Xenophons Cyvonedia.

44. Making then an inroade into Affria the King thereof, Crafus of Lydia, and divers other Confederates came against them, but in the first ingagement were worsted, and bearen back into their Camp, and amonalt others the Affyrian himself (Nerigliffor, if any) was slain. The night following all brake out of the Fortifications and fled; whereupon Cyrus prevailing with his Uncle to fuffer him to pursue them, with as many of the Medes as would follow him of their own accord, in his way entred into confederacy with the Hyrcanians through the conduct of whom he overtook, and again defeated them : they also slew the Kings of Cappadocia and Arabia. After this, he invaded the Territories of the Babylonians, went up to the Citie it felf, and challenged the King to a fingle Combat, who refufing it, he, after some few skirmishes thereabout, returned to Cyaxares, ir on the Borders of Media, to deliberare about carrying on the War : He found him greatly discontented at his successe (out of apprehension that he had robbed him of all the glory) and much averse to the War; but at length he appeafed him, and so wrought underhand upon the Officers of the Army, that they unanimously voted the War to be carried on. Some time being necesfary then for preparation, he chose out a convenient place for the Army's Quarters; and not long after understood by certain Fugitives and Prisoners that the King of Affria was gone towards Lydia with much Treasure.

45. Cyrus, supposing his design to be for raising men, prepared for the main chance by horfing his Perfians, inventing new and more convenient Charriots, and, to get intelligence of the Enemie's purposes, sent one Arafees into Lydia, who, under colour of a revolt, should infinuate himself into their Counsels. This device taking, he disposed of his affairs according as he faw behoofefull, modelled his Army, and marched against the Confederates, whom without any great difficulty he overthrew, all but the Agyptians. They put him to fore trouble, and endangered his life; but having fall'n in upon their Rear, and thereby diverted the Front, he so overpowered them both behind and before, as glad they were to deliver up their Arms, and upon promise of better entertainment, willing to change Masters and serve him. Crafas now, who commanded in Chief, fled amain to Sardis, whither Cyrus pursued him, and getting the Castle into his hands, by the help of a Persian, who had been slave to an Officer in it, got possession both of the Citie and its King. He, coming to Cyrus, acquitted the Oracle of Delphos from all blame, and took the fault upon himself, in that he, overweening of his own condition, had fooled himself continually in a fond opinion of happinesse. After this the Carians falling into two factions, both fent unto him: and he dispatched to them Adustas with some Forces, who overpowering both the one and the other, compounded their differences.

29

46. Then fent he Hystaspes into Phrygia, who subdued the Country, and took the King prisoner; at what time the Greeks of Asia submitted themfelves, procuring by gifts, that they should not be constrained to receive any Garrison, but onely pay Tribute, and serve in the Wars. Afterward, in his march to Babylon, he brought under the greater Phrzeid, subdued the Cappadocians and Arabians. He sate down before that City with a vast Army, the walls whereof after he had viewed, he concluded there was no forming of it, and resolved the best way was to pine them out. Understanding then, that they were provided within for a whole year, he divided his Army into twelve parts, affigning to each a moneth to lye in Leaguer, at which the belieged scoffed as utterly out of danger. But Cyrus taking notice how the River ran through the City, caused deep ditches to be made, which by dreining, rendered it fordable, and so taking advantage of a solemn Feast, entred by night, and surprized them all in their cups. The King was slain by Gobryas and Gadatas, who both, being formerly injured by him, had revolted to Cyrus. The Inhabitants, commanded upon pain of death to deliver up their Arms, instantly obeyed. And thus the Babylonian Empire being quite overthrown, Cyrus assumed to himselfe Royall Majesty, setling his Court with great wisdom, wherein Xenophon, in his most exquisite History, maketh him to have excelled, in all things, to admiration.

reth from other Histori. ans, concerning Cyrus.

47. But Ciesias will have Astrages, (whom he calleth Astrigas) nothing Ex Photii Bisthat wherein akin to Cyrus; tells us how he fled to Echatane, where he was hid by his listhesa, Cteffes diffen- Daughter Amytis, and her Husband Spitama: and how Cyrus coming upon them, put them both to the Rack, to make them confesse where he was, with their children Spitaces and Magabemes. Aftyigas, rather than they should be tortured, discovered himself, and was first bound with fetters, but afterwards honoured as a Father by Cyrus, who at length married Amytis, having killed Spitama, because he had denied he knew where he was. After the marriage, the Baltrians gave up themselves to Cyrus and Amyin, though formerly they made great and effectuall refiftance. He relateth also how Cyrus made War upon the Saca, whose King Amorges he, took prisoner; but Sperethra the Queen gathered an Army of 300000 Men, and 200000 Women, and therewith overthrowing Crrus, took him with other prifoners, and thereby redeemed her Husband. With the help then of Amorges he made War upon Crass, and besieged Sardis, which City he took by a stratageme taught him by Oebares; making images of the Persians, and placing them up-on the Walls, at which the defendants were affrighted. But, before this, Frontinum Crass deluded by a Spettrum, gave out his Son, an Hostage to Cyrus, and Stratagem. delaying to perform what he had promifed, procured his death, which the lib. 3. cap. 8. Mother beholding from the wall, tumbled her self down headlong, and yet was not killed; but, the City being taken, fled to Apollo's Temple and died

48. Crafus being bound in the Temple, by an art he had of deceiving the fight, three times was loosed, though the place was secured, and committed to the care of O.bares; for which, they that were bound with him loft their heads, Then was he brought into the Palace and more strongly fetter'd, but was loofed again by Thunder and Lightning. Hereat Cyrus his anger abated, and giving him his liberty, he used him ever after with great respect, and beflowed on him a great City called Barene, near to Echatane. After this, Cyrus sent Petisass his Eunuch to setch Allyigas from the Barcanians, both he and his wife having a great defire to fee him: But Petifacas through the infligation of Oebares left him in a defart place, where he was famished to death. The treachery was revealed by dreams, and Petifacas was given up into the hands of Amytis, who plucked out his eyes, his skin over his eares, and then crucified him: Oebares fearing the like punishment, though Crus promised him indemnity, killed himself. As for the body of Altrigas it was fumpruously buried, having been guarded by Lyons in the Wildernesse till Petifacas fetched it away. These improbable things are related by Cielias.

Book I.

49. Berofus the Chaldean left recorded that, in the 17th year of Nabo- Apud Joseph. What Berofus nidus, Cyrus, having subdued all Afia, with a great Army, turned against com, Apion, I. 1. and Abrdenus Babylon. That Nabonidus meeting and ingaging with him in battell, was wrote of him, overthrown, and betook himself into a Town of the Bor sippians, Cyrus besieging Babylon, and considering it was not to be taken in haste, returned to A. S.I. Olymp. 6. Borsippus, where Nabonidus not expecting a form, yielded himself; and w. c. 214. Cyrus using him kindly sent him from Babylon into Caramania, where he allotted him an habitation. Abydenus (q) further added, that Cyrus belto- (q) Apud Eufeb wed upon Nabonidus, now above 80 years old, the Government of Cara- prapar. Exarg. mania. This is the fumme of what the most antient Historians delivered lib.9. concerning Cyrus his attainment of the Empire of the East; which hapned about the year of the World 2465, the first of the 60th Olympiad, 538 years before the . Era of Christ.

CHAP. III.

Of Sacred History.

Contemporaries with the Babylonian Empire.

From the time of Phaleg, and the division of the Earth; to the departure of the Ifraelites out of Ægypt.

Phaleg. Reu. Sarug. Nahor. Terah. Abram. 1. P Haleg being 30 years old, begat Ren, otherwise called Rebu and Ragau by the 70: Ren 32 years old, begat Saring. He at 30 Gen. 11. years of age, had a Son named Nachor, And Nachor, one (when he was 29) 2. Terah being 70 years old begat Abram, Nachor, and Haran. Not Veif. 26.

that all these were born at the same time, or are to be accounted in age as we What year of find them in order; priority in years not being constantly observed in Scriphis Father he ture; but rather that of piety and true worth. Haran is to be reckoned as the eldest; who died at ur of the Chaldees, before his Father departed Ludov, Cap-thence, and left 3 children, viz. one Son named Lot: and two Daughters, pellum. clivo- Milcah married to his Brother (and her Uncle) Nahor, and Sarai (or Iscah) nol. Sacra notis to Abram. The second was Nahor, Father to Chefed (of Chefed;) and so ad Tabulam 5. Abram the youngest; because he was born, not in the 70th as hath been thought; but 130 year of his Father. For Terab lived in all (a) 205 year, Ifagog, chrono-and died in Charan. Abram, when he came out of Charran (which (c) Gen, 12. 4. log. Differt. 5. (b) Stephen faith, was after his Father's death) was (c) 75 years old; which Jacob. Capbeing deducted out of 205, 130 years will remain. But if he was born in the pell. Hill. Sa. 70 years of his Father; then, at his death, was he 135 years old; and having being deducted out of 205, 130 years will remain. But if he was born in the era en Exotica faac born to him, when 100, in the Land of Canaan, he must with him have returned back to Charran (which teemeth very incredible); or else he 2003, & mul-left it not at his Father's death, as Stephen must make us believe he did.

3. Abram therefore was born in the 130 year of his Father's life, and the A. M. 2003. 2008 th of the World; as is clear from the ages of all his Progenitors, taken at the births of their Sons, and laid together. About the 70 year of his age,

He conteth f om #r to C.141.111.

Canaa.

32

SECT. I. God commanded him to leave his Father's house, and come into the Land Gentt, 13. which he thould thew him; promifing to make of him a great Nation, to blefle Acts 7. bin, and in him all the Families of the Earth. He, obeying this command, drew on his Father also with him, and so (together with Lor the Son of Haran, and Sarai Abram's wife) they came from Ur of the Chaldaans to Charean and dwelt there. Dwelling there feemeth to intimate a longer flay A. M. 2078.; thin of one year; fo that some probably think s years to have been there fpent. For Terah, now very old, might detein them by his weakneffe; they being unwilling to leave him, till they faw him either recovered or dend : But after his death, mindfull of God's command, they left Charran. and cume into the Land of Canaan. This journey from Ur to Charran, was the beginning of the 400 years of his, and his posteritie's, sojourning in a flung: Lind; the promise also made to him being so many years before the promulgation of the Law in Mount Sinai, as the Apostle Paul hath

4. The first place of Canaan in which Abram made any stay, was Sichem; Gen. 12. where Go I again appeared to him, and renewed his Promife : another of giving that Land to his Seed being added to it; and in this place he built the fuft After to the Lord. Thence he removed towards the hilly Country, and the Haftem tract of Luz, (afterwords called Bethel) where he built another Altar; and so proceeded into the Southern Cooks, whence a Famine drove Sojourneth in him into Agypt. There he fojourned, and taught the Agyptians Aftrology, which Jos phus faith, they were ignorant of, till he communicated to them the knowledge of it, and of Arithmetick. His wife being beautifull; for fear of his life, he counterfeited himfelf her Brother, fo that Pharaoh begin to cast his affections on her, till, plagued by God, he was constrained to difinisse them both in peace. Our of Agypt then he returned to that place, between Har and Bethel, where he built the fecond Altar : Now Chap. 13. was he and Lot grown fo rich, that no longer could they conveniently live together. Lot being departed to the Plains of Sodom, God again renewed his promife to Abram, which he more largely explained, both as to the giving of the Land, and the propagation of his Posterity. After this, as he was commanded, he went and viewed the Land; then pitch't his Tents in the Plun of Mamre neer Hebron, where he built another Altar to the Lord.

5. At this time 4 Kings about the River Euphrates, viz. Amraphel King Chap. 14. of Shinar o' Babylonia, Arioch King of Ellafar, (thought to be Arabia, becuse of a City upon the borders of that Country, called Ellas) Chedorlaomer King of Elam (afterwards "e fia) and I idal King of Nations (thought to be many perty Kingdoms, adjoyning to Phanicia and Palastine) came and fought against the & Kings of the Pentapolis; viz. Bera of Sodom, Birlha of Gomo rah, Shinah King of Admith, Shemeber of Zebojim, and the King. of Bila (afterwards called Zoar); all who, had 12 years ferved Chedorlasmer; and in the r th rebelled. They overthrew these five petty Princes, led away much pillige, and many Captives, amongst which was Lot, who then fo ourned in Sodom. Abram hearing this, armed 218 fervants; and, pursuing them, recovered Lot, and all the prey, which he restored to the owners. In his return, Melchisedech (whom some improbably make Sem) King of Salem (or Terufalem,) Priest of the most high God, brought forth Bread and Wine, and bleffed him; to whom he gave the Tithes of all. In this Storie Abram is sirst called an Hebrew by Mofes (And there came one which had escaped and told Abram the Hebrew) which word in Scripture, is not found applied to any other before him.

6. 'ome (d) think he was so called from Heber the Son of Salah, and that (d) Vide Bothis appellation onely was proper to his Family, because it kept the most chartum Pha-Why called antient or Hebrew tongue incorrupt. But (e) others finding the word to leg. lib.2 c.10. an Hebrem. ander of Hoven tower into the heart of a Stranger; think it was (1) Lege Lucility of the water, or a Stranger; think it was (4) Lege Lucility of the heart of the Euphrates. None of Heber's Postericy being called so but onely he, and p. 111, &c. fome of his; they think, addeth much to their reason. They conclude, that were the ftroyed.

Ifaak botes

the Hebrew language was not appropriate to Heber as a reward of his piety, Sect. I' because those that descended of him used it not alwayes and to others, befides his posterity, it appeareth to have been natural. They instance that Laban Spake Syriack, and the Canaanites and Philistins the Hebrew naturally as the names of their men, places, rivers, &c. do fliew. Therefore they judge it most probable that Abram speaking the Chaldean language before (which onely differeth in dialect from the Hebrew) got both the name and language, after his arrival in the Land of Canaan. The Heathen (f) Writers (f) Arrapanus thought them to have been called Hebrews from Abraham, as co rupted from and Euleb er Abrahams, our of ignorance of the language. Augustine also once inclined Charax and to this opinion, which he afterwards renounced.

7. Abram, after his victory over the Kings, received a more large pro- Retratlat. 1.2. mile from God, who ingaged to become to him a shield, and a sufficient re- 6, 16. ward; and (for that it troubled him to go childlesse) to give him issue, from Gen. 19. which should proceed an innumerable posterity, that, inhabiting a strange Land four hundred years, was to return and posselle this of Canaan, when the iniquity of the Amorstes would be full, in the fourth Generation. This chap, 18, League made betwixe God and Abram was confirmed by Sacrifice; yet, Sarai, feeing her felf barren, perswaded her husband to go in unto Hagar her Ilmael born. handmaid, of which he had a fon born to him, and named I [mae], in the eleventh year after his coming into Canaan, the 86 of his Age and of the Chap. 17. World, the 2094. In the 12th year after, God made another Covenant with A.M.2094.

him concerning the feed of Ifuack who was to be born the year following, and Circumcifion was instituted as a feal thereof. Now, whereas his name Abraham and before was Abram, or an High-father, it was changed into Abraham, or Pather of a great multitude. And Sarai, which fignifieth My Princeffe, or Lady. (as of one family) was altered into Sarah, or a Prince fle absolute; as of many Nations. Not long after, God made known to Abraham his purpole to destroy Sadom, and the other Cities for their abominable wickednesse. sodom, ac. de-He interceded hard for them; but there being not fo many as five righteous persons in Sodom, God having taken care for Lot and his family, rained fire and brimstone down upon the Cities, which together with the Plain were utterly destroyed: onely Bela was spared for Lor's sake, who fled thither. Of the rest the Dead Sea (into which the ground was converted) reremaineth a lafting Monument to this day. In this Sea (or Lake) no living Vide John.

Creature is bred, having nothing but a Sulphureous matter thence taken in Bitlelium Jesus and the sulphureous matter thence taken in Buttern, it likes great quantities. It is described to be 72 miles in length, and 19 in breadth. Bribus values. Nigh to it fair and pleasant Apples grow, which being touched, turn into a Sulphureous vapour: and a tradition remained amongs the Heathen of these Cities being destroyed * with Thunder and Lightning from Heaven. Loi's * Lege Tacitum wife, after the had got out of Sodom, looked back, and was turned into a Histor, 15, Pillar of Sale. His two daughters, thinking all mankind to have perished, made their father drunk and lay with him; from which incessuous copulation came Moab and Ammon, fathers of the Moabites and Ammonites, two great and powerfull Nations.

8. A little after (in the same year) Abraham having continued in the Gen. 20. Plain of Mamre about eighteen years, departed unto Gerar the Metropolis of the Philistins; where fapned the same thing concerning his wife, as for- A. M. 2108. merly had done in Agypt, Abimelech the King having taken her into his house, who therefore was plagued till he restored her with large gifts. The chap, ar. year being precifely finished, Sarah bare to him Isaac (so called because he laughed when God made mention of it to him)he being now an hundred years old, and the ninery; four hundred before the departure of his postericy out of Lepps. At the weaning of Isaack, Sarah seeing Ismael mocking, procured him and his mother to be banished the house, God bidding Abraham fulfill her defire herein, and promising to make of him a great Nation. When I fack was grown up (though of what Age is not expressed fome guef _ Chan 12. fing thirty years; others (unprobably) ten, or twelve, because he must have been of sufficient strength to carry wood) God to try his father's faith, com-

Recovereth

Lot and the

Booty from the 4 Kings.

34

Sarah dieth.

SECT. I. manded him to Offer him up for a burnt-offering on Mount Moriab, where afterwards the Temple of Solomon Rood. He, out of obedience, went about to do it; but God accepting his will for a performance, renewed his promise to him. Sarah died aged 127 years, and after her death Abraham Chan 22. married another wife, called Kezurah, by which he had other fix fons. To those he gave gifts, and before his death sent them away from saack, the Heir of the promise.

Ifaae married.

9. When / fack was fourty years old, his father * procured him to wife, chep. 24.
Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel, who was four to Nacher, the brother of A-A.M. 2148. braham. She (married at fourteen years of Age, according to the tradition of the Jews) was barren twenty years; but then her husband befeeching God chap.25. for her, the brought * forth twins (Efau and Facob) which thrugted in her .A.M.2168. womb; the elder being, as God foretold, to serve the younger. Fiveteen years after Abraham died, being 175 years old, having sojourned in the Abraham dy-Land of Canaan a hundred years ;22 after the death of Sem, four before that of Heber; in the dayes of Inachus King of the Argives, 1821 years before the Era of Christ , in the 2183 year of the World. Of Abraham (befides Artapanus and Charan before mentioned) * Berofus the Caldaan had * Apud Joseph fome knowledge, though he named him not. Hecatam not onely made Amig. lib. 1. mention of him by the way, but wrote an History of him. Nicolaus DA cap.7. mascenus in the fourth book of his Histories, related that Abraham, a certain stranger, reigned at Damasom; having come from a Countrey about Babylon, faid to be that of the Chaldeans. That he departed thence with his people into the Land of Canaan, afterwards called Tudan, where his posterity grew very numerous; concerning which he should speak in another place. In Josephus his time the name of Abraham was famous at Damascenus;

> 10. After the death of Abraham, God bleffed Ifaack, and made the same Gen. 26. Covenant with him. In a time of Famine, he also sojourned in Gerar, where diffembling concerning Rebecca his wife, the same thing happened to them as formerly to Abraham and Sarah, from another Abimelech, which name was common to all the Kings of the Philistins. Some years after, Ishmael died , aged 137 years, 48 after his father, in the year of the World 2231.

where was shewn a certain Village, called Abrahams dwelling.

His posterity.

From his eldelt fon Nebaioth, descended the Nabathasas, who (g) inhabited part of Arabia, from the River Emphraces to the Red-fea, called Arabia (g) Strabo red part of Arabia, from Petra the Metropolis of the Country; which, wanting fruits, abounded in Sheep and Cattel. (b) Diodorns describeth it to have Iyen (b) Lib. 19. like a Wildernesse untilled, as without inhabitants; without Rivers or Foun- 2,722. A. tains. It was unlawfull with them to fow or plant, to drink wine or build houses. being extraordinary defirous of liberty, and judging these things but temptations, to such as were fronger, to inthral them. Some of them kept Camels, others Sheep; some used to convey Spices, brought out of Arabia the Happy, to the Sea. When they were invaded by an Enemy, they betook themfelves into the Wildernesse, which being vall, and without water affoarded them sufficient protection. Another son of Ismael, named Kedar, gave name to a place of Arabia the Defare, often mentioned in Scripture. It is thought that, though the Chafaans, Madianites, and Ismailnes were of several Originals; yet they dwelt promiscuously together, and grew up into one Nation of the Saracens.

11. Fifteen years after this, I fanck being 138 years old and blind, fent Gener. his eldest fon Efas to Hunt for Venison, that he might eat and blesse him before his death. But Jacob, by his mother's help, supplanted him, and got the bleffing, having formerly bought his birthright for pottage. Hereat Efast inraged determined to kill him after his fathers death; which Rebeçca knowing, fent him into Mesopotamia to her brother Laban, that he might thence also take a wife out of her own kindred, and not make his choice amongst the Hittites, of which Efan had married two wives. In his journey, God ap- chap, 28.29. peared to him in a dream and bleffed him; for which cause he changed the name of the place from Luz into Bethel, Coming to Labor, after a moneths time, he Covenanted to serve him seven years for his youngest daughter Ra-from his bro-chel; which being ended, Leah, the eldest was given to him in her stead, and ther into Me- presently after Rachel; for which he agreed to serve him other seven years. A.M. 2246, Rachel, most beloved, continued barren, and Leah because neglected, obtained favour of God to be, fruitfull, which raifed fuch emulation betwixt them, as Rachel first, and then Leab, gave her maid to his bed, accounting the Children begotten on them as their own. Within seven years he had by Leah seven sons, viz. Renben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, IJachar, Zabulon, and a daughter named Dinah; by Bilhah, Rachel's maid, two fons, Dan, and Naph-tali; by Zilpah, Leahs maid also two sons, Gad and Alber, Lastly, by Rachel her felf one son, named Foseph, and born the sourceen year of his service ending. Six years longer he ferved Laban for wages (being to have the Cattel of fuch and fuch a colour) which his hard mafter changed ten times; but could

His return.

Dinah ravi-

Joseph fold.

thed.

His ifface

not withfund the providence of God in his growing rich,

12. Having ferved his father-in-law and Uncle twenty years, and obferving what envy he had contracted from him and his fons, he stole away with all he had, and proceeded three dayes on his yourney, ere his departure was known. Then Laban with his friends pursuing, overtook him after seven dayes in Mount Gilead, which from the event of this meeting had its name. After several expostulations, they made a Covenant (Laban being warned by God not to hurt him) and, in Testimony thereof, laid together an heap of Rones, which Faceb called Galend; but Laban, in his Syrian conque. Tegar-Sahadutha. Facob then, continued his journey towards Canaan, wrest- A.M. 2266. ling with God's Angel in his way; from which he received a bleffing, and the firname of I frail. His brother E fan also met him, and lovingly received him contrary to his fears. The first place he stayed at was Succost, so called because there he built an House, and made Booths for his Carrel. Thence he passed over Fordan, and came to Sichem, where he bought of Hamor, the father of Sichem, a Field, for a hundred Lambs, or so many pieces of money.

How long he continued in either of these places is not expressed. Demetrius * and Alexander Polyhistar wrote that he abode ten years in Socot, faying Apud Euseb. nothing of Sichem; perhaps because he made little stay there. Indeed Dinah praparat, Evang. feemeth to have been ravished not long after their first coming thither : Ha- lib.9. cap. 21. mor speaking to his Citizens concerning them, as persons lately come; and her curiofity to fee the women of that Countrey, probably may be thought to have proceeded, from the strangenesse of it. At the end of these ten years the was ravished, then sixteen years old; being born a little before Tofeph, and perhaps the fame year. To be revenged upon Sichem, who committed the rape, her two brothers Simeon and Levi flew him, and put the whole Citie to the fword, coming upon them when they were yet fore by

Circumcifion, which be had procured them to admit of, that he might obtain the maid for his wife. 13. Jacob much troubled hereat, was commanded by God to go to Bethel. having buried all the strange gods and the earings of his family under the Oake in Sichem. At Bethet he erested an Altar to the Lord, and here Deborab the Nurse of Rebecca died. Thence he removed to Ephrath, being Richel dieth. 107 years old, and when they had almost reached the place, Rachel died in Travel of Benjamin, having (as Demetrins and Alexander wrote) lived with her husband 23 years. Eleven years after Facobs return into Canaan, when Chap. 38. he was now 109 years old, Joseph being hated of his brethren, because he had brought to their father their evil report, and for his dreams (which prefaged his preheminence over them) they fold him to the Ismaelites; who carried A.M. 2277. him down into Egypt, where Potiphar Captain of the Kings Guard bought him, being now seventeen years old. Ten years he lived with him : till refuling to latisfie the wanton defires of his Miltreffe, he was falfly accused by her of her own fault, and cast into prison. The year after, he interpreted the Dreams of the chief Butler and Baker of Pharoh, both which were in prison with him; and accordingly the Baker was hanged, but the Butler restored, who yet forgat Toleph.

14. At

Edom.

Tacob goeth

into Agypt

Dicth.

Maac dieth.

14. At this time his Grand-father Ifaat died, aged 180 years, in the 2288 year of the World. He was buried in Hebron, by his two Sons Elan and facob; the former having (as some think they have ground in charity to believe) reconciled himselfe to his Brocher, and joyned himselfe to the Church; not being estranged from the Grate of God, but onely from the speciall and particular Covenant, as to the proffised Seed; which they have the same reason to think concerning Ismael: The Funerall past, and the Goods divided betwirt them, being both exceeding rich, and therefore requiring large room; Efan departed to his former possession of Mount Seir ; Providence so ordaining it, that when the I fratilites should afterwards come to inherit Canaan, his posterity might neither be destroyed, nor displaced. He was otherwise called Edom, and from him Idamed took it's name, which feemeth from Strabo to have also included the Country of the Nabasaans. And likely enough it is, that he who married the Sifter of Nebaioth, might joyn himfelf to them and prafide over them. This is the famous Heroe, from Vide Fulleri whom not onely Idumea, but also the adjoyning Erithram, Edomaan, or Miscell, 4. Red Sea, (all fignifying the fame thing) was fo called; being known to the c. 20. Greeks, by the name of Erythras, the fame with Edom.

15. But two years after Joseph had interpreted the Dreams of the fervants of Gen. 41. Pharaoh, he was called up out of prifon, to explain the meaning of one, which the King himself had dreamed. This, betokening 7 years of great A. W. 2290. plenty to come, and after them as many of famine; and it being necessary, as he hinted to Pharach, to chuse out forme wife Main, who being fet over the Land, should gather and preserve the fruits of the Earth, against the time of Want : Pharabb made choice of him, being bout 30 years old, for this pur-Foscoh advan- pole : he appointed him hext to himfelf ; and gave him in marriage Afenath the Daughrer of Potibherah, Priest of On (or Heliopolis, where Strabo writeth, that the Prietts of old risse had their habitation.) on which be begat Ephralm and * Unasiaffer. According to his oregistion, 7 mon plentiful * A. M. 2297. Years enfued, wherein he gathered into flore holdes the Corn that abounded; and after them came 7 other of famine, which pravailed fore both in Agppe alld the neighbouting Counciles of Candain and Arabia. Japob amongst chap. 42, others; wanting provintins, in the 28 year of the famine; fent his Sons down 43, &c. others, wanting provincins, in the 2a year of the raining, being sold additional to the control of the control their volungent Brother was lest behind. The next year, being pressed with famine, they returned and Benjamin with theffi, whom their Father was confrisined to let go. Now, after some fürcher terrifying of thesis he shade himfelt known, and sent for his Father down into Agyr: Jacob underlanding of his Soll's life and promotion (whom he had given over of a long time, for A. M. 2208. dead) gradly went down, and with him of Souls, berides his Sons Wives: in the 34 year of the famille, of the World the 2298th, aged 130 years. 16. By Pharadb's content, Joseph placed them in the Land of Golben, chap. 47. and there mourtimed them during the familie. He fold to the Exprisary the Com formerly creatilized up; and therewith purchased for the King all their Mostley, Goods, and Lands ; except the Lands of the Priests; which were not allehated. The grounds he afterwards grafted to the former owners, chap. 49, 49. paying the fifth part of the profit to Pharaoh's use. After Facob had lived in LEGIP: 17 years, He adopted the two elden Sons of Joseph; viz. Manafes arid Ephrain, of whom the younger he preferred before the elder : He called his Sons together, bleffed them, and told them apart what should befall them in their policity. From Reuben his first born he took the prehemi- A. M. 2315. nence, secause he had defited his bed; and gave it to Jadah. He propheefed of Chrift's coming, commanded them to bury him in the Cave of Machpelan; in the Land of Canaan, With his Ancestors, and then died at the age of 147 years, in the year of the World 2315. Joseph caused his servants

Joseph dieth.

Ægypt.

observed for him, which number in that Country was onely proper to Kings;

Then, obtaining leave of Pharaoh, he and his Brethren, with a great company of Courtiers, carried him into the Land of Canaan, and buried him Gen. so.

17. Being recurned into Erypt, Joseph forgive his Brethren the fault they formerly had committeed against him (which now they feared he would revenge, after their Father's death, and as long as he lived he nourished them and their children. This space of time was 54 years after his Father's death, ar the end whereof, having exhorted them to Unity and Concord, forerelling them their departure out of Agypt, and commanding them thence to A. M. 2370.

earry his Bones, he dyed at the age of 110 years, when he had governed Egypt; under severall Kings, the space of So. Trogus Pompeius (as appeatest out of Tulbin * his Epitomizer) wrote many things concerning him, * Lib. 36. c.2.

parely taken out of the Sacred History, partly mixed with such Fables as the Heather were not wanting to invent concerning the laws. Abram, Mofes, and Ifrael, are made by him Kings of Damafeus, which City took it's name from their Predecessor. Ifrast had ten Sons, to whom he committed the Kingdom, and commanded thereto call themselves Jews from Judah, who died before the division, and whose portion was divided amongst them all.

The youngest of the to Sorie was Foloph, whose excellent wit his Brothers fearing, they fold him to some Marchants that carried him down into Agp.

Here learning the Magick Arts, he became very dear to the King, hiving skill in working Worlders, and interpretation of Dreams: moreover, no-Thing either Diving or Humand was beyond his reach; infomuch, that he the Physicians coembalme Israel, and a mourning of 70 dayes (or 72), was Sect. I.

foretold the barrennesse of the ground severall years before it hapned, and all

Egypt had perished with familite, but that the King, by his advice, caused

C. H. A. P. II I. Of Sucred Willing; Contemporary with the Rabylonian Empire.

there, according to his will, where they also mourhed for him 7 dayes.

Corri to be treasured up many years : finally, such was his knowledge, that his answers seemed rather the Oracles of a God , then the renlies of a Man.

Then followeth that Moss was his son, who, being both wife and beautiful, became a leader to fuch of experience as were infected with scab and irch, and for returned to Damalow, the Country of his Ancestors. Which Iyes (with others lieteafter to be mentioned) are to be attributed to the milice of the experiment. With the life of Hoph endeth the first Book of Moles his kiftory, called by the Greeks, Genelis, which container the account of 2369 wark of the World. The next to it in order of time, the Book of Job is thought to be i'df which Moforallo's reputed Author, by the common confent and opinion of the Hebrown

48. After the death of Joseph; and all that generation, the Children of Exod, 1. Aprall increased ablindantly, and grew exceeding mighty; so that the Land

The spanies was fitted with chilly numbers. But a certain King ariling , which knew not opperfied in Fofight; to keep them down; he prefled them with fore Labour; and left they mould invisite, gave order to the Midwives to drowne all the Male Children in the River. At this rime (58 years after the death of Joseph, Chap. s.

and at after that of Levi) Avaram, the Son of Camb, and Grand-fon of Liver's by Tochabed the Daughter of Levi (fo called by an Hebrailm, and not in a Exodi.

Chaile's own Sifter as some have thought) was made Father of a Son, whom Mofes born. Withis brane they hid a morreths, not fearing the Kings command, and when A M. 2428.

he could no longer be conceiled I pur him in an Ark of Bul-rufnes, daubed Pichin and without with Pitch, and laid him on the brinck of the River.

Richer the Kine's Duighter (by Josephsu called Thermania) coming down to walk her fell, found the Babe; and moved with compassion, sent for a har Dauences, which had warehed what would become of the Child, and fepho verifs unknown, had offered her feffe for a meffenger. Being nurfed up, the edu- vid lacob.

Nights which was Foodabed her felf, through the procurement of Mindam Hebreis Ic-

ested him as but dwn Son, and called him Mofer, because the had taken him Cappellum out of the water. Moy in the Egyptian tongue, as Fofephus * faith, fig- Hift Sacra & nifying Water, and Mes taken out, though Mosche in the Hebrew is no com- Evotics at A. Pounded word, fignifying drawn out, delivered, or rather a deliverer; not M. 17:9.

38

SECT. I. without a mystery; he being a Type of that great Deliverer of Mankind. He was learned in all the Learning of the Egyptians, and became mighty in words and in deeds.

19. But Moses being grown up, by Faith refused to be called the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter, and despised the pleasure of his Court; having, according to Josephus his history, thrown down his Crown, sett upon his head when a Child, and trampled it under his feet; for which, as an ill omen, the Priest (who had foretold, that his Nativity would prove dyfastrous to the Agyptians) would have had him flain; but he was spared through the affection of Thermutis. Being forty years old, he visited his Brethren the Ifraelites; and looking upon their burdens, when he faw an Agyptian smiting one of them, he killed him, and hid his bodie in the fand. But this coming to Pharach's ear, he was forced to flye for his life, into the Land of Midian, where he kept the Sheep of Tethro, or Hebab, Priest of that Country, who A. M. 2468. gave him Zipporab his Daughter to wife. Forty years he continued with him, till the burthens of the Children of Ifrael were grown fo intolerable, after Exod. 3, & 4. above 80 years continuance, that God, being moved with their cries, called to him out of a burning Bush, ashe was feeding Sheep, to fend him on a message to Pharaoh, about their dismission. He laboured by all means to make excuse; but at length, confirmed by promise of Divine assistance by Miracles, and the company of his Brother Aaron, (3 years elder); he underrook the employment. 20. This message was ill resented by Pharaoh, and greater burthens im- Chap. 5, &

Sent to Pharaob.

The ten

Ægypt.

Plagues of

posed on the people; no Straw being now allowed them, for the making of 7. &c. Brick, in which fervile worke they were imployed. Many figns and wonders were wrought by Mofes, in the King's presence, which little availed; Jannes and Jambres, Magicians, doing the same with their Enchantments. Ten Plagues also by the Ministry of Moses, God inflicted upon the Land. 1. The warers were turned into blood. 2. Frogs swarmed in the Land. 3. Lice. 4. Flies and other Infects. 5. A Murrain followed amongst the Cattell. 6. Ulcers in Man and Beaft. 7. Thunder and Rain mingled with Fire, and Hail that destroyed the Corn with the Trees of the field. 8. Locusts covered the face of the Earth, and confumed the fruits thereof. 9. Enfued Darkneffe throughout the Land Agypt, fuch as no Agyptian could ftir out of his house, yet the Ifraelies had light in their dwellings, to. Last of all, the First-born were slain, from Pharaob that fate upon the Throne, to the Firstborn of the Captive in the Dungeon, and the first-born of Cattell.

The Ifraelites depart,

21. The Nine former Plagues Pharaoh's heart was to hardened as to with- Exod. 12. fland; but the Tenth forced him to let the people go. Upon the death of the First-born, he and his Subjects thrust them out with haste, out of the Land, and fogot the Jewells of filver and Jewells of gold, which they had lent A. M. 2508, them. For the Israelises were commanded by God, to borrow these things; and the night before their departure, to kill a Lamb; with the blood of which they were to sprinkle the lintels of their doors, that the Angel appointed to do this execution upon the First-born, might passe by their houses, an the fight thereof. And, in memoriall of the thing, this they were to do every yeer on the tenth day of that moneth (thenceforth, commanded to begin the year, being called Abib) eating a Lamb in a travelling posture, with their loyns girt, and staves in their hands. Thus left they Agpp., 430 years after the first promise made to Abraham, and his leaving #r of the Chaldeans, 400 after the birth of Ifaac, 210 after Jacob's descent into Egypt, in the 2508th year of the World. This their departure is also attested by Heathen Writers: but related to have been upon such grounds, as the Agyptians themselves invented; who, as it feemeth, took occasion from the Plague of Ulcers, which they fuffered in their own persons, to feign, that because of Leprosie they were forced out of the Land; as will largely appear in the History of Ægypt.

SECT. II.

From the departure of the Israelites out of Agypt, to the death of Solomon, and the Rent of the Kingdom.

The number of the Ifraelites at their departure.

to be obser-

I. THe number of the Children of I frael may be estoemed by what is recorded concerning their men of War, of the Age of twenty years Vide Pererium and upwards. Of these went out about 600000, besides Women and Chil- in sa.cap.Exad. dren; fo that if those of that Age be reckoned as two parts of five, of the whole multitude, (which is the usual account amongst all Nations, to reckon men for War, as 40 to 100. in respect of the whole body) then the totall number of all, both old and young, amounted to about 1500000. To shefe must be added a mixed multitude; which, having taken up their religion, went out with them, and is thought by some to have consisted of as many more; fo that the whole fum of all together, at this rate, would arise to 2000000. As for the number of the Ifractices, it need not feem incredible, that from about 70 persons in the space of 210 years, so many should proceed. For if but one man, in the thirtieth year of his Age should begin to be Vide Tacob. a father, and had but in all ten Children, who also with their posterity should Cappell, ad beget at the same Age, that one man, before 200 years, would have def- A.M.2293. cended from him, of the fixth Generation 1000000, of the fifth 100000. of Anea memoria. the fourth 10000. of great Grand-Children 1000, of Grand-Children 100, is civitate Laand of Children 10. But that the Ifraelites began to be fathers before the Goratenfi No-Age of thirty is more then probable; nature * fometimes not requiring half vempopulance, Age of thirty is more then probable; nature to think that they often exceeded norum diodecim the number of ten Children. The Scripture relateth Abdon to have had genuit ex pnella fourty fons, Abizara thirty, and as many daughters, Gidon feventy fons, and confobring fue Abab as many. Agyptus, Danaus, Prinmus, and Darius, are reported to qua nondum de-Abab as many. Ægypus, Danasis, rriannus, and Danus, are reported to cimum anum have had fifty Children; Areaserses, Justine relacest to have had 115, and explored. Rem Historius 600. These things (to add no more) prove the great increase and mare & of the Ifraelites to have been possible in the course of Nature, although not cujus memoria without an especial providence. 2. Moses had gathered the people together, as Fosephus writerh, about off in Aquita-

Rameffer the chief Citie of Goffen, that they might be in a readinesse, and ipfe de se patri thence they came to Succest where was their second station. Here Moses mee testatus est, propounded the command of God concerning the annual observation of the quad aliequi over annually Passeover, and the Consecration of the first born. A ready way hence to the tune ne pueri Land of Canaan would have been through that of the Philiftins; but because hant Scalieer. the Israelizes were born in flavery, and therefore had but low and poor spi- in Parei Deut. rits: to exercise them, to stir them up, and left, for want of experience, they ". should be so terrified as to return, God lead them another and longer way. From Succeeb therefore they came to Etham in the end of the Defart, in two dayes; whither God conducted them by a Pillar of a Cloud by day, and Pila lar of fire by night, that never forfook them, till they came to the Borders of the promifed Land. From Ethane they journeyed to Pihabiroth, and thence to the Red-fea. Hither Phareh pursued them with all his Forces, ropenting he had let them go. They were there exceedingly struck with retrour, and murmured against Moses, for bringing them out of Egypt. In this extremity God divided the waters of the Red-jea, which being as a Wall on both fides to them, they passed over on dry ground. The Egyptians essayed also to pursue them in this place; but the Pillar then removed from before pale the Red-them, and placed it felf between them, giving light to the Ifraelites, consternation, and a pannick fear amongst the Egyptians, which causing great diffurbance, the Lord also fought against them, and they fled. But then the waters returned to their place and overwhelmed them all, so that neise ther Phareh, nor any one of his men escaped. This place of the Red-fea be-

39

SECT. II.

SECT.

Quails and

The Deca-

logue,

Manna.

SECT. I I, ing here not at all fordable, the fole power of God procured their passage; though Fosephus, to gain credit to the Hory from the incredulous Heathen, vide Strabotaketh off from the miracle by an unfurable comparing of it to Alexander nem. 1.14. the Great his passing the shoar of the Pamphylian-Sea, which at low water 0.666. D.

Book I.

was ever bare, and at other times not very deep. . From the Red-Sea they journeyed three dayes through the Wildernesse of Etham; (which, as it seemeth, stretcheth forth it self to both the sides of the Sea) where they found no water. Thence they came to Marah, where they found water, but bitter, and thence the place had its name; which bitternesse was removed by the casting in of a certain Tree which God shewed to Mofes. From Marah they came to their fifth flation at Elim, where were twelve Fountains of water, and seventy Palm-Trees, and thence to the Red-Sea; which name feemeth to be applied to some Bay or Creek thereof. From the Sea they came into the defatt of Sin, where they pitched their Tents on the fifteenth day of the second moneth after their departure. Here murmuring for flesh, Quails were rained down upon the Camp at evening, and in the morning was there found Mauna, which continued every morning to fall, all the fourty years they abode in the Wildernesse. This Wildernesse of Sin being very large, and reaching as far as Mount Sinai, they had several stations in it. The ninth was at Diphka, the tenth at Alufh, the eleventh at Rephidim, where the people again murmuring for water, the Rock being fruck by Mofes gushed out into freams. Whil'st they here continued, the Exed, 17. Amalekies (descended from Amalek, who was the son of Eliphaz, and Grand son of Esau) fell in upon their rear, and made flaughter of the weaker fort. Mofes against them sent Folhna the fon of Nun, he himself in the mean time praying to God in the Mount. And as long as his hands were lifted up the Ifraelies overcame, but when he let them down the Amalekites prevailed; fo that Aaron his brother, and Hur his fifter Miriam's hufband, bore them up till the going down of the Sun. 4. In the third moneth they removed, and took up their flation in the de- chap.19.80.

fart of Sinai, over against the Mountain Horeh (which 'tis thought was some part of Sinai) and here they continued almost a year; to the 20th day of the fecond moneth of the next year. Upon this Mountain, God gave the Law of the ten Commandments in a terrible manner, on the 50th day after their coming out of Egypt, as * fome of the Ancients apprehended. The day af- "Hieronymus ter, several other Laws were promulgated, as it were Commentaries upon ad Fabiolumic the Decalogue, both Judicial and Ceremonial. Then Mofes having Offered Lo Seem. 1. de Sacrifice, read the book of the Law to the people, and made a Covenant be- Pentecoffe. twixt God and them , and went up into the Mount where he remained fourty dayes: fix in the lower and cloudy, and 34 in the highest and fiery part. In this space of time he received advice concerning the ftructure of the Tabernacle, the Ornaments and Confectation of Priests, &c. From this familiar Conversing of God with Moses, the Heathen Law-givers took occasion to feign such a priviledge to themselves. As amongst the Gotes , Zamol xis

Apollo, and Nama the Roman from the Goddesse Egeria. To this number * Diedorus, out of Ethnick ignorance, addeth Mofes himself, writing that he counterfeited conference with the god Jans. unterfeited conference with the god Jans.

5. But the people missing Moses so long a time, and not knowing what Margine No. was become of him, raised a tumult, and caused Aaron to make them a tar. god that might go before them. The Hebrows have a Tradition that Har, opposing this, was flain; but Aaron; overcome with their furious importunity, made them a molten Calf of Gold, after the fashion of the Egyptians, who Worshipped two Heisers , Apis and Mnevis , which they accounted gods. Fourty dayes, and as many nights being ended, God gave Mofas two Tables Chap 31. &c. of stone, wherein was written the Decalogue by his own finger, and fent him down, telling him wherein his people were employed. Mefer fomething gave out he received two Laws from Vefta. Lathrauftes amongst the Arimaspians from a good Damon. Mneves, amongst the Egyptians, from Merenry, Minos the Cretian, from Jupiter. Lycurgus the Lacedamonian from appearing Gods wrath came down from the Mount: but feeing them dance SECT. 2. before the Calf, in a great rage cast the Tables out of his hinds and brake them. He put the Calf into the fire, and grinding it to pouder threw it into the Brook, and made them to drink of the water : then commanded the Lewites to take every man his fword, and flay his Neighbour; fo that of the people fell that day about 3000 men. After this, going up into the Mount the fecond time, he interceded for the people, and at his return, removed the Tabernacle, or Tent, wherein he used to speak with God, out of the Camp, in token of the Lords displeasure. He hewed two new Tables of stone like to the former, and having given order for the making of an Ark of Wood, and all things about the Tabernicle, according to the pattern shewed him in the Mount, he went up the third time, and continued there fourty dayes and as many nights without eating any thing, as before. In this time God wrote anew the ten Commandments; and being pacified, renewed the league conditionally, and proposed other Laws to the people. When Moses returned his face shone, so that he put thereon a vail when he spake to the multitude, to which he declared Gods commands, urged the observation of the Sabbath, and the offering for making of the Tabernacle; in the work whereof, the latter part of this year was spent by Bezaleel, and his Companions. 6. On the first day of the first moneth of the second year, was the Taber- chap 40. nacle reared, and in this moneth were these things done which are spoken of in the third book of Mofes, called Leviliers. On the fourteenth day was the passeover celebrated in the Wildernesse of Sinai. On the first of the se- wum. 19. cond moneth God commanded Moses to number all the Israelites, except the Tribe of Levi, from twenty years old to fixty; the number of whom amounted to 603550. just so many as had been found seven moneths before, when the contribution was to be made for the Tabernacle. On the 20th of chap.to. the same moneth, the Cloud which rested on the Tabernacle removed, and they following it in four Armies came from the Wildernesse of Sinai to that of Paran, where they stayed 23 dayes in their 13th Mansion of Kibroth-Hattaavah. Here the people, weary of their Heavenly bread, lusted after chap.23.

The Spies fearch the Laud.

The Tabernacle reared.

the flesh of Egypt, and were punished with a sudden fire, which devoured ma- chap, xx. ny, and was at length quenched by the prayer of Moses. Here also Moses complaining to God of the great burthen which lay upon him; the Sanhedrim of the seventy Elders was instituted. In this place, moreover, God gave the people Quailes for a whole moneth on which they surfeired, so that a plague arose whil'st the flesh was yet betwint their teeth, and many perished. Hence the place had its name of Kibroth-Hattaavah, or the Sepulchers of concupifcence. From Kibroth-Hattaavab they removed to Hazeroth, where Aaron Chap, 12.

promised Land, but wander up and down till their Carkeises fell in the Wil-dernesse; except Caleb and Joshua. And this sentence was presently executed upon the ten, which had caused the sedition.

Miriam Bruck and Miriam Spake against Mofes about his wife; Miriam for that, was struck with Leprofie, with Leprofie, and cast out of the Camp; till Aaron, confessing their fault, and interceding to Moses for her he prayed to God, and she was healed. She being after seven dayes received again into the Camp, they removed, and chap.13. came to Richma, near unto Cadef-barnes, in the same desart of Paran. In the fifth moneth of the fecond year, and the time of Vintage, Caleb the fon of Jephunne, Johns the son of Nun, and ten other principal men were hence fent to fpy the Land of Canaan. After fourty dayes they returned. bringing with them of the fruit of the Land. Caleb and Foshuab incouraged the people, but the rest utterly disheartned them, causing them to dispair ever to possesse it because of the strength of the walled Towns and the Gyants which there lived. This raised such a mutiny, that they not onely murmured against Moses, but spake of naking them a Captain, and of return- Chap 14. ing into Egypt, threatning to stone Caleb and Tolhan, who laboured to the contrary. This so highly provoked the Lord, that he threatned suddenly to destroy them, and being prevailed with by Moses to mitigate his wrath, denounced that none of twenty years and upwards should ever enter into the

The Same-

8. When

The molten

commanded

to turn back.

8. When they had therefore now arrived at the borders of the promifed Land, they were commanded to turn back again into the Wildernesse rowards the Red Sea. But to make some amends, as they thought, for their late fear and cowardife, they arose in the morning; and, against the expresse command of Moles, went up into the Mountain to fight, where the Amalokines and Canaanites that there inhabited, smore and discomfitted them even unto Hotmah. At their return they wept before the Lord, but were not heard; and upon this occasion, and the death of those that fell daily in the Defart. Moles. as it's thought, composed the 90 Pfalm, wherein complaining of Humane frailty, and thortneffe of life, he fignifieth that Man's age was reduced to 70 or 80 years; and so now the third time was it, as it were, cut shorter by the halfe; the two former having been immediatly after the Flood; and again, in the time of Phaleg, at the division of the Earth. 9. Thenceforth, from their departure from Cades-Barnea, are numbred 17 more stations in the Wildernesse of Paran, wherein they spent 28 years, wandring about, till all the rebellious ones were confumed. The things which hapned in those years, cannot certainly be fixed upon any particular one, Moses herein being filent. Yet it is thought, that the History of the Man that gathered sticks on the Sabbath day, and for it was stoned; of the rebellion of Corah and his Companions, of Aaron's Red that budded, &c. are to be referred to the latter part of the second year; none of the forty, except the two former and the last of all, being taken notice of by Moses, who recordeth onely the 17 mansions which were taken up, during the 37 years that paffed between. The 17th and the last of these (being the 12nd mansion reckoned from the beginning) was at Exion-gaber, upon the Red Sea in the Country of the Edomises, whence they came to Cades, where they took up their 33 minfion. Hierome and others, account this Cades the fame with Numb. 33. Cades-barnea the 15th flation, making the Ifraelites to have after fo many windings and turnings, in fo many years, returned to the same place. But, others finding Cades-barnea in the Southern confines of Canaan , will have this Cades or Kadefh, a place different from it, and near to Exion-gaber upon the Red Sea, (whence they immediately passed to it) in the Desart of Zin. Whilst they remained in Cades, Miriam died at the age of 126 years, Chap 26. and was there buried. After this the people murmured, because the water which had hitherro followed them from the Rock Rightdim, here failed, being, as somethink, swallowed up of the Red Sea. Hereupon Meses and daron were commanded onely to speak to a Rock in that place, to give out water; but Majes, wearied with the untowardnesse of the multitude, uttered fome words of impatience and diffidence, and fruck the Rock twice, fo that the water gushed out in great abundance. Because they did not sanctifie God in the eyes of the people, he was anery with them, and excluded them both from entering into the Land of promife 10. Moles afterwards fent to the King of Edom, defiring leave to paffe quierty through his Country; but, he opposing, he led the people by the borders from Kadelh unto Mount Hor, where Aaron died, forme 4 moneths after his Sifter Miriam, at the age of 123; in the 40 year of their wandring in the Wildernesse; and Eleazer his Son succeeded him in the Office of High-

Their Manfions for 37 years,

Miriam dieth.

Aaron dieth.

Arad van-

quithed.

Priest. In the 6th moneth of the 40 year, the King of Arad, who inhabited the fouthern parts of Canaan, came out against them and took many prifoners; whereupon, they vowed, if God would deliver his Country into their hands, to destroy his Cities. Hereunto God affenting, they went up, The King of and prospering, gaveto the Country thename of Hormah, which is the same with Anathema, or Curled. Then journed they from mount Her, to compais about the Land of Edom (against which God had charged them not to fight, because of their Ancestors) and came to the 35th mansion of Tsalmona. which fignifieth an image. For here the people murmuring against the Lord and Mofes, because of the redioninesse of the journy, and loathing Manna, were bitten by fiery Serpents fent by God (the Greeks call them Dyplades, and Ælian maketh them chiefly to breed in Arabia); so that many perished without remedie. At length, Moles by God's appointment erected on SECT. 2. a pole a brazen Serpent, upon which as many as looked, were prefently made

Of Sacred History, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. CHAP. III.

11. From Tfalmona they came to Punon, thence to Oboth, and foto Fic- chap. 33, 834. whole. Abarim, on the borders of Moab, in the Defart the mof, towards the Sunrifing. Here runnerh the Brook Lared, towards which, when they passed. God commanded them not to make War upon the Monbites, who had formerly beaten hence Giants called Emmin, as their Bretheren the Ammoenites had also outed others, known by the name of Z. mzummim. Thirty eight years after their removall from Kades-barnea, the Uraclius passed Zared, all the carkeifes of the rebellious being in that space fallen in the Wildernesse, and came rotheir 39th Mansion of Dikon-Gad. Thence they travelled to Almon-Diblathaim, still in the Defart of Moab, and being to touch upon the borders of the Ammonites, God forbad them to moleft these also, because descended of just Lor. He commanded them to passe over the River Arnon; which having done, they removed to their 41 Mansion.

in the Mountain of Abarim, over against Nebo.

Sibon King of Helbon.

12. Out of the Wildernesse of Kedemoth, Moses sent to Sihon , the Deut, 11, Amorise, King of Helhbon, to defire leave peaceably to passe through his Borders; but he refused, and opposed them at Jahaz, where he was disconfitted and flain. The Ifraelites thus became Masters of his Cities and Country. which (as Josephu writeth) lay like an Island between three Rivers; Arnon Astin, lib. 4. on the South, Jabock on the North, (which falling into Jordan , loferh it's cap. s. name) and Fordan it felf on the West's being on the East, bounded with the Mountains of Arabia. As they proceeded by the way of Basan, Og King thereof, who remained of the Giants called Rephidim, oppoling them, was also slain, and his Country wholly subdued, with the destruction of it's Inhabitants; and in like manner all Argob (afterwards called Trachonitus) wherein were Sixty Cities. After these Victories, they removed from the Mountains of Abarim, and came to their 42d and last Mansion (taken up by Mo. Numb. 23. fes) near Fordan, lying from Jesimoth unto Shittim or Abel-Shittim, in the plains of Moab, which was so called, because the Moabites formerly possessed them, till driven beyond Arnon by the Amorites. Here they continued till they were led thence by Joshua, to passe over Jordan; 13. When Balack King of Moab had heard all that the Ifraelites did to the Amorites; lest under pretence of passage, they might also seize upon his Kingdom, he consulted with the Midianites, and sent into Mesopotamia Numb. 22, for Balaam the Son of Beer, the Soothfayer, to come and curfe them ; in- 23, 24 Chip. rending afterwards, to fall upon them. Balaam, having the pleafure of God

Og King of

Balaam. revealed to him, at first feared to come: and though he came at the second message, and laboured all he could to curse them; yet was he over-ruled, and his curse turned into a bleffing. But although he had no power to curse, yer By his advice he advised the King to that which tended especially to their destruction; To fend fome of the most beautifull Women into the Camp, to draw them drawn to Ido-both to Carnall and Spirituall Fornication; the later of which was committed with Baal-peor, the Idoll of the Moabites. God being angry hereat, commanded the principall of the Idolaters to be hanged up before the Sun, and Moses gave order to the Judges, to slay every one his men : A Plague also brake out amongst them, whereby in one day fell 23000 Men; to which Numb 26. those that were hanged and fell by the Sword, being added, advance the number to 24000. Phineas the Son of Eliazar the Priest executing judgment upon Zimri an Ifraelite, and Cozbi a Madianitish Woman, in the act of Fornication; the Wrath of God was thereby appealed and the Plague

Moles numbereth the people,

flaied. 14. A little after, God commanded Moses the third time to number the people. In this space of 40 years all the Men of War were perished, except Caleb and Toshwa, which amounted to the number of 602000. Yet was there by this time fuch a supply of young ones grown up, that they almost equallized the number of their Fathers; there being found 601730, from 20 years old

Numb at.

43

SECT. 2. and upwards, befides 22000 Levites, reckoned from a moneth old. After this, Moses, by Gods command, fent Phiness with 12000 Men against the Midianites, who had conspired with the Moabites against them. He deftroy-Bala,m flain, ed them, and amongst them Balaam the Soothsayer, who, as it appearerly, was not yet returned. The Women they brought away Captives; whereof the Married-ones they flew, and kept the Virgins for themselves. Now were the Lands of Sihon King of the Ammorites, and Og King of Balhan, divided Chap. 32.

The land be- amongitthe Reubenites, Gadites, and the half Tribe of Manufes, on this conditions that they should accompany their bretheren over the River Fordan, and affift them in the conquest of the Land of Canaun, so long as need should require.

15. The time now drew near, that Mofer must dye, being nor to passe over into the Land of Canaan. Therefore in the 11th moneth of the 40th year, he made a repetition of the Law to the people, related God's bene- Deur, 1, &c. fits bestowed on them, and exhorted them to obedience. The Law he wrote in a Book, and commanded it to be read every 7th year, at the Feaff of Tabernacles. He also, at the command of God, wrote a Song concerning the future Idolatry, and afflictions of the Ifraelites. Johns being then ordained Captain of the people in his flead, he ascended from the plains of Mont to Mount Nebo, part of the Mountains of Abarim, and whose top is called Deut ult. Phase a or Piseah, looking towards Fericho. There God having shewn him the Land of Canaan, from the one fide to the other, he died fome 5 months A. M. 2548. after Aaron, being 120 years old (the third part of which time faving ohe moneth, he spent, as * Tosophus writerh, in Government) in the 40 year * Antiq. 1. 4. ending, after he had brought the Ifraelies out of Agree, the year of the World 2548. God buried him in the Valley of Mont over against Beth-Pear, and no Man knoweth of his Sepulcher to this day. Concerning his hody, a contest hapned between Michael the Arch-Angel and the Devill; the reason of which is thought to be, because Saran would have had the place thereof known, that the people might be drawn to Idolatry out of reverence to so great a person. The Israelies mourned for him 30 dayes, and with his life enderh the Pentateuch, or his five Books. The Book of Joshun followeth, taking it's beginning from the 4 th of the departure out of Expr. and the 2540th year of the World. 16. Whilst the I fraelites were still mourning for Mofes, the two Spies Josh 1, 2, 3,4, were fent over Fordan, (as some think) to search the Land. The next morning after their return, the whole Hoft removed from Shutiling and came to Fordan, where they lodged that night, and the next day passed over the River. As foon as the feet of the Priests which bare the Ark touched the water, it fell off on both fides and made a way; fo that they went over on dry ground, the floods not returning to their place, to long as the Ark remained in The Israelites the channel. On the roth day of the first moneth Nisan, they arrived in the Passe over for Land of Canaan, and took up their first Mansion at Gilgal, not far from 7e- A. M. 2349.

richo. Here, (it's thought the next day) God commanded that all the Males income. should be circumcised, this Sacrament being omitted ever fince they left Mount Sinai; because they were in constant expectation of travell : upon which account neither had they kept the Paffeover fince that time. Three dayes they rested, and on the fourth they did eat the Passeover, and the day following unleavened bread of the Corn of the Land, at which time Manna ceased, after it had continued 40 years. 17. The first place they fell upon with War, was the City of Tericho, Chap. 6.

which having compassed with the Ark Teven dayes, on the feventh the walls fell down of their own accord, the City was taken, and all therein put to the Sword, except the Family of Rahab (the, having harboured the Spies, had fecurity promifed from them) whom Salmon of the Tribe of Judah married. to whom the bare Bunz. All the goods found therein were also accurried, nothing thereof to be made prey; which Law Achan transgressing, caused chap. 7, 8, 9. Ifrael to be discomfired at Ai, and for that was first stoned, and then burnt, with all that belonged to him. The Kings of Canada, flattled at Tofma's

Of Sacred Hiftory, Concemporary with the Babylonian Empire. successes, combined against him; but the Gibeonites, fearing the worst, coun-

terfeited a Message to him as from a far Countrey, and procured farety to themselves and posterity; yet such; as slavery was joyned therewith. Adon fedek King of Forusalem, and the Kings of Hebron, farmath, Lachift, and Daber, enraged hereat, conspired against them and fell upon their Citie; to the relief whereof Tolhna being called, raifed the flege, and profecuting his victory against the Kings, at his command the Sun flood still over Gibeon, and Chap, 10. The Sun and the Moon in the Valley of Ajalon. Upon which strange miraculous accident this is observed, that Ajalon being scarce a German mile Wellward of Gibeon, the Moon, as tis probable, was then decreasing, or in the wane, and, these two Luminaries standing still and moving together, the Astronomical account was thereby nothing at all diffurbed.

Joshua van-Kings,

18. Johns drave the five Kings to that streight that they hid themselves in a Cave at Makkeda, where after he had utterly vanquished and de-Broyed their Armies, he took them, and killing them, hanged their Carcafes on five Trees till Sun-fer : then cast them into the Cave and said a great heap of stones thereon. After their death he warred with many other perty Chap, 11, &c.

Kings, as with the King of Libnah, Lachifh, Gezer, Eglon, Hebron, and the rest: there was not one Cirie that made peace with I frast fave the Hivines, the inhabitants of Gibeon; all others they took in battel, and utterly destroyed, except fuch as it pleased God to referve, for a lash and scourge, wherewith to reduce them in times of Rebellion and for their exercise to be as Thorns in their eyes, and Goads in their fides. The Canaanites being thus deprived of their anciene habitation by Fostina and the Israelites; Many of them, as is conjectured, removing to the Mediterranean-Sea, (where they were known afrorwards by the name of Phanicians) continued not all there, but spread themselves abroad, and sent Colonies far and wide into many places of Enrope, Afra; and Africk, concerning which that excellent book of Bochartus, called Canada, is to be consulred. That is remarkable, which * Procopius mentioneth concerning Pillars erected in the Province of Africk, called Tingisams, with a Phanician-inscription to this purpose: We are they who sted from the face of Joshui the Robber, the son of Name. How long this War

continued till the divition of the Land, is not expressed in Scripture; yet is therece to be gathered. For Cateb being fourty years old when with others he was fent by Mofes to fearth the Land, was at the time of the Division, as he faith, 44 years older. Now the Spies were fent out in the fifth moneth of the second years after their departure out of Egypt, or sooner; so that from that time to the entrance into Cannan, followed almost 39 years; (the Ifraclites being fourty years in the Wildernesse) which being deducted our of the faid forey five, fix years and some few remainsduring which the War in Canaan must have continued.

The Cleronchia the Land.

19: The Cheronchia then, or divilion of the Land, fell our in the beginor division of ning of the seventh year from their entrance into Canaan, and in the year of the World 2535 also beginning. Ir continued about one year, as some A.M.2555 gather from the story. Pint of all, an inheritance was given to two Tribes and Chap. 14.15. an half, viz. the Tribes of Judah, Ephraim, and the other half Tribe of Ma- oc. ansfer. Then met the Ifractives rogerher in Shiloh , because seven other Tribes yet remained undisposed of. Therefore certain men were sent from that place to bring a Survey of all the Land, which could not be done in a few dayes; and then after their return the division was perfected; for all which no telle then the space of a year seemeth necessary. So, there are from the Vide Ludov beginning of the World to the end of this Division, 2555 years, containing Capellum 13

just formany weeks of years as there are natural dayes in a year, viz. 365. Or chrond, Sace, if we make a great year confifting of fo many years as the folar year confifteth of dayes; then have we fix (or feven) fuch great years. It is further observable, that from the beginning of the World, to the entrance of the Israelites ingo Cannan may be reckoned to many Jubilies of years (viz. 52.) as are dayes in the seventh part of a Solar year, one onely excepted. The War having endured fix years, they refled on the seventh, wherein the Division was made, as in the Sabatical year. 20.The Fericho deftroyed.

Land of Ca-

yond fordan

SECT. 2. \sim The rife of Sabbarical years and Jubilies.

46

20. The rife therefore, and beginning of the Sabbatical year, and of Inbilies, some chuse rather to fetch from the first entrance into Canain, then from the division of the Land. For though they began not to sow the Land on this fide Jordan till after the division; yet before this had they taken possesfion of the Countrey lying beyond the River, which was divided betwirt the two Tribes and the half; whereof, though it must be granted that those which were fit for War, accompanied their brethren over Jordan, according to the charge laid upon them by Moses, yet is it to be supposed that those which stayed behind were nourished by the fruits of that soyl. For Manna had already ceased, and the Corn which the other reaped of the Enemies sowing being but gotten by degrees, according as they Conquered the Countrey, could scarce maintain them without sending for supplies to those that stayed beyond the River. When they had ended the division, the Children of Ifrael give for an inheritance to Johna that which he asked, even Timneth Serah in Mount Ephraim, where he built a Citie, and dwelt therein. The Tabernacle 70/1.18. of the Congregation was fet up at Shiloh by the whole Assembly. As for the Levites they had no inheritance affigned them, but (the Lord being their in- chap. 20. heritance) they were to live of Tythes & Offerings. Onely 48 Cities on both fides of Jordan were fet apart for them to dwell in, which were also to be Cities of refuge, whicher those that were guilty of casual homicide might fly

#ofbua dieth.

from the avenger of bloud, and there remain in security till the death of the High-Priest. Follows being very old at rhedivision, is by the Jews said to have lived, past the first Sabbatical year, but to have died before the next arrived. Some give to his government twenty years, and fome above; but others think chap.24, v.29. he died, not long after the division. There is no certainty thereof from Judge 11.8. Scripture; but that he lived a hundred and ten years is expresly recorded.

fall to idola-

21. After Johns and that generation were dead, which had feen the wonders of the Lord, another arose after them that knew not the Lord, nor the works he had done; fo that the Children of Ifrael followed other gods, ferving Baal and Alharoth. For this cause the anger of the Lord was hor against I frael, and he delivered them into the hands of spoilers which spoiled them. He fold them into the hands of their Enemies round about, infomuch that they could not fland before them; but whitherfoever they went out, the hand of the Lord was against them for evil, as he had said and sworn. Neverthelesse he raised them up Judges to deliver them out of the hands of those that spoiled them; and yet they would not hearken to their Judges, but went a whoring after other gods, and bowed themselves unto them. Hereupon the Lord resolved not to drive out thencesorth any Nations before them, which Joshua left when he died, that by them he might prove I fract whether they would keep his way and to teach them War. There were left chap. five Lords of the Philiffins with all the Canaanites, the Sidonians and Hivites that dwelt in Mount Lebanon, from Mount Baal Hermon, unto the entring of Hamath. The Children of Ifrael dwelt amongst the Canaanites , Hittites, Ammorites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Tebufites : they took their daughters to be their wives, gave their daughters to their fons, and ferved their calhan oppref-

22. For this, the anger of the Lord was hot against I frael, and he fold them Vers. 8. to the hand of Cushan-rishathaim King of Mesopotamia. How long this was after the division, the Scripture expresseth not. We read that he oppressed Lud. Cappelthem eight years, but some think it should be read in the eighth year, viz. lus. after the division, or eighth years, because this servitude ended in the eight. But that it began not immediatly after the division, neither after the death of Tolhua, seemeth evident; because the Israelites served the Lord as long as that Generation lasted, which had seen his wonders; which cannot be conceived extinct at the same time with him. Others think a longer time then feven years to have passed betwixt the division and this oppression, assigning fourteen years to the government of Johna after the division, then ten more to the government of the Elders after, his death, who might very well live Jacobus Caplonger then fo; none that were twenty years old when they came our of pellus.

Egypt having entred Canaan except Joshua and Caleb. After that, as many SECT. 2. years they attribute to an Anarchy, in the fixth year of which they will have the Civil War to have broken out betwixt Benjamin and the rest of the Tribes, Judg 20. wherein all the Benjaminites except 600 were flain. Four years after this War, and at the end of the 10th. Cushan the King of Mesopotamia afflicted Ifrael for its idolatry eight years. But concerning this there is no cer-

23. At the end of the eight years, God stirred up for a deliverer, Othniel Fudg. Chap. 3.

CHAP. III. Of Sacred History, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Othniel delivereth them.

Egion oppref-

Dalivered by

ferh them.

Ebud.

of the Tribe of Fudah, Nephew to Caleb by his younger brother Kenaz, and his fon-in-law. Into his hands the Lord delivered Culhan, and the Land had rest fourty years. After his death (which is set to the end of these fourty years) Ifrael turned again to idolatry, and the Lord delivered them up to Eglon, King of Moab for eighteen years. At the end of this term he stirred up Ehud a left-handed man of the Tribe of Benjamin, who under colour of a message stabled Eglon into the belly, and gathering the Israelises together on Mount Ephraim, flew 10000 of the Moabites, all men of War. After this, the Land is faid to have rested 80 years, the words being taken literally; but then some think none of the years of the Tyrants, or Oppressors, are to be counted feverally, and by themselves, but to be included herein as other years after mentioned; else the account will swell much larger then the whole number of years, which the Scripture feemeth to allow of. If we take-in all the years afcribed to the Tyrants, then they will have it an Enallage (frequent in all Languages) and instead of 80. Ehud governed, or the Land refled under him onely eight years; but others think they have as much reason to take them literally.

Shamgar judgeth Ifritel.

reft reftored to it by Ehud.

Fabin oppreffeth them. And the Philiftins.

them,

24. After Ehnd, Shamgar the son of Aneth judged I frael, but no men- chan 4. tion is made of any time. It followerh, when Ehud was dead the Children of Ifraet did evil again in the fight of the Lord, and he fold them into the hand of Jabin, King of Canaan, whose General was Sifera, and who had 900 Chariots of iron: he mightily opprefied them twenty years. It is most probable that in this time the Government of Shamgar was included, (he flew with an Oxe-good 600 of the Philistins, who at this time might also afflict Ifrael): or elfe it being but short might fall betwixt Ehud's death, and the oppression of Fabin; there being probability enough that some time pasfed after his death, before the Ifraelites so highly provoked the Lord as to be given up into Fabius hands. At the end of these twenty years Deborah, the wife of Lacidoth (judging Ifrael at this time in Mount Ephraim) moved by God sent for Barak, the son of Abinoam from Kadesh-Naphtali, and made him Captain. He, with 10000 men of Zebulon and Naphtali, overthrew Sifera, who flying on his feet to the Tent of Heber the Kenite (descended of Jethro, father-in-law to Mofes) Jael his wife killed him by a Nail driven into his Temples as he lay affeep. So the Land rested under Deborah fourty years as we read it, * another interpreting it in the 40th year, viz. after the *Lifher.

The Midianites oppresse

24. This time expired, and the Ifraelises relapting to idolatry, God gave Ind. 6. them up into the hands of the Midianites, and other people of the East, which afflicted them seven years, destroying their Corn, driving away their Carrel, and making havock of all things. This made them cry to the Lord, who first reproved them by a Prophet; and afterwards, by an Angel stirred up Gideon, the fon of Foalb, of the Tribe of Manaffes, to deliver them. He having pulled down the Altar of Baal, and burnt his grove, out of 23000 men choic chap, 7. Gideos delive- 300 with which number marching against the Midianites, he so affrighted retheren, them by a stratagem of Lamps and Pitchers, that he routed their whole Army.

The Ephraimites took Oreb and Zeeb: Gideon following the Chace beyond Fordan, wholly discomfitted them, and took, and flew two Kings of the Mi- chap. 8. dianites; Zeba and Zalmanna. After so great a victory the Ifraelites offered him the Kingdom; but he refused it, and asked onely the earings of the prey, wherewith he made an Ephod which afterwards gave occasion to idolatry (all Ifrael going a whoring after it) and became a mare to him and

BoorT

SECT. 2. his house. But thus Midian being subdued, the Country was in quietnesse under Gideon 40 years, as most read it; but as others, was quiet in the 40th year ; v.z. after quiernesse restored to it by Deborah and Barach.

26. Though Gideon refused the Soveraignty, yet Abimelech his base Son thin- chap. 9.7 Son maketh king such i thing was not to be neglected, dealt with the Sichemites, of whose himself King. City his Mother was native, to make him King : and by their help he seized on the Kingdom, having flain his Seventy Brethren upon one stone; Josham the youngest onely escaping. The Ifraeines, after Gideon's death, had again turned after Idols, and therefore God not onely subjected them to the Dominion of this most wicked of all parricides, but to intestine diffentions, by reason of him. For after he had tyrannized three years, Gaal with the Sichemues conspired against him, which having timely discovered, he destroyed them and their City (fowing it with Silt) and burnt the house of their god Boith, with a thousand Men and Women which had fled to it. Then went he against Thebez, and took it, the Inhabitants whereof retired for defence into a strong Tower. Here, as he was about to set fire to the door, a Womin cast down a piece of a Mil-stone upon his head, and so brake his skull, that he caused his Armour-bearer to kill him, lest it should be faid, that he Tolah judgeth died by the hinds of a Woman. After his death, Tolah, the Son of Puah.

the Son of Dodo, a Man of Iffachar, that dwelt at Samir in Mount Ephraim, Miacl arose to defend Ifrael, and judged it 23 years. After him Jair a Gileadice Fair. 22 years, thought to be descended of that Fair, who took the Towns of Argob, and called them after himself Hanoth-Jair; as his thirty Sons in like minre, after that example, named fo many Cities, which they possessed in the Land of Gilead.

27. Jair being dead, the Ifraelises returned to their evil courses, serving Judg. 10. Balaam, Alharoth, the gods of the Moabites, Ammonites, and the Phili- ver 8.9. fins; for which God fold them into the hands of the Philiftins and Ammo-

The Philistins nites. It is written, Andrhat year they oppressed the Children of Mrael , 18 & Ammonites years all that were on the other fide Jordan, in the Land of the Amorites. opprelle Ifrael. which is in Gilead. Moreover, the Ammonites paffed over Jordan, to figure also against Judah and Benjamin, and the house of Ephraim ; so that all Israel was fore distressed. Some will have this oppression but to begin at the death of Fair; others think, they had oppressed Israel 18 years before, and now passed over the River, to afflict the other Tribes. The Israelites cried to God, and being, reproved, put away their Idolls: hereupon, the Ammon tes being got together in Gilead, and the Ifraelites affembled in Mizpah in the same Country, Jepthah the Son of Gilead, begotten on an Harlos, was fent for by the Gileadites and made Captain, being a mighty Man of va- that II. lour : He first fent to expostulate with the King of Ammon, and to demand the cause of the War. He answered, it was because I frael took away his Land, when they came out of Egypt, from Arnon unto Fabbock, and unto Jordan; of which he required restitution. Jepthah replyed, that in their journey from Agypt, they fent to the Kings of Edom and Moab, to defire paffage through their Coasts; but this being denied, they turned aside through the Wildernesse, and compassed about the Lands of Edom and Moab, not coming within the borders of Mont, and so at length came and pitched on the other fide of Arnon, which was the limit of Moab's Coasts; Then, that Sihon King of the Ammories denying them passage, and fighting against then, the Lord God of Israel delivered him into their hands: and they pos-

Wildernesse unto Fordan. 28. Seeing the God of Ifrael had dispossessed the Amorites, he demanded a revior, why he should possesse that Country; and whether he was any thing better then Balack the Son of Zippor, King of Moab, who never strove nor for ght against Israel. Lastly, he asked him, why he recovered not the Land all the 300 years which the Children of Ifrael had enjoyed it, and appealed to God for righ eous judgement betwirt them. These 300 years, if they be reckoned exactly; theyears of the oppressions, and of the Judges, must all along be counted in length, without including the one in the other; but if SECT. 2. this bedone, still many more than 300 will be found, and 100 years more will arise in the account of time, from the coming out of Aepp to the building of the Temple, than the Scripture in another place alloweth of. Some say, if so many years really passed, betwixt the last year of Moses, save one, and this time of Fepibab, as those successions do make; 400 years was rather to have been mentioned, feeing the number exceeded that of 300; and therefore accounting the other way short of 300, they allegde, that it is usuall, when a full or round number is chosen, rather to make use of that which most favoureth their cause; and therefore Jepthah meant by 300, about, or almost so many. On the contrary, others believe, that the scripture doth not fuffer them to omit the years of Servitude, and cortain them ture doth not inter them to omit the years of oscillarly appeareth out of those under those of the Judges, which they suppose clearly appeareth out of those under those of the Judgest, 18. *words before mentioned, which in generall deferibe the condition of the Ifraeliers, as fucceffively guilty of Idolatry, then runifhed, and delivered; after which, falling into an Anarchy at the death of their deliverer, they again relapfed into the fame fin. They will have also the particular accounts of these things in Scripture, by their order and distinction, to hold out no lesse-un-

fessed the Land of the Amorites from Arnon unto Jabbock, and from the

5.5

29. But the King of the Ammonites not hearkening to Jepthah, was over-Toping over throweith the thrown with a very great flaughter. Toping a this going forth, vowed, if the Lord would deliver the enemie into his hands , that whatfoever came firft out of his house to meet him at his return, should surely be the Lord's, and he would offer it for a burnt offering. It happened that his onely Daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and dances and after the had bewailed her Virginity, he is said to have done to her according to his vow. Some observe that for And in the place may be read Or, as if, he would offer the thing, if it were to be offered, or, however to confecrate it to the Lord. And their opinion feemeth most probable, who hold she was not offered up as a burntoffering, but confectated to God by perperuall virginity and authority of life, being altogether separated from Humane society, except four dayes in a year, for a little refreshment; it being said, that he executed his Yow upon her, for the he did not redeem her with money, according to the Law mentioned in * Exodus but left her consecrated to God in an unmarried state, lest she should seem to be another's and not the Lord's. Jepthah, after this, warred against the Ephraimites, who spake against, and threatned him and his house. He cut off 42000 Men, all being flain in their passage over Jordan, that could not pronounce Shibolesh. Having judged Ifrael fix years he died, and was

30. After Jephihah arole Ibfan of Berblehem, and judged Ifrael feven buried in Gilead. years, then Elon a Zebulonite 10, and Abdon the Son of Hillel a Piratho-Abzon, Abdon Judges, nite, after him eight years. Now the Philiftins again vexed Ifrael 40 years. Seeing neither of these three are said to have delivered the Land, some think those 40 years, to have included some of their Government. There are that ferch the beginning of them from the 4th year of Ibzan, and end them at vexe Ifrael.

Sampfor.

don. Of those that are for the lengthning out of the time, fome think they are to be reckoned from the death of Abdon, and end at the beginning of Samson's Government, which others again inferr, by good arguments, to be included in them, or else 20 of them must fall in with the time of Eli; the Seventy Interpreters accordingly, giving to Eli not 40 years as the Hebrew Copies, but onely 20. Still there are not wanting, who think Eli to have succeeded Abdon, and Sampson's 20 years (who was yet unborn) to have been included in his 40. They fetch the rife of the 40 years of the oppression from 17 years before the beginning of Eli, and end them so many after his deuth. Sampson was a Nazarite from his Mothers womb, no Razor coming on his head, and keeping himfelf from wine and strong drink all his time. Hence, as his admirable strength is said to have layn in his hair, so others have afcribed it to his abstinency, as if it had not proceeded from the especiall the death of Sampson, whom they will have the immediate Successor of Ab-

SECT. 2. Providence and Power of God. He was the Hercules of the Ifraelies, really performing fuch things as the Greeks would scarce attribute to their's, on whom yet they heaped those things that were done by many. He afflicted the Philistins much in his life, but much more at his death, by throwing down the house of Dagon upon the chief of them, being therein assembled to make themselves sport with so great an Adversary, whom having got into their power, they had deprived of his fight.

31. Had Eli præceded Sampjon, he would have been reckoned amongst his predecessors; according to generall apprehension. The High-Priesthood which hitherto had continued in the Family of Eliazar for five Generations, (viz. in himself, Phineas, Abisha, Bukki, and Uzzi, according to Fosephus) was in Elitranslated to that of Ithamar another of Aaron's Sons. The 1 Sam. 2, 3, Sons of Eli being very leud, grievously abused their power, and he used not 4. Chap. his authority in correcting them, whereby he fo far incurred God's displeafure, that he threatened to destroy his house, as it came to passe. The Ifraellier, towards the end of his 40 years, fought with the Philiftim; but were worked, and lost 4000 Men. To better their successe, they then sent for the Ark of God from Shiloh, promifing to themselves victory in it's presence; but of the next Battell the issue was the same. Hophni and Phineas the Sons of Eli were flain, and the Ark taken. This news being brought to Eli, upon mention of the captivity of the Ark, he fell backward from a fear, and being 98 years old his neck brake. The Philistins placed the Ark in the house of their god Dagon, which Idol fell down twice before it; and the multitude was so plage ed with the Hæmorrhoids, that they were glad to return it back with 200 1015.

Returned, Samuel, TEG! 7670 :-

The Ark ta-

32. To Eli succeeded Samuel, both a Levite and a Propher, to whose Government, from the division of the Land, passed 450 years, according to St. Paul, as the rext of (a) Luke now hath it. But to this place another in (a) Ads 13. in the first Book of the (b) Kings, expresly feemeth to contradict, which maketh the foundation of the Temple to be laid in the 480th year after the Israelites departure out of Egypt. This later number exceedeth the other but by 30. although in it must be comprehended, besides what is in the former, the 40 years of their stay in the Wildernesse, the fix years which passed before the division, the time of Samuel's Government, the reigns of Saul and David, with the three years of Solomon, that passed before the building of the Temple; all which make up the number of 129; fo that the litterall fenses of these two cannot stand together: Some go about to reconcile them by drawing down the beginning of the 480 years, lower than the Text will bear; and by removing that of the 450, higher than is convenient: to whom others joyn, in attempting the reconciliation both of those numbers, and clearing up the matter concerning the 300 years ascribed by Jepthab, to the possession of the Land of the Amorite's before mentioned. But there are, who find a necessity of confessing a mistake, either in the one or other Copie of these places. These are divided in their opinions, one party thinking they have better reason to stick to the place of the Kings, which is not so liable to any corruption (through the great care of the Tems) as the Greek text. hath that, by reason of the similitude of words, might well be changed from *From relaxo * one to another, through the ignorance of transcribers. Another will have the 450 years to belong to the division of the Land, and not to the Judges: all which have been mistaken through the wrong reading of the words.

ROOI IS.

33. Others, both of antient and modern times, are very confident, that, all confidered, the fault must fall upon that place of the Kings, which giveth but 480 years, to all that time that passed from the departure out of Egypt to the founding of the Temple; and that, instead of 480, 580 was most antiently written. For when any one place difagreeth with the whole feries of History, clearly held out elsewhere, it is rather to be corrected in its number (which may easily be alrered by a mistake of one word) than many places wrested to a compliance with it. Now all the times of the Anarchies, liberty, War, and servitude, of the Israelites laid together, without confusion of years

Book

(for which there is no ground at all), clearly hold out a hundred years more SECT. 2. than this place of the Kings; and to exactly from the feveral particulars make it up, that it feemeth to take away all doubt. From the departure out of Egypt to Mofes his death, intervened fourty years; thence to the beginming of Othmiel 34. whereof 26 are given to the Government of Tolhun and the Elders, and eight to the servitude under Cushan. Then Othniel governed fourty years, the oppression of the Moabites followed for eighteen. Abud ruled 80. The Canaanies Tyrannized 20. Debrah and Barak governed 40, the Madianites oppressed the Ifraelites 7, thence Gideon judged Ifrael 40. Abimelech reigned 3. Tolah 23. Jair 22. and then the Ammonites oppressed Is all which numbers amount to 385 years. After this Tephshah judged Ifrael 6 years, Ibzan 7. Elon 10. Abdon 8. the Philistins vexed Ifrael 40. and Heli ruled 40. which make up the summe of 111 years. Then Samuel and Saul governed 40 years (as will be feen), David alfo 40. and Solomon 3. before the foundation of the Temple was laid, which make up 83 years. Now all these numbers laid together amount exactly to 579 years, to which if the fourth year of Solomon be added wherein the Temple was founded, there ariseth the full number of 580. They perceive therefore Vide Gerard. it was not without reason that so many of the Ancients differted from that Joh. Vossii place of the Kings, which might also be lyable enough to the carelesnesse Ifag. Chrosol. of Scribes. According to this account, Students in Hiltory and Chronology Differt. $. are to take notice that a hundred years are to be added to the more ordinary Æra of the World.

24. In the dayes of Samuel, the Philistins grievously afflicted Israel, till 1 Sam.7. fuch time as by his means, the people being turned to the Lord call off their

The Philiftins idols, and foleminy repented at Mizpah; Hereat God was pleased to spare everthrown. them, and thundring upon the Philiftins, when they were ready to joyn battel, discomfitted them utterly, & so terrified them that they for sook the Cities formerly seized on, leaving onely one Garrison in the Countrey; and no more afflicted the Children of Istael to long as Samuel had the chief power in his hands. When he grew old he made his fons Judges over the Land; who per- chap. 8. verting Justice by bribery, the people thence gladly took occasion to defire a King, that in government they might be conformable to other Nations. Their most urgent reasons were for that the Philistins yet kept an Hold in their Countrey, and Nahalh the King of the Ammonites threatned them with Chan. II. War; at which they were to affrighted that neither trufting in God's providence (who hitherto had been their King, and avenger) nor to the Juftice defire a King, and prudence of Samuel, would they be fatisfied, or put off without a King, God therefore gave unto them Saul the fon of Kifh of the Tribe of Ben- Hofea 13.

The Ifraelites Saul is King.

35. In the book of Samuel no certain years are either given to his own government, or to that of Saul, but it feemeth probable from Scripture that he governed about twenty years alone, from the death of Els to the election of Saul. For it is faid, that the Ark of God abode in Kiriath-jearine 1 Sam.7.2. twenty years; and that the time being long, all the house of I frael lamented before the Lord at Mizpeh; which passages are joyned unto the serious exhortation of Samuel to move them to repentance. So then the end of twenty years, the exhortation, their repentance hereupon, and their moving for a King, with good reason seem to have been about the same time; so that 20. or 21 years and an half are to be given to his government, which began ar Eli's death. Now Heli died when the Ark was taken; which staying feven moneths in the Land of the Philistins was then fent away and came to Bethshemelb, where the inhabitants losing 50610 of their number, for their curiofity of looking into it , fent Meffengers to those of Kiriath-jearing to ferch It unto them, with whom it remained twenty years; and these years the Ifraelites counted long.

26. Sant was first by Samuel privately anointed, and afterwards publickly declared King at Mizpah. Not long after (a moneth it's thought) Jabelh-Gilead was belieged by Nahah , who refused to grant peace to the inhabi- Chan. 11.

cap. 12.

Raifeth the fiege at Ja-beh-Gilead.

he killeth

himfelf.

52

SECT. 2. tants upon any other terms than to put out all their right eyes, and lay this for a reproach upon I frael. They defined truce but for feven dayes; in which space, if no relief came they promised to come out to him. But Saul, hearing of their distresse, got together an Army of 300000 of Ifrael, and 20000 of Judah, with which he easily overthrew the Ammonites, and raised the fiege. Hereupon, at the procurement of Samuel, the people again met at Gilgall, where the Kingdom was established, and confirmed unto Saul: at which sime Samuel, upbraiding them with their unthankfulnesse to God, and him, terrified them with Thunder and rain in Wheat Harvest; and again comforted them in the mercy of God. Sant having reigned two years, the chap. 13.&c. Philistins again afflicted the Land', with whom he had fore War all the dayes of his life. He fought against his Enemies round about; against Moab, the Children of Ammon, Edom, and the Kings of Zobah : he smore the Amalekites, and delivered his people out of the hands of them that fooyled them. Yet, his heart not being upright before the Lord, God chose him out a man Divid anoing- after his own heart, and rejected him and his family. This man was David, the youngest fon of Jeffe, of Bethlehem-Judah, whom Samuel was fent to anount some years before his own death, and more before that of Sand. In this space, Sant persecured him from place to place; yet such ardent affection was there betwixt Jonathan his fon and David, that the love of a Kingdom it felf, joyned with the deep displeasure of a father, was nothing able to interrupt it. 37. The Apostle Paul declareth; that, after God had destroyed seven Na- Alls 13, 21. tions in the Land of Canaan, and divided their Land to them by Lot he gave unto them Judges for the space of 150 years, untill Samuel the Prophet. And afterward, ibey defined a King, and God gave them Saul, the fon of Kis, a man of the Tribe of Benjamin, by the space of fourty years. Some take the words as giving so many years to his reign alone; but by general confent the government of Samuel is to be included in them. Samuel seemeth to $ Sam. 25. have died not long before Saul (two years it's supposed), at such time as David was provoked by the churlithnesse of Nabal; and is said to have judged Vers. 55. Ifrael all the dayes of his life. Hence is it certain that Saul reigned not alone all those fourty years, and probable that Samuel having governed alone for one half of them , had still an hand in the publick affairs of the Nation. At length Saul was overthrown in battel by the Philisting, and lost his three chap 31, and fons , Jonathan , Abinadab , and Metchifus. And he huntelf being fore a chrom. 10. fons slain, and wounded, after he could not prevail with his Armour-bearer to kill him, fell upon his own sword and died. His son Ishosheth, by the means of Aliner . Sam. 3. aprain of his Hoft, succeeded him at the Age of fourty years; but the &c. Ilbbofbeth fue- Tribe of Indah anointed David, King over them in Hebron, who had formetly been confectated to this Office by Samuel : and he reigned over that Tribe alone, feven years and fix moneths. Ishofheth is faid to have relened A.M.2944. over Israel two years; which is to be interpreted, peaceably, and not difurbed by War; as his father is said to have reigned one year, viz. unmp. 1 Sam. 13.1. lefted by the Philiftins.

28. For, after these two years were expired, a long War insued betwixt David and him; his fide growing weaker and weaker, as David's grew thronger and Bronger: David to Brengthen himself married Mancha, the daughter of 2 Sam 2.3. Talman, King of Gelbun, on which he begge Abfolom and Tamar. At length &c. Abnen conceiving a displeasure against Theologie, because he had reproved him for medling with his father's Concubing revolted to David, and laboured to transfer the Kingdom to him; but coming to vilite himabout this affair, he was treacheroully flain by Josh, David's General, and Nephew by his fifter Zerwiah. All being out of order now in Ifrael, Baanah and Recal two Benigmites, the servants of Ilphosphesh, slew their Lord as he slept in his Chamber, Ilphosphesh slain and brought his head unto David. He rewarded them with death, and was a throw 12. by the Caprains, and all the Elders of the Tribes, anointed the third time King at Hebron, over all Ifrael; which government he beld 32 years. A little af- 2 sams.6.7. ter this installment he took Jerusalem from the Jobusties, and made it the &c.

feat of his Kingdom; himself building and foreifying the Cirie of Sian, and Sect. 2. feab repairing the reft. Then twice he overthrew the Philiftine in Rephilim, who whe up against him after they heard he was made King. The Ark of a chronic &c. God he removed from Kirianh-Tearim, to the house of Obed Edom the Girsite, and thence after three moneths into Sion. He purposed to build God an house, but was forbidden (because a man of bloud) that work, which was to be referved for Solomon. For befides his Wars in his younger time; all the space, betwire this and the birth of Solomon, seemeth implayed in Wats ; wherein he overcame the Philistins , Amalekites , Moabites , Ammonites, Idomaans, and Syrians. The Borders of his Empire he very much intant, not onely from Shihor of Egypt to the entring in of Hamath , but also as far as Emphrates, the utmost limits promised by God unto Abrahams and onely possessed by him, and his fon and Successor Salomon.

David's adul-

Punished.

eth Tamar.

cy of Sheba.

Diorh. after, when he had reigned over Judah alone in Hebron leven years and fix

39. Salamon was the second son begotten on Bathsheba, the wife of Uriab 1 Sam. 11, 11, eery and mur- the Mindee; with which woman David first committed Adultery, and then 13. for a cover added to it the Murder of her husband. After he had been reproved by Nathan the Prophet he repented, and wrote the SE Pfalm upon this occasion. Yet the Infant conceived in Adultery, died as soon as it was born; and, though Salomon was born the next year (at it's thought), yet this A.M. 2957. Annon ravish- fin escaped nor without a further punishment. For, within awhile, his eldeft fon Anmon ravished his half-lifter Tamar, and for that was killed by Abfalom. Some years after, Absalom by the advice and policy of Achitaphel chap. 15.16, Absolom rebel- seized upon the Kingdom. David hereupon fled to God as his Rock of re- 17,18, suge, and composed the 3d. and the 55th Platms: then opposing force to force. everthrew Absolom in the Wood of Ephraim by Jaab his General, who thrust the young man through with a Dart as he hung in an Oak, Contrary to David's order, who had charged all the Captains to deal gently with him for his fake. This Rebellion was followed by a new fedition raifed among the Afraeluse, by one Sheka upon this occasion; because they had not the chief

The conspira-hand above the Tribe of judah, in bringing back the King to his house; but this was happily suppressed, after Josh had procured the inhabitants of Abel to cut off Sheba's head.

40. After these things, several battels insued with the Philiffins, in one 2 Sam, 21. of which (see last wherein he was present) David hardly escaped the hands a chronze, of Ilhbi-kenok, one of the fons of the Gyant ; being refcued by Abilhai his Nophew, who flew the Philiftin. Not (c) long after, tempted by Satan (c) 1 Sam. 24. and his own ambition, he numbred the people : for which God being angry proposed to him three fores of punishments, viz. Famine, Sword, or 1 Chron.20.7. breth the peo- Possilence; as to which, he chose rather to fall into the hands of God then of man. Then God feut a Plague, whereby perished in one day 70000 men; but, as the Anget was alto about to deftroy formfalum he was commanded to deaft. Devidas length having arrived at seventy years of Age, was so decaved and spene by his many tabours and troubles, that he could not receive 1 Kings 1. any beat from Cloathe, and therefore a young maid, one Abifage, a Shuna. 1 Chron. 28.29.

Mise was chosen ont, to lye in his bofom. Admish his son taking advantage at this infirmity, by the affiftance of Joab the General, and Abiathar the Maketh Solo- Briefe, feized upon the Kingdom. When he had notice thereof, according to the prediction of God, and his promife unto Bashfusha, he established Soloman in his Throne, and having given him a charge, died about fix moneths moneths, and in Terufalem over all Ifraet and Tudab 22 years; in the year of the World (according to the vulgar way of reckoning without taking in the 100 years formerly mentioned in the History of the Judges) A.M.2987. 4 B. David being dead and Solomon established in the Kingdom, Adonijah I Kings 2. asked Mifag the Shunamite to wife, and forthat was put to death, as affe-Ching the Soveraignty. Abiathar was removed from the Priefthood, and and other to Zadek, of the Posterity of Phinehan, placed in his room, as had been foretold by God, seainft the house of Bli, from which the Priesthood now retur-

-93

354 SECT. 2. ned; Joab for fear fled to the horns of the Altar, and there was flain by Be-naiab, who was made Generall in his stead. Sime, who had cursed David when he fled from Absalon, was commanded to build him an house Tru-(alem, and not to ftir thence beyond the Brook Kidron upon pain of death; which he after two years fuffered, having broken the order. Solomon within Chan a. a year after his Father's death, married the Daughter of Pharaoh; after which, offering 1000 burnt-offerings at Gibeon, where the Taberracle then rested, God appeared to him in a dream, and offered him whatsoever he would ask. He asked onely wisdom to govern his people, and neither riches nor honour; with which God was so well pleased, that he made him to excell therein all meer men, and accumulated also the other upon him 2 42. Having all things in a readinesse for building an house to the Lord, Chap. 6.

(for which David his Father had made large provisions) Vaphres King of Clemens Egypt supplying him with 80000 Men, and Hiram King of Tyre with as Stromat, lib. 4. many, besides an Architest named Hypero (whose Mother was an Ifraelitish Woman, of the Tribe of Tudah); he laid the foundation of the Temple in the 4th year of his reign, and the second day of the second moneth Zif. The building The Structure being in building 7 years, the work began (according to their computation, who by reckoning the years of the Judges, and the oppressions feverally, add 100 years to the Ara of the World) in the 3089th year from the Creation entering, was dedicated in the 300rth ending, and in the 587th year after the departure out of Agypr , also ending ; from which if we substract those ao they lived in the Wildernesse, then 547 years will be found to have passed from the Original of Jubilies to the Dedication of the Temple, which make up eleven Jubilies, and eight years. So the fervice Ludov. Captherein egin in the eighth year of the twelfth Jubilie, or in the first year of pellus. the second week of the twelfth, which seemeth agreeable to the Ceremoniall Lasy, wherein most things consist in the number of 7, and are reckoned by Sabbaticall years and Jubilies. And if we divide 3005 by 7, we shall find the Temple dedicated in the first year of, the 442d week from the Creation, almost twelve intire Iubilies after the Service thereof had been first appointed 43. About the same time Solemon built a Navie at Eston-gaber, on the 1 Kings. 1.

Solumon's Navy.

shoar of the Red Sea, in the Land of Edom. This furnishing with his own Subjects and the Tyrians (then, by reason of the situation of their Countreval the best Sailors in the World) fent to him by Hiram, he dispatched to Ophir, once in three yeers, for gold and other marchandife, whence they brought him 420 talents. The Country of Edom, David had formerly fub dued, and thence Solomon his Son had the priviledge of building his Ships there. Aleth or Eloth , called by other Writers Alana and Alanum, was then a famous City, feated upon the Arabian Gulf, to part whereof, lying about it, it gave appellation. As Esion-gaber was the Arcenal for building the Navie; fo this City feemeth to have been the Emporium or Marttown : and, as long as the Edomites continued under the obedience of the Kingdom of Tudab, it is probable, that thence Marchandiso was transported to Petra, the chief City of Arabia, and fo to Jerusalem. But when the Edomites revolted (which happened after the death of Jebo (aphat) the courfe was altered from Ferusalem to Rhino colura , a City in Phanicia upon Atype; and there continued long, till fuch time as the Psolomie's with much adoe, brought down the trade to Alexandria. To effect this, they made two Ports upon the borders, whereof the one bare the name of Berenice, and is mistaken by Fosephus for Esion-gaber, that lying at a great distance both from this and Elath, which seemeth to be the same place, menti-

* Acual amust. oned in (d) Strabo, by the name of * Albus Pagus. 44. As this Navigation of the Tyrians gave a beginning to their Fame in ub. 16. p. 280. that Art; fo from it (asis probably conceived) came the name of the Red Sed, D. & 781. or that of Edom, first to be famous in other Countries. Their Traffick in- A. B. &c. creasing, they might well send our Colonies into other parts; and hence, as Vide Fulleyin Herodom writeth; the ?ea-coast of Arabia might be inhabited by them; but in miscelliabile. as for their coming from these parts to inhabit Phanicia (which opinion seemeth to have taken it's originall, from the journey of the Ufraelites out of these

Of Sacred History, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Coasts) it is a meer Fable. Sailing out of the Arassan into the Persian Gulf, the name of Red Sea might upon this occasion be given by them to both (which is usually to be expounded of both in antient Writers) the word Edom, being changed into others of the same fignification in severall Languages. As for Ophir, if we think this Country denominated from the Son of Sem, (or hin from it) either immediately by his habitation therein, or rather mediately by the Tyrians imposing that name upon it, which properly belonged to a place in Arabia; then need wee not feek for it in America, and feign frange circuits to have been made, from the Red Sea round about Africk to fail thither; as those, who place it in that part of the World, are for-

His buildings

CHAP. III.

45. Solomon after the dedication of the Temple, fortified Ferusalem with a treble wall, and repaired Hazron, the antient Metropolis of the Canaanites; fo did he Gaza of the Philistins: he built Beihoron, Gerar, and the Millo, or munition of Ferufalem. He also built Megidde in Manasseb on this side Jordan, Balah in Dan, and Thadmor; which may be either Thameron, in the Defatt of Judea, mentioned by Ptolomy, or Palmyra, as Jo-Sephns thinketh, situate inthe Desart of Syria, on the borders of his Dominions; which being many Ages after rebuilt by Adrian the Emperour, was named after him Adranopolis. He built for himfelf in thitteen years time a Palace, and an house for his Wife the Daughter of Pharach. After this, he offered twenty Towns, bordering upon the Tribe of Alber, to Hiram King of Tyre, as a reward for the affidance he afforded him in his buildings; but he returing them, he placed Colonies therein. And from his refufall the Country came to be called Cabul.

His incentinency and idolatry.

46. In the later part of his reign, he fell into great incontinency, and thence I Kings 14. became accessory to abhominable Idolarry. He loved many strange Women, as (together with the Daughter of Pharach) Women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Sidonians, and Hitties : of the Nations, wherewith the Children of Israel were forbidden tomarry. He had 700 Wives, and 300 Concubines, which turned his heart after other gods, fo that he went after Asharoth the goddesse of the Sidonians, and Milcom the abhomination of the Amorites: he built an high-place for Chemosh the abhomination of Moab, in the hill before ferusalem, for Molech the abhomination of the Children of Ammon; and so did he for all his strange Wives, which burne incense, and facrificed to their gods. This provoked the God of Ifrael, who had twice appeared to him; infomuch, that for his horrible ingratitude, he determined evil concerning his Kingdom, to be fulfilled in his Son. Yet have we ground to judge well of his eternall condition, seeing he made a recantation of his former errors, and was used as a Pen-man of Scriptuse by A. M. 3025. the Holy Ghoft. He dyed after he had reigned 40 years, being without parallel for Wifdom, Magnificence, and Humane Frailty. A.M. 3025.

His death,

SECT. III.

From the death of Solomon and the rent of the Kingdom, to the destruction of the Kingdom of Judah.

1. COLOMON being dead, Reboboam his Son, by Naama an Ammo- 1 Kings 12. nitifh Woman, reigned in his stead. The Tribes, when they mer at Siehem to make him King, petitioned for a relaxation of their burthens imposed by his Father; to which he answered so churtishly (despising the counfel of the antient and grave Men), that ten Tribes revolted from him, and made King over them Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, who had fled into 2 Chron, 11. Agypt for fear of Solomon, after that God's intentions came to be known Ver. 13, 14.

Ten Tribes fall off from Rehabba.tm.

of giving him part of the Kingdom. With Rehoboam yet remained the two 2 Chron. 17.
Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and the greatest part of the Levites, who v. 13,14. left their possessions and serled themselves in Judah and Jerusalem , because Jeroboam and his Sons had cast them off from executing the Prices's Office. With the Tribe of Fndah is also to be reckoned that of Simeon, whose poffessions were within the Inheritance of Judah, for which that part of the division that fell to it was too much. Part also of the Danies had it's feat within that of Judab; for it appeareth that they had fome Towns in the division of the Land, which formerly had been affigned to the Children of Judah, who (as hath been observed) had so large a Country at first assigned to them, rather to protect and defend, than folely to possesse it. All these still remained the Subjects of Rehoboam, though ten Tribes are said to have revolted, the Tribe of Dan being attributed to feroboam, for that Dan the chief City, was within his dominions; and because the Tribe of Manasseh being separated and divided into two parts, might be reckoned for two Tribes. The Kingdom thus divided, the Northern parts fell off; but the Southern continued in obedience to the Son of Solomon, whose successors henceforth are called obedience to the son or solution, whose fuccessors sencetofth are called Kings of Judah, as those of Jeroboam, Kings of Ifrael; and yet this distinction is not alwaies observed, Jehosaphas being called King of Ifrael, and also Ahaz; though we know they were both Kings of Judah; of that divi-

2. Rehoboam purposed to make War upon the Tribes, but, admonished by , King 12.14. God, gave over the enterprize of invading them with 180000 Men; although there was continual! War betwixt the two Kings all their dayes. The Priefts and Levires that were driven into Judah, reteined it in the true religion three years; but when Rehoboam had established himself, he forsook the Law of the Lord, and all I frael with him, committing fins above all that their Farhers had done. They built them high places, images, and groves on every high hill, and under every green tree: there were Sodomites in the Land, and they did according to the abhomination of those Nations, which the Lord cast out befor e the Children of Ifrael. Because of this, the fifth year of his reign, Shahak King of Ægypt (perhaps invited by Jeroboam, who had lived with him in exile) came up against him with 1200 Chariots, 60000 Horse-men, and innumerous people, out of Agypt: the Lubims, Sukkiims and Athiopians, with which he took partitons in Judah, and pierced as far as Jerusa-Affliced, they lem. Rehoboam, and his Princes humbling themselves at the preaching of humble them Shemaiah, thereby obtained deliverance : which yet, was to be bought at felves, and are an high rate. For Shifhak took away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the Kings house, with all the golden shields which Solomon had made, in the room of which Reheboam put others of braffe. He died after he had

Abiah.

He and his bel against

A. M. 3043.

reigned seventeen years.

3. Abiah his Son succeeded him, whose Mother is in one place (a) named (a) 2 Chron. Maschah the Daughter of Abfalom, and in another (b) Micajah Daughter 11.20. to Uriel of Gibeah. Some think the was the Daughter of Tamer, which (b) Chap. 13.2. might be married to this Uriel, and adopted by Abjalom, who feemeth to have left no iffue. He imitated the impiety of his Father; his heart not being perfect before the Lord his God, and yet God remembring the Covenant made with David, brought him by a fatherly correction into order, and acknowledgement of his Soveraignty. He also warred with foroboam all his a Kings 15. dayes, who coming up against him with 800000 Men, he joyned barrels with him having but half to many, and yet trusting in God, obtained Victory, and killed 500000 If rathes, the greatest number we read to have fallen in one battes. He took from him Bethel, Jeskanah, and Ephraim, with their Towns; neither did Jeroboam recover his strength in his time. Abijah waxed mighty, married fourteen Wives, begat two and twenty Sons and fifteen Daughrers. Yet he reigned but three years. Af his Son succeeded him in the 20th year of Feroboam ending, and Kings 15. & A, M. 3046. did that which was rightcous in the fight of the Lord, He reformed what was 2 Chron. 14. amisse, commanding his Subjects to seek the God of their Fathers: in his 15, 16. Chap.

time the Land had reft ten years. In his 12th year, according to Tofephon, SECT. 3. came Zerach the Athiopian against him, with 1000000 Men, of Calhaans (inhabiting Arabia, where also Zerachhis Æthiopia is onely to be found) and Labeans, besides 200 Chariots. To those he opposed himself with 200000 of Fudah, and 280000 of Benjamin, and, calling upon his God, obtained the Victory, which he profecuted and got much bootie. Returning to Jerufalon, he was fo wrought upon by the words of Azariah the Prophet, the Son of Oded, as together with his own Subjects and others, (that fell to him in abundance out of Ifrael) he facrificed to, and made a Covenant with, God. Then proceeding in the reformation of his Kingdom, he removed Maaca his Grand-mother from her dignity, because she was the patronesse of Idolatry. Baafa now who reigned in Ifrael, provoked with the revolt of his Subjects, and jealous of the growing power of Afa, came up against him, and built Rama, in the 36th year from the division, lest any should go in or out to him. Afa to divert him, hired Benhadad the King of Syria to invade Ifrael. This Ben-hadad was the Son of Tabrimmon, and Grand-fon to Hezrin, or Rezin, the first King of Damascus, and from him the Sirname of Hadad descended upon his Posterity. He smote Jion, Dan, Bethmanch, all Civeroth, with the Land of Napthall, and constrained Banfa to leave off building Ramah. Afa then destroyed Ramah, and with the stones thereof built Seba and Mizpah; but was checked by God for not trufting in him, but putting his confidence in the King of Syria; and War for this was de-nounced to be upon him all his dayes. Hereat he grew angry with the Seet that brought the message; and oppressed some of his people: and for this was punished with the Gout in his later dayes, for a remedy to which, he had recourse to the Physicians, and not to God. So he died, in the 41 year of his

CHAP. III. Of Sacred Hiltory, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire, Teholaphat.

Foran.

5. Jehofaphat succeeded him, to a good Father a better Son. In his Kings 23. third year he fent the Levites throughout the Cities to teach the people, having removed the Sodomises out of the Land. He married his Son Jehorans to Athaliah the Daughtet of Ahab King of Ifrael, and in his 18th year made him Vice-King. This affinity drew him down with Ahab to fight against Ramoth-Gilead, where Ahab received his death's wound, and he escaped narrowly with his life. For joyning himself with this wicked King, he was forely chidden by Jehn the Prophet, the Son of Hanani; which fo affected him, as he reformed his Subjects, travelling himself from Beersheba 2 Chron. 19, unto Mount Ephraim to accomplish it : he also constituted Judges, to whom 20, 21, chap. he gave a pious and ftrict charge. After this the Moabites, Ammonites, and a great multitude of others invaded him; against which he first strove by Prayer to God, and thereby obtained Victory, his Enemies being so stricken with madnesse, that they fell upon, and slaughtered one another. Afterwards intending to fend Ships for gold to Ophir; because he joyned with wicked Ahaziah King of Ifrael, the Lord spoiled the works, and the Ships were broken at Esion-geber. Some think he made his Son Parener in the Kingdom it seif, having formerly been but his Vicegerent, a year or two before he died. He reigned 25 years, or rather 24, with some odd months.

6. To Johosaphas succeeded Joram being 32 years old, to the best Father 2 Chron, 21. the world Son, who being established in his Seat, made away all his A. M. 3109. Brethren, and some of the Princes. In his dayes the Edomites, or Idumauns, who hitherto, from the time of David, had been in subjection to the Kings of Judah, revolted. They had herecofore been governed by a Vice-Roy. chosen either out of themselves or the Jews; but now they made themselves a King; the Prophecie of Isaac, the common Progenitor of both Nations, being now fulfilled, that though Efau should serve his younger Brother Facob. yet the time should come, when he should break the yoak from off his neck. Gen. 27. 40. At the same time Libnab (a City of the Priest's in the Tribe of Judah) revolted, because he had forsaken the God of his Fathers; for having married Ahab's Daughter, he followed the example of his house, making high-places in the Mountains of Indah, and causing his Sujects to commit Idolatry

59

SECT. 3. therein. Because of this, there came a Writing to him from the Prophet Eli- 2 Chron. 21. jab, rebuking him for his fin, and foretelling his punishment. Elijab being verf. 12. before this taken up to Heaven, the Jews have helieved that this Letter was fent down thence. Some think, there was another Prophet of this name ; but most are inclined to believe, that foresceing, before his assumption, the Idolatry of this man, he left this Letter with his Schollers to be delivered to him in due time. According to the threatnings therein contained, God firftftirred up against him the Philistins and Arabians, who making an invasion took away all his goods, his wives, and fons, except Jehonhaz the youngest, otherwife cilled dhaziah and Azariah. Afterwards God struck him with an incurable disease in his bowels, which after two years came out of his body: fo that he miferably died, having reigned eight years; three whereof are to be reckoned in conjunction with his father. He was buried without honour at Fernfalem , not in the Sepulcher of Kings ; not desired, missed, nor la-

Of Sacred History, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Ahaziah A.M.3116.

Toks.

7. Abaziah his fon succeeded him who followed the steps of his Grand- 2 Kings 8. & father, Abab's wicked family, and became a Patron of Idolaters. But ha- 2 Chien, 22. ving scarce reigned one year, he went down to Jezreel to visite his Uncle Foram, King of Ifrael, where they were both killed by Jebn; Joram being 2 Kings 9. flain outright, and Abazish dying shortly after of his wound, at Meridde. Athaliah usur- Athaliah his mother seized upon the Kingdom, wherein to establish her chant. felt. The destroyed all the Royal feed. Onely Fibolhoba the daughter of Jo- 2 Chron. 24. ram, and wife to Johnjada the High-Prieft, withdrew Joalh an infant, her brother's fon, and hid him fix years in the house of God. At the end of these years, Jehojada brought him out to the people, then feven years old, and and pinting him King, flew Athaliah , reflored the worship of God , and defroyed the house of Baal, whose Priest Matthan he slew before the Al-

8. For then succeeded his father after fix years, who did what was good 2 Kings 12. and just as long as Tehojada the Priest lived, and through his advice took care A.M. 3123. to repair the Temple, which now had flood 155 years. But Tehojada being dead (who lived 130 years; the lews observing that he, the repairer of the Temple, was born the fame year, that the builder thereof died) Idolatry brake out aftern through his contivance. The Prophets exclaimed against it in vain, especially Zucharian, the son and successor of Jehojada, against whom Tow was so far transported beyond the bound's of piety, & gratitude to his father's memory, that he commanded him to be stoned, and that in the Court of the house of the Lord. Whil'st as he died, he said, The Lord look upon it and require it. So he did; for after a years time, the forces of Huzael. King of Syria, though but small, invaded Judah, destroyed all the Princes of the people, and dent the spoyl to their King. Jour himself they left very fick of great diseases, but when they were departed from him, his own servants conspired against him for the bloud of the sons of Tehojada the Priest, and slew him on his bed, in the 40th year of his reign. A. M. 3160.

o. Amaziah his fon succeeded him, who also feemeth to have reigned chap.14. with him the three last years; seeing he is said to have begun his reign in the second year of Joss, King of I frael. When he was confirmed in his sear, he pur those to death that flew his father, sparing their Children according to A.M.3160. the Law of Mofes. In his 12th year, he undertook an expedition against the Edomites with 300000 of his own Subjects, and 100000 Ifraelites, Which he hired for 100 Talents of filver. But as he was about to begin his march a Prophet dehorsed him from joyning to himself the Idolatrous Ifraelites, fo that he difinified them, and they returned home in great discontent. He profpeted against the Idumaans, but the Souldiers (dismissed) fell upon his Civies, and finiting 300 of them, took much spoyl. Yet he at his return; to amend the matter, having brought home the gods of the Edomites, fer them up to be his gods, bowed down before them, and burnt incense to them. The Lord being fore angry for this, fent first a Prophet to him whom he rejected. But burning with a defire to be revenged upon the Israelites he sent and defied

Boox I

Toss their King, who admonished him to be well advised, but this being in SECT. 2. vain, they met, and joyned battel, wherein Amaziah was taken, and led back to Jernsalem; the Wall of which Citie, Joss demolished 400 Cubits, and plundering the house of the Lord with the Kings house then departed. Fifteen years after, Amaziab lived; but then, hiving turned away from following the Lord, a conspiracy was made against him in Ierusalem; whence he fled to Lachijh, and there was flain by the pursuers, after he had reigned 29 years.

Uzziah.

10. He left a fon named Uzziah and Azariah, who succeeded him; but 2 Kings 15. being faid to have begun his reign in the 27th year of leroboam, King of If- 2 Chron. 26. pening rate to the continue to the state of father's death and his beginning; the Kingdom all this time having, perhaps, been governed by a Lieutenant, or the High-Prieft. When he came to the Age of 16. all the people of Indah took him, and made him King in the room of his father, and under him the State of Iudah much flourished. He fought prosperously against the Philistins and Arabians that divelt in Gur-Baal, and Mehanims, or Minaans, dwelling in Arabia the Happie upon the Red-Sea : the Ammonites fought to him with presents, and his name was great in those parts. About his 25th year was celebrated in Greece the first Olympiad, that great help to our understanding in the distinction of times. He invaded the Priefts Office in Offering Sacrifice, and for that was strucken with Leprofie, which continued upon him till his death, living in an house by himfelf, and lotham his fon ordering the affairs of the Kingdom. He reigned 52 years.

Tothana.

Ahaz.

11. Istham his fon succeeded him, who prevailed against the Ammonies, 2 Chron. 27. and forced them to pay Tribute two years. He became mighty, because he A.M. 3253. prepared his wayes before the Lord his God; he built the High-Gate of the Temple much on the Wall of Ophal; Moreover, Cities in the Mountains of Indah, and in the Forrests thereof Castles and Towers. Under him, his Predecessor, and his two Successors, prophesied Isaiah and Hosea: Micah began in his time; and Nahum also, according to losophu, prophesied the destruction of Niniveh, which was fulfilled 115 years after ; though others think the beginning of these years should rather be placed in the time of his son. He reigned fixteen years, and was succeeded by Abaz his son, whose reign if it Olymp. 9.40.2. be compared with that of Pechah and Hofea, Kings of Ifrael, it will appear a Kings 16. that he reigned seven, or eight years with his father. He did that which was 2 Chron, 28, evil in the fight of the Lord, walking in the wayes of the Kings of Ifrael: he made molten Images for Baalam, burnt Incense in the Valley of the fon of Hinnom, burne his Children in the fire, Sacrificed and burne Incense in the high places, on the Hills, and under every green Tree. Because of this, God Rifred up Pekah, King of Ifrael, and Rezinthe fon of Remaliah, King of Syria against him, who invaded his Kingdom, and did much hurt : Rezin got Elab. which Hazins had recovered and built ; the King of Ifrael gave him a grievous overthrow; the Edomises also afflicted him and the Philistins, whom Waziah had brought under, made inroads upon him. Suspecting his Estate because of these things , he sent to Figlaih-Pilefer , King of Affria for help, presenting him with the Silver and Gold, which was found in the Temple.

12. Tiglath-Pilefer accordingly came up, and taking Damafous, killed Wicel, Damafo Rezin, in whom fell this Kingdom: which having continued ten Generations, cenus and loand begun in a Rexin, ended in one of that name. Then turned he his Forces sephum Anupon Pekah, transporting into Allyria the Inhabitants of Gilead and Naph. 119.1.7. c.6. thali, as formerly he had done those of Damasem. But Achaz, to promure those things, having made himself his Vassai, was yet never the better, remained in great fear of him, and fill continued in his wickednesse. He made his fon Hezekjah for his three last years partner with him in the Kingdom, and at the end thereof died, having reigned together with his father, and by himfelf, 16 years. Hezekiab succeeding, opened the Temple which his father had A.M. 3276.

Shut, and reformed the abuses in Religion. He brake in pieces the brazen Olymp. 12. an. 3.

60

SECT. 3. Serpent, because the Superstitious multitude fancying some Divine vertue 2 Kings 18. therein, gave it suitable Worship. He shook off the yoak of the King of Af. 2 Chron. 29. &c. (yria, refusing to pay Tribute; for which cause in his fourteenth year, Sonacherib, being to make War upon Egypt, led part of his Forces into Judea. Befieging Lachift, Hezekiah bargained with him to depart; but he brake his promite, and fent Rabshakes with others to Ferusalem, who blasheming God, and reproaching the King, laboured to draw the people from their obedience, This being to no purpole, Rabinakes returned to him, who had now departed from Lachiff, and besieged Librah, a strong Citie of Judah; removing still nearer Jerusalem, that he might feem to pursue what he had given in charge to Rabihakes to denounce against Hezekiah. 13. But lying before Libnah, news came that Tirhakah, King of Athiopia (who, as it feemeth, had entred into conspiracy with the Egyptian against him) was moving towards him; at which he was so terrified, that he brake up his fiege, and departed homewards. Yet having a gleedy mind towards Judan, he fent a blafphemous Letter full of threats to Hezaklah ; but he loft in one night by the stroak of an Angel 180000 men (as some think being on his way towards fern [alem) and confounded hereat, returned to Niniveh, where he was flain by his two fons, Adramelech and Sharezer, as he was wo:fhipping in the house of Mistroch his God. In the time of these dangers, Hezekiah fell fick unto death, the fentence of which he received from Ifaiah the Propher. But by his prayers and tears he obtained a prolongation of life for fifteen years, and, in confirmation of the promise, the shadow of the degrees which was gone down in the Sun-dval of Ahaz was brought ten degrees backward ; and it followeth , So the Sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down. As for this Sun-dyal it's thought that in those ancient times the knowledge of Dyals was scarce amongst the Hebrews. Yet is it possible that Aches might have something of that nature, though imperfect, from the Babylonians, who were of old much given to Afrology, he being otherwife too curious an admirer of forrein things as appeareth, in that he must needs have such an Altar made, and erected at lernsalem as he had seen at Damajom. That the Sun went back, hath been generally believed: but one Gregory, of of late hath gone about to prove that the shadow was lyable to reduction, Oxford, without retrocession of the great Luminary.

The Sun redegrees back ward.

14. The knowledge of this miracle coming to the Babylonians (who by a Chron. 32.31. reason of their continual observation of the Heavenly bodies might have more occasion to take notice of it) Merodarh-Baladan their King fent to Hexekish to congratulate his recovery, desirous, it's likely, of his friendship whom he had understood to be so much in the favour of God; especially bearing no goodwill to the Affrians. He in a vain oftentation of his Wealth shew'd the Ambaffadours all his Treasures, and whatfoever was in his house; for which Ifaiah the Prophet denounced the carrying away of all these things to Babylon. For the pride of his heart there was wrath upon him and Iudah; yet he bumbled himself, both he and the inhabitants of Indah, so that the wrath of the Lord came not upon them in his dayes. He flourished in abundance of riches and honour, flopped the upper water-course of Gibon, and brought it Breight down to the West-fide of the Citie of David. He reigned 29 years (3 whereof were together with his father:) being dead, they buried him in the chiefest Sepulchers of the Ions of David, and all Indab, with the Inhabitants of Jarufalem, did him honour at his death. 15. Manaffes his fon fucceededhim at the Age of twelve years, and there . Kings 21. 15. Manafer his fon fucecedethim at the lage of tweeter year, and the a command fore was begotten by him after his recovery. We did wit in the right of the a command Lord above those Nations, which the Lord had cast our before I finel, being Olymp 19, 40.4. more Idolatrous then any of his Predecessors ; he was Asogiven to Witchcraft and Divinations, built Altars for all the Holt of heaven, which he feryed in the two Courts of the house of the Lord; wherein he also fet up an Image of the Grove which he had made. He filled Iernfalom with innocent bloud; among tother Martyrs Ifaiab the Propher (as it's faid) being fawn afunder with a wooden faw, because he was free with him in reproving his ungodly life; although he was of the bloud royal as the fon of Amos, the bro- SECT. 3. ther of King Amaziah, according to the tradition of the Jews, who also have related him to have been father-in-law,nay(as fome) Grand-father by the Mothers fide, to Manaffes himfelf. In fuch wickednesse continued he for feveral years, till such time as God sent upon him the Captains of the King of Affria (Efarchaddon some think) who took him lying hid amongst the thorns, and carried him bound with fetters unto Babylon, which City (as it appeareth from this place) was now again under the King of Affria. Here having leifure and occasion to berhink himself, in his affliction he repented, was humbled greatly, and befought the Lord, who heard his Prayer, and reftored him to his Kingdom. After this, he knew that the Lord was God; and purged his Realm of Idolatry; which Reformation the Jews make to have been in the 33th year before his death. He reigned 55 years. 16. Amon his Son succeeded him in his Kingdom, and Idolatry, but not A. M. 3359.

Manaffes.

his Father had made, and going on to trespasse more and more. After two to feek after the God of his Fathers, and in his twelfth to cleanle his King-

Judges. Now if the time of the Judges, and the Oppressions, be not confounded, but taken at their full length; then this year being the 930th ending, or the 93 th beginning, from the entering into Canaan, was the 7th of

CHAP. III. Of Sacred History, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire,

Amon.

Josiah.

Teboahaz. Feboiakim.

Time.

the 133 week, or the last of the 10th Jubilie. Iosiah in his 31th year ending, disguited himself that he might fight with Necho King of Exppe (who was going up against the Assprian) and would not hearken to his words from the mouth of God, labouring with him to refuse fighting against the Lord, who had fent him, and commanded him to make hifte. Therefore i owning battell with him in the Valley of Megiddo, he was fore wounded, and being carried to Ternfalem, died there; all Indah and Jernfalem, mourning and making great lamentation for him. 17, Whilst Pharaoh was busie in his affairs against the Affricans, the people made Teboahaz the younger Son of Jossa, Kings who continued but three A. M. and moneths in the dignity. For Pharash having finished his work at Euphrates, Olymp 41. ann. and in Colefria, came to Ferufalem, whence he led away into Lerpe this young King, and left his elder Brother Eliakim in his place, whose name he changed into Jebolakim, imposing a taxe of a hundred talents of filver and a raight of gold upon the Land. Though Jeoghate be faid to have reigned three moneths, yet forms will have a year to have passed between the first of Jeholakim; partly for that Jessas feemeth to have reigned something more than at years, and some space would be tateri up in to folemn a mourning for him, before the instalment of Jehoahaz; and also to consult about this thing, feeing it was against right and custom to give this honour to the younget Brother: lastly some time (perhaps some monerbs) was requilize for feeling the affairs of Judea, about the influment of Jebonkim, and the tribute. Ludovicus Cappellus moreover, giveth a whole year to Jebonhae and Jebonkim (though the Scripture speaketh but of three moneths a piece) that the last year of Zedeiah might fall into the 300th year from the rent of the Kingdom; of which more, when we arrive at that TWANTS BROKENS

18. Jehotaking thus advanced by Pharaoh Necho, was 25 years old when he began to reign; which if to, he was born in the fifteenth year of his Pather's age; as, if Jehoahaz was 2; when he began his reign, he must affo have in his Repentance, worshipping and facrificing to all the carved Images which Olymp. 33. an. 4.

years, his fervants conspired against him and flew him in his own house, all chap, 34. whom the people of the Landput to death, and made Iosiah his Son (a child of eight years old) King in his flead. He in the eighth year of his reign began dom, and all the Land of Ifrael, from Idolatry : although the greatest part of the later, was now subject to the King of Affyria. In the 18th year of his a Kings 22. reign and of his age the 26th, he commanded the Temple to be repaired, and a Chron. 35.

the Worthip of God therein reftored: where also finding a Book of the Law, A. M. 3368. he renewed the Covenant between God and the people, and celebrated such Olymp. 35.49.4. a folemn Passeover, as had not been kept in Israel since the time of the SECT. 3. have been born in the fixteenth of Josiah. This maketh Josiah to have applied himself to procreation of children at least in the fourteenth year of his life; which feeming too early, and not agreeable to the Plety of that Prince, there are that suspect for 25, ought to be read 15, and 13 for 23; so that the one might be born in the 24 and the other in the 25 year of his Father : But thereis no necessity for such a reading of the Text. The fourth year of Jehotak:m fell in with the first of Nebuchadnezar King of Babylon, and was the 23th from the 13th of the reign of Josias, wherein Jeremiah the Prophet first began to prophefy; and hence it also appeareth, that Iofias reigned at least full 3 1 years, and that one passed between his death and the beginning of Ichoiakim, else 23 onely had passed betwire the 13th of the one, and the 4th of the other. In this year Pharaoh Necho fell upon the Babylonians with War, Chap, 5.

Terem, 25 %

because, as it seemeth, they had sollicited leboiakim his Tributary to revolt, Pharash Necho and fought against Nebuchadnezar at Carchemish near Emphrates, (by the A. M. 3396. Greek and Latin Writers called Cercusium); in which tattell he was over 0/ymp, 42, and

10. After this Victory, came Nebuchadnezar to Ierusalem, where he either took Ichoiakins captive to lead him to Babylon, or at loast made him his cribitary Vaffall. Some account this year, as the beginning of the reign of Nibuchadnezar, so of the Captivity of Indah, and the desolation of that Country, because that Ieremiah, having spoken first of the 12 years, in which he and the other Prophers had warned the people to no purpose, afterwards addeth, that God would fend Nebuchadnezar his Servant against the Land, which should be a desolation and an astonishment, and that these Nations should serve the King of Rabylon 70 years. But the Prophecy of Daniel beginneth thus: In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim King of Judah, came Nebuchadnezar King of Babylon to Terusalem, and besieged it; and the Lord gave Jeholakim King of Judah into his hand, with part of the Veffels of the House of God, which he caried into the Land of Shinar, to the house of his God. This place seeming to contradict the other; some have chofen to close with the literall sense of it, and to hold, that in the third year of Ishviakim, began the Captivity of the Jews. Others fee more reason to flick to the other place, and to take away all difference, interpret this third year of the third of the Sabbaticall year, or the week of years, and thus would read it, In the third year, Tehoiakim the King of Judah reigning, came of Jehoiakim, against whom Nebuchadnezar coming, about the end of the fifth year of his reign, made him his Tributary, and so he continued three years; viz. the 6, 7, and 8th of his reign. Afterwards, changing his mind. he rebelled in the beginning of his oth year, and so continued for three years Seventy years in rebellion, which being expired, in the end of his 1 th, Nebuchadnezar of Captivity, which is va took lerufalem, and caried him Captive to Babylon, with part of the holy rloufly affign- Vessels, and others of the Royall and Princely Race, amongst whom was Daniel; and so the Captivity of Seventy years began not till this year. 20. That this chird year cannot be understood of the third of Icholakim's reign, Nebuchadnezar King of Babylon unto Jerusalem, &c. But the Jews with fome modern Writers understand by this third year, the third of the rebellion

The begin-

is clear from Ieremiah, who joyneth his fourth with the first of Nebuchadnezar; and because elsewhere is made mention of his fifth: whence is aprarent, that he could not be led Captive in his third year. The fecond opinion indeed is not amisse; for this was really the third year of the week or the third from the Sabbaticall year. For, the 18th of Toffah, in which the Passeover was celebrated, being the last year of the 19th Jubilie, and so the Sabbaticall year; from that to the 11th ending of Ichoiakim, or the 12th beginning, are counted 31 years : viz. four weeks and three odd years ; this being usuall with the Pen-men of holy Story, to count their times by Sabbacicall years or Jubilies. Iacobu Cappellou * would have Nebuchadnezar, at the * Ad. A.M. " command of Nabopola ffer his Father, to have come into Indea in the second 3391 & 3393. year of the reign of Ichoinkim, who then Iware fealty to him; but in the year, and took him Captive. Then will he have him to have fet Shallum over the Kingdom, till leconias his Son, an Infant of a year old, should come to age; but Iehoiakim himself there lived miserably in Captivity, till the 1 1th year, reckoned from his first being made King by Necho. He being then dead, and news of it brought to Lernfulem, they there made his Son Ichoiakim King in his stead. And he beginneth the Seventy years of the Captivity in his fifth year, when he will have him caried to Babyion.

21. But Ladovicus Cappelius his Brother replyeth, that in no place is there any mention made of Nebuchadnezar's coming up against him in the fecond year of his reign, the (d) place thought to make for the purpose, ha- *4 Kingsa4 1. ving as much respect to the fifth as the second year. And as little mention is there any where made of Iehoiakim's fix years of Captivity, who if he had died ar Babylon, the Scripture would never have attributed to him the reign of eleven years, but onely fo many as he really reigned, viz. 5. The reft, it would either have given to Shallum the pretended Viceroy, or to leke akim his Son; it being a thing improbable, that the name should be preserved for Iehoiakim, whilst Sallum indeed reigned : Besides, the Babylonian King ohferved no fuch matter afterward in lehorakim, whom taking a vay he really made King Zedekjah, without the title of Vice-Roy or Lievtenant. Nay, though Jehoiakim lived long at Babylon, and, after the death of Nebuchadnezar, being loosed out of bonds, was honoured and esteemed by Evilmerodach above any of his condition (and therein excelled Tohoiakim, if he lived there fo long); yet is there no more time given to his reign, than that wherein he onely continued in his principality. As for the Regencie of Shallum, it is a meer invention, there being no other according to the Tews, then Tebes. baz, who was also called by that name. For in the * place thought to make I erem. 22. 11. this out, they are bidden not to weep for the dead (viz. Ioshar) but for him confide Ludov. that goeth away (Iehoahaz taken away by Necho) for he should return no Cappellum Chronol. Sacr.

more into his Native Country. 22. Iehoiakim therefore being taken to be led away Captive, in the third year of his rebellion and the 11th of his reign, died ere he went (as we may suppose) and wascast out or buried, according to the Prophecy of Ieremiah, Chap. 22. 18, who had forerold he should be buried with the burials of an Affe; being cast 19. & 36.30. forth beyond the gates of Isrufalem, in the day to the hear, and in the night to the frost, which could be done by none, except the barbarous Babylonians,

After his death, the Conquerour placed in his stead Jehotakim his Son, called alfo Conias and Jechonias, who did evil in the fight of the Lord, as his a Chron. 36. Pather before him, and Nebuchadnezar, it semeeth repenting of what he hid & Kings 23. done. left he should be drawn from his obedience, by the example of his Fa- A. M. 3404. ther, and the perswasions of those about him, sent his Army before him, Olymp. 44.4n.4. (about a year after his former expedition) to befiege Ferusalem. When he himself came to the Siege, Jehoiachim came out to him with his Mother and Servants, and yielded his person in the eighth year of Nibuchadnezar ending. Then the Babylonian entring Ferusalem, took away the Treasures found in the house of the Lord, and the Kings house, brake all the golden instruments which Solomon had made for the Temple, and fo caried Tehoiak in with his Mother, Wives, and Servants unto Babylon. Besides those, he transported all the best fort of the people from Iernfalem, with the ablest and strongest for War from other places, in which number was (e) Ezekiel the Prieft, the Son of Ruzi, Ichoiakim in (f) one place is said to have been eighteen years old, (e) Ezek, 1. when he began to reign, but in another (g) onely eight. A fault must needs (f) 2 Kings be in the reading of one place of the two, which may bett be laid upon the 24. 8.

former. For if Ichoiakim his Father was 15 years old when he began to reign, (8) & Chron. (as some will have it) then was he born to him in the 18th year of his age, be- 36. 9. ing otherwise (according to this tenent) absurdly made to have been begot in his 7 or 8th year. 23. Nebuchadnezar made King over the Jews that remained, Mattaniah the Son of Iofiah, from whom he received an oath of homage, and thereupon changed his name into Zedekiah. He trode in the steps of his Brothers and third year rebelled: whence Nebuchaduezar came down again in his fifth Zedehiah,

Nephews,

Feboiakim.

SECT. 3. Nephews, the people also being with him incorrigible. He rebelled against Nebuchadnezar, taking part with the King of Egypt, who maintained a quirrel with him, & therefore the Babylonian came up in the 9th year after his e-Stablishment, took all the Cities of Indea, except Iernsalem, Lachish, and A- 2 Kings 25. zeka, which he also belieged. The year following Pharaoh came with an Army to his affifance, which Nebuchadnezar understanding went to meet him, and he thereupon afraid to ingage, retreated into his own Land. Nebuchadnezar then returning fate down again before Ierusalem, wherein famine at length prevailing, and Zedekiah still refusing to yield, though Ieremiah constantly advised him to do it, in the end of his I Ith year, and the first day of the zedekiah ta- moneth it was broken into, by the Caldasus. Zedekiah flying, wis over- Jerem 39. taken, and brought to Riblah: where he first faw his Children and Friends flain; and then, having his eyes put out, was carried to Babylon, where he miserably ended his dayes.

burnt,

24. On the seventh day of the fifth moneth, in the 19th year of Nebuchadnezar came Nebuzaradan, Captain of his Guard, and, having got all things ready in two dayes, fet the King's House, with the Temple, and the Terufalem and rest of the buildings in the Citie on fire. The same moneth all the Walls treft of the buildings in the Cittle on life. The tame moneth an the twelfe A. M. 34.75, were demolished; they that remained in the Citie, with those which before Olymp, 48. had revolted, and the rest of the people, together with the Treasures of the an. 4. King and Princes, and the Utenhils of the house of the Lord, did Nabuza. Wibuchad, 9. radan carry to Babylon. So went Indah into Captivity in the 12th year after the death of Iehojakim, 300 after the death of Salomon and the Kent of the Kingdom (which the Prophet * Ezekiel was commanded to represent by * Ezek.4.4. fleeping to many nights upon his left fide, the iniquity of the Children of I frael having from that time abounded) to which the two years being added wherein the Captivity was compleated at the death of Gedaliah, and eight Jubilies are therein contained; 490 from the beginning of Saul; fo that the Kingdom of Indah continued to Jubilies, or 70 weeks of years, so many as are given by Daniel to the Commenwealth of the Iems, from its restitution to the Messiah: From the building of the Temple 420. which therefore flood eight Jubilies, with four weeks, or in all fixty weeks of years; from the entrance into Canaan 967. as Ludovicus Cappellus reckoneth, containing 138 weeks; from the departure out of Egypt 1007. during which time Satan was as it were bound, and Gods people were free : Lastly, from the beginning of the World 3515, which make 502 weeks, and 71 Jubilies with five weeks of years. The concurrence of all these Accounts do mightily confirm the Discoverer in his opinion of their realitie.

25. * Teremiah the Prophet had leave, either to go to Babylon, there to * Chap.40. live honourably, or to stay with the small remnant that were lest in the Land. The later of those he accepted, and went to Gedaliah, who being appointed Governour kindly imbraced him, and gave encouragement to all the Dewn left under his charge, promiting them favour and liberty, fo long as they remained obedient Subjects to the King of Babylon: But ere the year Chap.41. went about, one Ismael, a Prince of the bloud, who during the War had Gedaliah, the kept himself out of the way with Baalis King of the Ammonies, slew Godaliah whil'st he lovingly feasted him at Maspha, with others, both Jews and Caldeans in his Company. The refidue then of the Tems being without a Governour, and fearing the revenge of their Lords and Masters, were minded to fly into Egypt, and caused the Prophet to inquire of the Lord for them.

The Fews remiah to go down with them into A-

gypt, where they stone

Teremiah answered, that if they would remain in Indea, God would merci- Chap. 42.43. fully provide for them; but if they offered to fave themselves in Egypt, they or. should undouotedly perish. They, notwithstanding this warning, went down constrain fe- and constrained him, with Barach, to accompany them, where, by the leave of Pharoh, they inhabited near Tabpanes. Here the Prophet often repre- * Xonavas hending them for their Idolatry, and foretelling both their destruction, and Tomo 1. Terhending them for their Idolatry, and foretelling both their destruction, and tullian in the ruin of those that harboured them, was by their wretched and ingrateful Scorpiaco. hands * stoned to death; but is said to have been exceedingly honoured by can to. the Egyptians, fo that Alexander the Great translated his bones into Alex- Jerem.

Setteth up to Golden Calves.

Nadab.

Baafa,

andria. In the 23th year of Nebuchadnefar (who then belieged Tyre) Ne- Sect. 4. buzaradan, Captain of his Guard carried away the reliques of the Jews and Ifraelies, to the number of 745. which was the 1 ft deportation. And the forem 52, Prophecies both of (h) Jeremiah and (i) Ezekiel confirm us in this belief, (h) Chap. 43. that the Jews in Egypt, after Nebuchadnefar had fubdued that Countrey, 44, 46. were partly flain, and partly carried away Captive to their own Countrey- (1) Chap. 29. men with the Natives, being nothing reformed by the forme: punishments 30,31. inflicted either upon themselves, or their Nation,

SECT. IV.

The Kingdom of Israel

From the revolt of the Tribes, to their final Captivity under Salmanaffer.

Fcrobo.zm.

CHAP. III.

portation.

1. THe ten Tribes, falling off from Rehoboam upon his Churlish answer, L chose Feroboam the son of Nebat, of the Tribe of Ephraim to reign over them. He, being industrious in the work of Portifications, had been made r Kings II, by Salomon Ruler over all the charge of the house of Joseph; but the Lord, 12.13,14. after he was provoked by the Idolatry of Salomon, fent Ahijah the Prophet & Chron. 11. to him to promife him ten Tribes; which coming to the ears of the King 13. he fought to flay him; whereupon Jeroboam fled for his life to Shifhak, King of Egypt, with whom he sojourned till Salomon's death. Then he was sent for out of Egypt, and accompanied all Ifrael as their Speaker in their addresse made to Rehoboam; whom after they hid rejected, they made him King, that A.M.3016.

the Lord might perform what he had promifed by the Prophet.

2. In the beginning of his reign he built up Shochem, which had iven walle well nigh 160 years, from the time that Abimelech destroyed it. This place being fituated in Mount Ephraim he first made his habitation, till he went over fordan, and built Penuel, whence afterwards he also removed his sear to Tirza. He forfook the Lord, who promifed him establishment, if he would keep his Statutes and Commandments, going about by carnal and wicked policy to secure his interest. For, lest his Subjects by going up to lerusalem to Worship, should be turned again from their obedience to him, he fer up two Golden Calves, the one at Dan, and the other at Bethel, hiving learnt Idolatry towards this fort of Cattel in Egypt. To that in Bethel he facrificed, inflicuting a Feast like to thit of Tabernacles: and though, rebuked by a Propher, he was Ricken with Leprosie, and might have been convinced by other Mitacles; yet neither these things nor the many judgements of God against him, and his Successors, could reclaim either him, or them. Rejecting the Priests of the fons of A aron, and the Levites, he made of the lowest of the people Priests for the high places : He had War with Rehoboam continually, and with Abiah his son, who overthrew him in a great battel, and flew 500000 of his men, although he added a stratagem to the force of his numbers (which doubled those of his Enemy) compassing-in Abiab's Army whil'it he was speaking to it. Some years after, he died, having reigned 22. Nadab his fon succeeding him, walked in the wayes of his father, & in his fin wherewith he made Ifrael to fin; bur in his second year, he and all Ifrael befieging Gibbethon of the Philistins, Baasa the son of Abijab, of the house Kings 45. of Iffachar conspired against him, and slew him there.

3. Nadab is faid to have began his reign in the second year of Asa, and to have reigned two years : yet Baafa to have began to reign in the third year of Afa. To this, either must be faid, that Ieroboam made his son King whil'st he himself yet lived, or else not reigning 22 years compleat, but some part onely of the 22th year (so that the far greater part of the first year of Nadab must fall in with the greater part of the second of Asa) neither did Nadab reign two whole years, but one with a piece of another, and so the first year of Banja will fall in with the greater part of the third of Aja,

Boox I.

For in this comparing of the times of the Kings of Judah and Ifrael, is to be SECT. 4 taken notice; That, I. A year onely begun is taken for a complex one. 2. The fathers often yet living communicated the royal dignity to their fons. 3. Some were twice inaugurated, as Toram in the Tribe of Fudah, and

Of Sacred History, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Helbes in that of Ephraim. 4. That there were many vacancies, especially Fereboams po- in the Kingdom of Ilae'. Baala cut off all the posterity of Jeroboam, not sterity utterly leaving one to piffe against the Wall, according as Ahijah had foretold; so that here Tereboam's policy failed him, the Golden Calves having pushed down his family. When Banfa faw that Afa had restored Religion, and for that cause many of his subjects revolted to him, he had War with him all his dayes, and in his fourteenth year built Ramah to restrain sugitives. Asa Chron. 16. to divert him hired Benhadad, King of Syria, who breaking the league formerly made with I frael came up with his forces, and finore Tion (a Citie of the Tribe of Alter) Dan of the Danies, Abel-hethmaach of the Manaffires, and all Cinneroth with the Land of Napthali; which forced Baafa to leave off building Ramah, and return to Tirza. He reigned 24 years, viz. 23 with 1 Kings 16. part of another.

Elah flain by

Oniri.

Tibni.

4. Elah his fon succeeded him in the 26th year of Afa, and reigned two A.M. 307L years; at the end whereof his fervant Zimri, Captain of one half of his Afa 26. Chariots, flew him at Tozah as he was drinking in the house of Arza his Steward, and the Prophetie of Jehn, the fon of Haneni was fulfilled against the house of Baasa, that it should be made like to that of Teroboam; all of it being deftroyed in like manner by Zimri. But Zimri himfelf reigned onely feven dayes; for the reople then befieging Gibbethon, and understanding how things had passed at Tirzah, made Omri the General of the Army, King. He presently led them against Tirzah, and took it; Whereupon Z mri withdrew himself into the Pallace, and setting it on fire perished therein, because he also walked in the steps of Teroboam. A Schisim now followed, for one half of the people chose Tibni, the son of Gineth, and four years (imperfect) as the Tems have it : this division continued, till at length Tibnidying, Onti A. M 2076. reigned alone. He is also said to have began his reign in the 31th year of As 31. Afa, which must be understood of his reigning alone, having slain Zimri in the, 28th year (beginning) of that King. After he had reigned fix years at Tirzah, he translated the feat of the Kingdom to Samaria, which Citie he had built on an Hill, bought of one Shamer, from whom it took the name. Having done worfe then any that were before him, he died after he had reigned twelve years. Which if they be accounted from the death of Zimiri, and to contain his whole reign, then reigned Abab his fon, and Successor Vide Lud. but two years with him, his 11th year falling into the 38 of Afres but if they Cappellum chron. Sacr. be reckoned from the death of Tibni, then must shab have reigned about five pag. 179. years together with him.

5. Abab exceeded in wickednesse all his predecessors, motionely living A.M. 2082. rieth Jezebel. 'in the fins of Jerahaam', but marrying Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal, King Ase 38. of Sidon, whose God Bant he served and worshipped. For this, through the Kings 18. prayer of the Propher Elijah, it rained not upon the Land for three years ; but at the end thereof he prayed again, and the Heavens gave rain. He took occasion to they the vanity of the Idolf Baal, and then flew his Priests; for which being threatned by Jezebel, he fled into the defart to Mount Horeb. Chap. 19. Against Ahab came up twice Renhadad, King of Syria; once with 32 petty Kings, and both times with great forces, but still was overthrown, and authe chap. 20. latter time yielded himself. Abah honourably received him, and, making a league with him, let him go in lafety; for which he was sharply rebuked by a Propher, and cold that his life should go for the life of Banbadad, and his own people for his people; but there followed a peace betwixt I frael and Syria for three years. In this space Abab fell lick for Naboth's Vineyard, who being by Jezebels procurement accused of blasphemy, was stoned to death, and so Ahab injoyed the Vineyard by way of confiscation. For this fo wicked a fact fevere judgement was pronounced against him and Jezebel, by Elyab; the execution whereof by a temporary, repentance they caused to be the War with Syria; for that Benhadad having ingaged to restore such Cities. as he had taken, refused to surrender Ramoth-Gilead. Four hundred falso Prophets perswaded him to undertake the Expedition; onely Micaiah sene from God diffwaded him from it. With him joyned leholaphat King of Indah, whose Son Ichoram had maried Athaliah his daughter. But going down both together, Ahab received a wound by an arrow, and thereof died. that day, in the 22th year of his reign.

Ahaziab.

Foram.

6. Abaziah his Son succeeded him, whom he had formerly made his As- Jubasaphati. 12. fociate in the Kingdom, and reigned 2 years in all; being faid to have begun his reign in the seventeenth year of Ichosaphae King of Iudah, because his Father then dyed, having reigned 21 years, and some part of another. After Abab's death, Moab fell off from If ael, to which it had been subject aking . ever fince the dayes of David. Abaziah falling fick, of a fall which he had through a lattife in his upper Chamber, fent to confult Baal-zebub the god of Ekron about his recovery; but the Lord commanded Elijah to meet the Messengers, and denounce death to him for this his sin. He eat Abaziah being angry, fent two Cappains with their fifties, one after another, to fetch him to him: but he called for fire down from Heaven, which confumed them: then being increased by the third, he went with him to the King, where denouncing the fame to his face, Ahaziah accordingly died, not long after. Him his Brother Joram followed in the 18th year of Jeholaphat King of Indah ending, who wrought evil in the fight of the Lord, but not like his Father Chap. 3. and Brother; for he pur away the Image of Baal, erected by his Father, ver cleaved to the fin of Ieroboam the Son of Nebat, who made Ifrael to fin, because of his carnall interest; all the Kings of Israel accounting it an especiall piece of policy, to bufie the people in the worship of the golden

7. For am made War upon the Moabites which had revolted, in conjunction with Fehofaphae King of Judah, and the King of Edom his Tributary, Elisha the Prophet miraculously providing the Armies of water, and promissing them Victory. When the Sun arose and shone upon the Pits full of water, it appeared, to the Moabites, blood; so that they concluding their Enemies to have fallen one upon another, came out to take the plunder of the field; but finding other entertainment, were repelled with great consternation and losse. The Ifraelines then falling upon the Countrey. mide havock of all things, and befieged Melha King of the Moabites, in Kir-hazereth, who being streightened, attempted with 700 Men to break through to the King of Edom, but could not; whereupon taking his Son, (his own some think, others the King of Edom's) which should have reigned in his stead, he offered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall. This spectacle seemed so horrible, as raised indignation against I frael, and such pity towards the Man driven by extreme necessity, (as Josephus telleth it), that being mindfull of the mutability of humane affairs, they raifed the Siege and departed.

8. Benhadad King of Syria made feverall attempts upon Ifrael, and befieging Samaria, reduced it unto extreme necessity by Famine. Him Hazael his Servant flew, and possessed himself of his Kingdom; but having received. together with it, the succession of the War, Jehram went up against him, chap. 2. and was accompanied by Ahaziah King of Judah to Ramoth-Gilead. Here receiving a wound, he returned to leareel, to be cured; but the Army was left under feverall Captains, amongst which was Jehn the Son of Tehosaphat; Jehu annoin- to whom Elift fent one of the Sons of the Prophets, to annoint him King. He was presently received as such by the Army, and returning to Texreel, Chap. 9.

twelve years. He caused lesabel to be thrown down out of a window, where Athalia. 1. the family of her carkeife was eaten by the Dogs; after which writing Letters to Samaria, Chap. 19. he procured Seventy Sons of Abab to be flain, and their heads fent to him. Then going thither, he flew 42 persons in his way, of the kindred of Ahaziah flew Joram, (and gave Abaziah his death's wound) after he had reigned A. M. 31121

SECT. 4. King of Iudah, who were going to vifite leboram and lefabel: at Samaria he put to death all the Priests of Baal, and burnt the Temple with the Images. Yer took he no heed to walk in the Law of the Lord God of Ifrael, with all his heart, departing not from the fin of leroboam. For his executing of justice upon the house of Ahab, the Lord promised that his seed of the fourth generation should fit upon his Throne; Yet because of the rottennesse of his heart. he began to cut Ifrael short in his dayes, by the means of Hazael, who now subdued not onely the Gileadites, but also what soever the Ifraelites possessed beyond Iordan, raging with cruelty againg Man, Woman, and Child, as Elisha had foretold him. Icha coming to the Kingdom at the same time as Athaliah began her usurpation in Indah, reigned full 28 years, and then died.

Tchoahaz.

Foalh.

68

Ahaziah King of Indah, who did evil in the fight of the Lord, in the fin chap, 12. of Ieroboam; a grove being also in Samaria. Hazael mightily oppressed Ifrael also in his dayes, so that to him were left but so Horse-men, 10 A. M. 2145. Chariots, and 10000 Foot-men. Yet the Lord was intreated by him, and Juafi. 23. fent I frael a Deliverer; notwithstanding which, yet Prince and People remained incorrigible. After he had reigned seventeen years he died, and lest his Kingdom to his Son Ioalb, who also reigned with him about three years, for that he began his reign in the 37th year of longh King of Indah, and is held A. M. 3159. by the lews to be that Deliverer, mentioned to have been fent by God. He Joseph 37. overcame the Syrians thrice, as dying-Elifha foretold him (whom he vifited, and confulted about the affairs of his Kingdom); and thereby recovered the Cities loft to Hazael by his Father. Upon the occasion formerly mentioned, he rook lerusalem, with Ahaziah the King of Indah, and, breaking down the wall of the City 400 cubits, plundred the House of the Lord and the Feroboam the Second.

ZacMariah.

Shallum.

Menahem.

Kings house. He also was guilty of Ieroboam's sin, and died after he had reigned together with his Father, and by himfelf fixteen years. 10. His Son came after him, Ieroboam by name, whom God made inftru- chap. 14. mental to preferve Ifrael; nay to raise it to the highest top of greatnesse it arrived at. For he recovered Damaseu and Hamash, which had by right be- A. M. 3175longed to the Tribe of Indah, with what foever the Syrians had taken from Amatzia. 16. his Predecessors, from the antient border of the entrance of Hamath, to the Sea of the Plains, or the Lake Afphaltites, as Ionas the Prophet the Son of Amitthai had foregold, the same with him that prophecyed against Ninive. being of Gath-Hepher, a Town of the Tribe of (k) Zebulen, in (1) Galile (k) John 9. of the Gentiles; out of which therefore arose a Prophet, though the learned 13 Pharifees so earnestly urged the contrary to Nicodemus. In this King's (1) Ifa. 9. 1. dayes also prophecied Hosea, and Amos, called from the Herd in Indan, to prophecy to the people of Ifrael. Notwithstanding all that God did for Isroboam, he did evil also in his fight, accompanying his Ancestors in the fin of Ieroboam the fon of Nebat. He reigned An years, and after his death the affairs of his Kingdom fell to decay; way being made for the ruine of his house, and an Anarchie insuing for 24 years. For so it must be, if Zatharias his Son began not his reign till the 38th of Unxiah King of Indah, the last of A. M. 3238. Ieroboam falling in with the 14th of this King, feeing Uzziah is faid to have Hazaria. 38. begun his reign in the 27th of his, and he reigned 4x years. This may well feem strange in this Kingdom, where Princes were often made away by Usurpers; but God had promifed Ichia, that his Children should reign to the fourth Generation; and this Zacharias might be a posthumus, or however very young, and therefore not admitted by the Nobility to govern, till he had attained to fuch ripeneffe, as was convenient for fo great a charge.

11. Zachariah, doing evil in the fight of the Lord, as did his Ancestors, reigned but fix moneths, being then flain by Shallum the Son of Iabelh who reigned in his stead in the 20th year of Azariah King of Indah. He enjoyed his usurped royaltie but a short space, being after two moneths served so himfelf by Merahem the Son of Gadi, who also reigned in his flead. Menahem smore Tiphsab and all that were therein; with the Coasts thereof from

o. Ieboahaz his Son succeeded him, in the 23th year of loash the Son of Tirzab.

Tire 4b, because they opened not to him; and ripped up the Women with child. He did evil in the fight of the Lord, not departing from the fin of Ieroboam all his dayes; wherefore God flirred up the Spirit of Pal King of Affyria, who invaded the Land; but he gave him 1000 talents of Silver, which he wrested from the richest of his Subjects, to confirm the Kingdom in his hand. After he had held it ten years he died; and his Son Pekahiah reigned in his flead, in the 50th year of Azariah; to that Menahem having begun his reign in the 30th of that King, and reigning but ten years, here feemeth an Inter-requirem of a year or more to have happened after his death, except that be admitted, which some think, viz. that Menahem did not peaceably enjoy the Kingdom till about a year after Shallum's death, purchafing it

Pekahiah,

· Pekah.

Hofbea the nineteenth &

Pul King of

deth Ifrael,

Affyria inva-

then of Pal; to that beginning his reign in the 20th of Azariab, or Uzzoiab. must be understood peaceably, and in that year ending. Then must Pekabiah A. M. 3250. have begun his reign in the very beginning of the roth year, and so a few moneths being added to the ten years of Menahem, at the furthert, there will be no need of an Inter-regnum. Pekahiah treading in the wicked steps of his Prædecessors, reigned two years and then was slain by Pekab the Son of Remaliah, one of his Captains, who possessed himself of his Seat. 12. Pekah joyned with the King of Syria against Ahaz King of Judah. flew in Judah 120000 in one day, all vallant Men, because they had forfaken the Lord God of their Fathers. Ziehre a mighty Man of Ephraim, 2 Chron, 18. flew Maafeiah the King's Son, Azrikam the Governour of the house, and Elkanah that was next the King. Two hundred thousand were also carried Captive, with much spoil, all which Oded the Prophet, when they came to Samaria, procured to be fent back. This made Abab purchase the help of Tiglath-Pilefor King of Affiria, who first destroying the King and King- 1 Chron. 4. dom of Damafeus, caried the inhabitants thereof into Captivity; and then 26. came against Pekah and transported the Renbenites, Gadires, and the half mies, Gadites, came againt regen and transported the Renbenites, Gadites, and the half and the half and the half. Tribe of Manafes into Halah, Habor, Hara, and to the River Gottan. Tribe of Ma-then croffing Jordan, he fer upon Galilee and caried away the Inhabitants naffir, earlied thereof with all the Naphalites (which remained of those that were left by Caprives into Benbadad) into Affria. Pekab doing evil in the fight of the Lord, after he had reigned twenty years, was flain by Hofen the Son of Elah who usurped the Kingdom. 13. Hoften the 19th King of Ifrael began his reign in the 12th year of Abaz 2 kings 17.18.

King of Judah, who reigned seven or eight years with his Father Josham; and A. M. 3273. began to reign by himfelf in the 17th year of Pekah; so that Hofes may Achari 11. truly be said to have began his reign in the 20th year from the inauguration of Joshams; which we must say except we allow of a kind of Inter-regnum for eight or nine years, during which time, Holbes for the firs that hapned could not peaceably enjoy the Kingdom; and then mult we length then out the time of this Kingdom longer by to many years. Hofhea did evil in the fight of the Lord, but not as the Kings of Ifinel which were before him. Against him came up Salmanaffor King of Affria, and made him his tributary Vaffal, which he continued for fome time, till weary of this bondage, he conspired with so King of Agypt, and refused to pay his tribute: Here-upon, Salmanaffer subdued first the Moabilet, lethe should have an Enemy at his back, then invaded Israel and befreged Samaria, in the fourth year of A. M. 328a. The Ifratites, Henektah King of Judah, and the fevereth of Hoften. At the end of three Exchine 6.

carried away gears (in the fixth of Hezekiah; and the ninth of Hojea) he took the City. and carried the Ifraelites Captive into Affria, where he placed them in Chalach; Chaber, by the River of Gofan, and in the Cules of Media, because they had not obeyed the voice of the Lord, but transgressed the Covenant. In their Seat he placed certain Perflans that inhabited by the River Chuthus, and The Samarian placed in the later wards, in diffinction from the Jews, were called Samaritans. This their room, their room, of the Kingdom is to that this Schiffer lated five Jubiles and ten years; in the 83% after the entrance into Canaah, according to Ludovicus Cappellas, and therefore in the end of the seventreenth Jubilie from that ; in the year of the World 3380. or 3381. and so in the end of the 69 Jubily from the Creation; 124 before the destruction of Jerusalem, and the Captivity of

CHAP. IV.

The most ancient Kingdom of Egypt, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

His Countrey falling, at the Division of the Earth, to Cham and his cham the first 1. Posterity, seemeth also to have been inhabited by himself. For, Eggs, after the thence (a) David knew it by the name of the Land of Ham; (b) Plus (a) Plal. 105. earch found it was called Chemia; Stephanus, Hermochymius; the Inha- 23,27. bitants themselves calling it (c) Kam, who distinguished their Nomi, by (b) In 16de. this Allusion, into Chemmis, P sochemmis, P sittachemmis; the Oracle of Ju- (6) Isiodorus this munion, into Chemmis, I joenemmis, I justice and it is of the first piter Hammon in Africk, and the names of Ammonis, and Ammonis, given mus in General Marian and Ammonis, given mus in General Marian and to that Countrey, challenge no other Original. It is not probable that these sim vide cap. I. names should be onely given to it upon this account, that part of his Poste- Parag. 22. rity here fixed themselves, for then the like might have been expected concerning many other places. Mifraim his fecond fon fucceeded him; or he, to whom Moles giveth this name, as father of the Inhabitants of the Land of Lege Bocharts Mifraim; it scarce being the name of a man, because not of the singular Phaleg. I. 4. number. The Scripture calleth Egypt (d) often by the name of Major, (d) Kings which seemeth the singular of Misraim contracted from Mesoraim, & signifieth a fortified place ; no Countrey in the World being more fenced by its Efajas 19. 6. natural situation. The Arabians at this day know the Metropolis Alcairo Mich. 7.12. by the name of Mefre, and the Egyptians anciently called their first moneth Mefori. The dual word Mifraiim feemeth to hint at the distinction of Egypt into (e) Upper and Lower : whereof the former, watered by the River Nile, (e) Orollus running in one Channel, was divided into Thebais and Heptanomus. (The- 1.1.c.2. bais being called the Land of Pathros, and diftinguished from Egypt by I faiah and Teremiah) and the lower part was by the Greeks called Delia, from the Triangular Figure thereof; the River being herein divided into many bran-2. This Mifraim is thought to be the same with Ofris, so much spoken of by the Egyptians, and accounted the for of Saturn, the eldest of the gods, and also the son of Jupiter Hammon. For Ofiris being by the Greeks hamed Diony (w., * one telleth us that he had this appellation both from his Diodorus St. Father and Country, the former part of the word noting the one, and the culus lib. 1. later the other, viz. Nyfa a Citie of Arabia Fælix , built by Cham , in pag. 1. which he seemeth to have been born. From the reign of Ofiris, to the coming down of Alexander the Great into Egypt, the Priests reckoned, some above 10000 years, others little lesse then 23000. But several forms of years beingused in several Nations we are to suppose theirs to have been measured rather by the course of the Moon through the Zodiack, than that of the Sun. Jacobus Cappellus therefore thinketh 1889 years to have passed from the reign of this Ofiris to Alexander his going down into Egypt, the beginning whereof he fixeth at the 1778th year of the World; 100 and odd years after the Flood, about the same time that Nimrod his Nephew began his principa-Office, and this lity at Babylon. This Office is feigned by the Egyptians to have married his their renown- fifter Iss, and they make them the true Bacchus and Ceres. Much they are both reported to have done for the benefit of mankind, by bringing it to civility; to him they afcribe the finding out of Agriculture, and to her the invention of Corn and Laws. He built Thebes the ancient feat of the Kings, with 100 Gates; travelled into the greatest part of the World to reach men civility with the use of Corn and Wine, taking Pan along with him, who being had in great reverence amongst the Egyptians, dedicated a Cirie

Mifraim his

The fame with Ofiris.

ed afts.

CHAP. IV. The Egyptian Kingdom, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

rollim by the name of Chemmis. In his time lived Hermes, or Mercurius; SECT. 4. and Hercules, who being otherwise called Gygan, or Gygnan, is said to have helped the gods against the Gyants. Ofirm, when he returned was killed by this wicked brother Typhon.

Ofice killed by 3. Typhon, feizing upon the Kingdom, was by Ifis, through the help of her Diodorus fon Orms, dispossessed again of it, and his life; after which gathering together Typhon punish the 26 pares of her husbands body (into which he had mingled it) the inflied by Isis, and stutted to him divine honours, ordering that the several Tribes of the Priests her fon Orus, should dedicate some one of their living Creatures to him, and for him wo;ofhip it as long as it lived; then at its death, feeking out another of the fame

The Sacred Bull Apis.

Mind to do as much to it. Several things were confectated in feveral places. yet by a general consent the Sacred Bull, called Apis, or Muccia, was most valued, and chiefly adored, because of the special help that kind of Creature affordeth to Tillige. This Bull was black all over, having onely a square white spot in his forehead, faith Herodom, on his right side faith Pling, like to a Crescent, being also facred to the Moon, as Marcell nus will have it. On the back he had the image of an Eagle, a knot on the to ague like to a Crab, and on his Tail double hairs. This kind of beaft did the Egyptians worthip as the greatest God with astonishing veneration, as Macrobins termeth it, till it had lived leveral years; but not being suffered to passe a certainterm, it was then drowned by the Priefts. Being dead, a great and folemn mourning there was untill another could be found with the same marks. Now some make this beaft to be worthipped in honour of Apis, King of the Argives, August de Ciwho going down into Egypt, was there Deified after his death, and called Se- vit, Dal. 18. Prapie. But there having been feveral Kings in divers places of that name, they 6.5. are confounded one with another.

4. Nothing, indeed, but uncertainties attend the most ancient History of that Nation 5 no two Authors agreeing betwixt themselves, concerning the fuccession of the Egyptian Kings. This is not onely to be attributed to the force of time; but the unfaith unresse of their Priests, who having it committed to their charge, to record the Memorables of their Country, foyfted , things of their own heads into the flory, concealed from the Natives whatfoevermade against their own profit, and from strangers all things that tend--ed to the difhonour of their Countrey. Out of such a kind of design they re--lated not the same things to such as travelled thither with a defire to be in--formed; so that from the corrupt Fountains of their records have proceeded the filltones of feveral, who pretending to have taken them out of the very HArchives, are no leffe difforme amongst themselves then from the truth. The -Catalogues of their Kings are full of inextricable Labrynths; Manetho being of no credit, beduife of his notable lying, and all those who professe to fol-low him, as Josephus, Africanus, Enfebius, Syncellus, Scaliger, Usber, and others, mor ogreeing in their ranking, and ordering of them.

The Dynasties dis Several Dynasties are made to have preceded the time of Abraham, of the Egyptian with whose birth (as it is placed in the 43th year of Nimus) the beginning of Enfel. - the 16th is joyned. Much labour is spent by some, in an endeavour to clear whe order of these Dynasties, and to expound them. But, if they should be allowed of ; little more then 200 years are to be affigned to the continuance of all the first 15. because the passage of Cham, and his posterity from the Mountains of Ararat into Egypt, and the establishment of a formal Government there, could scarce be performed within one Century after the Flood; time for the increase of mankind, and the unpassablenesse of the earth duely confidered; except we call the beginning of the first Dynastie back beyond the Flood. It hith been thought therefore that these were not several succollions of Kings, which continued for fo small a time, but rather certain Ranks and Orders of Governours under the Kings; who might be content to disjoy their ease and quiet together with the Dignity (as the Kings did which Toppicerved) whit it the management of publick affairs was wholly commit ted to these Regents, or Lieutenants, of fundry linages or forte of men, who by their actions might leave greater impressions upon posterity than the Kings themselves, and so give occasion to the Egyptians of vaunting them for so many Soveraign Princes indeed: That Eusebius might accommodate the times and Orders of these Dynasties to the Histories of other parts of the World, he is not afraid to transpose them as he finderh them in several Authors. Upon this account Tacobus Cappellus thinkerh it a vain thing to recite in his Chronicle the feries of the Kings, feeing Manetho, by whom Scaliger would amend Enfebius, is most unworthy of cre. it. But it being requisite to give beginners fome infight into the flory; fuch things must be briefly related, as, out of fuch uncertainties carry the greatest shew of probability. 6. After Typhons death, Ifis, as Diedorus Writeth, for some time governed Lib. p. 13. &c. O us the laft of the Egyptian the Kingdom; but so joyntly with her son Orus, or Horus, that he is also faid to have succeeded after the death of his father, and is moreover accounted the last of the gods. He instituted a year confisting of three moneths, and Cenforinus. the ice a year was called after him Horos. The Egyptian year, properly to one 'called, confifted of 265 dayes; but befides this, they had also monethly years of thirty dayes, and others of four moneths ariece, or $20 dayes, that by this various, and cunning account, as Cappellus thinketh, they might delude the Greeks. Or this later way few examples we meet with : but Diodorus maketh mention of it, affiguing the cause to have been for that they divided their Solar year, nor into four, but onely three parts; and Cappellus maketh this following account to confift of fuch kind of years. After the gods, came men to the Government, and the Egyptians boatfed that they had Kings of their own Countrey and home-born, for the most part, during the term of 4700 years; after Cambyles ftrangers : as Persians and Macedonians having governed them. Now these 4700 years he guesseth to confist of four moneths apiece, and to contain 1544 Julian years, which being deducted out of the years of Vide Cappelthe World, at the period whereof Cambyfes came down into Egypt, 1931 will lum ad A. M. remain; at what time Ofric, or Orm his fon might perhaps die, who being the last of the gods, Kings began where they ended.

7. The first King that reigned after these gods was Menus, or Menis, Herodorus which name by some is thought to have been onely of Dignity, and that & Diodorus. Ofric was so cilled. Others think Mercurim Tri megistus meant thereby, Mania the first for that the Hebrew word Meni fignifieth an Arithmetician , and that Ofiris might well be termed Trifmegiffus, being a great Conquerour, Philofopher, and Benefactor to mankind, in giving good Laws, and teaching proficable arts. Another would have Sefoftris, whom he supposeth to have succeeded Ofiris, to be meant by Menas, as nothing inferiour to Ofiris in provess and great undertakings. But Sefostris the Great reigned not rill many years after, and nothing hindereth but Menas in the Egyptan language (to fay nothing of the Greek) might be a proper name as well as a title of dignity. But, who succeeded him is not known; the Priests feighing 52 Princes to have followed him in order for the space of 1400 years unto Busiris, multiplying Kirgs, years, lies (or fallacies) to make their flory the more admirable. We must therefore in this unknown path, take the blind conduct of the Dynasties again, of which omitting the first seventeen, to which almost 4000 years are ascribed, the 18th is by Cappellus Chebros.

Amenophis.

Mephres, &cc.

8. To his reign are given 25 years; fo that, according to this account. he it was who honoured Joseph and fet him over the Land. He dying in Euseb. the second year of the Famin, Chebros succeeded him, who reigned thirteen years, and him Amenophis who reigned 21, under whom Jacob died. To him succeeded Mephres, according to Ensebins, but Manethon after him placeth his Sister Amesses, or Amerses, to which he giveth 21 years and 9 moneths. After this reigned Mephres twelve years, Mephramnikofis 26, and Thurbmofis (or Thmofis) 9. After him followed Amenophie (otherwife called Palmanothis and Phamenophis) who reigned 31 years, and by fome is accounted that Memnon, whose image of stone, at Thebes in mide to begin nine years before the time whereunro Eufebini fers it , viz. Amos, or Amo. in the 107th year of the Patriarch Jacob, the first in order of it being Amos, or A.M. 2274.

Egypt, founded like an Harp, when the Sun-beams, first in the morning, beat upon it: which is witnessed by many Authors of good credit. To him succeeded Orus, or Horus, who reigned 38 years, and to him Acenchres. who reigned 12. Manetho maketh Acenchres the Daughter of Orm, and giveth to her 12 years and one moneth; after her, he bringeth in Rathotis her Brother, to whom he giveth a years. But after Acenchres, Eufebius placeth Achoris, and giveth to him but 7 years, to whom succeeded Cenchres the twelfth King: who, being more wicked than his Prædecessors, or pressed the Ifraelites most grievously, and continued eighteen years in his tyranny, till an A.M. 2508. end was put toit in the Red Sea.

9. Above Eighty years had they vexed the Ifraelites with insupportable The Ifraelites burthens, notwithstanding which, they grew and increased exceedingly; may although order was given to drown all the Male Children, left growing roo numerous, they might in time of War joyn with their enemies: effe per them out of the Land with an high hand; or because of a Pradiction menrioned by Tolephus, that an Hebrew should be born, who was to afflist and overthrow the Egyptians. That the Jews lived amongst them, is ever acknowledged by their Hiftorians, accounting it an honour, as all Nations do. to have fent forth Colonies. But to take away differed, and to fave the honour of their Country, (which to the Priests was ever most solemn) abhominable lyes have been made, and strange stories devised, concerning their first coming into £9791, and especially about their departure : which briefly to relate feemeth agreeable enough to the nature of our defign.

10. Manetho, an Agyptian Priestand Historian, pretending to describe the Originall of the Tems, relateth that in the dayes of one of their Kings, Maneiro his Lyes concern- Timaus by name, a certain ignorant people called Hyesos, (which fignifieth lib. 1 contr. ing the Ori- Royall Shepherds, or Cartives as he himself interpreteth it) from the Ea- Apparem. stern parts, with great confidence invaded Agypi, which eafily obtaining without any force of Arms, they burnt the City and Temples, and raged against the Natives with Sword and Servitude. At length they made them a King of their own flock, named Saltis, who, coming down into the Country about Memphis, imposed a Tribute upon the upper and neather Province. and put Garrisons in convenient places. Especially he took care of the Eastern Coasts, being jealous of the Power of the Affriant; so that in the Principality of Sais, Eastward from the River Bubaftis, he built up a City called anciently Anaris, which forcifying with most strong walls, he therein placed a Garrison of 240000 Men. When he had reigned nineteen years, he gave place to Baon, who governed 44, after him Apachnas 36 with feven moneths, then Apochis 61, Janias 50 and one moneth, then Affis 40. Under those fix first Kings, they fore oppressed, and endeavoured utterly to defroy £ (yp), and 511 years had they power over it. Afterwards the Kings of the Province of Thebes, and the remaining part of Egypt, fell on them with a great and lasting War, and by a King named Alisfragmuthosis, were they overcome, and driven up into a place containing the quantity of 10000 Akers of ground, called Auaris. The Son of this King, Themosis by name, attempted the taking of this place, befieging it with 480000 Men; but, dispairing of successe, agreed with them, that leaving . Egypt, they should go whither else they pleased; so that departing with all their goods, to the number of 240000 persons, they travelled through the Defart into Syria, (for that they feared the Asyrians, who then obtained the Empire of Ala) and built them a City in the Country, afterwards called Tudea, which might suffice for so many thousands, and named it Ternsalem,

11. To this history taken out of the antient records, Manetho adderh. as he confesseth, fabulous reports rife amongst the Vulgar, mixing with the Israelites a multitude of Egyptians languishing with Leprose and other diseases; which he relateth, as having lorgotten, that the Shepherds left Agree $18 years before, as may be gathered from the feries of the Kings, and the distance of time betwixe Themusis, who reigned when the Shepherds departed, and Amenophis, under whom the Lepers went out : the time of whose reign neither dareth he to define; though he be exact, in the years of other Princes, as Fosephus noteth. Now this Amenophis, forfooth, was told by a Priest of the same name, That he might see the gods, if he would cleanse his Kingdom from Lepers, and other unclean persons. He, being a very religious Man, gathered all the infirm out of the Land, to the number of 80000, whom he fent with others to cut stones on the East of the River Niles there being amongst them also some of the learned Priests infected with Leprofie. Because favour was shewed towards them, the Priest who would have had them destroyed, feared much the displeasure of the gods, as well against himself as the King, and foreseeing they should have power over Agypt for thirteen years, he durst not tell the King so much, but wrote a Book concerning the matter, and then killed himself; which cast the King (you must know) into a great melancholly.

12. But being still defired to do something for the security of the diseased people, he gave them Avaris, the City of the Shepherds, now not inhabited: whither being entred, and perceiving the place to be very advantagious for rebellion, they made choice of Ofar fiphus, one of the Priests of Heliopolis, for their Captain, swearing to obey him in all things. He presently established for Law, that they should not worship the gods, nor abstain from such creatures as were most sacred to the Egyptians; to marry with none but those that were tied to them by the same league, and commanding many other things (especially such as he knew contrary to Egyptian customs) he prepared for War. Then fent he to the Shepherds at Jerusalem, formerly expelled by Themusis, to open their condition to them, and to invite them to give their affiftance against Egypt. The Shepherds readily closed with the motion, and all, to the number of 200000, marched down to Avaria, Amenophis much startled hereat, especially because of the Prædiction of the Priest, committed his Son, but five years old, to a Friend; and, together with Apis and his other gods, went into Athiopia, where he was received with all his multitudes of Subjects, and was kindly entertained by the King. who made provision for them for these thirteen years. The Solymitans, or Shepherds, with the unclean multitude, made now great havock of all things in £gyp, burning Villages and Cities, and raging against the sacred Animals with their Priests, whom they compelled to be their Burchers, and drave away naked : the forementioned Priest still giving Laws, and framing their Policy: who being from Ofiris the Heliopolitan-god salled Ofarfiphon, now changed his name into Mofes. But at the end of the thirteen years, Amenophis returned with great power out of Athlopia, and with the affiftance of his Son Rampfes, fell upon the Shepherds and unclean multitude, whereof killing many they purfued the rest as far as the borders of Syria. 13. These ridiculous lyes are much more augmented by others. Charemon, who professed to write the History of Egypt, giveth the same name Amenophis to the King, and of Rhameffes to his Son; but addeth, that the Goddesse Iss appeared to the former, complaining that her Temple was defroyed by War That Phrisiphanies a facred Scribe, told the King, that if he would be freed from terrors in the night, he must purge . Egypt from polluted Men: he therefore gathering out 250000 difeafed persons, cast them out of his borders : That the two Scribes Mofes and Joseph (the Egyptian name of the former being Tifithes, and of the later Petefephis) became their Leaders, and, coming to Pelusum, found there 380000, which Amenophis having left behind would not convey into Egypt: with those they struck up a league, and undertook an Expedition against the Land. Amenophis not expecting the issue of their attempt, fled into Athiopia, leaving his wife big with child, which lying hid in a Cave, brought forth a Son called Meffemes. He, when he came to age expelled the Tems, to the number of 200000 into Spria, and received back his Father Amenophis out of Athiopia.

Charemon his ridiculous Lyes.

14. Lysimachous an Historian, going beyond the other two in the malici-L'amachus his malicious for outnette of his lyes, wrote, that when Bocchoris reigned in Egypt, the people of the Jews, infected with Leprofie, Scab, and other diseases, resorred to the Temple to beg for their living, and many being infected with this disease, barrennesse fell upon the Land. Bocchoris, sending to the Oracle of Ammon about it, received this answer; that the Temples were to be cleansed from impure and prophane persons, who were to be cast out into the Defart; but the scabbie and Leprous should be drowned, the Sun nor enduring they should live; which being done, and the Temples purified, fruitfulnesse would be restored to the Earth. Rocchoris accordingly ordered the Priests to gather all the prophane out of the Temples, and give them up to Soldiers, who were to carry them into the Wildernesse; and the Leprous and Scabbie to be wrapped in Lead, and cast into the Sea; which being drowned accordingly, the other were exposed to perish in the Defart. But those, confulting for their own fafety, kept fires that night, and firich watch; then, the day following, a folemn Fast to God for their preservation. On the next, counsell was given them by a certain Man named Moses, that they should march on in one body, till they arrived at fome good Soil. Then commanded he them to be kind to no man, to give bad counsell rather than good, and overthrow the Temples of the gods, as many as they should find; which being approved of, they travelled through the Defart, and, after much trouble, came to a fruitfull Soil, where using the Inhabitants very injuriously, and rifling and burning the Temples; they arrived at length in that Country, fince called Indea, and building a City feated themselves there. This City was at first called Hierofyla, from the spoiling of the Temples ; but afterwards, to Thun the difgrace of the occasion, they changed it into Hierofolyme, and took the name of Hierofolymitans.

Apion his Lyes,

Reason for phy Jews.

15. Further than this; Apion a Grammarian of Alexandria, as he coun- Josephus Lib. terfeired himself, but born in Oasis, a Town of Leypt, amongst se- 2, contr. Apioverall other lyes against the Jews, wrote, that he had received from the eldest nem. of the Agyptians, how Mifes was a Heliopolitan, and, being brought up according to the customs of his Country, changed the rites thereof at his own pleasure. That he led the Leprous, Blind, and Lame, out of Agypi; but fairly faith, it was in the first year of the seventh Olympiad, the same wherein Carthage was built by the Tyrians, which happened about 150 years after Hiram the King of Tyre (as apppeareth out of the Phanician Annals) with whom Solomon was contemporary. He mentioned the same number of infirm persons as Ly simachiu, but addeth a reason why the Sabbath was so called. Travelling fix dayes together, faith he, on the seventh day they rested in Judea, for that they were forely plagued with Ulcers in their privy parts, and named it Sabboth, from the Agyptianword Sabbatofis, which fignifieth that disease. Notwithstanding that he saith they finished their journey in six dayes, yet he further writeth, that Mofes hid himself for forty dayes upon the Mount Sinai (which lyeth betwixt Agypt and Arabia) whence coming down, he gave Laws unto the Jews. As for the Jews/h Religion, he was not ashamed to write, that in their Temple was set the head of an Asse made of gold, and of great value, which being there worshipped, was taken thence When Antiochus Epiphanes spoiled the place.

16. Such absurdities were delivered by the Egyptians, and those who our of desire to gratisie them, have, after their example, endeavoured to conceal the truth; to which Josephus in his two Books against Apion, hath abundantly answered. Severall reasons have moved them to corrupt their Originall Records. The Ifraelites growing great in that Country, out of it they returned to the promised Land by the stretched out arm of God, to the great reproach of their cruel and imperious Lords. The difference of religion raised also others against betwixt the two Nations (as betwixt the Fews and the whole world) mortall enmity, whilst the one worshipped the onely true God, and the base and degenerate spirit of the other fell down to things far inferior to themselves; which difference fome (though but few) perfons differing, were ambitious to become Proselytes to the Jewish Doctrine : Hence again arose such Envy, that some descended to that indiscretion and weaknesse, as to contradict their own most antient and authentick Writers. The in-bred blindnesse of Men's minds, increased by Paganish Education, hath so far prevailed, that the (b) greatest part of Heathen Writers have in this contention fided with the (b) As Diodo-Egyptians, (otherwise contemptible enough in their eyes) and subscribed to vus siculus in what they have faid concerning the Original of the Jewish Nation; though Ectog. lib. 34. fome (c) have not given credit to fuch reports.

Manetho his false Chronologie.

17. As Manetho erreth in the cause of the departure of the Jews out of libs, ad initium. Egypt, fo also in the time thereof, though not so groffely as his Friend Apion. Justin, lib. 36. Manetho nameth the King Themusis, by whom they were expelled: Who, if (c) Strabo the same with Amosis, he lived 230 years before their true departure; and lib 16, p. 761. that he is the same appeareth by Manetho's Catalogue, taken out of Fosephus. But (to go on with the Storie of the Kings) Themusis reigned, according to Manetho, 25 years and four moneths after their Expulsion. Chebron his Son fucceeded him, and reigned thirteen years; next him, Amenophis 20 with seven moneths; his Sifter Amesses 2 and 9 moneths. Mephres followed her, and continued twelve years and nine moneths, him Mephramuthofis, who reigned 25 and ten moneths; then Thmosis nine and eight moneths, Amenophis thirty and ten moneths, Orus 36 and five moneths. His Daughter Acencheres reigned 12 years and one moneth, Rathotis her Brother nine years, Acencheres twelve and five moneths, another of that name twelve and three moneths, Armais four and one moneth, Armesis one and four moneths, Armesses Miamun Sixty fix and two moneths, and lastly Amenophis ninteen and 6 moneths. In whose time one who, forsaking Ensebins, followeth Maneiho, in ranking those Kings, holdeth the Ifraelites to have departed Egypt, and consequently will have this King drowned in the Sea. That Rameffes Miamun was he, who fird began to afflict the Israelites, the length of his * ufferius Anreign (as * one supposeth) maketh probable; whose name also seemeth to nat. Vet. Test. him, to have given appellation to one of the Cities, in building of which they ad A. M. 2427.
were imployed. 18. After Amenophis reigned Sethofis, who having great Forces both by Manetho avud

Sethofis or Ægyptus.

the Diadem and medling with his Wife or Concubines, undertook an Expe- contr. Apionem. dition against Cyprus and Phanicia, and then against the Assirians and Medes, all which he brought under, either by the fword or the terror of his A. M. 2522. name, whereby, elevated in hismind, he confidently marched up and down the East-countries, overturning the Ciries and States thereof at his pleasure. Much time being herein spent, his Brother in the mean while acted all things in Agypt contrary to his injunctions, by the advice of his Friends, assuming the Diadem and rebelling. Of this the Chief-Priest secretly gave him intelligence, fo that hasting back to Pelnsium, he recovered his Kingdom. Manetho addeth, that this Setholis was also called Legyptus, (from whence the Country took the name of Ægypt) and this his Brother Armais had also the appellation of Danaus. If so; then Amenophis, who was swallowed up of the Sea, must be taken for Belm, the Father of Ægypim and Danem accor-Armans or Da- ding to the Greeks, who not being confounded with the Father of Ninus (as by Mychologists he is wont to be) is said to have lived 322 years before the destruction of Troy, which account Learned Usher judgeth fitly to agree with the time of Amenophis. He also thinketh Ramesses Miamun to be Neptune, Min coming near to, and therefore feeming to be derived from, Moy; Ramesses Mia- which in the antient Egyptian language, according to Josephus, fignifieth man the same mater. Nepsane is said also to be Father of Bufiris, who at this time tyranwith Neptune.

naus.

Amenophic hie Son with Bufiris.

nizing about the River Nile, cruelly flew fuch Strangers as came near him. Such a Son indeed was worthy of so cruell a Father as Ramesses Miamun; and It feemeth likely enough, that the Story of Busiris might be taken from his and his Son's cruelty to the Ifraelites, and fo the thing may well enough be * A. Gellius applied to Amenophis. Further, if, we observe what * another telleth us, Not. Attic. that the Poets are wont to call cruell and bloody men by the name of Nep- lib. 15. 6 21. tune, as born of the raging and troublesome Sea; then may we find mote reason for Rumesses Miamun his being so called, because of his inhumanity towards the Ifraelites and their innocent Children. 19. Now

Land and Sea, left his Brother Armais deputy of Egypt, and forbidding him Josephum! 1.

CHAP. III. The Egyptian Kingdom, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

What the Greeks write Setbofis.

19. Now, to joyn this Storie of the Egyptians with that of the Greeks. (whom wer the other complain of, as corrupting their Antiquities) (d) Apolto torus writerh, how Neptune, on Lybia the Daughter of Epaphas (who (d) Lib. 2. being the Son of Telegonus, and lo the fecond drughter to Fasts King of Argos, built Memphis, as some say, and reigned in the lower part Agypi) begat two Sons Belns and Agenor, whereof the later went into Phanicia, and there reigned. Belus obtained Egypt, and of Anchinee the Daughter of Nilus begot Agypus and Danaus. He fent Danans to inhabit Africk or Lybia (so called from his Mother); and after Azyptus had subdued the Country of the Melamzodi, or Black-feet, named it Egypt after himself. which, according to Enfebius, was formerly called Aeris, and according to others, Potamitis. But he whom Maneth , in Josephus, calleth Sesothis, feemeth to be the same with Diodorus his Sesoofis, and Sesistris of Herodo. tus, concerning whom both of them record (as Manetho hath done) yerv admirable things. Agreeable to what Manetho delivereth of Sefothis, He- (e) Lib. 2. rodosus (e) writeth, that Sefestris subdued many Nations. (f) Diodorus c, 102, &c, faith, that Sefoofis conquered Arabia and Lybia before his Father's death, and (1) Lib. 1. afterwards having a great ambition to do as much by all the World, first fecu- P. 34, &c. red the affections of his Subjects at home (to keep them in obedience) by his clemency and bounty. Then with an Army of 600000 Foot, 24000 Horse, and 27000 Chariots, he fer upon the Echiopians, towards the South, whom having conquered, he compelled to pay a Tribute of Ebonie, Ivory, and Gold. With a Navy of 400 Ships sent into the Red Sea, he subdued all the muricime Coasts, as far as India; he himself with a Land-Army overfunning not onely those parts of Asia which afterwards Alexander subdued. but beyond Ganges all as far as the Ocean it felf.

His 'Conquefts,

20. After this, he conquered the Nations of Scythia as far as the River Tanais (which severeth Asia from Europe) and lest some of his Egyptians to make a Plantation by the Lake Maoris, that gave originall to the Nation of the Colchi, which the Egyptians supposed they sufficiently proved to be their Colonie from the use of Circumcisson, imagining that the Jews had also this rite from them. Finally all Afia he subdued, with most of the Islands Cyclides; but then paffing over into Europe, was in danger of lofing his Army for want of Provisions, and by the difficulty of places: therefore in Thrace he put bounds to his Expedition, having in all places erected Pillars, wherein was written his successe; and where he found courage, he caused a member of a Man to be ingraven, but where he met with cowardise that of a Woman. At length, after nine years, he returned home with much spoil. where he refteshed, and rewarded his victorious Army. Here he was nor idle, but fer himself to such works as he thought might eternize his name, wherein he imployed none of his naturall Subjects, but the Captives he had brought with him. This the Babylonians not enduring, brake out into rebellion, and fortifying a place near the River, held it out in despight of him, till at last by composition they enjoyed a Seat, which they called Babylon, in remembrance of their own Country. He raifed up great heaps of stones and earth, and to them removed fuch Cities, as by reason of the lownesse of their fituation, were obnoxious to inundations from the River: yet, lest there should be want of water, and for convenience of trade, he caused Rivolets to be digged throughout the Land; he also fortified the Country by a wall on the East, and otherwise povided against invasions.

21. For an oftentation of his greatnesse, he caused such, as being subdued held their Kingdoms of him, or had received new Principalities at his hand, at certain times to come down with their Presents, whom he otherwise used with much respect : but being to go to the Temple, or enter the City, he would loofe his Horses out of his Chariot, and be drawn by four of these Princes. At length, having excelled all Men in Conquests, and other Royall Atchievements, he fell blind, and killed himself when he had reigned 33 years; for which act he was the more admired by the Egyptians. These amongst other things are reported of Sefostris, before whose Statue many years

His pride.

chief Priest contradicted it alleading that Darius had not yet excelled Selothe other.

78

fris in honourable actions; with which freedom the King was well pleased, Setholis, or Se, and faid, if he lived, he would labour to come no whit short of him. His son folis, the fe-fucceeded him of the same name and misfortune in the losse of his fight, which to recover he was bid by an Oracle to wash his eyes in the Urine of some woman which never knew any other man then her own husband. Beginning with that of his own wife, he proceeded to make trial of the honefly of many others, but found none effectual to the cure, but the wife of a certain Gardiner, which woman he then married, and burnt all the rest. Many after him followed in order till one Arnosis came to the Government, ASSIGNES King who by his Tyranny made way for Altifanes, the King of Ashiopia. He, using his power with moderation, put no Malefactor to death, but, cutting off their Nofes, sent them away into the Confines of Agypt and Syria, where he built them a Citie, called from the maimednesse of the inhabitants Rhinoculura, which was dest tute of all forts of provisions through the barrennesse, and unhealthfulnesse of the place. The foyl he chose on purpose, that they might be diverted from idle, and vitious courses, by anxious and effectual care for a livelyhood, which they got by a trade of fishing in the adjoyning

22. After his death the Egyptians recovered the Soveraignty, and created a King of their own Nation, called Mendes. He spent his life in making provision for death by a Sepulcher inimitable for Art, which he made under the notion of a Labrynth; according to which pattern they believed Dadalus to have framed that he made for Minos, King of Crete, wherein to keep the Minotaure. After Mendes an Anarchy followed for a long time, till one of ignoble extraction was made King; by the Egyptians, named Cetes, lu by the Greeks Protess, who living in the time of the Trojan War, had great skill in Aftrology, and the knowledge of winds; whence, and because the Kings of Egypt were wont to have several kinds of living Creatures, Trees, Fire, and other things painted, and worn about their heads, the Greeks took occasion to invent that fable of his turning himself into all manner of shapes. Remphis his Son, and Successor spent his time in the improvement of his revenue and customes, infomuch that he died far richer then any of his Predecessors, having got together 400000 Talents of Gold and Silver. The next, who was any thing confiderable was Nileus, who because whom the Ni- he took great care about bringing water from the River to furnish the Coun-teans named. Chemmis firft buildeth a Pyramid.

Me ides.

After an Anarchy.

Romphis.

trey, changed the name of it from Egypt into Nile. 23. The 8th. from Nileus was Chemmis, who being born at Memphis Diedarus. reigned fifty years, and built the greatest of the three Pyramids, counted amongst the seven wonders of the World. Herodotus writeth that the first King who gave his mind to this work was Cheops, and that he proftituted his daughter to raise money for this purpose: That the biggest was twenty years in building by no fewer then 100000 work-men, towards the diet of whom the price of Onions and Garlick onely, amounted to 1600 Talents of filver: That his daughter, of every one who had to do with her, begged a stone, and therewith built a little Pyramid near adjoyning. Diodorus writeth, that the Vide Phicium basis of the greatest was on each side 700 foot broad, the heighth above 600 lib.36. c.22. foot, and at the top it was fix Cubits broad, all of folid stone very hard, and of an everlasting substance, which he proveth for that the whole structure in his time remained unchanged and uncorrupted, though raifed 1000 years before. But others which within this hundred years have travelled into Egypt relate how those monstrous buildings which stand 12 miles off from Memphis, and look like Mountains at a distance, are on the North-side much eaten, and confumed with that wind; the Etesian winds being there as much putrifying as the Southern in other parts. These Piles of sone sand in a sandy place which affordeth not any quarries of stone, some five miles distant from the Nile, so that the work may well seem right miraculous, though the Egyptians raifed many fables thereupon. But so many thousands of men were to be killed with this toil that one might be stately buried; which yet they say hapned not to him: For the people were so enraged hereat, that his son durst not rhere bury him, but laid him in another obscure and ignoble place. And yet he could not contain himself, but to his power must also imitate his father's CHAP. 1V. The Egyptian Kingdom, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Cephren.

24. Cephren the brother of Chemmis Incceeded him, and reigned 56 years, Harodotus, though fome would have his fon Chabry's immediatly to hive followed him. Diodorus. He spent his time the same way, building another Pyramid in workmanship like to the former, but much inferiour to it in compaffe and largeneffe; being also buried in an obscure place for fear of the rage of the multitude. After Cephren followed Mycerinus (or Mycherinus) the fon of Chemmis, or Cheops, of whom the Egyptians made great account, because he reformed Mycherinus.

Bocchoris.

Sabacon.

much amisse in his Father's and Uncle's dayes. He also built a Pyramid lesse than the other, but in excellency of workmanship far excelling them. One Bocchoris succeeded next, according to Diodorus; in body contemptible, but for endowments of mind going beyond all his Predecessors. Then, after a long time came in Sabacon the Libiopian, and reigned in Egypt. But Herodosus Writeth that Affahis succeeded Mycerinus, and built a Pyramid of Brick; then followed Anysis, who being blind, in his time Sabacus, or Sabacon, invaded Ægypr, and drove him into the Fens, where he hid himself: but Africanus relateth that Sabacon took Bocchoris alive, and burning him quick, reigned in his stead eight years, This cruelty is little agreeable to that humanity which Herodotus ascribeth to him, viz. that he put no malefactor to death; bur, ecording to the degree of guilt, imposed upon every one the carriage of so much earth to the place where he dwelt; and hereby the Towns were made much higher, and lesse subject to inundations, at the time of the overflowing of the River. His piety is much commended; for being told by one of the gods, that if he would reign quietly in Egypt, he must cut off all the Priests by the middle, he made choice rather to quit his interest in the Kingdom, and the possession thereof, than to hazard the quiet of it, or commit such an act of cruelty, He is thought by some to be the same with Soo, King of Egypt, who combined with Hofbea of I frael against Salma-

Sathen.

25. After his departure Herodotus brings the blind man out of his lurking hole, where he had now lien fifty years, and maketh him to have recovered the Kingdom. More likely it is that Sathon the Priest of Vulcan succeeded him; thought to be Senechus his son whom Africanus placeth after him, and it may feem probable enough that if he forfook the Kingdom himfelf, yet he might leave his fon in the Government. This Sathon (or Sethon) wholely devoted to his Superstition neglected Military men, and therefore, when Senacherib King of Affria invaded Egypt, was quite forfaken by them ; yet he is faid by his importunity so far to have prevailed with his god, that pirching his Tents at Pelusium, the Mice did eat the Thongs of the Assirian Targets, and the Horse-Bridles, so that his Enemies were rendred incapable of fighting; and, confounded with fear at so strange an accident, retreated. But whatfoever was done at Pelusium, the * Prophecies against Egypt clearly shew that * Nahum 3. the Affrians pierced further into the Countrey, and led away a multirude in Efny 20.30.31. Captivity. After Senechus, Africanus placeth Tiracus the Ethiopian, the 2 Kings 18. fame with Tirhaka, who affrighted Senacherik back into his Countrey, and A M 3288. is faid to have made an expedition into Europe, and pierced as far as the Pil- Strabe. lars of Hercules. Him followed an Anarchy of two years, and then hippe-Diodonis, ned the Government of twelve men together, which having continued fifteen years, Pfammeticus one of the twelve, affifted by the Ionians and Carians, got Herodetus. the power wholely to himself. He reigned 54 years, 29 whereof he spent in the fiege of Azons, or Albdod in Syria. By placing his Egyptian Souldiers in the left Wing of his Army, he gave them fuch difft fte, that, diffaining

Arangers should have the chief place, 200000 forfook him, and, do what he could, departing into Athiopia, there seated themselves. He, first of all Egyptian Princes, invited the Greeks, and others to Trade in his Domini-Tirbaka.

Psammeticus.

Nebuchad.30.

ons, from which they had been formerly discouraged, either by the severity of his Predecessors, or by giving credit to the fable of Busiru. 26. He left the Kingdom to his fon Necos, called in Scripture Pharoh A.M 2290. Pharob-Neco. Neco, who first undertook that fruitlesse task of cutting a passage from the V.C. 139. River Nile into the Red-Sea, and in that work spent the lives of 120000 Joine 30. men. Undertaking a War at Gods command against the Assyrian, Josias King of Judah opposed him in the Valley of Megiddo, where he was worsted, and so mortally wounded that he died within a short space. After his return he disposed of the Kingdom of Judah to Eliakim, to whom he gave the name of Jehojakim, and made him his Tributary : Him Nebuchadnizar King of Affria withdrawing from his obedience to his own fervice, Nece went up against the Assrian to Carchems, and there was slain as is before (a) shewn from Scripture. Herodoms (b) writeth that he got a victory over the Syrians in Magdalum, and took Cadytis in Syria, which may well be feet. Paragr. that Kadelh mentioned by (c) Moses. He reigned fixteen years, faith Hero- 18 dotus, fix faith Ensebina, and was succeeded by his son Psammis or Psammis. (b) Lz. c.159. tichus, who after he had reigned fix years made an expedition into Ethiopia (c) Num.20.

Plammis.

Amalis.

Pharob-Hophra, and died. Him followed Apries, his fon, called in Scripture Pharob Hophra A.M. 2206. and Vaphres, who invading Phanicia, made War by Land upon Sidon. He V.c. 145. fought a battel at Sea with the Tyrians, whom overthrowing, and returning Joalimi 4. home with great spoyl, he was so far puffed up, as to perswade himself that no god could deprive him of his Kingdom; fo strongly did he think he had established ir. But making War upon the Cyreneans, he received from them a great overthrow, and the Souldiers thereupon mutined against him as having wilfully exposed them unto danger. To appeare them, he fent one Amasis whom they presently chose for their King, and he after some pause acccepted their offer. Apries fled, but after some time was taken, and by Amasis delivered up to his Subjects, who strangled him, having reigned Asyagis 15. fix years 27. With this report of Herodoins agreeth Diodorus Siculus his storie, relating how Apries vanquished the Cyprians and Phanicians in a Sea-fight, took by force and demolished Sidon, wan the other Towns of Phanicia with the Isle of Cyprus, and finally perished, as is before rehearsed, when he had reigned 22 years. But others of late confidering the more fure Testimony of Scripture, and how Egypt was promised to Nebuchadnezar * as wages for the service he had done against Tyre; how Pharoh and his Army should be Exel. 29. 18, flain by the sword, and the Jews in Egypt, and Pharob Hophra delivered Jerem, 43. and into the hands of his Enemies as Zedekiah had been; resolve that the Ægyp-44. tian Priests notably deluded those Historians, hiding the difference and bondage of their Nation. Therefore it is thought fit rather to believe the report of Fosephus, that Nebuchadnezar in the 23th year of his reign, and the cth after the destruction of Jernfalem Conquered Egypt; killed the King thereof , and appointed another in his stead. Some think Amasis might be used as an instrument by Nebuchadnezar, and for that was made Governour by hims others that the Deputy, or Vice-Roy, which he had fet over the Land was flain by Amasis. Agreeable to this later opinion, the Army of Ionians and Carians are held to have been none other than the Garrisons of Mercenaries left by the Assyrian, for the Guard of his Viceroy, and custody of this his new subdued Province : as likewise the Company returning from Cyrene and Barce, who, together with the friends of fuch as were flain in that expedition, deposed, & slue Apries, are conceived to have been the Egyptian Fugitives, which then recovered their own Countrey, feeing that of the Propher was verified : At the end of fourty years will I gather the Egyptians from the people where they were feattered, and I will bring again the Captivity of Egypt, and will cause them to return into the Land of Pathros, into the Land of their habitation, and they shall be there a small Kingdom.

28. Amalis being a man of mean extraction, and perceiving himself upon that account, despised of his people, took a Golden Vessel wherein he and his Guelts had used to wash their feet, and thereof made an image of a god, C H A D. IV. The Egyptian Kingdom, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

vinced them of that equal reverence which the change of both ought to beget in them. Under him the Egyptians boofted that their Countrey was most happy, no fewer then 1020 Towns of good note flourishing therein, in his dayes. He made a Law that all men should yearly give account how they Amalis his lived, which if they could not prove to be by some honest calling, they were to be punished with death; and this, Solon is faid to have translated to Athens. He being the first of all others that took Cyprus, reigned 54. or 55 years) It feemeth probable enough that he revolted from Cyrus, being before tributary to the Babylonian Empire (though the Priests hid this amongst other things from Herodoins and others); and that this was the chief cause, whatever is pretended, why Cambyfes came down and conquered his Kingdom. This was not accomplished in his time, he dying in preparation for the War. A. M. 3480.

Law.

which when the Egyptians worshipped with great reverence, he called them

rogether, and comparing his Original with the former use of the Gold, con-

But his Son Pfammenieus succeeding him lost all, and so Egyps became a V. C. 229. Province of the Persian Empire; which things involving much of the af. Cambysis $. fairs of Perfia, and nearly relating to the tragedie of Cambyfes, are to be referred to a more proper place.

29. The Egyptians, accounting themselves the most antient of all Nations, were not wanting indeed of many reasons to witnesse their antiquity, although their pride transported them beyond the true Epoche of their Original, The Scripture it self witnesseth Egypt to have been a mighty Kingdom, every way better replenished then any other Country that we can read of, in so antient times : in the dayes of Abraham it was a flourishing Kingdom, and the 1/raelites were not a People till fuch time as the Egyptians were one of the most flourishing Nations upon Earth. The Ethiopians concluded themselves more antient, because Egypt, as they thought; was of old a Sea or Lake, (k) Ephorus (k) antient Writers being of opinion, that it was the gift of the River Niles, and Diodowhich having once contained within it felf all the compasse of the Land, at m. 1. 1. 2. 25. length warped it up out of it's bowels; to that from it's mud, or dirt, the Herod, lib. 1. firm ground proceeded, and became a Continent. They urge, that in the 6.5 yearly inundations of the Nile much mad is left and flicks immovable; that Arit. Moteor. in the moutains of Egypt the shells of Fishes are found to that the Springs Strabo, I, 12, and Wells there digged, affoard water of a brackish taste, as if the reliques p. 436. D. of Sea-water yet remained in the Earth : Lastly, they say, that the Island Plut. in Iside. Pharm at this day, is scarce a mile distant from Alexandria; whereas in the Plin. la. c.85.

time of (1) Homer it was a day and a nights fail off from Egypt. But experi- Ammian. 1,22. ence theweth, that for fome thousands of years there hath been no acception ver. 356. generally ima-by any such mud, but that those Towns which anciently stood upon the Shore of the Sea, and River, fill continue there. The shells might come from the generall Deluge, being found also in other places as well as Egypt. Many defcribe the Pountain of the Sun at Heliopolis, and yet none observe any brack- Vide Brodzi ish taste in the water. And as for Pharms in the Trojan times it was distant Miscell. 1. 3. from Canobus, where Menelam is thought to have arrived, but 120 furlongs; 6.5. & Bo-and therefore could not be a day and nights fail from Egypt, as Homer wrote chart Phales, buyletus of his Postick liberty or rather his improves in Caobianhia. by virtue of his Poetick liberty, or rather his ignorance in Geographie. 30. Certainly they had cause enough to charge the Greeks with novelty, of the Greeks, of any one of their Common-wealths being to that of theirs but as yesterday; their Laws and Policy, their Religion and Rites but new upstarts, and (as the comparison of Egyptians would go about to demonstrate) but copies of their Originall. There was ripenesse of literature, civil discipline, and inventions of severall fores amongs them, before the like did as much as bud forth in Greece, Isaly, Herod, I. a. or other Western Countries. They stick not to instance wherein the Greeks c. 49. have borrowed of them, All, or most of the names of their gods, with the superstition belonging to them, were, they fay, stollen out of their Country, the Rites being something altered and new stories invented, to blind the World, as to their Originall. Ofiris they avow to have been the true Bac- Diodorus I. I. ohus or Dionyfus, in whole Mysteries Orphous the Post being initiated whilst p. 14 &c.

The antiquity and to jeer (as they did) at their pedantick pretence to Antiquity; the luffre Agyptians.

he sojourned in Egyps, when he was afterwards kindly entertained at Thebes in Baoria, to gratifie them of that place, raifed a Fable of his being born there, and begotten by Japiter on Semele the Daughter of Cadmus, a certain Bastard having at that time been born of her, and fathered upon Jupiter. Ifis the Silter and Wife of Ofiris, they affirm to be the true Ceres. Hercules was an Egyptian, not born immediately before the Trojan War, but in the most antient time, even at the beginning of Mankind, to which season the wearing of a Ch. b and Lyons-skin was most congruous, when clothes were not as yet found out, as also his cleaning the Country of Monsters and wild Beatts, at that time; the Earth being but inhabited in a scattered manner. Apollo in like fort was no other than Orm, who was taught the Arts of Prophecying and Healing, by his Mother Isis. As to this controversie, is observable the incertainty of the names of those Heathenish vanities, the same being to some

The incertainty of the Heathenish Deiries.

Ifis, to others Ceres, and to others Themophoris (or, the Inventor of Laws) to others Tano, to others the Moon; and to some all those names are one. Ofiris in like manner, is now taken for Serapis, then for Dionysus, otherwhiles for Pluto, fometimes for Ammon and Jupiter; and not feldome thought to be Pan, as Diodorns hath observed. 31. Severall Colonies they glory to have fent forth. The first by Boliss the Son

Libra, and Neptune, into Babylon; where, upon Euphrates, he constituted Flatended to, by mins after the custom of Egyps, free from all taxes and impositions. These by the Egyptians, the Babylonians were cilled Chaldans, who in imitation of the Egyptian Pricht, and Philosophers, observed the Stars, Danans out of Egypt peopled Argos the (almost) ancientest City of Greece. The Nation of the Colchi and the Tems they prove theirs by Original, from the rice of Circumcifion, Cadmus and Phanix his Brother they report to have been Natives of their Egyptian Thebes, whence the former translated the name of that City into Greece : but Agenor his Father, as is believed, (being the Brother of Belus and Uncle to Ægyptus and Danaus)come thence into Phanicia, then have they further occasion to boast of a Colonie led by him into that maritime tract. The Athenians they prove to have been a Colonie, led by Cecrops from Sais in Egypt, for that they alone called their Ciry Aftn, from a place fo named in their Country, and because the members of their Common-wealth were distinguished into three rankes; of Noblemen, who only were capable of honours as the Egyptian Prielts: Country-men who have Arms agreeable to that fort of people in Egypt, who being called Husbandmen, afforded Soldiers for the Wars & laftly, Artificers, exercifing manual and common Arts, which fitly answereth to the custom of that place. Besides Cecrops , Peter the Father of Mnestheus and Erifthens were of the Egyptian extraction; of whom the later carrying great store of Corn out of Eggp to Athens, thereby obtained the Kingdom, and gave occasion to the Story that Ceres at that time came into Greece.

32. Although it may not puffe for current, that the whole World is beholding to them for the use of Letters, the knowledge of the Stars, Geometricall Speculations, the heft Laws, and most of the liberall Arts, as they have bragged; yet most invient have several of these things been amongst Ammianus them. Befides the common and usuall way of writing, they had certain Hyeroglyphicks.

The Agyptian Nores, called * Hieroglyphicks, wherein each letter served for a word, and Notes, called "Hierogluphicks, wherein each letter terved for a word, and guph, wide fingle words expressed whole sentences. As by the image of a Vulture they lob, Pierium expressed the word Nature, because in that kind of Bird no Male can be found. Valeriamms By the picture of a Bee making Honey they undertood a King; hinting, that Bellunenjem. in a Governour, a feing or sharpnesse ought to be mixed with sweetnesse. They also used anigmaticall compositions or mixtures of images, as, by a Scepter with an Eye, and an Ear on the top thereof , they fignifed the Soveraign and all-knowing Majesty of God. As for Astronomy, though the Babylonians, for the antiquity of their knowledge herein, had no need to give them place, yet were the Egyptians furthered in the due observation of the Stars, by the plainnesse and evennesse of their gound, and the severity of the air; it never raining in Egypt in ordinary course of Nature, which defect is supplyed by the yearly overflowing of the River. If the World be bounden to them for Geometry, it's to be ascribed also to their River, as another fruit of it's inundation, whereby washing away the marks and removing the fences of their particular Lands, they were forced every year to measure them over again, and thence, through necessity, driven to Mathematicall speculations, Now that the belt Laws, and most ingenuous Arts were from them conveyed into Greece, they evidence by a particular of the bearers. 33. The Priefts, precending in their Sacred Records to find the Register of Diodorus !. 1. their names, and to demonstrate the truth thereof by other tokens, have made p, 60, 61, 62. mention of Orpheus, who out of Egypt fetched the Mylteries of Ceres, with the Fable of the Inferi, or those in Hell; the severall places whereof, Greek Poets & with the Ferrie-man Charon, are taken out of the Fens of Acherulia, and the that borrowed paffing over this Lake by boat to bury their dead there. Besides him, they make mention of Musans, Melampus, Dadalus, and Homer, who travelled into Egypt to get knowledge. To these they add, of Law-givers, Lycurgus the Spartan, and Solon the Athenian, who borrowed many of their Laws, and Plato the choicest of his notions. Pythagoras of Samus from them received his Sacred Speech, as it's called; his Principles of Geometry, Arithmeticks and The dollrine of the transmigration of Souls. Democritus of Abdora they take for granted, to have lived amongst them five years, in which time he proved an excellent Aftrologer. Oenopis of Chins, by his conversation with their Priests and Astrologers, amongst other things, learnt the particular oblique course of the Sun. And, to add no more; Eudowns the Mathematician is beholding to Egypt (where he studied) for those instruction ons which much profited Greece, and thereby procured him no small honour. 34. The invention of Philosophy and Laws, with all the rest of the Egyptian wildom, wherein Mofes was learned, is aftribed by divers unto Hermes, or Mercurius Trsfmegiftus; of whom yet either as to his person or time, nothing (m) Lacrting

Hermes or Mer- certainly can be affirmed. Cotta in Cicero, reckoneth up five, who have born curius Trifme- the name of Mercury. The first, begotten by the Heaven, or the Dar; the fecond, Son to Valens and Pheron, who liveth under the Earth, called also Triphonius; the third, begotten by Jupiter the third on Maia; the fourth, Son to the Nile, whom the Egyptians feared to name for reverence fake; the fifth and last, whom the Phanearans worship, who slew Argus, and flying thereupon, was fer over Egypt; to the Inhabitants whereof he gave Laws and Literature, and was by them named Then! But others attribute the finding out of Letters, not to the last, but the first Mercury truly called Thest. Thoyoth, Thot, and Tautus; it being utterly against all Antiquity, that any should out of Greece transport Learning into Egypt. Others account two of this name naturall Egyptians, of whom the later was Nephew or Grand-son, to the former. Some think Joseph, some Moses the true Mercury. What Translated eyer he was, his Works loft and " those yet extant, shew him to have been by Fishing & a Man very well skilled in true Divinity, and have gained him the credit to Apple us, be numbred amongst the Prophers, and Sibylls, for that he wrote many things of God, worthy of admiration; nay also, it's believed, of the coming of Christ, of the Trinity, and the last Judgement. Of the Learning of the Egyptians he is (n) faid to have written 36525 Books, if Pages be not ra- (n) Janiblither meant hereby: And (0) telleth us, that in his time were extant 36 of chis. his Books, viz. of the wildom of the Egyptisms fixteen, of Physick fix, of (o) Clemens the Orders of Priests ten, and four of Astrology. 28. The most ancient Government of £gips, though Monarchicall, yet left not Princes to the liberty of their own wills, which were restrained by the Laws and Customs, that had fuch authority over their private and domestick actions, as they could not exceed the bounds of Temperance and Moderation prescribed to them thereby. For no slaves were they suffered to entertain, which might prove instituments for debaucherie but were attended by the Sons of the most noble Priests, excellently educated. Their hours, both night and div. were defined and fer over to particular bufineffes. In the morning when first awake, Letters were brought in to them; that, having perfect intelligence, they might be better able to provide for the rublick fafety. When washed and royally apparelled they sacrificed; during which devotion the chief Priests prayed for them, and their subjects extolled their vertues, cursing at last their fins of ignorance, committed without their faults, and reflecting upon their Advisors and Councellors. Then did the Priests read out of the Records, famous Presidents of Council, or Action performed by their most Illustrious Predecessors, which were to them proposed as Copies to take out. Their time was prescribed, not onely of speaking to the people, and distributing Justice, but also of walking, washing, and other more secret imployments. Their diet was very moderate : usually Veal and Goose, with a moderate quantity of Wine, as if ordered by an exact Physician. No liberty was there of punishing any man in passion, or choler, either of acting any otherwise unjustly; every case being determined by the Laws. Yet neither did they hereby account themselves straitned of true liberty, but rather happy in that they indulged nor their appetites like other men. Hereby obtained they the love of their subjects who held them more dear, alive, or dead, than their own relations, and the Government continued for many Generations, as long as they submitted to those Rules and Orders.

Government

and its Inhabitants.

36. Sefectis, or Sefestris, divided Egypt into 36 Nomi; which word, whether Diodorus lib. of the Land, Greek, or Egyptian, fignified feveral Cities with certain Villages and Grounds 1. P.35. &c. thereto belonging. Of thefe, to belonged to the Province of Thebes, or to The-Strabo 1.17. bais , other 10 to Delta, and the rest to the Midland Countreys lying betwixt Aristor, Occo. them; all which had their feveral Nomarche, or Governours, who ruled them, and took care of the King's Tributes. The Lands were divided into three por- Diodorus. tions, whereof the first belonged to the Priests, who were in great Authority, and high esteem with the people. Of their Revenues they maintained Sacrifices throughout the Land, and their own families; being exempted from all burthens and impositions. They were chief Counsellors to the Kings, alwayes affilting with their advice, judging of things out of their deep skill in Aftrology, and suggesting usefull matter out of the Records; their function hereditarily descending upon their Children. The second portion of Land belonged to the Kings, by which they maintained their State, waged War; rewarded deserving persons, and which affording them sufficient Treafure, they burthened not their Subjects by any Taxes. The third portion belonged to the Souldiers, who were at all occasions ready for the War; it feeming reasonable that such as ventured their lives for the safety of their Countrey should be well rewarded; and good policy not to commit the safeguard thereof to any that had nothing dear, or precious in it : and hereby they were incouraged to be carefull in behoof of their posterity which succeeded them in their possessions. As for the rest of the people, they were divided into three Ranks, or Orders, viz. Shepheards, Husband-men (that farmed the grounds), and Artificers; who all artending their businesse, and not medling with State-affaires, neither having any right to Offices, thereby the more improved their Arts, and faved the Commonwealth harmlesse from such distempers, as are bred by the violence of an heady, and ignorant multitude.

The Courts of Justice.

37. Their Courts of Justice were furnished with the most upright, and able men that could be procured. Thirty Judges were chosen from Heliopolis (or On), Thebes, and Memphis, each of them 10. Which Affembly would not give place, either to that of the Arcopagites at Athens, or the Senate at Lacedamon. One of these thirty being chosen President, the Citie for which he served made choice of enother to sit in his place. All had maintenance from the King; but the President in larger proportion: who also wore about his neck, in a Chain of Gold, an image of Truth made of precious stones, as a badge of his Office. When they were fate and the Codes, wherein the Laws were contained, laid before them; then the Plaintiff exhibited his Bill of the Crime, the manner of it, and the estimate of the dammage. The Defendant having a Copy of the Bill answered particularly to it, either that he did not the thing, committed no Crime in doing it, or else had not deserved so great a punishment. The Plaintiff had liberty to reply, and the other to re-

BOOK T.

The Egyptian Kingdom, Contemporary with the Rabylonian Empire. CHAP. IV. iovn his answer; but after this, the 30 proceeded to judgement, and the Prefident fet the image of Truth towards one of the parties. No Lawyers were suffered to plead, as being thought rather to cast a mist upon the Cause, and darken the Evidence. 28. As for particular Laws; Perjury was punished with death as a great offence, both against God and man. If one man suffered another to be murdred in the high-way, or undergo any other violence, without giving his affistance, he was to die for it; and if he could give him no help, he was bound to discover the Robber, and follow the Law against him, under pain of enduring a certain number of strooks, and being deprived of all sultenance for three dayes. False accusers underwent the punishment due to that fault they accused of. Every one was bound to give in an account to the Magistrate how he lived under pain of death; which Law was made by Amasis. Wilfull murder, either of Bond, or Free, was death; onely this Law took no hold on Parents; but such were constrained to continue three dayes imbracing the Carkeifes. Against Children who killed their Parents most exquisite punishment was devised : for having first their flesh all cut and slashed, and then being laid upon Thorns, they were burnt quick. Women conderaned were not executed before their delivery. For other Laws not-Capital, it was enacted that Souldiers running from their Colours, or disobeying their Officers should not dye; but be branded with infamy, as a means to excite them to regain their former credit. If any held intelligence with the Enemy. his Tongue was to be cut of his head. They that imbafed the Coyn, used new weights, counterfeited Seals; Clarks that falfified and forged Records, were to loose their hands. Ravishment of a free woman was punished with the loffe of the Members. Adultery of the man, with 1000 ftroaks with a Rod; of the woman, with the loffe of her Nofe.

Parricular Laws.

39. Bocchoris enacted, that he who denied the borrowing of any money should be absolved upon his Oath; which was accounted as a sufficient purgation; a mans credit being so much therein concerned. Usury upon Bond was not to exceed the double of the principal; for which it was lawfull to distrain the goods, but in no wife to meddle with the person of the debtor that was owing to his Countrey, and not due to his Creditor; especially if a Souldier, the common fafety fuffering in him. Upon this account, they were wont to fcoff at the Lawgivers of Greece, who forbade feizing upon Plows. Weapons, and other things, but suffered those that should use them to be carried away, and imprisoned. For stealing, they had a peculiar Law: Every Thief entered his name with the Chief of that mystery; and when he had stoln any thing carried it freight to him, where, if any one could tell the time, and place, and prove it by certain tokens to be his, he was to pay the fourth part of the value, and receive it again; the Law-giver thinking this the best remedy against what otherwise could not be prevented.

The Lawgivers of E-

40. The first man that gave Laws to the Egyptians was Mnevin, perswading the people to receive them, because they were communicated to him by Mercury. The second was Sasyches, who amongst other Laws instituted those concerning religion; and, being a man of great learning, taught Geometry and Aftronomy. 3. Sefostris, who as he excelled all others in military glory, so he made Laws for the Discipline of War. 4. Bocchoris, a wise and prudent man, several of whose Apothegms were a long time preserved in the memories of men. 5. Amasis, who much amended the whole policy of Egypt, his rare wisdom having preferred him to that high Dignity, for which also being admired abroad as well as at home, he was reforted to by some out of Greece as an Oracle. Lastly, Darius, the fon of Hystaspes, King of Perfia.

Particular cu-

41. As for particular Customs. The Egyptians married as many wives as they pleased (posterity being with them a thing of greatest consequence) except the Priests, vvho vvere allowed but one apiece. Children born of bondvvomen, and free, vvere alike respected, and equally legitimate, the father by them being onely accounted the author of Generation, the mother affoarding but place and nourishment to the Child; in which respect also, contrary to the custom of other Nations, those Trees that bare fruit they accounted Males, and the barren ones Females. Their Children they educated exceeding hardly, the expence of bringing one up not exceeding twenty drachms. Each Child succeeded his Pather in his Trade, or course of life. All forts had fome kind of learning, especially such as conduced to their callings. Musick was neglected by them as rendring men effeminate. Once a moneth they used to purge, or use some Medicinal course for their health. With them no Phylician was found (as Herodorus Writeth) who professed the Art of curing the whole body; but one was for the head alone, another for the eyes, and fo for the other parts : all which yet, as Diodorus hath it, were nourished of the publick, and bound to observe Methods, and Medecines prescribed them in books; which if they altered or changed, upon the milearriage of the Patient they forfeited their lives together with their credit.

42. Such was the conflicution of the Egyptian Commonwealth as they themselves related, which from some gaineth little credit, this constitution of policy hardly agreeing with the manners of those Kings that built the Pyramids; fo that to them this excellent model of Government feemeth to be * Vide Judiciof the fame nature, and credit with the * Cyropadia of Xenophon. This is ob- un Jacob. fervable, that according to this conflitution the propriety in the Land was Cappellia fervable, that according to this continuoun the propriety in the Land was Hill, favore carried from that form wherein it was left by 70fepb, who purchased all the Exotica ad Land (except that of the Priests) for Pharob, and made the King absolute A.M. 1931. Their ridicu- Lord thereof. The fond and ridiculous superstition, which possessed this peo- * Possum ant ple above others taketh off much from its reputation. That fordid, and deges cape usfas viople above others taketh off much from its replication. That fortundants deges take and from nerate humour of confectating, with fuch blind earneftnesse, Bulls, Sheep, give morfu, Dogs, Cats, Ichneumons, Ibic., Gosseways, Eagles, Goats, Wolves, Croco- o Santias gendiles, * plants that grew in their Gardens, and other things, is to abominable tes quibus bee ar the first fight, as none of their pretences can give thereto the least shew of nafembur in reason, in the opinion of a man but ordinarily qualified with the light of boots Numina! tyr. 15.2.9.

Ah! what a thing is man devoid of Grace, Adoring Garlick with an humble face : Begging his food of that which he may car, Starving the while he worshippeth his meat. Who makes a Root his God, How low is he, If God and man be fever'd infinitely?

nature.

What wretchednesse can give him any room, Whole house is foul while he adores his Broom, None will believe this now, though mony be In us the same transplanted foolery,

Mr. Herbert in his ChurchMilitant.

CHAP. V.

The most Ancient state, and condition of Greece, during the Baby-Ionian Empire, with a Description of its Kingdoms and Commonwealth.

SECT. I. The State of Greece in General.

1. The most Ancient common name of the inhabitants of this Countrey is more agreeable to the Roman Appellations of Grait, Graci, and Grajugena, than that whereby they have rather chosen to call themselves, viz. Hellenes. For, till * fuch time as Hellen, the fon of Descalion reigned in * Vide Apol-Theffaly, which hapned some years after the Dencalionean Deluge, no such led lib. 1. c. 21, name as the later was known. From him his Subjects, who inhabited that Thursd.l., in part of The fluty, being betwire the two Rivers * Peneus and Afopm, were prefit, Arifut, part of The fluty, being betwire the two Rivers * Peneus and Afopm, were de Mettoris Lt. first called Hellenes, being formerly known by the name of Graci; and the * Strabo I.8. Countrey it felf Hollas, afterwards named Pthiotis. Homer ownerh none by p. 383.A. the name of Hellenes, but those, who with the Myrmidena, amongst others, 194140.

CHAP. V. The General State of Greece, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

followed Achilles to the Siege of Troy, neither any place calleth he Hellas, SECT. 1. but onely one in Theffalie, mentioned by Sirabo, who knoweth not whether it be a Town or Country, though he would gladly prove, that, by Hellas, Homer understood the whole Nation. Strabo is in no wife to be heard against Thucydides, and Apollodorus, whereof the former witnesseth, that Vide Strab. the Poet no where mentioneth the Barbarians, because all the Hellenes were lib. 8, 2, 270, A. not yet known by one common name, whom he might oppose against them; and the later expressely faith, that he onely called those in Thessa'se by the name of Hellenes. But though in Homer's time the whole Nation might begin to be called Hellenes, and the Country Hellas; ver clear it is from many witnesses, that these names came out of Thessalie, and were thence transferred to fignifie the whole Nation, and their Colonies placed elsewhere: infomuch, that prideing themselves, as it were, in it, they wholly rejected the other of Graci (which fignifying antient, as it feemeth, they had also out of Thessalie from the same people) who were afterwards called Hellenes: though the Poets despise it not, as Callimachus, Sophocles, and others; and the Latins still retain it, taking no notice of the other in their Language, whence these words Greece and Gracians are derived.

though in after ages it became to famous in it's flourishing Common-wealths. The most an- Seats and hibitations were often changed, according to the power and strength of fuch as were not fatisfied with their own fortune. No commerce was there unfeeled con- amongst them, being in continuall fear one of another: they lived onely and Acarmanians amongst others.

dition, preying from hand to mouth, not regarding money, or the improvement of their one upon ano grounds, knowing not how long they should enjoy anything in present posfessions; so that no considerable City was there, or any Fortifications of value. Assica indeed was fomething priviledged by it's barrennesse, and secured from such violent attempts as other parts were obnoxious to: whence fuch, as were disturbed elsewhere, flocked thither, and it grew so populous, that not able to maintain the great numbers, under which it grounds, it poured out Colonies into Asia the lesse, which made up the body of the Ionians. Before the Trojan War, nothing confiderable was done abroad by the Gracians; but at that time having got some power at Sea, they were rendered

Nothing con- capable of that expedition. For Minos King of Crete, (whom Thucydides A. M. 2773. fiderable done would make to have had the first and most antient Fleet of all others) had not long before obtained the dominion of the greatest part of the Greek Sea, and broad till the making himself Master of the Islands Cyclades, cast thence the Cariani, and Trojan War. placed Colonies of his own therein, over which he made his Sons Princes. And, to increase his Customs, he scoured the Seas of Pyrats; it being then the trade of those that lived upon the Coasts, to passe over and make prev

Cities begin to be built

Coasts,

maintained

tillage and plunder at

the Wars of

Troy.

3. The Sea being cleared, Cities began to be built upon the Coast both for trade and fecurity, whereas the more antient Towns food at a good distance from the Sea, both in the Continent and Illands. Then came it to paffe, that the weaker submitting themselves to the more powerfull for matter of upon the Sea-profit, or the other by strong hand procuring it from them, some new and confiderable Principalities were erected, which rendred them fit for the Expedicion against Troy; wherein Agameinnon præsided, as the most powerfull Prince then reigning, especially at Sea. Yet was there still such scarcity of money and of provisions, that onely so many Porces did they carry over, as they hoped the War might maintain, and used those not all together, and at The Gracians the fame time, but employed them in tilling the Cherronefus, and in depresdations; whereby being thus dispersed, the Trojans were the longer able themselves by to resist them; which they could not have done, had they been sufficiently A. M. 1851. furnished with necessaries, and incontinently with all their strength, fallen upon the City. Ten years being confumed in this War, great alterations were thereby produced in Greece. For through their absence so long abroad. seditions and tumults arose at home; whence many at their return, or after-one of another; which to the last could not be left by some, as the Etolians

2. Greece was not antiently inhabited in any fetled or established way, Thucyd.

Whence the Greeks were called Helle-

SECT. 1. wards, were forced to feek out new habitations. A long time it was, ere the Country returned to quietnesse and settlement; but at length, it was Great chan-inabled to fend out Colonies as the Athenians into Ionia and the Islands of gescaused at the Greek Sea, the Peloponnesians, and some other Cities, into Italy and home by their Sicily. The Nation growing now stronger and wealthier daily, Tyrannies or petty Kingdoms were erected in every place, there being now a poffibility of railing revenues; and as any exceeded others in power or cuming, they invaded the Governments of others, which they made arbitrary; whereas before Kingdoms were hæreditary with a constant limited power, that they feldom exceeded.

nent at Sea.

4. The Corinthians first began to be famous at Sea, being the first that used A. M. 3353. ans first emi- that fort of Gallies carned Triremes, and fought a battel with the Corcyreans, p. c. 102. 220 years before the beginning of the Peloponnessan War. For being seared Manallis. 50. in the Isthmus, they enjoyed thereby a constant Mart, which filled them with wealth, especially after the Sea was cleared of Pyrats, and Traffick increased. Long after, the lonians got the start of the rest in navall glory, making good progresse therein, and had gone still further, but that Cyrus having broken in A. M 3462. The Ionians. pieces the power of Crass, and subdued all as far as the River Halys, for-others.

ced them also, after some strugling, to submit themselves unto the yoak : Af. A. 3473. ter them, Polycrates the Tyrant of Samus, the Massilians and Corcyrains obtained the greatest power at Sea; the Agyptians and Athenians, with the rest, being inconsiderable therein, till these two States falling out, Themistocles procured the Athenians to apply themselves more to Sea matters, when they now also expected the coming of the Persian King. Great commodity all these obtained by the power of their Navies, either in getting money, or new possessions; for they subdued the Islands, such especially labouring herein, whose native Soils afforded least advantage. By Land no War arose that No War by gave any sufficient advantage of inlarging their dominions surther, than to the disturbance of their next Neighbours; they stirred not abroad nor gave their minds to any new Conquests. Those that were Subjects, were patient under the yoak, and Equalls in power made no considerable quarrells, 'till all Greece came to be divided in the old War, betwire the Inhabitants of Land.

while contenting themselves with the private power they had over particular places, stirred not) they got ground by little and little of the Eastern Empire. Almost during this whole Period had they * no written Laws, Homer being

* No written witnesse, who never useth the word * Law throughout his writings. They * Joseph. cenwere not generally governed but by indefinite Sentences and Pracepts of their tra Apion, 1,2.

Laws.

Kings, remaining a long time without any written Pracepts, and referring all to the event, according to which Judgment influed. Such was the most antient condition of Greece in generall. Now a particular account is to be given of the severall Kingdoms and States, that were most considerable and contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Chalcis and Ererria. Then to hinder them from growing great, the affairs of the Persians were advanced; till having cast out their Tyrants, (who all this

SECT. II.

The Sicyonian Kingdom.

Kingdom and the confines of Achaia. Here ¿Eglalam began a Kingdom about 270 August de cimost ancient, and the confines of Achaia. and the contines of Achaia. Here Deginiem begining of Inachus, 1313 Paulan. in Egialeus the before the first Olympiad, the year of the World 1915, according to the Vul- Corinthiacis. gar way of computation, without taking in the too years formerly mention- p. 49. Edit. ed in the History of the Judges, and the 879th year of Noah) whilft Nimu Grac. Francreigned in Affria. From him the City was first called Ægialia, and part furti. 1583.

1. The affairs of the Sicyonian have the (a) first place allotted to them in (a) Euleb, in! Antiquity, who inhabited a City lituated upon the Bay of Corinth, Chronic,

G HAP. V. The Sicyonian Kingdom, Contemporary with the Babylonian Emvire.

Europs. Telchines. Apis.

Thelxion,

Agyens. Thurimachus. Leucippus. Peratus.

Plemnaus. Orthopolis.

Coronus. Corax. Epopeus.

Lamedon.

Sicyon, from

Polybus. Adrastus. left also his Grand-Son Adrastus (by his Daughter, maried to Talaus King

Janiscus. Phastus.

over into Crete, where he built a City of his own name. Zenxippus.

Rippolytus. Polyphides. four years succeeded Polyphides, and continued 31, then Polassus 20, and lops named Peloponnesia. He left his Kingdom to Europs his Son, after he had reigned 52 years, and Europs having reigned 45, was succeeded by Telchines. He governed 20, and was followed by Apis, who was fo great, that all within the Ishmus was from him called Apios. When he had continued 25 years, his Son Thelxion succeeded him, during whose reign, all things were so prosperous and happie, that being dead, they worshiped him for a god by facrifices, and folemnizing games, which (as they fay) were first invented for his fake. Him followed Egyrus, after he had reigned sa years. Ægyrm or Ægydrm, reigned 33, Thurimachus 45, Leucippus 53, who had onely a Daughrer named Calchinia, on which Neptune (or rather Mejapin) begat Peratus, who was Heir to his Grand-father, and governed 47 years. After Perasus followed Plemnaus, whose children all died as soon as they were born, till Ceres came in the likenesse of a Woman, and brought up Orthopolis, who fucceeded his Father, having reigned 48 years. 2. Orthopolis the twelfth King of . Evialea, had a Daughter named Chry-forehe, on which Apollo is supposed to have begot Coronno his successor. Coronus left two Sons Corax and Lamedon. Corax after he had reigned 20 years, died without iffue, and Epopenia Theffatian feized on his Kingdom. Epopens Role Antiopes the Daughter of Nyltons King of Thebes, for which in jury he was profecuted with War by the Thebans. A battell being fought, he had the better, but both the Kings were mortally wounded. Nyttens presently died after he was carried home, but lest the tuition of Labdacus the Son of Polydorns and Nephew to Cadmus, (whose Guardian he had been) to his Brother Lyous, requesting of him to lead down another Army into Agialea, to revenge him upon Epopeus, & to punish Antiope, if he could take her: but in the mean time Epopens died also of his wounds, being neglected, and Lamedon the Son of Coronus obtained his Fathers Kingdom, gave up A.M. 2616. Antiope to Lycus, as . Pausanias writeth, though Apollodorus saith, that Lycus took Egialea and flew Epopens, Antiope in the way to Thebes fell in travell, and brought forth Amphion and Zethus, who being found and nourished by an Herdsman, the former gave himself to Musick, and the later to nourishing of Cattell; and both afterwards revenged their Mother upon Lycus and his Wife Dires, from whose hard usage she had escaped and came 3. Lamedon maried Pheno the Daughter of Clytins an Athenian, and undertaking War against Archander and Architeles the Achaans, fent for Siegen the Son of Metion and Nephew of Erechthens, out of Attica to affifthim, to whom giving his Daughter Zouxippe in mariage, he left him also his Successor. From Sieyon the City was named Sieyon, and the Country ty was named Sicyonia. He had a Danghter named Chthonophyle, on which Mercury begat Polybus; after whose birth she was maried to Phlias the Son of Dionyfus, and to him bore Androdamas. Polybus succeeding his Grand-father, > of Argos) his Heyr, who being expelled his own City, had fled to him. But he making his peace at home returned, and after his departure Janifens or Inachus the Nephew of that Clysis whose Daughter maried with Lamedon. came out of Attica and obtained the Kingdom. After Tanifeus had reigned 42 years, he gave way by death to Phalimi, one vulgarly accounted the Son of Harculas, who after eight years, at the direction of an Oracle, went

Pelafgus,

> 4. After his departure Zenzippus the Son of Apollo by the Nymph Syllis, was King of Sicyon; but reigned not long, Hippolytus Nephew to Phastus by his Son Rhopalus, obtained his Grand-Fathers feat. Against him Agamemnon King of Mycona made War, till he forced him to submit. After after this * Eufebins Would have Zenxippus to have begun his reign, which * Ex Caftore The Priests of after 32 years ended with the Kingdom. It having now continued the space Rhodio Chrone-Apollo Carinus, of 962 years, the Priests of Apollo Carnins obtained the Soveraignry, and grapho.

80

of the Peninfula it felf according to some; which afterwards was from Pe- SECT. 2.

SECT.3. Lacestades. Phalces feizeth upon S

held it 33. But Paufanias writerh, that when Laceft ades, the fon of Hippotrius reigned at Sieven, Phalces the fon of Temenus (who had been King of Argos) feized upon it with the Dores in the night time; but, for that both A.M.2908. of them were descended of Hercules, dealt not roughly with him, but admitted him to partnership in the Kingdom. So, from thenceforth the Sicyonians became Dores, and were reckoned amongst the Argives. This fell out 87 years after the destruction of Troy, 120 before the first Olympiad, A. M.

SECT. III.

The Kingdom of Argos.

The Kingdom 1. The (a) second place in Antiquity belongeth to this Kingdom, for (a) Euseb. in the fecond place, if not the arft.

I tachus.

Phoroneus.

which (b) some have not been wanting to challenge the first, affirming chronics, that many years after the establishment of this, Agialem began that of the (b) Vide Lu-S. c.jonians; and certainly though Argos miffed something of Sicyon in years; dov. Vivem in yet in fame, dignity, power, and riches it exceeded it. Inachus first here Civitat. Dei began a Kingdom, about 244 years after the beginning of the Sicyonian, the lib,18, cap.3. 142 of the life of Abraham, 676 before the destruction of Troy, and A.M. 149. 1082 before the beginning of the Olympiads. From the Antiquity of Inachus came that proverb Inacho antiquior, concerning which Erasmu is to be consulted in his Adages. On his sister Melissa he begat Phoroneus and a daughter named To, which must not be confounded with the daughter of Talm of a later date, as the is wont to be by Mythologists. After fifty years reign, he left his Kingdom to his fon Phoronem, who by (b) fome was (b) Paulan, in thought the first man, as the son of a River in that place, called Inachus, and Argolicu p. 58. consequently the father (c) of Mortals, and Author of Mankind. He is faid (c) Clement to have (d) built the first Altar unto Jamo. Against him and the Parrhasians, Stromat, I.t. the Telebines; and Caryate made War, but being overcome betook them- (d) Noning. felves to the mercy of Wind and Sea, and at length arrived in Crese, as fome, or Rhodes, as others fay. He obtained the Dominion of the whole Peninfula fon Apis.

2. Apia turning Tyrant, commanded the Peninfula to be called after him- A.Mazoo. felf, Apies, and being circumvented by the wiles of Thelxion, and Telchin. died without iffue after he had reigned 34 years. Apollodorus faith, he was killed for his Tyranny in Greece, though some make him to have gone into Egypt, and there dying to have been taken for a God, and called Serapis; but there being two Kings of this name befides him, viz. one of Sieron, and another of Egypt, most Mythologists confound them, and attribute what was done by all unto one; which thing is usual with the Greeks. Apis dying after he had reigned 34 years, left for his Successor Argus his fifters fon by The piter, the King of Crete, who lived about this time. In that Island first reigned Cres, who gave name to it, and was one of those Cureses that were faid to have hid Jupiter from his father Sauren, who would have devoured his youngest fon after the other, and nourished him; as also to have built the Argus.

Citie Cnosos, and the Temple of Cybele. With this man, many others are confounded, according to the cultom of Poets, who have observed no diftinction in afcribing to one what many did, and fatheting things of their own in-Several partivention upon the common name of Tapiter. cular men 3. The first man known to have had this name was Ham, the youngest son have had the of Noah, who was worshipped for a God under the title of Tupiter Hamname Jupiter. mon. His Nephew Nimrod, the first King of Babylow, and Affria, was fir-and of the Nymph Landier (e) begot a fon called Apis, and a daughter named (e) Orofine 1, 1, and of the Nymph Lapacet (e) pogot a ton cancer and, on her begat, Argus, cap. Niobe, which Imputer loved the first of all women, and on her begat, Argus, cap. And the control of the Kingdom to his Apollodoma named Belns, and often called Jupiter Belns. In Crese lived (f) one very SECT. 2. ancient that hath gone under this name; although as many places have challenged him for their Native, as (g) contended for the birth of Home. (f) Eufeb. Some think that he who is reported to have been preferved, and nourished by (g) Vide Pauthe Curetes, or the Idai Dattyli, was more ancient than Niobe; and there Janin Messefore mike a second Jupiter to have lived in Crete about 150 years after; who min p.143.7. because he was the first of this name known to have been extravagant towards women, thence arose that saying that Niebe was the first woman beloved by Jupiter. Lolus the fon of Hellen, and Nephew of Deucation, who lived about Theffaly, and gave name to the Loles, became so famous with Posterity, that they gave him the name of (b) Jupiter and Nevinne. Picus, (b) Idemibid. King of the Aborigines in Italy, father to Fannes, and supposed to be begot- p.154.31. ten by Salarn, after he had fled into Lailum from his son Inpiter, is also called Jupiter by (1) one, and Aneas Jupiter Indiges by the Romans. These are (1) Apad Suifuch particular men as are known to have had this name, which hath been fo dam. far advanced as to fignifie the best, and chiefest Being, whil'st such as at first

The Egyptian Kingdom, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Whence fo many.

been morcals.

CHAP. V.

buteth immoderate things to Antiquity, elevated into a Deity. Here is to be considered what Annius his Xenophon wrote in his Treatise of Equivocals, as he calleth them . The most ancient King of any great, and Illust ious family was wont to be called Saturn, the eldelt fon Jupiter, and the most valiant amongh the Nephews, or Grand-fons, Gercules. Tupiter the ancient King of Grete, or some other, by his great exploits, and well-deferving of that Age, might gain this credit to his name; or the word Zens, in the Greek tongue lignifying what Ham doth import in the other language, the . Original of this name my better agree with the name, place, and condition of the fon of Nosh. As for Jupiter the younger, who is supposed to have begotten Hercules on Alemena, the wife of Amphyrio, appeareth a meer fiction; to valunt a person as that Child proved, inhancing the repute of his generation; or if this Herenles was not the son of Amphyrion, but begotten by some other man, then was the name of Jupiter given to his father to take away the Odium of Buffardie; it being an ordinary thing for fuch as were bate-begorten to be fathered upon Japiter, Mars, or Apollo.

5. From Argue the Cities and (k) Argos, before called Phoronia.

com from Phoronens, who first gathered the people into it, being before (c) Helpebius.

were reverenced for their vertue or power, at length were forgotten to have der thereof, or, living in remote times, was by that Generation, which attri-

4. Each Nation of old had its Native Tapiter, who was e her the Foun-

From Areus its name,

Criafus.

that dispersed; and made them Laws for Government. From him also his Subjects took the name of Argi and Argivi, and the whole * Peninfula, * Lage Strabon, named Apia, before; he would have called after himself Argos. In (1) his libs. 1.361. time Greece began to be full of Corn, which being ascribed to his care and (1) August, de industry, he wis honoured after his death wish a Temple and Sacrifice, which civil, Dei 1, 8, worship was before given to one Homogyrus, killed by a Thunder-bolt, for c.6. that he had first yoaked Oxen in the Plow. His brother (m) was Pelagus, (m) Apollado-(faid also to have been begotten by Inpiter on Niobe) the father of Lycaon, (m) Apolladoand who gave name to the Polafei, a people that first inhabited Arcadia, (hence called Pelafgis & Pelafgia) afterwards spread (a) themselves throughout Greece, and fent Colories into Lanum. Argus, on his wife Enadne, the Halicarnal, daughter of Serymon begat Jafus, Peiranthus, Epidanrus, and Criafus. Jafus libes, begat Agenor, the father of that Argus whom the Poets make all eyes, though some report him the son of Arestor. Criasus succeeded his father after he hid reigned leventy years, and Governed the Argives 54. Two of his brothers are added by Panfanias, viz. Pirafus the same with Peiranthus and Phorbas. Peiranthus first built a Temple to June at Argos, wherein he placed her imige mide of a wild Pear-Tree, and made his daughter (e) Angola, 58.

(e) Callibya called also Calliboe, and Io) Priest thereof; which Supersting.

tion being continued for miny Ages, all instruments publick and private Eufeb, prep. 1, 3, were dated from such or such a year of her Successors, as the cu- Evangel, lib.3.

SECT-3. Stome hath been from those of the Kings, or Magistrates in other \sim

6. That this Poirantbus reigned, appeareth no where but in Paufanias, who feemeth to make him the immediate Succeffor of Argus, by the name of Pirasus. But Phorbas succeeded Criasus, and reigned 25 years; after him Triopas 46. whose fon Xanthus being Prince of some of the Pelafgi, who went out from Argos, feized first upon part of Lycia, and there seated him- Diodorus Si-

Ta'us.

Pirafus.

Phorbas,

Triopas.

felf : afterwards he passed over into the Island Ifa, then void of Inhabitants, sulus 116.5. which dividing amongst his followers he named Pelasgia, in processe of pag 239, in time called Leibos. Paufanias maketh Jafus and Agenor the fons of Trio- margine notapas, and Jajusto have reigned at Argos, though by Engelius he be not rec- ta.A. koned amongst the Kings. His daughter was the famous Io, which being got with Child by Juper, and thereupon, through the displeasure of June turned out of her wits, or into a Cow, as the Poets fing, passed over the straits of Thrace, to which, upon this occasion of her Metamorpholis, was given the name of Bosphorus. Then went she down into Egyps, where, restored to humane shape, she brought forth her for Epaphas, the builder of Memphis, and was afterwards taken for a goddeffe, and called Ifis. Herodom's leading us out of the Labrynth of fables , relateth that the Phanicians after their tium. removal from the Red-fea (where he thinketh them once to have infrabited) to the Mediterranean, applied themselves unto falling, and Traffick fromd Affyria and Egypt unto other places. On a time coming to Affer (which then excelled all Greek Cities) on the fifth or fixth day affer they had exposed their merchandise to sale, many women came to their thips to buy what liked them , and amongst the rest this to, the Kings daughter. The Phoenicians enceutraging one another laid hands on those they could catch, and taking her with fome others, carried them into Egypt. This by Herodotas is made one of the first grounds of envy, betwirt the Affancks & Greeks though he confoundeth her with the daughter of Indehus, (which is usual) and the Greeks, as Paufanias hinteth, gave another account of her depor-7. As Panfanitis teckoneth Jajus amongs the Kings of Argos (which af-

Crotopus.

tet him was, without doubt, called Jalos (p) and the Citizens Jalis; to he nameth Crotopia, his brother Against Son, for his Successor, whom Enjabils? will have to have succeeded his Grand-Father Triopas. His daughter Pfamarhe being with Child by Apollo, after her delivery exposed the Infant, which the named Linus. It chariced to be devoured by wilde beafts; whereat the was fo troubled, that her father perceiving it, got out the matter, and put her to death, for which Apollo brought a plague upon the Argines, who, to pacific him, made great and folernn lamentation for the Child, which is not to be confounded with the Poet Lines, as tome to order, the matter. Crotopus having reigned 21 years was followed by Sthenelas his fon, who held the Kingdom for 11. and then left it to his fon Galenor. In his time, Danaus, the brother of Egyptus, King of that Country, having so daughters refuted to marry them to his brother's 50 fons, because he was bidden by an Oracle Apollodoms to beware of a fon in Law, and therefore taking them away with him, failed lib.2. to Rhodes, wherein he built a Temple to Minerva Lindia; and thence to Diodorus & s. Argos, where he moved a contest with Galenor for the Kingdom, as descend p. 227. D.

Sthenelas. Galenor.

Danaus.

of the beafts a leading case, decreed the Kingdom to the Egyptian. 8. Danans having obtained the Kingdom, his brother Egyptus feared left by the marriage of his daughters he might get too great alliance and strength, and therefore fent down his 30 fonts to Argol with an Army, and command, either to marry them, or destroy him. They perswaded their Uncle by fair means to receive them as fons in Law; but he commanded his daughters that each of them should the first night kill her Bridegroom, and gave them Poniards for that purpose. They all obeyed him, except Hypem- SECT. 2. nelina, (and some add Bebrice); which, dismissing Lynceus, with advice to thist for himself, was by her Father accused, and brought to Judgment; but acquitted by the Argives, and afterwards had leave from him, to receive again Lynceus, now reconciled to him. As for the rest of the Sisters, they were bestowed upon such, as in tryall of Masteries got the better; and became so infamous, that it was believed they were condemned in Hell, to fill with water a Barrell, which having an hole in it, let out as much as it re-

oler eda/

9. From Danaus those who formerly had the name of Pelasgiota were called Danai. He built the Castle, and his Daughters are faid to have supplied the City with water, by digging of Wells; although (q) Strabo (q) Vid: lib 3. proveth, that by reason of it's situation it could never want the commodity P. 376, 371. of that Element. Having reigned (r) 50 years, he died, and was succeeded by Lyncens, who governed 41, and on Hypermnestra begat Abas his Succes- (r) Euseb. for. Abas ruled 23 years, and begat on his wife Ocalea, the Daughter of Man- Apollod. tineus, Acrifius and Praise Twins. They are faid to hive flougled in the womb, and did it to purpose afterwards for the Kingdom: Prizers fift ob- Paulan, in Artained and held it feventeen years, but then was driven from Argos by Acri- golicis, flut, and forced to flye into Lybin, to lobas his Father-in-Law, King of that Country. From him he returned with armed hand, feifed upon Tyrinthe, and afterwards joyned battell with his Brother; wherein they two are reported first of all others, to have used Targets. The battell ending with aquall fucdeffe, they came to an accommodation, and divided the Kingdom, Mori-

Acrilius and

CHAP. V.

Bus was to they at Arges , and Prusus to enjoy Heraus, Midan, Tirrithe, and the maritime pares. Praise had by his wife Schenoban, a Son named Megapenthes, and three Daughter, which being taken with the fury of Bacchus. Melampus the Pose is fad to have cured. Acrifius on Eurydice be-Danae.

Mother ro Perfeus.

gat a Daughter named Daniel and consulting the Oracle about iffue-Male. was answered that he should have no Son, but a Nephew by his Daughter, that should procure his death. Mercupon, he shut up Danae with her Nurse in the ground; but Jupiter tuthing himfelf into a golden thower, thereby got to het, and begat Parfens. Both Morter and Son were put into an Ark, and call into the Sea, Which drave them alhore on the Illand Scriphus, where Diltys Brother to Polydettes the King, educated the Boy. Being grown up , he made an Expedition into Africk, where he flew the Gorgon Medafa, being fent, as the Fable goeth, by Polydetten, who tought to be revenged on him, for hindering him from the Marriage of his Mother; but Panfaniar not at all regarding the Pable, writerh, that this Modes a was the Daughter of Phorebis, and succeeded him in his Kingdom which lay upon the Lake Tritonis; that the was wont to go out to hunt and fight with the Africans, over which the reigned; but Perfour coming against het with choise Forces out of Peloponnefles (fothat this Voyage must have been after his return thicker, and his Grand-Pather's death). The was entrapped by him and flain in the night. He admiring her beauty, cut off her head, and carled it into Greece for a (bedacle.

16. Perfent, afeer this, martled Andromeda, (Daughter to Cophent, by Caffiopeia, who reigned at Joppe a maritime Town of I Banicia) having full faved her from being devouted by a Whate. This by one is thus interpreted; That Phanix by her Father's confent, took her away by force, and carving her Bibliothera. in a Ship called the Whale, Perfeut failing that way; and heating her famentations, boarded the Ship, and delivering her out of his hands, married her. After this, he returned to Sifthin, where he revenged upon Polydeller, the violence offered to his Mother; and then, withher and his wife, went to Araos to fee his Grand Father, who being afraid because of the Oracle, de- Apollod lib 2.

parted into Pelafeia (or Theffa'ie, to called 3 from the Pelafei, who were now removed thirder out of Peloponnesus, being a vagabond people, and flaying in no place) : where when Toutamias, King of the Lariffaans, made

Games in honour of his deceafed Father ; thirtier also came Perfear , amongst took the Wolf to fignifie Danaus, because a stranger and, making this contest & Paulan, in ed of Epaphus, the fon of to. Both pleading hard before the people, the A.M. 253. cause, as doubtfull, was put off till the day following; at what time there came a Wolf and killed an Ox, which was feeding by the Walls. The people Apollod, ibid.

SECT. 3. other lufty and active young Men, and flew his Grand-Pather at unawares in the Game, by a stronk of a quoit upon his foot, after he had reigned thir-

Etiones.

94

11. Some (/) think that rather to Acrifius then to Amphy Rion the Son (1) Lore Stra-The Generall of Deucation (who 182 years before began his reign at Athens) the found bon the sometimes of Deucation (who 182 years before began his reign at Athens) the found bon the sometimes of the sound began his reign at Athens) the found began his reign at Athens at the found began his reign at the found began his reign at Athens at the found began his reign at the found began hi ing of the famous Concill of the Amphyltiones is to be ascribed. It p. 419, 410. seemeth probable, that AmphyEtion first of all assembled it in Thessalse, near the Streights of Thermopyla, (Pausanias Writeth to have been the common opinion) and that Acrifius thence transferred it to Delphos in Phocis, where it for the most part assembled; this place being the middle of Greece, and, (;) Lege Pauas the Greeks thought, of the World it felf, where was also the famed Ora- fan. in Phocle of Apollo Pythius. For, These Cities which at first had onely right to cicis. fend their Deputies to the Coucill, were fuch as either were feated in Theffalse, or near unto it. This was the chief Tribunall of all Greece, for deciding of publick and most weighty causes, betwixt the severall Cities, and Common-wealths. The authority thereof was very great; infomuch as it's Decrees have fometimes been executed by the Sword, with the great motions of feverall States, some or other scarce ever being wanting to undertake the work. It used to meet twice a year, (and oftener if necessity required) in the beginning of Spring, and Autumne; the Cities fending their Deputies, three, two, or one, according to their bignesse. These were called Pyla. gara, because they met at Pyla, a place near to the Temple, of which they also had the overlight, and præsided over the Games made in honour of Apollo Pythins every other year. This Court continued for many Ages without change, untill the time of Philip King of Maceden, and Father of Alexander the Great, who overthrowing the Phocians, in the Sacred War; for their Sacriledge outed them and the Lacedamonians their affiliants, of > Kingdom. Long after, Augustus Ce far innovated again, by removing the Magnessans, Maleans, and others, from their interest herein, and making Nicopolis (a City built by him in memory of his Victory at Actium) free of that So lety, as Pausanias telleth us, who hath also recorded, that in his time, (which tell in with the reign of Antoninus Pius the Roman Emperour) this Councill was still maintained and kept up, consisting of thirty persons... 12. Perfeus, after that dysafter, which hapned rohis Grand-Father, was A.M. 2693.

their Priviledges of voting therein, and transferred the right to his own ashamed to return to Argos, his Inheritance, and therefore went to Tirynthe , and changed Kingdoms with his Cousin Megapanthes. He built My- " winn. cena (fo called from his Sword's * Seabberd, that fell from him in this place, which thing he took as a fign, that here he should build a City) and making it his feat, therein reigned 58 years. About this time this Kingdom of Argos.

that had now continued about 544 years, came to be divided into three parts.

For Anaxager as the Son of Megapenthes contenting himself with a third of divided.

Hercules.

his half, gave the other two to Molampus the Son of Amytham, and his Brother Bias ; either for that he (who is faid to have found out the way (") Apollod. of purging) had cured the Daughters of Praises (Aunes to Amexagoras) lib. 2. of their madnesse, as was told before, or (x) invented a Remedy for that, (x) Paulan, distemper, which had seized epidemically upon the women of those parts. Diodor. 1.4. But Perfess begat of Andromeda five Sons : Perfes, Alcaus, Schenelus, Electryon, and Meftor. Hereof Perfes the first, as the Greeks believed, gave Originall to the Persians, Alcans was Father to Amphysrion , Schene, les succeeded his Father in the Kingdom of Mycena; and Elettryon began Alemena, wife to Amphyerion. Schenelus on a Daughter of Pelops begat Euryst heus his Successor, seven moneths after whose birth Hercules the Son Amphyerion and Alemena was born. Aphales their other Son coming inco the World after Hercules (for they were Twins), Amphyerion was accounted the Pathet of him, and Jupiter of Hercules, whereupon, June is faid to A. M. 2724 have eyer hated him, and by the help of Ilythia, (Lucina or the Moon) to have hindred his birth, and kept his Mother in travell for seven dayes. The Boy was first named Alcam after his Grand-Father; but afterwards, for his

CHAP. V. The Kingdom of Argos, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. great archievements called Hercules, and afcribed to no less a Father than SECT. 3. Jupiter, who made the night wherein he begat him, as long as three, that his ftrength might be the greater. That this person was eminent in his time, is casse to be granted; but incredible things contained in twelve labours, being reported to be done by him, are either meant of the paffing of the Sun through the twelve Signs of the Zodiack; or what things were performed by feveral others that lived elsewhere, have been by his Country-men attributed to him, whose Epithere of Hercules (fightfying fame and glory spread abroad in the air) came also to be given to them, if the word be of no other

13. Cicero reckoneth up fix who had the name of Hercules. The first How many of and most antient, he maketh begotten by the antientest Jupiter on Lipitus, and to have striven with Apollo about the Tripos. The second was an Agpp. stan, Son to Nile, who despised the Phrygian Letters. The third a Native of Crees, and one of the Idai Daityli, who first found out the making of Iron, by taking notice of the melting of that Metall in the Hill Ida when it burned, and being five in number, had the name of Dallyli from the fingers, in number so many on each hand. The fourth was son to Asteria the Sifter of Latena, and Father to Carthage, being worshipped by the Tyrians. Belas in India is reckoned for the fifth, and then in the fixth place cometh this Son of Alemena. The Agypuan Hercules is faid to have aided the gods in their War against the Gyants, which belong the off-spring of the Earth, Disdorus acknowlegeth that this cannot agree with the time of the Gracian Hercules, who lived but one Age before the Trojan War; but rather happened at the original of Mankind.

14. Hercules the Tyrian is believed to have been the Captain of that Expedition which the Phanicians made into Spain and Gades, which though the Gracians attribute to theirs, yet this convinceth their affertion of falshood, that in the Island Gades, was a most antient Temple, wherein Hercules was worthipped, not after the Gracian manner, but according to the Rites of Phomicia. This was he, who erected his pillars at the bound or unmost limit of the World, and that overran Spain, Italy, and Gaul. Ganchoniathon a Phanician Ruthor of great antiquity, wrote, that he was the Son of Demaguns, and that his proper name was Melcharthus (which fignified the * confule Bo-King of the City) by the Greeks called Melicertes and Palamon. He was charticanaan also called Diedas by Enfebrus (for which Defanans is thought to be corrupt- lib. 1. cap. 14. ly written in Hierom's translation) which Phoenician name he feemeth to have had, because he was invocated by lovers; their happy successe being supposed to depend on him. Some think this Tyrian Hercules was the same with the Agyptian or Libyan , by Paulanias named Maceris, who undertook a journey to Delphor, and whose Son Sardus leading a Colonie into the Island Commia, changed it's same into Sardinia. Tacins * writerh, that * Annal. lib. 2. the Libyans would have the most antient Hercules a native of their Country, and that fuch as came near him in valour and renown, were named after him. Dodorus Siculus, and Enfebius mention three of this name, (though the former attributeth all their actions to the youngest; or the Son of Alemena) Servine four, and Varre 44. And here must be remembred what was before noted; that it was the custom of old, to call the most artient Kings by the name of Sainth, their Sons by that of Jupiter, and their most valiant and active Nephews by this of Hereules.

15. This Heres being so much written and talked of, it concerneth beginners to have some account of his actions, and the rather; because they include the labours of many. Amphyrrion his Father, as it feemeth, was Apollodorus co-

Prince of Tirjuthos, but thence was forced to flye to Thebes, having at un-Dieder. of Herchies the awars killed Elettryon his Uncle and Pather-in-Law, where Herchies being fou of Alemena, educated, flew Linns his Musick-Master with an Harpe as he taught him. His Father feeing his disposition, and feating some such like accident might fall out again, sent him amongst the Herdimen, where not yet eighteen years old, he slew a Lyon. For his extraordinary strength and courage, he was taken notice of by Thefpis (or Thefpiss) Prince of the Thefpienfes, who made him lye with his fifty daughters, of which begetting fo many fons, these afterwards passed over into the Island Sardinia with the name of Thesplades. A little after this he delivered Thebes from the Tyranny of Erginus, King of the Minyans, who exacted an annual Tribute of 100 Oxen. He destroyed Orchomenus with his Palace therein, and for this was rewarded with Megara, daughter to Creen, Prince of Thebes. When he was about 20 years old, he failed with Tafon amongst others to Colchos, to fetch thence the Golden Fleece so much celebrated by Poets, and variously interpreted by Expositors of Mythology. 16. This Jason was the son of Eson, and the sourth in descent from

The Argo-

The Kingdom of Argos, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Lolm, being born at Iolem, which place Pelias, King thereof, unjuffly detained from his father. He confidering with himself what glary Person, and others of late had gotten, fought how he might accomplish some notable Enterprize for the eternizing of his name, and having at length resolved on this design, published his intentions throughout Greece, by a Crier. The young and active spirits of that time were much taken therewith, and 52 of the flowr of Greece gave their names to the expedition, of whom the most eminent, besides Hercules, were Orpheus, (Scholar to Linus) Oileus, Telamon, and Peleus, the fons of . Eacus, Pollux, and Caftor, fons to Tyndareus, King of Sparta, Meleager, and Argus, who, built the ship, named after him Argo, wherein they failed, and thence were afterwards cilled Argonauta. Having all things in readinesse (Pelias supplying Fason with all necessaries, to be rid or him, fearing he should call him to account for the Kingdom) they fet fail from Ioleus, and came to Lemnus, an Island in the Egean Sea, whence they failed to the Countrey of the Doliones, by whose King Cyzicus they Apollonius were honourably received; but thence lanching out by night, were driven Rhodius I. 1. back by Tempelt, and being taken by him for the Pelafgi, with whom he' Lege Simfowas at feud, he fell upon them, and loft his life in the fight, with many of his num in chrofollowers; but, his error once understood, was magnificently buried by them. nico ad A.M. From Cyzicus they came into Mysia, where Hercules for want of skill in 2743. rowing brake his Oar, and going into the Woods to provide another, whil'st his companions rested themselves on the shoar, it happened that Hylas his Boy drinking at a Fountain, was intercepted by the Nymphs, as the flory goeth. Crying out, Polyphemus, the fon of Elatus, who had married Laonome, the fifter of Hercules, ran out to rescue him, and meeting with Hercules, went up and down feeking him in great perplexity; fo that they were left behind by their companions, whom Hercules followed on foot to Col- Theoritus in 17. Jason with the rest sailed to Colchos, and by the treachery of Medent daughter to Ætes the King, that fell in love with him, became mafter of the Golden Fleece, and returned home with hen a having finished his journey in four moneths. They lived hapily at Corimb for ten years, till Creon, King of that Citie, betrothing his daughter Glaute to him, Medea was commanded to quit the place; whereupon mad with anger, the fet the Palace on fire, and flew her own three fons, which she had by Jajon; as Euripides relateth the flory. Who, as it's probable, too much indulgeth his poerick liberty, the Corinthians having corrupted him with five Talents, as an antient (7) Hi- (1) Vide Parflorian hath discovered. (z) Herodoins Writeth in that a Messenger was lene menicum, schofrom Colchos to demand Medea, but he was put off with this answer, that lis ad Euripithey of Asia had formerly stoln away Io from Argos. As the Argonaute dem. failed by Athos and Samothratia, they were driven by Tempest upon Si_ (2) Lib. 1.c.2. gaum, a Promontory of Trom, (a) where they found Hesione, daughter to (a) Diodorus Laomedon, King of Iror, bound upon the shoar, that she might become a prey 11. p. 171. to a Whale. This Whale had been fent by Neptune to devour Paffengers upon the Coast, because (b) Laomedon with money taken out of the Tenples of Nepune, and Apollo, had built the Walls of the Cities and made not 16) Vide Pinrestitution. Apollo, had answered that no way could they be quit of the Whale, and Nema, but by the devouring of some one chosen out by lot, which fell upon the Kings own daughter. But Hercules thoved with pity, upon promife to have SECT. 2. the maid, and certain horses that never were handled, undertook to kill the Whale, which readily performing, he trufted Laomedon with his wiges, till his return from Colchos. Then he demanded them (c) by Iphicles his brother and Telamon, whom he fent into the Cirie, but the King inflead of reibid, 175.

97

floring what he formerly detained, imprisoned the Messengers, and plotted the destruction of the whole company. Priamus of all his fons was onely against this treachery, and when he could not otherwise prevail, fent in two fwords to the prisoners, wherewith they dispatching their keepers, got out to their companions. In revenge for this afterward Hercules took the Citie , slew Laomedon, and preferred Priamus for his integrity to the King-18. The Argenauta being returned into Greece, Hercules (d) took an (d) Idem pag.

Oath of them mutually to aid one another, as also to chuse out some certain 178. place, wherein to meet and celebrate Games in honour of Jupiter Olympius, This matter being left to his care and management, he pitched on the plains Games institute of the Eleans, lying upon the River Alpheus, where he ordained exercises, both to be performed on foot and horf-back, appointed rewards to the Victors, and fent abroad to give notice thereof to the feveral Cities, which were all hereby wonderfully affectionated towards him. But after Eurystheus had fucceeded Sthenelus his father in the Kingdom of Mycena, he began to grow jealous of the strength and prosperity of Hercules, and ceased not to presse him forwards into dangerous, though glorious attempts. Heat first refuling went & consulted the Oracle at Delphos, which is said to have acquainted him with the pleasure of the gods , that at the appointment of Eurystheus he should finish twelve labours, and so attain to immortality. Hereat he grew exceeding melancholy, taking it in great disdain to be commanded by him, which discontent arose to a Phrensie, and in this distemper he killed the Children that he had by Megara, and put her away; but afterwards coming to his right mind, refolved to venture himfelf, and returned to His twelve labours.

Eurystheus for his orders.

GHAP. V.

19. The * first task imposed on him was to kill a Lyon in Nemea, a Wood * Diodorus 1.4. of Achaia, whom no sword nor any other vveapon could peirce. Being P.219.B. onely to be mastered by the hand he caught and strangled him, then taking off his skin, thenceforth wore it as a Garment. The second thing injoyned him was to kill an Hydra with 100 heads, like Snakes, whereof when one was cut off, two others sprung up in its room. The third was to bring home alive the Erymanthian Boar, at the fight of which beast upon his shoulders, Eurystheus was so frighted that he ran for fear into a brasen Hogshead; and in this expedition he also overcame the Centaures. The next thing commanded him was to catch an Hart of marvelous swiftnesse with Golden horns, which he effected, but in what manner is not agreed on. After this he drave away innumerable companies of Birds from the Ssymphalian Fens, which there, and in other places devoured the Corn. Then cleanfed he Augeas his stable; not by carrying the Dung out upon his shoulders, (which indignity was intended him by Eury (theus) but by the current of the River Peneus, which he brought down thither for that purpose. The seventh thing commanded him was to fetch a wilde Bull out of the Island Crete, with which Pasiphaes is said to have faln in love: and betwire this and the next labour he helped the gods against the Gyants, and pacifying Jupiter towards Prometheus, loofed this man from the place vyhere an Eagle continually fed upon his Liver for his communicating to men the knowledge of fire. The eighth task was to fetch the Mares of Diomedes out of Thrace, which had brazen mangers, were tied with Iron chains, and fed not on any other fodder than the flesh of strangers coming that ways But Hercules first gave them their mafters flesh, and then brought them to Eurystheus, who dedicated them to Juno, and their breed is faid to have continued to the time of Alexander the Great. 20. After this it is that Diodorus maketh him to have failed amongst the Argonansa to Colchos. Then at the command of Eurystheus he warred

SECT. 3. against the Amazons in Africk, and brought to him the Girdle of Hippolyta their Queen. The tenth labour was to fetch the Oxen of Geryon out of Iberia, or Spain, as the fable goeth; whereas Geryon reigned not there, but in that part of Epis w which lieth about Ambracia and Amphilochus, as (e) Arrianns witneffeth from the Pen of Hecatans a most ancient Historian, (f) and (f) Eustathing others do testifie. There were afterwards in Epirus a very large fort of in Dionysium Oxen, called Larini, thought to be of that kind which Hercules drove away, Periegetem, Oxen, called Larini, thought to be of that kind which referentes drove aways.

Athenaus its, 9. and to have had this name from Larinus his herdiman. Seeing then that this Scholiaftes in occasion of invading Spain, Italy, and Gaul is taken away from this Hercu-Arilloub. les, that expedition is to be left to the Phanician, to whom formerly we Aves, ascribed it. But Hercules is farther said in this journey to have slain An- Suidas. taus, to have gone down into Egypt, and made an end there of Busines that cruel Tyrant, and erected his Pillars in the utmost bounds of the World. Within eight years and one moneth he finished these his ten labours. After his return he was enjoyned to fetch Cerberns out of Hell, which having accomplished, the 12th was the fetching of the Golden Hesperian Aples; which, whether they were such, and were kept by a terrible Dragon, or by them is to be understood Herds of Cattel defended by some strong and valiant man, he also brought out of Africk to Eurysthens. Those are his 12 labours, as Diodorus describeth, and ranketh them.

His other acts.

21. Having served Eurystheus twelve years, he returned to Thebes, and there gave Megara, whom he had put away, to Iolaus, the fon of his brother Iphicles, He had now no legitimate iffue , and therefore married Deianeira, Diodorus & daughter to Cleneus, King of the Calydonians, to pleasure whom he derived Appollodorus. the River Achelous into another Chanel, and thereby rendred the Countrey more fertile; whence the fable arose that he fought with Achelous, turned into a Bull, and cutting off one of his Horns, gave it to the Æiolians (part of whom the Calydonians were) called the Horn of Amalthea, wherein was plenty of all fruits. Before this he had won Isle, the daughter of Eurytus Prince of Oechalia, by shooting, which exercise her father had proposed to all comers against himself and his son. Yet was he denied her, whereupon to be revenged on Euryeus, he drove away his Horses, and carrying his son Iphitus, who was sent to seek them, up into a Tower to see if he could make any discovery of them, when he could not espy them, as if he had wrongfully accused him of theft, he threw him down headlong. For this he was struck with a disease, and had answer from the Oracle at Delphos, that if he would be freed from it he must be sold, and the price given to the Children of Iphitus. Hethen passing over into Asia, willingly permitted one of his friends to fell him, and was bought by Omphale, Queen of the Maonians, to whom her husband Tmolus had left the Kingdom. Being freed from his disease, he did his Mistresse great service, killing many of the samous Robbers, called Cercopes, and bringing some of them alive unto her. Omphale admiring his acts, after the knew who he was, gave him his liberty, and took him to her bed. Of her he begat Lamus, having already a fon by his fellow flave, named Cleolans: he ferved her three years, and then returning into Peloponnesus, went against Laomedon King of Ilium, as some rank the series

22. Some years after, having fubdued feveral persons, and Cities in Greece, he joyned the Arcadians and others to him, and went with an Army against Eurytus, whom he flew with his three fons, and taking away Iole, came to Cenaum, a Promontory of Eubora. Here being about to facrifize, he fent Lichas his servant to Trachine for his Shirt and Coat, wherein he was wont to Diodorus ut ; perform that religious work. From Lichm, Deianeira learning how Iole was prins p.169. triken, and fearing to be robbed by her of her husbands affections, annointed &c. his Shirt with a poylon given her by Neffus, the Centaure, as he was dying (who would have ravished her, and for that was killed by Hercules) perfwading her that it was an oyntment Efficacious to procure love. As foon as the Shirt touched his body the venom also seized on it, wherewith being grievouily termented he dismissed his Army, and returned to Trachines, where the disease increasing, he sent to enquire of Apoilo about a remedy. It was anfwered, he should be carried up to the Mountain O.ta, where a great pile of wood being reared, Tupiter would take care for the rest. This done, and all. hope of recovery palt, Hereales in his warlike habit cast himself upon the pile, and defired the standers by toput fire to it, which when all his own relations refused to do, Paas, who feeking his Cattel, came that way, as Apo'lodorus Writeth, or his fon Philottetos, as most deliver, (to whom Heroules gave for a reward his Bow and Arrows) fer fire to it, which also being kindled with lightning, was presently reduced together with the body inro ashes. lolans finding one of his bones, a perfivation arole, that he pasted from A. M. 2776. amongst mortals to the Gods, as the Oracle had formerly shewed. He commanded that Hyllus his fon, when he came at age, should marry lole. As for Deianeira, the feeing what the had brought upon her husband, out of vexation hanged her felf. Thus perished Alcam, Sirnamed Hercules, the Son of Amphyrrion and Alchiena, at the age of 52 years, having in a fir of Phrenfie, as it's thought, burnt himfelf. And these are the most remarkable things that are written of him, who lived (according to that Chronology which taketh not in the hundred years formerly mentioned) in the dayes of Tholah the Judge of Ifral. 23. Hercules being dead, his children for some time stayed at Trachine with Ceyces, the King, till Hyllm and others of them were grown up. Then Euryst heus began to fear them, and therefore resolving to banish them all out of (g) Greece (or rather Peloponnesus) sent to Ceyces, commanding him upon pain of his displeasure, to remove them together with lolans and the (8) Diodor, 1.4. rest of their Friends. They being unable to make resistance, voluntarily p. 181. quitted the place, and fent about to the principal Ciries to beg harbour, which none would afford them except the Athenians, who placed them in Tricorinit, one of the four parts of their City. After some rime, when they were come to ripenesse of age, and now bare themselves high upon the glory of their Father, Euryst beus much more suspecting their growth, lead down a great Army against them; but affisted by the Athenians under conduct of their (b) Strabol, 8. Coufin Islans and Thefens, they overthrew and flew (b) him with all his Sons, p. 377. and then invided Peloponnefus. Now a Plague feized on the Country, and the Oracle answered, that it was, because they returned thither before their time; whereupon Hyllus returned, as some say, and went to Epalius King of the Dorienfes about Octa, by whom he was (1) adopted, because, by (1) Idem lib. 9. Hercules his means, Agymins had formerly recovered his Kingdom; and P. 427.C. thenceforth the Heraclida became imbodied with the Dorienfes. Diodorus writeth, that Hyllus provoking some one of his Enemies to a single Combat, upon this condition, that if he overcame, then were the Heraclida to be Mafters of Micene, if not, they should depart for fifty years, was slain, and To they accordingly returned, and kept themselves quiet for that time. 24. Eurist heus being flain after he had reigned at Mycene 43 years, (4) Eusch.

What hapned to his children.

Arreus the fon (k) Arreus the fon of Pelops succeeded him, who also at this time had the loveraignty of Argos. This Pelops above an hundred years before (for fo famount a Man must not be omitted) being the fon of Tantalus Prince of Phrys. gia, had made War upon Ilium, where after he was put to the worst by Iliu the King, he was forced to flye into Greece, and coming to Pifa, fell in love with (1) Hippodamia Daughter of Ocnoman Prince of that City, who being (1) Diodoins, with (1) Hippodamia Daughter of Ocnoman Prince of that City, who being (1) Diodoins. warned by the Oracle to take heed to himself, when she should take an husband, had condemned her in his resolutions, to perpetuall virginity. Therefore he admitted no Suter, but on this condition, to run a race with him in the Charior, and if he won her nor, then to seffer death, to which he brought many, through the swiftnesse of his Horses, till Pelops (or Hippodamiafor him) corrupting the Charior-driver, obtained the Prize, for grief of which, the old man thinking now the Oracle to be fulfilled, hanged himfelf. Pelops then obtained Hippodamia and Pifa with her, after which, by with most of little and little, he got most of the Peninsula into his possession, called after the Peninsula him Peloponnessus, wherein he reigned 58 years. Of Hippodamia he begoe

Teleps Ob.

His end.

of his actions.

Secres, many children, by which he promoted his affairs more than powers for by the marriage of them, he infinuated into the Principalities of most of the Cities. Amongst his Sons the most eminent were Arrem, Threftes, and Plilibones. The two former he left his Successors, and Plifibenes dying young, left two Boyes to Acrem, to be brought up, called Agamemnon and Menelaus. Airens married their Mother, by name Aërope, the Daughter of Minos King of Creet, with whom his Brother Thyeftes committing Adultery, he first banished , and after recalling him, feasted him with the stelli of his own fons. 25. Some will have Acress to have outlived Threftes; others fay, he died before him, and, being reconciled, left him the Kingdom at his death, on this condition, to restore it to Agamemnon when he should come to age. - After Enrysthens his death, it seemeth, that he became Master of all Peloponnesius, and opposed Hyllus, who challenging any in his Army, as was faid, to a fingle Combat, Echemus King of the Tegoata in Arcadia accepted the challenge, and flew him. He was very skilful in Aftrology, being by some reputed the first that discovered the motion of the Sun to be contra-

Mendaus.

Assurance & ry to that of the Starry Heaven, (m) and that observed the Eclypse of that luminary. He adopted his two Nephews Agamemnon and Menelaus, who fucceeded him (n) feventeen years before the beginning of the Trojan War. (n) clemens in Agamemnon a Man of prudence and courage, obtained not onely Mycene, but Argos alfo, with all as far as (o) Sicyon and Corinih , and that Country (o) Strabo ex then called Ionia and Agralea, afterwards Achaia. Menelaus got Laco- Homero. lib. 8. nia, and their reigned at Lacedamon. For Caftor and Pollux the fons of P. 377. Tyndarem the King, (p) dying before their Pather, he fent for him to Sparta. (p) Apollod, and delivered up his Kingdom to him, having first given him his Daughter Hetenn, whom Park the second Son of Priamus King of Troy (by his wife The T. ojan Hesuba) stealing away, gave occasion to the famous ten years War, and the ruine of that City; concerning which something is to be spoken.

26. The first (9) Man reported to have reighted in Arcadia, was Atlas, (9) Dionylins The Original who inhabited about the Mountain of Cancasan, and had seven Daughters, Halicanassens. which made up the Pleiades, whereof on Electra, Jupiter her husband begat lib. 1.

Justimes and Dardannes. Justice dummaried, but Dardannes had by his wife Chryle, the Daughter of Palaus, two fons, Idam and Dimas, who fucceeded Atlas in his Kingdom. Afterwards great intindations happening in this Country, they were forced to divide the people into two parts, whereof leaving one with Dimas in Arcadia, with the other Jafus, Dardanus and Idans left Feloponnesus, and coasting by Enpope, at length came into the Bay of Melane, and arrived at a certain Island of Thrace, called Samo-thracia, from the Countrey, and a Man's name who inhabited it; one Samon the fon of Mercury, by the Nymphe Rhene. Here finding no convenient habitation, the greater part under the conduct of Dardanus (for Jasus died in the Mland, being fruck with a Thunder-bolt, because he attempted the chastity of Ceres) passed into Asia, and landing in the Hellespont, seated themselves in Phrygia. Idens with part of the Army, settled upon the Mountains, which bore his name, and Dardanus in that part of the Country, fince named Trons, built a City of his own name, having some grounds given him by Tencer the King of the place, the Son of Scamander, from whom the Country was called leneris, and whose daughter Batea he married. He succeeded him in his Kingdom, and changed the name of his Subjects from Teneri to Dardani, and built the City upon the Sea-lide, about the 2530th year of the World, in the daves of Schenelaus King of Argos. On Batea he begat his Son and successor, called Erichthonius, reported by (r) Homer and others, to have (r) Iliad, 1,20.

Dardanus.

Erichthonius.

Tros.

Ilits.

been exceeding rich and fortunate, who on Callirhoe the Daughter of Scamander begat Tros, from whom the Country was named. Tros succeeding him begut Ilus, Affaracus and Ganymedes. Ilus succeeded him. From Affaracus descended Aneus. Ganymedes for his ibeauty was stollen by Tansalus King of Phrygia, and Father to Pelops, whence arose a War, in which many lost their lives, and Tantalus (though the fon of Jupiter by the Nymph Plosa') was beaten out of Paphlagonia. Ilus built the chief City in Sect. 3. the Plain, which though the Latins called it Troja, and we Troy (which names most properly belong to the Country) yet the Greek's constantly Ilium from Died, at sufpra, him. Against him and it Polops made an Expedition, and miscaried in the Vide Strabon fuccesse, as was said before. Laomedon his Son succeeded him, who seeking 1.13. p. 587. to defraud Hercules of his wages, for killing the Whale which should have c. devoured his Daughter Hesione, was outed of his Kingdom and life; and Pri-GHAP. V. The Kingdom of Argos Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Priamus.

Laomedon.

amus his Son for his love to Justice was placed in his Throne. 27. Podarces (Sirnamed Priamus, as Apollodorus writeth) was exceeding rich, and had a large dominion, extending from Lesbus and Tenedos, to the upper Phrygia, containing (f) nine divisions, and many Towns (f) Confulse besides. He had Fifty Sons, (t) whereof seventeen were lawfully begotten. omario Strabes. His first wife was Arisba the Daughter of Merops, on which he begit Afa- 1.13. p. 184. chus. Dismissing her, he married Heeubs, the Daughter of Dymas, Cissem, (1) ciccoo or Sangarius (all which are mentioned) and by her he had Heltor, Paris, 1. Helenus, Deiphobus, and others. Before the was brought to bed of Paris, the dreamed that the was delivered of a firebrand, which should consume to ashes the whole City.(u)Priamus hereupon caused the child to be exposed on the Mountain Ida, but by the procurement of his Mother, he was educated amongst the Shepherds, whom because he affisted against robbers, and shewed himself very couragious, he obtained the name of Alexander. He (whether out of design or no, is uncertain) came to Sparta to the house of Menclass the King, and thence stole his wife Helena, which some (x) report he (x) Hered. 1. 1. rook away by force, and that after the taking of the City; but (7) others 6.3. affirm of her, as of all others thus taken away, that it was not without her (y) servins in own liking. Fearing he might be perfued, he carried her first to Sidon in Phase Virgil. 1. 10. nicia, where he married her, and thence to Troy, at which City they were scarce arrived, before all Greece was in an uproare, as if the whole Country had been overrun. Agamemnon, who was much concerned for his Brother, possessing almost all Peloponnesas, by his authority easily perswaded other Princes to engage in the quarrell. He first assembled them at (2) Agium, (4) Pausan in a City of Achala, to confult about the management of the War, where being Achaicir. chosen General, they afterwards met at Aulis, a Sea-town of Baotia with A. M. 1812. their Ships, and there sware, never to return home, till Troy should bee 28. The chiefest of these renowned Warriours were (a) Nestor, who (a) Vide Sim-reigned in Messenia, Asax the Son of Telamon Prince of the Island Sala- Chros. Cashol. The names of mins, Ajax the younger, or the son of Olleus King of Loeri, over against ad A.M.2812, Eubara, Achilles the Son of Poleus by the goddesse Thesis, whose principa- &c, lity was Peblois, part of that Country afterwards called Theffalie, Ulyffes the son of Laertes King of Cephalenia, Thous the Eielian, Podalrius and Machaon, Sons of the third Esculapius, and Tlepolemus the Son of Her-

The rape of Aelena.

mongit the

Myfia, which mistaking for their Enemies Country, they began to make encurfions into it, and were beaten back by Telephes Prince thereof; all but Achilles and Patroclus, the former whereof fore wounded him : and Therfunder (b) General of the Bootians here lott his life, into whose room, be- (b) Paufanias cause his Son Tifamenus was but young, they elected Peneleus. A conflict in Baoticia. presently ensued their arrival at Troy, wherein Prosessiam was slain by a Dardanian, as Homer calleth him, (either Helter or Aneas) and then the Greeks fent Menelaus and Ulyffes Ambassadors, to demand Helena. Priamus calling a Council to deliberate about the matter, Antenor was for delivering her up, and so were the rest of the grave and antient Men, though they artributed much to the beauty of the Woman; but Animachus being corrupted by the gold of Paris, urged the contrary, and not onely moved to have the melfage rejected, bur the melfengers killed. 29. Priamis, though otherwise prudent enough, rejected the counsel of cules, who now inhabited the Island Rhodes. They made up amongst them a Navy of about 2000 ships, and therein transported an Army of 220000 men. From Anis they failed to Lemnos, and thence, miffing of Troy, into Savius.

Patroclus

McGlor flain.

Achilles

SECT. 3. the old men, and out of indulgence to his fon, fent away the Ambaffadors without any fatisfaction. Then both parties prepared for the War, and another ingagement followed, wherein the Greeks had the better, who then dividing their forces, left part to continue the fiege, and with the other, Achilles (who took with him Palamedes) was fent to harraze the Countrey, and cut off provisions from the Cirie. This he so well performed, as he took 22 Towns, and therein got much booty, which was divided. Whil'st Palamedes was with him carrying on the War in the Island Lesbos , Wyffes envying him for his great wisdom, wherein he seemed to overtop him, circumvented him by treachery, and by false suggestions procured him to be sent for to the Camp, and floned as a Traytor, though he had exceedingly well deserved of the Army, being a person of great courage (which he alfo expressed at his death) and yet to moderate and wife, that he thereby allayed the too much heat of Achilles. To him (a) some attribute the invention of 16 Letters in the (a) Tacitus Greek Alphabet, (b) others onely 4. but withall the ordering and rank- lib. 11.

The Kingdomof Argos Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

ing of an Army, the watch word, Guards, and Dice to divert the Souldiers. (b) Plint. 7. His death was grievoully taken by Alax the son of Telamon, who for some 6.56. time absented himself, but especially by Achilles, who took it so heinously, that for a great while he would not be reconciled, nor brought to fight, having much more cause to be offended for this thing, than the detaining of a woman from him by Agamemnon, as the Poet fings, who industriously omitteth whatfoever reflecteth upon Wyffes. 30. Achilles determined not to fight till the Trojans should peirce as far as his own ships, which at length happening, he first fent out Patroclus in his Lege Simso-Armour, who had defired it. Pairoclus with the Myrmidones (Achilles his mum in Chro-

Armour, who had defired it. Pairoclus With the Myrmagnes (Atomies ins siles Cathol, ad fubjects) put the Trojans to flight, who now had begun to cast fire into the A.M. 2820. thips, flew Pyrachmes with his own hand, purfued Heltor, and fmote Sarpe- oc. don King of Lycia about the heart fo that he died; but being wounded by Euphorbus, who came behind him, he was flain by Heltor. Euphorbus endeavoured to get his body, but was killed by Menelaus; and the Soul of this Euphorbus Pythagoras affirmed (according to his principle of commigration) to have passed into his own body. After this, Achilles (whose presence formerly had kept the Trojans within their Walls) went our to fight, and taking tivelve young men alive flew them at the funeral of Patroclus. By the River

Scam inder (or Xanthus) he killed Afteropaus, Captain of the Paones, from whom, though he received a wourd in the Arm, yet went he to fight with Hellor, who expected him without the Walls, and would not be perswaded to decline his fury, though it proved his ruine, being flain in this fingle Combat about the 30th year of his age. His body tied to a Charior, the Conquerour drew in Triumph about the Walls, but afterwards it was ranfomed by Diodorus 1. Priamus After this he sew Memnon the Nephew of Priamus by his p.91. brother Tithonus, who was fent out of Persiaby the Affrian King Tentamus to his aid; then Troilus his fon by Hecuba, and laftly Penthesilea one of the Amazons, who for murder had fled her Countrey, and coming to Troas * after Hettor's death, did good fervice against the Greeks. When dead, A- * Servius. chilles is faid to have been enamoured of her body, and with her also the valour of this fort of women is believed to have been extinct, 31. Achilles, whom no art nor violence of the Trojans could overcome.

was taken by the love of a Woman, and flain by treachery. For having a view of (1) Polyxena, the daughter of Priamus, from the Wall, he became fo (a) Idem ad inflaved to her in his affections, that he proceeded to a Treaty of marriage, Viveil, Aniad. wherein he was thot with a Datt by Paris, who hid himself behind the image 1.3. treacherously of Apollo, which idol is therefore feigned an assistant in the work, Afterwards killed by Pa- the Greeks had it revealed to them, that except they could take the Palladium, or Image of Pallas out of the City, till they should get Hercules his Arrows, and provide a wooden Horse, Troy could never be taken. Hly fes therefore, and Diomedes, as * Virgil fingeth, Stole away the Image; Phi- * Antiad. 21. losteres, who had the Arrows was fent for from the Island Lemnos, and with them flew Paris the incendiary, after whose death Deiphobus the son of PriaCHAP. V. The Kingdom of Argos Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. mus obtained Holena, as being of best account for valour next to his brother Hettor. Then was a wooden Horse prepared by the hands of Epeus, which SECT. 3. pretending to dedicate to Minerva they left before the Cirie, having indufriously made it higher than the Gates, hoping the Trojans would pull down part of the Wall to take it in. They left also some of their choicest men in the Horses belly, and Sinon with his hands bound behind him, who under notion of a fugitive that had been ill used, should perswade them to receive it into the Citie; and then giving out that they would raise the siege for some time, they withdrew into the Island Tenedos. The Trojans with great resolution break down the Wall, and taking in the Horseplaced him in the Cafel; but in the night Sinon giving warning by fire, the Greeks came from Tenedos, and being easily let in by their companions, by reason of the Trojans had drunk themselves fast asleep, the Citie was taken, sacked and burnt. Me- A.M.2821.

Troy taken.

nelans killing Desphobus in his bed, took away Helena, and Priamus was flain in his own house by Pyrrhus (or Neoptolemus) the son of Achillus. Of the Trojans which escaped, Antenor being spared by the Greeks came with the Heneti into the Adriatick Sea, where he built Padua, and Aneas the fon of Anchifes at length reached Italy. This destruction of Troy hapned in the 10th year of the fiege, 408 before the first Olympiad, 1182 before the Æra of Christ, of the World 2821. in the dayes of Jepthah, who judged If-

22. Of the Greek Captains which escaped, Ajax the son of Telamon striving with Uly fes for the Armour of Achilles, and overcome by the judgement of the Army, killed himself, or else was circumvented by his adversary. Ajax the younger, the fon of Oileus, having taken prisoner Cassardra, the daughter of Priamus, unwilling to part with her, was driven by the plots of Agamemnon to shift for himself, and putting out to Sea in an unscasonable time miscarried by shipwrack. Of those that returned home, most encountred with many difficulties; Ulyffes especially, who for many years wandred

The Greeks re- about, as it is poetically described by * Homer. Menelans after the work * 10 ody. was done, presently commanded the Greeks to prepare for their return; but Agamemnon being unwilling to depart before he had facrifized to Minerva, the Fleet was divided, and a contention arose betwirt the followers of Menelans when they came to Tonedos, because some would have stayed for Agamemnon there; infomuch as Ulyffes then returned back to him. Neftor fet favl thence before Menelaus, but was overtaken by him about the Island Lefbos, whence they failed together as far as Attica, where Menelaus staying to bury Phrontes, the other left him and came fafe home to Pylus. Menelans his ships were most of them overwhelmed in a Tempest about the Promontory of Malea, and the rest with him and Helena driven into Egypt, where, and in other places he continued till * the 8th year. Agamemnon, after he confule strab. and in other places neconclined the had facrifized, and erected an Altar to the twelve gods in the Promontory of Tross, came home, and was prefently * murdered by Ægishus, the *1. P.37 * Homer fon of his Uncle Thyestes, with whom Clytemnestra his wife (the daughter odys. 4.

also of Tyndareus) had lived in Adultery, and now conspired to make him 33. He left a son named Orestes, and three daughters begotten on this vvoman. The Boy (for he vvas but young) was by his fifter Elettra, and his Nurse, when they perceived his life was laid at by Egistus before his fa- Lege Simsothers return, conveyed into Phocus, unto Strophius, who had married his fa-nium in Chio-ther's fifter, whence returning the 8th year after his de th he killed Ægifthus nico, together with his mother, and recovered the Kingdom. Because of his A. M. 2829. mothers death he was vexed by the furies, and found some difficulty in mastering the Argives, who now opposed him ; but by the help of the Phocians he recovered his father's Dominions, though Menelaus his Uncle, either for that he disapproved the death of his mother, or for private respects, bare him no good will, and neglected him, which he shewed further in taking from him his daughter Hermione (vvho had brought him a fon) and giving her to Pyrrhus, the fon of Achilles. Tormented with the fliries he went into Arcadia, and thence to Athens, where he was acquitted in the Court of Arcopague about his mother, the fuffrages, for, and against him being equal, SECT.3.

Greftes.

Tifamaus.

in which case judgement alwayes passed on the Desendants side. A little Patereulus after this he is thought to have killed Pyrrhus as he was facrifizing to his fa- 1.1. ther at the Temple of Delphos , and then refumed his wife. When Mene- Paulan in colam was dead he obtained the Kingdom of Sparta, the Lacedamonians being riminacis. more willing to receive him as the Grand-son of Tyndarem by Clytemnefra, than the base sons of Menelaus, Nicostrains and Megapenthos, begotten on a flave. It is probable that he, as his father before him, was supream Lord of Argos, and that the Successors of Melampus and Bias, ever fince the division of the Kingdom, or for a good space, held their principalities of his Predecessors and himself. But now being King of Lacedamon, and the greatest part of Arcadia, lying near to Argos, after the death of Cylababos, the son of Schenelms (who left no Children) and that Amphilochus was departed thence to the Amphilochians (to whom he gave name) having the Phocians constant friends to him, he easily made himself sole master of Argos, and fo this Kingdom was re-united about 140 years after the threefold division of it. Divers years after, he placed a Colony of the Colians in Afin* (four ages before that of the Ionians) and shortly after died in Area- * Strabo 1.13. dia, when he had reigned 70 years. 34. He left (b) two fons: One legitimate, and named Tifamenus (from (b) Vide Pauhis revenging his fathers death) begotten on Hermione; and another born of Jun, nt priks

Erigone, the daughter of Ægisthus. Tifamenus succeeded him according to phone Paufanias, though Paterculus writeth that both of them reigned after their 1.3. pag. 123. fathers death. Scarce was Tifamenus warm in his feat when he was displaced by the Heraelida, or posterity of Hercules. They had several times attempted their return into Peloponnesus, but were ever frustrated till now; Hyllus the fon of Hercules once or twice, Cleodans his fon after him , and Aristomachus his son also with the same successe. Aristomachus left three sons, Temenus, Cresphones, and Aristodemus, which being grown up consulted the Oracle of Apollo concerning their return, and had the same answer their father formerly had, that they should attain their defire, if they went by the way Sten;grus, which word in the Greek being of an ambiguous fignification, Ariffomachus thinking by it to be meant the Isthmus, as a narrow way, led down his forces through it, and miscarried. Temenus objecting this, the Pythia, or woman that delivered the Oracles, answered, that their Ancestors by their mifunderstanding had been Authors of their own infelicity; for whereas Hyllus was told that the third fruit was to be expected, the third Generation was meant, and not the third crop, or summer, as he expounded it, and accordingly perished: And as for Stenygrus, by it they were to understand the deep Sea on the right hand as one entreth Peloponne sus, and not the narrow Isthmus. Having received this answer, and conceiving all things now to be fulfilled and ripe for their effectual return, they built ships in Ætolia upon that Sea, the place wherein they were made thenceforth keeping the name of Naupatins from that occasion. Whil'st they were about this work, a certain Prophet appeared to them, and foretold them feveral things; but Hippotes taking him for a Magician sent on purpose to delude the Army, killed him. For this a Pestilence was sent amongst them , about which consulting

The return of the Heraclide.

35. Seeking out such a man, they met one (c) Oxylus, an Æ10- (c) Apollodolian, fon to Those that went to the fiege of Troy; who being on horf-back rus, had but one eye, now returning into his own Countrey from Eles in Peloponne fus, whither he had been banished for killing a man. Him they made Captain of the expedition, bargaining to procure him the possession of Elis as (d) Pausanias witnesseth, who reporteth him to have ridden on a Mule of Eliacit. that had but one eye, and therefore to have been taken for the man meant (2) Polyanus by the Oracle, through the perswasion of Cresphontes. Being ready, they Stratag. 1.21. (e) gave our they would march again through the Isthmus, and by that means A.M. 2901.

the Oracle they were bidden to banish Hippotes for 10 years, and use the conduct of a Captain with three eyes, for two years space.

Cifus.

All regal

CHAP. V. The Kingdom of Argos Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

the Peloponnessans attending their motions there, easily passed over the Sea, SECT. 3. and landed at Molycrium. Three parts of Pelopunnesus especially they challenged as their due : Argos, because descended of Perse. s, whereas Tichallenged as their due: Argot, because descended or Perje. 1, whereas 11famenus the present King was of the posterity of Pelops, who had no right to that Kingdom. Lacedamon, for that Hercules killed Hypocoon, who had strabon 1. 18. expelled Tradarens thence, and restored the later to the Kingdom, on this p. 352, 600. condition, to keep it for his children. Messenia, because having also conquered it, when he destroyed the City Pil s, and slew all the brothers of Nestor, he gave it to him of meer goodness and compessions, but on the same condition as Lacedamon to Tyndarens. The dominion of Argos without much adoe they got into their hands; after that, taking a certain Village in the confines thereof, Temenus fortified it, and used it for a place of retreat for contines thereon, some political to the carrying on the War. One Philonomas betrayed Spares into their hands, Strabo, lib. 18. which they entered with found of Pipes instead of Trumpets, as most effeetual by the tune, to make the Soldier attentive, and keep his ranks, which P. 365. use was constantly observed by the Lacedamonians, together with that of the Polyanus.

36. Tisamenus and the Achaeus thus expelled these parts, and out of Messenia by the Heraclida and Dorienses their associates, sent to the Ionians then Achaeis, inhabiting Peloponnesus, their Neighbours, desiring leave to live amongst them. M. Honicis & But they being jealous of him, left for his high birth and valour, he should be Launuin. chosen King of the Country, denied their request. The Acheans then, driven by necessity and desperation, attempted to get by force, what they could not by increaty, and though they loft Tifamenus in the fight, drave the Iones out of their Seats, and constrained them to passe into Attica, where they were received by the Athenians, through the perswasion of Milanthus the King. As for the Heraelida, when they came to divide what they had won, Argos fell to Temenus, Crefphonies, by fraud used in the Lot, obtained Meffent, and Lacedamon became the portion of Procles and Eurysthein, the fons of Ariftodemus, who was flain by the fons of Pylas kinfmen to Tifamenu, before they entered Peloponnesiu: They also according to their in-

37. Temenus being settled in Argos, after some years incurred the dislem in Argoplessure of his Sons, for marrying his Daughter Hyrnetho to Deiphontes licis. tained Arges, his kiniman, he fo offected them two above his other children, that he made him his onely Counfellour in all affairs; infomuch that his fons fearing he would transfer the Kingdom from themselves to him, made their father away, by one means or other. And Cresphones his Brother, who had used too much cunning in getting Messene, not long after, seeming to be too gracious in Messenici. with the people, incurred the displeasure of the Nobility, and was murdered together with two of his Sons; onely Apiens then but young escaped, and killing Polyphontes the usurper, revenged his Father's death. Recovering thus the Kingdom, he had Successors, Glaneus, Isthmias, Doradas, Sybrias, Phintas, Antiochus, and Euphaes, who dying of a wound, received in a battel fought with the Lacedamonians, without iffue, Aristodem's was ele-gagement possessed Oxy!us of Elis.

cted in his room, and continued as long as the Kingdom it felf lasted, being overturned by means of the Spartans, as will be feen in their story. Cifus the eldest fon of Temenus succeeded him, though the people generally inclined to Deiphontes, by whose party they were so stirred up and animited, that Cifus being dead, they took away from his Successors all regal power and authority, left them norhing but a meer empty title, and so in reality, this power taken Kingdom fell, being in effect turned into a Free-State. Which change from his Suc-happened about forty years after the return of the Heraelida, 690 after the A. M 1940.

beginning of Inachus. A. M. 2940. 38. One (f) (and he agreat one) there is, who would gather out of an (f) Grotine or old Tragacdian, that the anrient government of this Kingdom of the Ina- plicibus, 4-ive chide was meerly absolute, the King being by the Poet called both People belli & pacis. and City, not subjett to any Laws, but susteined by the power of his Throne, lib. 1. cap. 3. and afting all things according to his meer will and pleasure. But if cre in the party of Deiphontes) they abated the power of Cifus his Successors, leaving them nothing but an empty name. And this they further shewed, when Meltas the Son of Lacidans, one of these Kings, not enduring this abatement, grew as they thought diffolute and imperious in the Government.

moderate.

may be given to the expresse words of (g) Pausanias, rather than the liber- (g) In connty of a Poet, Emmins thence concludeth, their power was but moderate; thiacis. pag. 61. The Kingdom for the Argives faith Paufanias, from the most antient times were exceeding of the Inachide studious of liberty. Out of this principle (being stirred up as it seemeth by ment made Democratical.

For imparient hereof, they deprived him of all power, took upon them to The Govern-condemn him to death, and pluckt up all Supremacy by the roots, nor suffering any afterwards to reign amongst them. For though we meet with one afrewards, called King of Argos in Herodoins; yet that name fightified no more than it did in the Common-wealths of Ashens, Carthage, and Rome, where this title was wont to be given to some forts of Officers, as this work will shew. The Government was now Democratical, the chief power lying in the people, divided into three tribes, to which the Senate was subordinate, chosen every year for the preparing of matters for the whole body, and the management of the executive power, with authority to enact things of lesser consequence. There was also a Council of State, consisting of 80 persons, besides inferior Magistrates of the City, and Judges for determining of causes, all which are mentioned in the league, made betwixt the Arti gives, Athenians, and others, described by Thucydides in his fifth Book of the Pelopenne fian War. No fuller intelligence have we concerning the conflictition of this Common-wealth, which yet flourished downwards for many Ages, and had great contests with the Lacedamonians, especially about the territories of Thyrea, to which both laid claim. Sometimes they fell out about their confæderates, being moved with much emulation and distaste at each others Government (the one being a Democracie, and the other an Oligarchie) which once especially brought the State of Argos into great danger. But these things belong to another place.

SECT. IV.

The most antient Kingdom and Commonwealth of Athens.

Gecrops.

I. THe founding of the Athenian Kingdom is afcribed to (a) Cecrops, (a) Eusebius in who first reigned in Auica (then Acte) in the dayes of Triopas King Chron, ex Ca-Minority registed in section of Troy, 780 before the first force of Argos, 373 years before the destruction of Troy, 780 before the first force Olympiad, A. M. 2449. The (b) Ægyptians said he was their Country (b)-Diodorus, man, and brought hither a Colonie of the Saita, who inhabited upon one of (1, 1, p. 17. mouths of Nile. He was feigned to be double-natured, confifting both of a Serpentine and Humane shape, because coming into Greece, he shook off barbarism and turned civil. Besides this Colonie, he gathered the people of these parts into twelve Towns, whereas before that they lived dispersedly according to the most antient custom of Greece, and called them Athena, after the name of Minerva in the Greek Language. The storie is (c) told, (c) Angustin ex that when the name came to be given, on a fording an Olive tree and a Foun. Varyone, de that when the name came to be given, on a fodain an Olive-tree, and a Foun- Civitat. Dei tain of water appeared, whereat Cecrops moved with wonder, sent to enquire 1, 18. c. 9. of the Oracle what they should mean. It was answered, that the Olive fignified Minerva, the water Neptune, and that they might name that City from which of these two they pleased. Hereupon, all the men and women were gathered together to make the choice: the men were for Neptune, but the women being the greater number, carried the name for Minerva. Neptune angry hereat, drowned their territories, whom to pacify, they punished the women feveral wayes. They decreed, that thenceforth they should not have a voice in any publick matter; that no child should bear the mother's name, and that they should not be called Athenau, but Acces. Some wo- SFCT, 4. men known by the name of Mine va there have been, though impure spirits, ambirious to blind men with superstition and idolatry, might well act in this matter, as Augustine telleth us, under the name of Neptune, Several Minerva's.

CHAP, V. The Athenian Kingdom Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

2. Cicero (d) mentioneth five several women that have had the name of 3° De natura Minerva. The first was the mother of Apollo by Vulcan. The second born of the River Nile, and worshipped by the Saira. The third daughter to Tupiter Calius. The fourth begotten by Jupiter on Ceriphe, daughter to the Ocean, called Coria by the Arcadians; which invented the Christ drawn by four horses. The fifth was the daughter of Pallas, said to have killed her Father, because he attempted to violate her virginity. Of these the second must be she that was thus honoured by Cecrops, having founded the City Saus, near to Delea, being by the Egyptians called Neuth. To her he had formerly erected a Statue in Agypy, and he, as they fay, first gave the name of Zens to him whom the Latins called Tupiter. As there were feveral Minervaes, fo also more (e) than one City known by the name of Athena. (e) Vara de Inhabitants of which went by the name of Athenas: and a City in Na - Vivem in Aubone, a Province of Gaule, near to Marfeils, called Athene polis, and the gultin de civi-Citizens Atheneopolita. There was also in Laconia a Town called by the cap, 9, 3. In the dayes of (f) Cecrops, Deucalion the Son of Prometheus reigned in (f) Eufeb. Theffilie, whose history being remarkable, must be briefly touched. I apeim had three Sons, Atlas, Promethem, and Epimethem. For (4) the first, (8) Servius ad One telleth us there were three that bore the name of Ailas. One a Moor, 8. Aniad.

Deucation his

His lifue .

feveral forts

of Grecks.

and the greatest of all; another an Italian, Father to Elettra; the third, an Arcadian, Father of Maia, the Mother of Mercury; all which the antients confound according to their custom. The first (h) lived near to Mount Atlas; (h) Dividents to which for his great skil in Afrology, is attributed the bearing up of the 1.5. Heavens; and he is also counted the Father of Elettra. Prometheus found out the inftrument to frike fire, and thereupon is faid to have stolen fire from the Gods. Descation his Son married Pyreha the daughter of his Uncle Epimetheus, and in his time (i) hoppened that great deluge in part of Greece, (i) August, de which is known by the addition of his name; that Country called most anti- Civit. Da, 1.19.

ently and truly Hellas, his feet ner to the Mountain Parnaffus being chiefly orufus, l. t. Orufus, l. t. afflicted with it, on which Hill he is thought to have faved miny men by boars, and thence the Fable to have rifen of his repeopling the Earth. But (that we may note it alrogether) there are three particular Floods which we read to Olympiad: and the (k) third fell 86 after it, in the dayes of Dardanus (k) Died, I, s.

4. Deucalion of Pyrrha his wife begat Hellen and Amphyction, Hellen

ted) is Hamonia from Hamon, the fon of Pelafgus, and Pyrhaa from Pyrhar. diffin & know- He had three fons, Xuthus, Lolus, and Dorus. To Lolus he left his Kingleage of the dom, and sent the other two abroad to seek out seats elsewhere. Aolus grew fo famous, that the name of Jupiter and Neptune came to be given him.

Dorus inhibited the Country Histiaotis, about the Mountains Offa and Olympus. Xu hus after his Father's death was banished Thessalie by his other Hored, I. t. Brothers, for stealing away a great part of his Pathers treasure, and came to Achaicis, Athens, where he married the daughter of Ereshtheus, on which he begat Achaus and Ion. Achaus gerting aid from Athens and Egialus, went into Thessalie, and recovered his Grand-Father's Kingdom; but afterwards have hapned to this Country of Geece. The firl', under Ogyges (colled the Ogygean deluge) concerning whom, we shall speak in the History of 7 hebes,

This fell 248 years before either of the other, and overwhelmed Attica especially so, that as Pererius will have it, it remained waste 200 years after. The next was this of Dencalion, which hippened 727 years before the first gave the name of Hellenes to his Subjects before called Graci, and of Hellas which is elpe- to the Country formerly named Pelafgia, from the Pelafgi (who there inhabi-

From this in Attica, the Citizens were by the Romans called Athenienses; Analogia, but another there was in Enban, built by (ecrops the Son of Erechtben, the Vide Ludovic,

SECT. 4. killing a man by chance, he fled into Laconia, where his posterity continued Strabo at fu-

Thefeus.

cill expelled by the Heraclida and Dorien (es, as we showed in the History of pra. Tisamenus, Ion being exceeding famous at Athens had a numerous progeny, which, for that duica was now grown too full, was fent out as a Colony into Peloponnesus, whence they were thrust our by their brethren the Acheans, after they had denied them harbour (as is formerly faid) and returned to Athens, from which Citie they were afterwards led out into Alia, by the fons

The Council of Arcopagus.

108

5. In Cocrops his time (1) one maketh the Conneil, or Senate of Arcopagus to have had its Original, though no clear light can we discover concerning the true beginning of it. (m) Some write that it began under Solon, but (n) another of a more ancient date fignifieth that it was a Court of Judica- fic. L. . ture before. (o) One deriverh the word from Mars (in Greek Ares) making Plutarch. him to have been first tried there for killing Halirrhodius, the son of Nep- (1) Ariston tune, who offered violence to his daughter Alcippe. Others would fetch a reason from the erecting of his Spear there, or from this, that the Court of Areopagus took Cognifance of flaughters, which are usually committed with Swords, or other Weapons of Mars. Lastly, some think it thence to have been named, for that the Amazons, when they fought against Thefew, made Mars his Hill their Fortresse, and there offered facrifice to him. * Cecrops * Enfet. died after he had reigned 50 years, and because Erysitthon his son died be-of Codrus. But these things havned in after times.

Cranaus. Amphyction. fore him, Cransus the most powerfull man then at Athens succeeded him Passant fiein the Kingdom. He, after he had reigned some seven years, was thrust out priby Amphyction , the fon of Dencalion, and his fon-in-law, the founder as A. M. Seer. fome have thought of the National Council of the Amphyttiones, of which we have already spoken. He is reported to have given entertainment to Dionysius, or Bacchus, who at this time, as they say, came into Attica, and when he had reigned ten years, was also expelled by Erichthonism.

6. The father of Erichthonius was faid to be Vulcan, and his mother the Erichthonius.

Pandion

Erechtheus.

earth, because he was found in Vulcan's Temple upon the earth, with a Apollodorne. Snake wound about his feet, whence also they federed that he had feet like 1.3. Snakes, and invented a Charior wherein he might ride and hide them. He instituted Games to Apollo and Miner va, and having reighed 50 years, left his 'Kingdom to his fon Pandion, who also, after 40. gave way to his fon Erechtheus. He became a man of great account, and whereas the fubjects of Athens were before his time called Cecropide, thenceforth they were named after the place it felf. He made War upon the inhabitants of Elealine, lon the fon of Xuthus, and his own Grand-fon by his daughter being his chief Commander, wherein after he had flain Immaradus, the fon tick of Eumolpus their General, he also lost his life, when he had reigned 50 years. He left three fons, Cecrops, Metion, and Pandorus, who falling into contention about the fuccession, put it to the arbitration of Xuchus. He adjudged it to the eldest, but yet would they not rest satisfied, which made him leave Athens, and go into Egialea where he died. This Corrops the fecond.

Cecrops 2d.

Pandion.

ving dispersedly abroad, the Carians by Sea, and the Baotians (called Lona) by Land harrased the Countrey, as * Strabo writeth. At the end of 40 years * L.9.P.397. his fon named Pandion fucceeded him, who was expelled the Kingdom by C. the fons of Metion his Lincle, and fled to Pyla, the King of Megara his father-in-law, who left him his Successor. Whil'the here reigned he begar Pauldo ut four fons, Egens, Lyons, Pallas, and Nifus, who after his death went against with. the Metionida, and expelled them Athens, the Dominions whereof they divided into four parts, according to their father's injunctions, Megara falling to Nifus, who reigned there a long time.

some think to have gathered the people into twelve Towns, for that li-Ageus.

7. Though this division was made, yet was Egent Soveraign in effect, for fear of whom Lyons fled to Athens, Pallas the other brother had 50 fons, which growing up gave cause chough to Recusto be jealous of them, having him in concempt because he was childlesse. For though he married two wives, Plutarch in yet had he issue by neither of them, which made him go to Delphos to en- Thefee.

quire of the Oracle about postericy. The answer being obscure, in his return SECT. 4. he was entertained by Pittheus, the fon of Pelops, a man famous for learning at Trazene, who either understanding the Oracle, or otherwise induced, made Apollod. his daughter Libra to Iye with him, after he had caused him to drink good A.M. 2725. store of Wine. At his departure he put a sword, and a knife under a great stone, bidding her, if she brought forth a Boy, as soon as he could remove the stone, and take those things from under it, to send him with them as tokens unto Athens, and he would own him for his fon. She accordingly brought forth a fon (called Thefens, from putting the marks under the stone) whom Pintheus brought up, and for that he proved exceeding prudent and couragious, his mother at fixteen years of age brought him to the stone, acquainting him with his Original, and his fathers injunctions. He easily removing it, and taking away the tokens, prepared for his journey; but they were unwilling to let him go by Land, because all the wayes were full of Robbers, since Hercules (who went up and down destroying them) after his killing of Iphisus had quitted these parts, and was gone into Lycia, where for some years he ferved Omphale the Queen. But Thefeus burning with emulation upon hearing continually the praise of Hercules his Kins-man (for their mothers were next Cousins) resolved to take that way to obtain some renown in killing those Robbers, and effected his design upon several of

8. Being arrived at Ashens, he was in danger to be poyloned by his father, through the perswafion of Medea (who now was fled to him from Co. Plurarel, rinth and filled his jealous head with suspitions of this stranger) till thinking it wisdom to make himself known, rather than let another do it, he shewed him the tokens, which he prefently acknowledged, & owning him for his fon, made his subjects as such to take notice of him. But the sons of Pallar, who before had been feditious, now feeing all hopes of the Kingdom taken from them by him, and disdaining that Agens should first reign himself, being not of the bloud Royal, but, adopted onely by Pandion (as Plutarch veriteth) and then leave for his Successor a stranger, and a Bastard, they took Arms, and the better to accomplish their design, divided themselves into two parties, where-of the one came openly with their father against Athens, and the other lay in ambush. Theseus having notice of the later fort, surprized, and cut them all off, which so discouraged the other as they separated themselves and sled. Thefeus after this, to employ himself, and gain the favour of the people, wen; and took the Marathonian Bull, ferch't out of Crete by Horonles, and brought him quick into the Citie, after he had infested the Countrey very much. Then failed he to Crete, where, as the fable goeth, he flew the Minotaure, a Monster kept by Minos, King of that Island. 9. Minos, (9) Rhadamanthus, and Sarpedon were the Children of Jupi- (1) Diodorus ter by Europa, and all adopted by Afterius (the Grand-son of Hellen, by his 1.4. p. 183. fon Tentamus) King of that Island, who married their mother, and was childleffe. Minos was the Law-giver of the Cresians; this honour being ascribed to him by the most Authentick of ancient (r) Authors, Yet(1) Epbe- (r) Plato in rus in his book of European Commonwealths, vyrote that he was but an imi- legibus. tator of one Rhadamanthus (of the fame name with his brother, who by Ariflor, Politic, others is also said to have been imployed by Minos in this work, but more (22. cap. 8. ancient) who first cultivated the Island by Laws, Cities, and Common-Strabon lib. 10. wealths, feigning that he had from Jupiter all the Ordinances which he pub- p.476. lished. In (1) imitation of him, Minos having continued in the Law of 3"- (1) Erruges. piter nine years, produced Laws in writing, and afcribed them to the fame Author as Homer also hinteth; which (") word of Homer, though Strabo (") Odys. taketh to fignifie a continuance for ten years, yet Plato, and from him (x) Va- (x) Lib. 1, 2, 2 lerius Maximus interpret it not of nine years continuance, but every ninth Exter, Exemp. 1. year vyherein as it seemeth he amended his Laws. Although Minos vvas a King, yet he directed (according to * Ephorns) the vehole model of his Laws . And Strab. to the freedom of his subjects. This liberty he thought to be preserved best me prins. by Concord, which would be most established by the prevention of avarice Pag. 480. B.

Minos.

The acts of

Thefeus,

SECT. 4. and luxury, the great causes of disagreement. He would therefore have them all live soberly and frugally, to which purpose he ordained that Boys should live together in companies, called Agila, when they were grown up, and men, in others, called Syffitia, from eating together, (vvhich they also named Andria from their manhood) that taking their meat all in publick, the poor might live in equal condition with the rich.

The form of the Cretian Commonwealth.

10. After the abdication of regal power, the chief Magistracy was exercifed by ten Cofmi, in power, though not in number, like to the Spartan Ephori, being chosen out of the lowest fort of people as those; yet not out of the Vide Arifler. whole body but particular families, which cuftom Ariffords accountern worse straton. than the other of Lacedamon. Those Colmi at home Governed the Commonwealth; in War commanded the Army with absolute Authority. There was also a Senate, chosen out of those who in this Office had well demeaned themselves, being for life, and not liable to be called to account. There was an Order of Horf-men, who were bound to keep Horses for the service of the State, whereas they at Lacidamon had no fuch tie upon them. In the Concio, or great Affembly, all Members of the Commonwealth had equal Votes, but its power was not great, confirming onely what was propounded by the Senate and Cosmi. They had publick flaves, called Periaci, from their inhabiting up and down the Countrey, who tilled the grounds, and paid in a constant Revenue. All, when ripe of age, were commanded to marry for the propagation of legitimate iffue: Yet they did not lead their wives to their houses when newly married, but let them stay till they were fit to govern a family. The Boys took their meat altogether on the ground, ferving themfelves, and the elder fort. They were cloathed meanly, and alike, both Winter and Summer; they used bickerings with one another, both with fingle hand and Weapon on certain dayes, and had those who exercised them also in shooting, and a vvarlike kind of leaping invented by Cures; moreover in certain Rithms, called properly * Rythmi Cretici. The Cretians had several * Pulmon commendable Laws, as that which severely restrained drunkennesse, another Kpating commended by Plato, that required an account how publick Corn was distributed and spent. The younger sort were utterly forbidden to make any inquiry into the equity of the Laws, and if the elder were unfarisfied, without their knowledge, they were to have recourse to the Magistrates, and their own equals. But that the Laws might be ingraven in their memories, the boyes vvere vvont when they were taught to read, to get some of them by heart, being put into Verse, together with some Musical Notes. 11. Lycurgus the Spartan Law-giver made this model the pattern of his new Commonwealth, having travelled into the Island, where he had converse vvich Thales, a man ennobled for his Lavvs, and Lyrick Poems; for vve Strabolib.to. must not suppose Minos the sole Author of the Cresiam customs. As the Cre- pag. 482. tians had their Cosmi, so the Spartans their Ephori, though most probable it is that these vvere brought in after the death of Lycurgus. As they a Senate, fo these also endovved with the like immunities. The Concio, or Assembly of the people in Crete, resolved nothing but what was propounded by the Cosmi and Senate , which was followed by the first constitution of Lycurgus the Senate propounding at Sparta. The Periaci, and Heloti fitly Ariflot Politic. agreed, though the Cretians received lesse dammage from the former, be- lib.2. cap.8. ... cause being in an Island there were no Neighbours to hold correspondence vvich the flaves. The Syffitia of the Lacedamoniaus vvere fetched, as Ariffotle proveth, from Crete; and their Phiditia taken from the Andria of that place, as also their education of Children was agreeable to the Cretian, Plato commendeth much the Commonwealth of Crete, and the Legislator for De Legibus his vviídom and prudence, though he abominateth the immodest love of libs. boyes, and rejecteth his reason for it, vehich yet Lycurgus so approved, asto put it in his model. Aristotle condemneth it, as also amongst some other things, the Election of the Cosmi, and their too great advantage they had of raifing seditions in the State, when they came to be punished. But Polybius affirmeth the two Commonwealths of Crete and Spares to have vafily differ-

GHA>. V. The Athenian Kingdom Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. ed, not fearing to blame Ephorus, Kenophon, Califthenes, and Plato, for SECT. 4.

faying they were very like; because with the Cretians it was usual to ingroffe Land and Money, whence they were avaricious, contentious, fedition, and what not? moreover they had annual Magustrates, whereas the other Lib. 4. & 6. had two Kings for life. They were, he faith, fraudulent and crafty in their private demeanour, and most unjust in their publick Councils. Though fome Proverb cum publick abuses taxed by Poisbus, might have crept in in antient times; yet it Cretosfe Cretifappeareth from the testimony of that Verse of Epimenides a Cretian, which sine, lib. 8. St. Paul cireth and confirmeth, Kpures dei Leveau, нана Энеја, уастерея фрwi, that the disposition even of the old Cretians (for Epimenides is found contemporary with Solon) was very naught.

12. Minos succeeding his Step-father, begat Lycastes, and left him his Successor, who on I an the daughter of Corybas begat Minos the second, fathered also on Jupiter. He had issue by Pasiphae (daughter to Sol and Crete) Dencalion, Aftrea, Androgeos, Ariadne, and other children. Androgeos going to the folemn Feast of the Parathenea, instituted by I hefeus at Athens, excelled all men in the exercises then performed, whereby he became farmiliarly acquainted with the Sons of Pallas. This when Agens perceived, fearing they might by his means receive some aid and affistance, he procured him to be made away, at which Minos fore aggrieved, came to Athens to demand fatisfaction, but obtaining none, is faid to have procured from Jupicer a Famine to fall upon all Greece, and especially Actica, which could not be abated, till he received farisfaction. A (b) yearly Tribute then (b) Plutarch. be imposed on the Athenians, of seven Boys and as many Girls, which being " fupra. unwillingly willing to fubmit to, they were fore displeased when they came to part with their children, and repining at Agemas the author of their calamity, at the third time of fending, Thefew offered himself to go amongst the rest. The Fable is, that they were to be devoured of the Minotaure, a Monster, whose upper parts were like to those of a Man, but resembled a Bull in the other. Some thought there might be such a Monster indeed, but most account it fabulous, and it is interpreted to be meant of one Taurus, the Captain of Minos, who might have cuftody of these children, whom Aristoile will not have killed, but mide flaves, till their death. Thefeus promiting to kill this Minoraure, Egens with much adoe yielded he should go, and commanded the Master of the ship, that, whereas for the sadnesse of the occasion they used black sails, if his son came back alive, he should change them for

Minos, (which fell in love with him) got into the labyrinth where the Minothe Minotaure, taure was kept (and which was made by Dadaius, who having killed his Sifters fon at A hens, fled into this Island) and flew him. It is thought, that Philocharus when he landed, he offered the Combat to whomsoever would accept of it, apita printing them us supply. and that this Taurus, who bore himfelf high upon his valour, and was hited by all for his ill manners, was forced by Minos to accept of it. Thefens having killed him, was so admired by the King, that he gave him back the children and remitted the Tribute. Ariadne fell in love with him, whom fome say, he carried away with him, but others, that he left her behind, and fhe hanged her felf; feveral things, one contrary to another being reported of her. Peace now being made, and Thefens returning homewards, they were fo transported with joy, that they forgot to set up the white sailes; where-The death of upon Egens dispairing of his sons safety, threw himself headlong from a Rock and perished. From this At em some would fetch the name of the Ægean Sea. But others, think it was so called from Æga, the Island near Eubea; others from Aga a town of Eubea; some from Aga a promontory of Lolis, and others from the Rock Lee, lying betwirt Tenedus and Chius; Again some from Leens, the name of Neptune in Pherecedes; and others from Ageon, the fame with Briarcus, and others from a Goat, because by it's turbulency it leaperh like that creature. Festus who deriveth the name also from Ægem, mentioneth other two Originals as probable,

13. Thefeus coming into Crete by the help of Ariadne the daughter of white ones, as foon as they came within kenning of Anica.

Sucr. 4. viz. the many Islands, which to one looking at them a far off, appear as Goats. in the Greek language called Ege; and the perishing of Ege the Queen of the Amazons in it. Concerning Agens, Suidas tellerh a long story out of Nicocrates, which is refuted by the Scholiast of Apollonius, who concerning this, is to be consulted, together with Strabo and Pliny.

Thefeus gathereth the 14. Thefens succeeding his Father, set himself all manner of wayes to deferve well of his Subjects; Whereas before they were dispersed in twelve Athenians into Towns or more, he gathered them into one City, as being more convenient for strength, concord, and dispatch of publick businesse. This being hard to effect, by reason that the people were unwilling to quit their present possessions for new hopes, he went from place to place, shewing them the convenience of the thing, and that he might effectually perswade, he promised them liberty, offering to lay down all power except that of the Generalship. and of keeping the Laws; in all other things to be like them, and the power to rest in the people. The multitude being allured by this promise, he made the chief City, called Cecropia, his regal feat, and built another about it for the people, which he divided into three ranks, of Nobility, Husbandmen. and Artificers, all under the same aquality of liberty and Law. But the former fort he appointed to be the fountain of Magistracy; yet so, as elective by the suffrages of the other two. He abolished the several Courts of Judicarure belonging to the twelve Towns, and conflicted one general Privaneum in the City. Thus did he devest himself of all royalty in a manner. and brought popular-government into the State:

His exploits.

15. As Hercules had instituted the Olympick Games in honour of Jupiter, Plutarch. to he ordained the Ishmian, and dedicated them to Neptune. He failed with Hercules into the Engine Sea (some say, by himself) against the Amazons, from amongst whom he got Antiope his wife, which gave occasion to that fort of women to come against Athens, They fore distressed it by a Seige, till peace was made by Antiope or Hippolyea, as others called her. Some have affirmed, that he was not partaker in any Exploit with any of the Heroes of his time, except in that he helped the Lapitha against the Centaurs. Others again contend, that hee failed to Colchos with Jason, and affished Meleager in killing the Boar ; whence came the Proverb , Non fine Thefeo : he also performed many bravethings by himself, without the assistance of any, hence he came to be counted Alter Hercules, Having contracted near friend-Thip and alliance with Perithons the Son of Ixion, being now 50 years old, he joyned with him in stealing away Helena the daughter of Tyndarens from Sparta, and when they cast lots who should have her, she fell to him. He carried her to his Mother living at Aphidna, there to be kept till she were ripe for marriage: But having agreed that he who obtained her, should help the other to procure him a wife elsewhere, they both travelled into Epirus. to feel thence the daughter of Aidoneus King of the Moloffians, whose wife was called Proferpina, and his Dog Cerberus, he himself by the Fable being named Pluto. When he understood their errand, that they came not to wood but to steal, he laid hands on them both, and caused his Dog to devoure Perithons, kept Thefens in prison, till Hercules desired he should be fet at liberty.

16. Whilft Thelens was absent, one Meneft heus the fon of Pelens (who Was Grand-son to Erechtheus by his Son Orneus) incensed the people against him, and that upon the account of that change he had made in the State, which he would have them believe was intended to inflave them under pretence of liberty : and at this time came down the Tyndarida, Caftor and Pollux (some think by his procurement) against Athens in behalf of their Sifter. Finding that the was not there, and discovering the place of her restraint, they went to Aphidna, and taking it by force recovered her, and took Æthra the Mother of Thefeus, which afterwards accompanied her as her fervant to Troy, and at the taking of that Town was fet at liberty by her Grand-fon Demophon. By means of Menestheus, the Tyndarida were received into Athens, and great honour was done unto them, which thing contributed to his defign. For when Thefeus returned, the Citizens were fo Sact 4. wrought upon, that in no wife would they be reconciled, and so was he forced to banish himself into the Island Soyrus, having fent away his children privately to Elpanor the foir of Chalcedon into Embora, One writeth, that Diod I. 4. failing towards Cree to Dencation the for of Mines (whole Sifter Phadra he P. 184) had married after the death of Antiops) he was driven by tempest upon Sey- Atticis. rws, the Inhabitants whereof receiving him with great horiour for reverence A. M. 2802. of his name, Lycomedes their King, our of jealousie, made him away, having led him up to a Rock, as though to snew him the Country, and thence tumbled him down headlong.

And death. Menestheus.

His exile

17. Menest hens then began his reign at Athens, in the dayes of Acreus King of Argos and Mycona, and some years after accompanied Agamemnon and Menelans to the fiege of Troy, with 50 thips. During the War, we hear little or nothing of him, but after the City was taken, he honoured the Funerals of Ajaz the fon of Telamon with a Funeral Oration, which work belonged Philoftrains in to the Athenians to perform for those that died in the Wars ; but within a Hovier, while he himself afforded matter for that office, dving in the Isle Melos at his return homewards. After his death Demophon the fon of Thefeus, (who together with his brother Achames, (both begotten on Phadra) followed Elphenor to Trey) went to Atheus and obtained the Kingdom. As he returned, Phyllis daughter to Si. hon and Queen of Thrace, fell in love with him, Scruius in and wood him for marriage. He told her he would fift go to fettle his af- Edgs, S. Virfairs at Athens, and then come and marry her; but staying somewhat long, git. the had no patience to wait, and thinking the was flighted, hanged herself, He stole the Palladium or image of Pallas, from the Argives, who brought it from Troy, and in their return with Diomedes made encursions unwittingly into Assica, being driven by night upon Phalerns, and not knowing where they were. He reigned about 34 years, and then left his Kingdom to his fon Oxymes, who after twelve was succeeded by Aphidas his son, who reigned but one year. Then followed Thymasis the fifteenth King, who being a Ba- Atheneus, flird, is reported to have murdered Aphidas his brother, and after eight years loft the Kingdom, He was the last of the Erechthide that reigned at Oxyates. Aphidas.

Demophon.

> 18. It hapned that the State of Athens had War with the Bootians about Celana, a place feated in the confines of both Countries, and it pleafed the parries that their Kings should decide the quarrel in their own persons. Thymates declined the combat, and for that was deposed. Melanthius a Messenian, who was then driven from home by the Heraclida accepted it, and overcame Xanthus the Bastian King by a stratageme; for when they came to fight he cried out : Thou doft not justly Xanthus, bus contrary to our agree. Freatinus Strament, who accompanied with another person, comest to fight against me a tagem. 1, 2, c, 5. fingle man, at which he wondering, and looking back to fee who should fol- Exemp. 41. low him, Melanthius ran him thorow with his Lance. He then reigned in the room of Thymates, and at his death left Codrus his fon his Succeffor : Codrus the last who willingly offered himself to death for the safety of his Athenians, There were now distasts arisen betwint the Heraclida; who held Peloponnesus, and Justin lib. 2. them, for that they harboured the lones, and other fugitives out of that Country; and at length the Heraelida intending to make War upon them, confulted the Oracle beforehand concerning their successe, which answered, that they should have the better, if they kept off their hands from the Athenian King, and not otherwife.. They gave order to their men to beware of hurt-ting him; but he getting knowledge of the matter, difguifed himself, and going into their Army, by blows provoked them to kill him. This being known, they raifed their Siege, though some of them had already gor into the City, on whom then the Athenians had mercy, and dismissed them without any harm. This happened 486 years after Cecrops, 114 after the destruction A. M. 2935. of Troy, 35 after the return of the Heraclida; 293 before the first Olympiad,

Melanthius.

The Archans A. M. 2935. tor life.

19. After Codrus his death, the people took away the title of King and Meffenicia.

Strabe lib. o.

SECT.4. gave the name of Archon with a diminished power to his Successor, who might be called to an account for what he did, though he kept the principalicy during life. This was Medon the fon of Codem, whom the rest of his brothers despising, as weak, and lame, led out. Colonies of the Ionians, and Idem in Achain fome others' (Auica being now full) into Asia, and there founded the 12 fa- cis & Strabo

Cities of Ionia, mous Cities of the Ionians, viz. Epbefus, Miletui, Priene, Colophon . Myur. 1.14. Teos, Lebedus, Claromena, Erythia, Phocaa, Chins in the Island Chios , and Samus in an Isle of the same name over against Ephesus, which at first being subjected to several petty Princes, at length joyned in one body politick, and became very famous in after-ages. Twelve other Archons succeeded Medon, named from him Medontida, and in this condition the state remained unaltered for 215 years, during which time there is little remarkable, either con- Eufeb. cerning Princes, or Commonwealth; onely the time of Ariphron the 10th. Archon fell in with that of Sardanapalns, and Alemaon the fon of Alchvlus was the last, who dying when he had scarce reigned two years, the people took another occasion to alter the Government; for being weary of this perpetual power of their Princes, they confined it to the space of 10 years.

This change being made about the beginning of the first Olympiad, Charops A.M. 3248. was the first that underwencit, in whose time Dionysius of Halycarnassus will have Rome built. Six others fucceeded him in the power thus qualified, whereof Hippomenes the fourth in order was the last of the posteri- suidae. ty of Codrus, being deposed for his cruelty to his daughter, whom being defloured, he shut up with an Horse that had no meat given him, and so caused to be devoured quick. The last of all the fix was Eryxias, who after Euste. he had Governed fix years, either died, or being deposed for some Crime, opened the Door to a new and greater innovation, after 70 years continuance of the Decennal Government.

Annual Archons, nine in Archons for ten years.

20. The people still burning with a defire of greater liberty, abolished A.M. 3318. quite the power of a fingle person, and instead of him made nine Archons, to be but annual, a new Election being to be made every year out of those de Repub.

who for birth, wealth, or favour were most considerable in the Citie. The Athen & mifirst in order was properly called Archon, as principal of the College, and tohen Emmism. Eponymus, because he signed the Calendar, and all things that fell out in that year were faid to be done, he being Archon. He had the care of their fuperstition, to him it belonged to take Cognisance of differences arising about inheritances, as also betwixt Husband and Wife, Parents and their Children, and Kinsfolks one amongst another: Moreover, he took care of Orphans, and affigned them Guardians. The fecond in order had the name of King. who taking care also of another part of their superstition, determined causes, both Civil and Criminal, or referred them to the greater Courts of Iudicature. The third was called Polemarchus, who besides the charge of some religious customs, had that of War committed to him (whence he had his name); was General of the Armies abroad, and at home the Judge of strangers. The other fix were telmed The smothere, being keepers of the Laws, or Customs, Judges in several Cases, and had power to commit to prison all suspicious persons. These were their distinct Offices. Altogether they had Authority to affemble the people, as the Kings, and of ther Archons in former times, and to resolve with them about publick bufinesse.

21. Such were the improvements of that liberty, which Thejeus bestowed on the people: But though they feemed great, yet were they not arrived at that heighth as to fatisfie the heady multitude offended with the too great power of the Nobler and Richer fort; and which finding it felf aggrieved with the many inconveniences that arose for want of Laws (the sentence of the Magistrate, or Judge being the onely Law) many grudges and discords thence arole, which so far prevailed, as that after 50 years, power was given to one Draco, a man honest and wife, but of austere feverity, to make Laws, Many he framed, reformed the Court of the Ephera, which he made to confift of A.M. 3381. 51 persons, not under 50 years of age, who were to judge of murders, and fuch like Crimes. But so severe were his constitutions concerning manners Sect. 4. (judging no leffe than death to the leaft offence) that as they were by Domis faid to be written in blond, so in processe of time they grew intolerable, and Plutach, in little, or no relief had the poorer fort against the power of the great ones, with solone. the usury of whom they were even exhausted : Hence grew great disturbances in the Commonwealth, the Commons hated the Nobility, and the Nobility feared the Commons; nothing but desolation seemed to attend the State, fome being earnest for a Popular Government, others for an O'igarchie, and others for a middle way. These tempered, and posted the other two parties; but nothing at length feemed to avail, except all the whole power should be put into the hinds of one, and a plain Tyranny erested as the onely fufficient remedy for these desperate distempers. The common fort were hot for an equal division of the publick grounds now in the hands of the rich, and fit to make themselves an head, and do it by force; but the most prudent fort taking notice of Solon, now very eminent, a man of unblameable life, and unbyaffed by the interest of either party; him they befought, having furficient wisdom, to compose these differences of the distracted Commonwealth; offering him the power and command of all.

GHAP. V. The Athenian Commonwealth Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. 115

How he became eminent.

Solon

22. A year or two before those great diffurbances, hapned that which give a rife to the eminency of Solon, and as well out of respect to the Commonwealth, as in relation to him, must be recited briefly. The Island Salamine Plutach, & lying not far from Athens, had of late time revolted to the Inhabitants of Diegenes Later Megara, and for the recovery of it feveral attempts had been made with first mainta fuch bad fuccesse, that a Law was preferred whereby it was ordained Capital mus Stratagem. for any man thenceforth to move about it. Solon confidering the confequence 1. t. hereof, counterfeited himfelf mad, and going into the place of publick meeting, began, as the people came about him, to fay a company of odd conceited Verfes, whereby he so moved them, that they repealed the Law, and decreed another expedition against the Megarian, ordaining him their Captain therein. Solon fayling towards Colias, where the Albenian women were keeping the Fealt of Ceres, sent one to the Megarians, who counterfeiting himself a sugitive should tell them, that now at this place they might easily furprize the women. This being done, he fends them away, and in their rooms and clotths, left there a company of beardleffe young men, who being provided of Daggers, stabbed the Megarians when they came to seize on their prey, and so by this plot (which several Authors say was executed by Pisstratus though devised by Solon) the Athenians again reco-Frontinus vered the Island. Solon proved it to belong to Athens, for that Philaus Strat, l.4. c.7. the fon of Eurstages, and Grand-son to Ajax Telamonius, being made free Juliu 112. of the Cirie, gave it unto the Athenians; and because that such as were bu- est, 1.4. ried there, lay with their faces to the West, according to the Athenian custom, whereas the Megarians buried their dead in a carelesse manner, not regarding

23. Solon having got much credit by the successe of this enterprise, procared such to be called to an account, as had been guilty of the death of Cylon. This man being famous for his victory at the Olympick Games affected Herod. 1.5. the Tyranny of Athens, and endeavouring to feize on the Castel, failed therein, and fled for refuge to the image of Minerva, whence the Magistrates giving him hopes of life, took him and his companions, and notwithstanding put them to death. This now was accounted a great injury offered to the goddeffe, and fuch, as both the actors thereof, their posterity and Countrey were esteemed as contaminate, and lyable to heavy punishment. Solon persiwaded them to submit to tryal, and 300 Judges were appointed out of the chiefest persons, who condemned them to banishment. Whil'sthis was adoing the Megarians fell upon the Athenians, took Nijaa, and recovered Salamis: strange fights also appeared, whereit the Citie was afrighted, and their Prophers told them that certain Crimes were committed, which must be expiated. For this cause Epimenides a famous Philosopher (whom some reckon amongst the number of the seven wise-men in the room of Periander) was sent for out of Greece to cleanie the City; a plague having also fain upon it at this time, as Diogenes Laerting writeth in his life. Several Altars upon this occasion he caused to be made, as amongst the rest one (y) to Continuelie (or Reproach) (y) ciero de and another to Impudence. At (z) this time also it is thought that the Legibus lib.2. and another to Impudence. At (2) this time also it is thought that the Califoldous Altar was erected to the unknown God, they having received no benefit by (1) Ifodous have well as the Altar was erected to the unknown God, they having received no benefit by (1) Ibd. Epift. 69. making addresses to their known ones, but present ease as soon as this Altar and a Temple of the same dedication were made and used. One (a) faith (a) Hieron, in this was the Inscription: To the gods of Asia, Europe, and Africk, to gods comment, add unknown and firange; (b) another that it ran after this manner: To the Titum. gods of Afia, Europe, and Africk, to the unknown and strange god, in the (b) Bera. fingular number. But these calamities increasing publick discontents, made 24. He feared much to undertake so difficult a task as a serlement; and as the affiftance of Solon the more definable. for the Tyranny (fo then it was termed) he refuled it absolutely; though his Lege Plutareb friends perswaded him that by his moderation and good demeanour he might in Salone, friends perswaded him that by his moderation and good demeanour ne might diffict, sib.s., easily change this odious name into that of a Kingdom. But being elected politic, Julius ethny change this ochous name that the third year of the 46 Olympiad, fome pollut ibs. 93 years after the last change of Government, and in the dayes of Nebn- A.M.3411.

Drace.

wealth.

400.

He reformeth chadnezar, King of Babylon, he fer himself about the work of reformation, the Common- and first of all eased the people of the great burthen of their debts, whereby they redeemed their bodies and chates; which act was in Greek called Sifachthea. Some have thought that it was onely of the interest, but others of the principal too, alleging him to have forgiven 5 (fome have faid 15) ta-lents that ivere owing to himself. However, he made them more able to fatisfie their Creditors by raifing the value of money, as of the Attich Mine from 75 drachms to 100. Then for the ferling of the Commonwealth; in way thereto, and in the first place he abrogated all Draco's Laws, except that against murther, as too severe. The four Tribes of the people he left as they were ordered by Erechthem, diffinguished into Souldiers, Crafif-men, Huf-Band-men, and keepers of Goats; but for that here was no diffinction made according to estates, and it concerned those that had most therein to take care of the Commonwealth, he also divided the people into four Ranks, or Classes, according to their substance, and our of the three first ordered all Magistrates to be chosen, the fourth and last having equal Votes in the great Council, or Assembly of the whole body of the State, in which lay the fupream power. The first was called Pentacofo Medimni, the second was the Ordo Equestris, the third called Zengita, and the fourth Theta. Hereby he gave a right to the common fort to elect, and call to account the Magistrates, to have an hand in making, and repealing Laws, and in the highest Court of Judicature, by which equal temper he suppressed all these factions that had lately risen. And yet, lest the multitude should be too much elevated, belides the Court of Areopagus he inflittuted a Senate of 400. (100 to be chosen out of each Tribe) through which all things should passe into the great A sembly, wherein nothing was to be debated, but what was offered from A Senate of this Council, elected a new every year.

25. The College of the nine Archon, he left Elective as he found it; but ordained that they should not be admitted to take their Outh, till they had first in the Senate made proof of their descent, and the unblameablenesse of their life (especially of their dury to their Parents) and then been approved in the great of fembly, after which they were to take their Oath in the Kings Vide ubbonem Gate, to keep the Laws, and accept of no bribes; or if they should be there- Emmium in deof derected, then to erect at Delphos a Statue of Gold of their own bigneffe: forips. Reip. and the same Oath they were again to take as they went up to the Cassle, Athen, Crowned with Myrtle. Unto them severally he affigned their Offices; for the most part as they were before, onely more certain; and for a reward of their good service, if after much, and through examination they were found upright and faithfull, they were to be chosen unto the Senate of Arcopagus, Of Arcopagus. the Colledge of the Archous being hereby constituted the seminary of it. To this Council, confifting of most grave, experienced, and upright men, an in-fpection was given into all concernments of State, a power of preferving Sect. 4. the Laws and Customs, and also of reforming manners, in which particular they were so severe, that once they condemned a boy, for a custom of pulling our the eyes of Quails, as hereby berraying a bad disposition. They met ordinarily thrice a moneth on Mars bis bill (whence the Council had it's name) but extraordinarily as occasion required, and then in the place called the Kings Gallery. As for the Council of Stare confishing of 400, it had power also to determine great matters and controversies of it self, and if it faw it convenient, to report them to the people. If the affent of the people was had, then passed it's acts and constitutions into firm Laws; if nor, they continued in force one year, and no longer. To this Council moreover it belonged, to provide for fuch as were grown poor, and were to be maintained by the publick; to call all indebted to the State to an account, and provide for the making of Gallies. 26. To the great Assembly of the people alone belonged the power of of the People, making and nulling Lawes, of Peace and War, fending Ambassadors, and giving the freedom of the City. When they were met together they took an Oath, with a bitter execuation, to confult the best they could for the good of the Commonwealth. Those that were above fifty years of age spake first, and, after the businesse was throughly debated, they signified their pleasure by holding up their hands. Solon ordained that all the Laws should be reviewed once a year, being recited by the Thesmothera. But when any were to be abrogated, or new ones made, the whole Assembly took not that matter of debate upon it felf; but committed it to the care of the most grave and prudent amongst them, chosen for that purpose, and called Nomothera, amongst which none were admitted, but such as had dealt in the most important affaires. Before them five Orators (called Syndici) pleaded concerning any Law that was to be abolished, which should not be done without mature advice, lest thereby an occasion might be given to sedicion and innovation; and what was concluded by these Nomotheta, the body of the people alwaies approved. The Assembly was had ordinarily thrice in 35 dayes, at the pleafore of the Council of State or 400; but extraordinarily upon occasion catled together, either by the same authority, of the Strategi or Generals for War, and fometimes of the nine Archons.

Courts of Tudicature.

27. For Courts of Judicature, besides the Areopagites formerly mentioned, there was that of the Ephera, founded, as its thought, by Demophen the Son of Thefens, confifting at first of 50 Judges chosen out of Auica, and as many from Ares: but Drace excluding the Strangers, made the number onely 51 Citizens, and after him Solon tempering the rigor thereof, transferred thence the more weighty matters to Areopagus, leaving the Judgment of casual homicide, and lying in weight for life, in some cases to it. The causes brought in thither were reported by the King or second Archon. There was another Court most large and common, consisting of 500, 1000, or fomerimes 1500 persons, according to the occasion, chosen by lot out of all the Citizens of 30 years old, and upwards. They judged of many, and often, of the greatest causes; and this was called the Heliastick Council, because they sate in an open place where the Sun shone. A fourth Court there was of Arbitrators, consisting of 220 chosen out of the Tribes, and being acqually divided according to the number of them, heard and determined their Causes. A fifth and least considerable there was yet, made up of thirty perfons at the first, afterwards increased to forty, going in circuit to the several forts of people gathered by Thefens into one City, heard and judged leffer matters. As for the Officers belonging to the feveral Courts, the twelve men for imprisonment, and execution, with the Officers of the several tribes, they are scarce to be mentioned by this Work.

Particular Laws,

28. For particular Laws. Solon knowing what a multitude of people inhabired Athens, took such care for prevention of idlenesse, that he absolved any fon from the dury of maintaining his Farhar, fallen into povery, that hid not procured him to be influeted in some Trade : and the same liberty he

SECT-4. gave unto fuch as were born of Strumpers. He made a Law whereby he gave leave to the people to make Testaments, which they never could do before; all the estates of deceased persons going to the next Heir. He forbad women to have any portions, lest marriages should be made for gain; yet succeeded they in the inheritances of their Farhers, in default of issue Male, Some things about Marriages and Adultery he decreed, which have been noted, and not unworthily, as abfurd. He commanded the Court of Areopagus, to take an account of all persons how they lived, and punish those that could render none. He forbad all native fruits except that of the Olive, to be transported out of Attica. And nothing is more memorable than this, that he deprived of all honour, and rendred infamous those, that in a time of faction and fedition in the City, joyned themseves to neither party, concluding, that fuch as were concerned for the good of the Commonwealth, would according to their best apprehensions, side with such as contended for it. His Laws he exposed to publick view, that none should pretend ignorance in them. He sware the People, Magistrates, and Senate, to observe them for an hundred years, and the Archons, if they brake them, to fet up a Statue at Delphos, of their own bignesse. Then to conclude his Work, he reformed the Calender, much amiffe at that time, and reduced the year into such a form as was agreeable to the motion of the Sun.

29. The work being over, there wanted not those who would both praise kdemibid, & and discommend it. Some would be amending it by addition, others by Sub- Herodotus I, I. fraction or change, so that plainly seeing what stir would be about it, he got leave to travel for ten years: in which time he went into Agypt, where he conversed with Amesis, and into Lydia, where he had that notable conserence with Craeles, before mentioned. But while he was abroad, the City anew brake into factions. There were the Pedians headed by Lycurgus, the Paralians by Megacles, and the Diacrians by Pifistrains, one who was defeended from Codrus the last King. To the later, a company of the poofer fort joyned themselves, such as were most invererate against the rich, and although they had not much to fay against Solon's Laws, yet were they defirous of innovation, hoping to be gainers therein. Things were in this posture when Solon returned home, who being received with much honour, laboured by his authority to take off the ring-leaders of the feveral factions, and reconcile them. Pifistratus seemed to give ear to him, being a man of deep diffigulation, and so much apter to deceive, in that no man appeared so great a friend to equality as he, and therfore a greater Enemy to the change of the present Government. But Solon quickly found him out; yet prosecuted him not with any open malice, but fought to draw him from his defigns by fair means, often professing, that no man was more inclined to Virtue, or to make a good Common-wealth's-man, if the defire of rule and foveraignty were but taken from him.

30. For all this, Pififtrains proceeded, and by his feeming readinesse to patronize the poorer fort against the rich, invaded the Tyranny. He wounded himself and his Chariot-horses, and drove into the Forum, making shew of platarch ut an escape from great danger, and defired of the people that he might have a supply guard affigned him to defend his person. He so far prevailed, as to have fifty persons allowed him, though Solon stepping to him, told him he did not well to ast Ulyffes in Homer, (who, as he counterfeited himself wounded to circumvent his Enemies, fo did he the fame, that he might cheat his fellow Citizens) and opposed the thing as much as possible. Having obtained the liberty of fo many followers, he then took leave to increase their number, and thereby got the Castle into his hands, at which the City was much startled. Pifratus inva- Solon went into the Assemblie of the people, where upbraiding them with their former flupidity, he earnefly exhorted them yet now to pluck up that tyranny by the roots, which before they might have so easily prevented, but not at all prevailing, such consternation had seized upon men's spirits, he got him to his house, and laying his weapons before his Court-gare, said, he had discharged his duty towards his Country, and thenceforth kept himself quiet, continuing

covereth the

continuing in the City, though his friends moved him to flie for his life. But SECT. 4 fuch a reverence bore Pififratus not onely to his person, but also to his Laws, that he retained still the most of them in their former vigour. A few he made himself, as one for maintenance of maimed Soldiers (though some artribute this also to Solon, and say, the occasion was given by one Thesippes) and another against idlenesse, whereby he caused the ground to be more diffigently tilled, and the City more quiet than usual. By these two he effectually provided for his own interest, obliging the Soldiers by the one, and by difperfing the people into the Country through the other (under prætence of preventing idlenesse, and keeping up tillage) cutting off-from them all occasion of plorting any thing prejudicial to him. For he knew well, that as Thefew his gathering them all up into one Town, conduced to the preservation of that liberty he meant to bellow on them, fo this contrary way tended as much to the keeping up of his arbitrary power.

Expelled.

Restored.

Forced our

again,

31. Being seized of the Soveraignty, he carried it exceeding well to People, Magistrates, and Laws, and much adorned the City, of which he held possession about three years. Then Alegacles and Lycurgm, with their parties, so prevailed, as they banished both him and his tyranny, and being condemned, his goods were fee to fale, of which none but Callias the Son of Phanippus would adventure to buy any. But not long it was, before those that cast him out, became the means of his restitution; for falling out amongst themselves, Megacles, upon promise that he would marry his daughter, covenanted to bring it about, and effected it by a strange and ridiculous wile. There was a woman in the City named Phys, almost four cu- Val. Max. 1.1 bits tall, but otherwise of tolerable beauty: her being armed, curiously dref- c. 2. Ext. fed and feated in a Chariot, they drove into the City, fending some before exemp. 2. to proclaim, that the Athenians were to receive Pisstraum, whom their goddeffe Minerva esteeming above all mortals, now in her own person reduced into her Castle. This being acted with wonderful confidence, the Citizens were fo far besotted, as to adore this woman for Minerva, and received Pififrama as brought by her; whereby he recovered the tyranny about five having several sons already in the source of their age; and Megacles being years after his expulsion. 22. He married the daughter of Megacles, according to agreement; but supposed guilty of that hainous crime about the death of Cylon, not yet expiared, left he should put them befide their just expectations, and his family Herodot. I. v. be attainted, he neglected to use her as his wife. She concealing this for some time, at length revealed it to her mother, who told it to Megacles. He took it in great disdain, and reconciled himself to his Enemies, consulting again how he might out him, which Pififtrasse understanding, departed of his own accord out of Attica, and went to Eretria a City of Enbas in the third year of the 44th Olympiad, about ten years after his restitution. Ten other years he continued in exile, arthe end whereof, by the advice of his eldelt Son Hipping, he laboured again for a recovery of his principalitie. Scraping together all the money he could make, he drew the Thebans and Argives into confæderacy with him, and got Marathon a Town of Attica into his hands. whither flocked to him from Athens and the Country round about those of his Faction. He marched then against the City, and put such to flight as came out against him, but fearing they might rally again, he gave order to his Sons to ride after and bid them fear nothing, so they would but get them to their own homes, and be quiet. Thus recovered he the tyranny once more, which then he laboured to establish, nor by the shedding of blood (from which he wholly abstained, and therefore hath the best report of any of his condition) but by feeking confæderates, making himfelf a confiderable revenew, and taking the Sons of those his Enemies, that remained in the City, for Hollages, sending them into the Isle Nazu to be bept. Not long after his restitution he died (for his whole reign including the exile amounted but to 32 years) about the time that Crosin King of Lydia was overthrown by A. M. 3460.

Cyrus, in the second year of the 57th Olympiad, and the 346oth year of the deth the tyranny,

Tyndareus.

Helena.

Menelaus.

33. This onely could be reprehended in Pififratus, that he had cast the oak upon his Countrey. For fuch an one it was as had no great weight in it, more than what lay in the minds of the Athenians, not accustomed fince the dayes of Thefew to Roop to Soveraignty. Though he commanded them Plutareh & to apply themselves to husbandry (contrary to what Thesem had done , who Diogenes Laggathered them out of the Countrey into the City) that he might take them time of from plotting against him, yet required he no other Tribute than the Tenths of their profit, which had wont to be payed to the former Kings. He killed no man, neither banished any; he made spoil of no mans fortune, or estate, injured none by any contumetious demeanour, abused neither the one Sex nor the other through any libidinous carriage. The Laws of Solon with the order of Magistrates he eft as he found; and though he had most cause to be averse to him, yet detained he him in Town when he would have been gone, desiring his counsel and advice for the better Government of the Commonwealth, contenting himfelf onely in having a power greater than the Laws, in which respect Cicero was wont to call Julius Cafar, who trode in his steps, by the name of Pifistrains. He was as learned as any in his Gellius 1. 6. time; & deferved very well of learning, being the first that erected a publick Li- c. ult. ciero brary. Whereas Homer's Verses before this were scattered abroad and confused, he purchased with Gold whatsoever of his works he could come by, 6.14. and fetting on work the ableft Grammarians, put them into that order of Iliads and Odyffes, in which they are now found; to which work Solon is faid to have contributed his diligence. He had two fons, Hippias and Hipparchus, to whom he left the principality of Athens. They for many years reigned, as lovingly betwixt themselves, so with moderation towards their subjects, till the younger being flain by Harmodius and Aristogison, upon occasion of some injury supposed to be offered by him to the fifter of Harmodins, the other exasperated hereat grew severe towards the Athenians, and for that was expelled by them four years after his brothers death, and his Tyranny was utterly Subverted. But these things falling in with the reign of Darim, the son of Hyftafpes; belong properly to another place.

SECT. V.

The most antient Kingdom and Commonwealth of bitants of La-

so called.

His Countrey was most antienly inhabited by a people called (a) Lele- (a) Paulavias ges, so named from Lelex their King, said to be an indigena, or a na- in initio Latural of the place, because it was obscure from what Countrey he, and his conicorum & people came. From him this Region was called Lelegia, and Lelegis. He Meffenicorum. left two fons, Myles and Polycaon, whereof the former succeeded him in his Kingdom, and the later marrying Meffene, the daughter of Tryopas King of Argos, went, and subdued that Countrey, which from her he named Messemia. Myles was succeeded by his son Eurosas, who perceiving the water to stand in the grounds, drew a Dirch from it to the Sea, which draining the earth, continued to be a River, bearing his name. He, dying without if- A.M. 2598. fue-Male, left his Kingdom to Lacedamon, the fon of Jupiter, and Taygeta, from which woman the Mount Taygeius took its name. For Lacedamon married Sparce, the daughter of Eurotas, and when he came first to the King-Sparta, whence dom named the Countrey from himself, and to the Citie which he built gave his wives name; it being ever after most properly called Sparta, when any distinction was made betwixt Countrey and Citie; although it be also fometimes read Lacedamon, as in (b) Thucydides, and Latine (c) Authors. (b) L. v. As for the Inhabitants of both places, those of the Citie are by Herodosus, & A & Aaxs-Xenophon, and Diodorus called Spariati, in opposition to those that lived up danuar and down in the Countrey, comprehended under the name of Laced amontans. (c) Livius The

The descent of the Heraclide.

Procles and Eurystheacs obtain sparta.

GHAP.V. The Lacedemonian Kingdom Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. 121

The Citie was built in the dayes of Crotopus, King of Argot, and Amphyrrion Sect. 5. of Athens, 303 years before the destruction of Troj, 711 before the first O.

2. Amyolus the ion, and Succession of Lacedemon(d) begat three sons, which (d) Pausau, ut are recorded; Argalus, Cynorias, and Hyacimbus, of which the later, as supra. Apollodorus writteh, being for his beauty the delight of Apollo, was killed by him at unawares, when they were at play. Argains succeeded his father, and left his Kingdom to his brother Cyno tas, whose son and Successor was Oeba-Ins., from whence the Country was also called * Ochasia, and Castor and * Servius ad Pollux, by Statius, Ochalida fraires. On his first wife he begat Hypocoon, Georg. 4. and Icarion, and on his second Gorgophone (the daughter of Perfeus by An- Apollod. 1.3. dromeda, and widdow of Perieres) his son Tyndareus. The former and later Paufan. after his death, contended about the fuccession, and Tyndareus having the A. M 2646.

worft of it, was conft-ained to banish himself for many years, till at length he Diodorus Sicuwas restored by Hercules (who slew Hippocoon and his ten sons, with a great number of the Spartans) but on this condition delivered was the Kingdom to him, to keep it for He cules his own Children, and restore it when it should be demanded. Tradareus of Leda, the daughter of Thestins an Atocaster and Pol-liam, begat Castor and Pollux (called DioCuri, as the supposed off-spring of Jupiter) and on her, or some other, a daughter named Helena. The two fons being famous in their lives, grew more renowned after their death, having the esteem of gods, and from them was named the constellation of Gemini. Helena was she that made such a broil in the World, being first solne by Theseus, afterwards married to Menelans, and from him stolne again by Paris, who kept her till the destruction of Troy, as hath been shewed. Her two brothers dying before their father, Menelaus with her obtained the Kingdom of Lacedamon, through the special favour of Tyndareus, who from A. M. 2809. amongst 29 suters , (all Princes of Greece) made choice of him. Lest those great ones should fall out amongst themselves, he bound them all with an Oath to be Defendants to whomfoever he would give her; which he did by the advice of Ulyfes, upon promife to affift him in his fute being one of the number. This we do not find that he did; but in way of requital procured for him Penelope, the daughter of Icarius, 3. Menelans on a flave begot two base sons; but by Helena had onely a daugheer named Hermione, which he married first to Orestes, the son of his brother Agamemnon, and again taking her from him, gave her to Pyrrbus the fon of Achilles. It's thought that Orefles killed Pyrrhus; for after his death he presently resumed his wife, and Menelans once dead, he added the Kingdom of Lacedamon to his other two of Mycene and Arges; for the Lacedemonians were more willing to receive him as their Prince, than Nicoffrains and Megapenthes the baffard fons of Menelans. Tifamenus his fon succeeded him in his Kingdoms, out of all which he was outed by the Heraelide, or posterity of Hercules, as before was shewed, by the help of the Dores; with him the Achaans being also banished, who were Originally of Petions in Theffaly; for Achans their Progenitor was the fon of Xuehus, Grand-fon to Deuca'ion by his fon Hellen. Argos fell to Temenus by lot; A. M. 2901.

Crespontes got Messenes and Lacedemon became the portion of Protles and Eurysthenes the sons of Aristodemus, who was flain at Delphos (for Panfanias judgeth this the most probable opinion) by the fraud of Pylas, when they were preparing for the expedition. Thenceforth the Lacedamonians were accounted Doves; who, if formerly they were part of the Acheans, and going to Troy, at their return were expelled by those that remained at home, and so forced to seek out new seats, and received the name of Dores from their Captain, as Plato writeth; then had they full as much right to the Countrey as the Heraclida themselves, the ritle of whom we have formerly shewn. This change hapned 80 years after the destruction of Troy, as Thuerdides gathereth; 327 before the first Olympiad, in the dives of Melanthus, father to Codrus the last King of Athens, the year of the World 2901.

A. The two brothers Enrysthenes and Precles were Twins , and that fo

SECT. S. Both Kings with equal power,

like, as their mother not knowing them afunder, was ignorant which was the eldeft, and therefore the Lacedamonians made them both Kings with equal Lege Herodot. power: onely because Eurysthenes was first washed and fed, he was vulgarly 1.6. c.52. accounted the elder; and though their families were of the same dignity, yet was his accounted fomething the more honourable. In their minority Therus their Uncle by the Mother's fide managed the Kingdom for them, in obeying whom they ever agreed; but in nothing elfe, though Twins, and fo like one another. This difference was in a manner propagated to their pofferity, which continued on both sides for many Generations downwards by the names of Eurysthenida and Proclida, and being partakers in what is commonly accounted to bear no corrivals, no wonder it is that emulation should be continued, but much that for fo long it kept within the bounds of civil concord. After these two followed their two sons: Agis for Eurysthenes (from whom pintarch, in the lists made the Kings of this family were also called Agida) and Sous for Procles. In Lycingo. their time it hapned that the Inhabitants of Helos (a Town built by Helius the youngest son of Persons) were made slaves (both they and their posterity) strabo 1.8. to the Lacedamonian State; for whereas they as well as others had formerly pag 363. 6 the freedom of the Citie, and were Members of the Commonwealth, Age 365. took away that privilege, and ordered them to pay Tribute to Sparta, which refusing to do se standing out, they were thus punished; all other flaves to that State, though of what Original foever, being called after them Helora. Agis dying, was succeeded by Echestrains his son; and Sons some years after, Eureb. left for his Successor his son Eurytion (called otherwise Eurypon, and Eury. phon) from whom the Kings of that family were also named Enrytibuide. Echestraius was followed by Laboras his fon, and Eurysian by Prytanis, in whose reign the first quarrel arose betwixt the Lacedemonians and Argives: Laboras being dead, Dory flus his fon succeeded him the Kingdom, and in like manner after the death of Prysanis, Eunomus his fon continued the succession of that family. 5. After Dory The followed Agefilaus, Eunomus of the family of Process A.M. 2019. Rill continuing, who of a former wife begat Polydettes, and of a later Ljeur- Eufeb, in Chrogus born 150 years before the first Olympiad. Archelans, the fon of Agefi nico. Taus succeeded his father, and was accompanied in the Government by Poly- Plutarch, ut deltos, who dying without iffue left his inheritance to Lyourgus his brother. Inpid. Lyour ques then governed as King, but not long after his brothers wife proved to be with Child. She fent to acquaint him therewith, and to tell him, that if he would marry her she would make away the infant. He detesting from his heart fuch Villany, vet returned her no denial, but defired her not to practice any thing upon her felf whereby the might come in danger, for when the Child was once born he would take care for the destruction of it : and by this deceit he drew her on till the time of her Travel. When that came he fent fome to observe her, with command, if it were a Girle to deliver it to the women, but if a Boy, to bring it strait unto him. As he was supping with the Magistrates, a Boy was born and brought to him, who taking him in his arms, told the Spartans that there was their King, and prefently put him in the Royal feat. And, because all men wonderfully rejoyced at so strange a A.M. 3107. thing, admiring his Magnanimity and Justice, he gave to the Child the name of

Tutor to Cha-

Travelleth.

Lycurgus.

6. Then as Tutor to this his young Nephew, he managed publick affairs for some eight moneths; but there wanted not those of the Queens kindred (especially her brother) who reproached him to his face, as intending no good to the Child, which the also now fluck nor to fay, incenfed by his repulse in the matter of marriage. He took this in very ill part, and fearing that Leve Plutarfome inconvenience might follow these suspicions that were begotten by his chum et strab. adversaries in the breasts of several persons, resolved to cut them off by Tra- lib. 10. pag. 481. vel, wherein he purposed to continue so long, till his brothers son should come to maturity, and had begotten an Heir for his Kingdom. He went first unto Crete, where he made observations of the Laws and Customes of that Commonwealth instituted by Minos (which afterwards he made his pattern) and whence he fent Thaletas an Eminent Lyrick Poet of those times by SECTIC his charming Verses to stir up the Lacedamanians to Love and Unity. From Crese he passed over into Asia (that he might compare the luxury thereof with the Cretian severity, and as good Physick make up a temper out of both) where he found Homer's Verses, kept as it seemeth by the Sons of Creophylus (the Poet being dead not above thirty years before) which he then copied out, and bringing them home, first made them publick in Greece, though in great diforder; in which they continued till the dayes of Pifistrains. The Egyptians reported that he came down into their Countrey, and there learnt the diffunction of Military men from Artificers, and those of other callings. But whilest he thus improved himself abroad; he was much wanted at home, and often earnestly sollicited to return, by all

7. For great need there was of his presence to heal the distempers into which the State was now fall'n, the heady multitude having by its defire of loofe liberty brought all things into confusion. The first Government till the coming in of the Heraclida, for any thing that can be found, was meerly absolute , and afterwards we do not find that the Regal power was diminished, till Eurypon, or Eurytion most imprudently let loose the reigns of Government. This gave occasion to the Rabble to fly high in difobedience, and contest with his Successors when they endeavoured the recovery of their old Authority. Many great rumults and feditions were hence raised, infomuch that Eunomus the Grand-fon of Eurypan, father of Lycurgus, and fifth from Procles, was murdred in one of them with a burchers knife. These distempers increasing, and the Kings not being strong Plutarch. enough to rule the dissolute Rabble, nothing but absolute ruin and destruction on was expected, when Lycurgus returning home (of whose prudence and integrity they had had formerly large demonstrations) alone seemed able to give any hope of better things, delleth the

VV * . .)

400

-, 15

an .

8. He thought this opportunity was not be neglected, now that all were in so good a mind, and resolved to use his utmost indeavour for At his return an alteration. Herein this was the scope he aimed at, to make Provision. for equality, which he thought to be the best Nurse of Concord, and the Bulwark of all societies. To accustom the People from their tender years to obey the Laws and Magistrates, and hereby to render them more inclinable to live justly and frugally, to bridle all corrupt affections, indure labour and hardship, refuse no danger for the publick good, not death it felf if the case required. Having therefore a design to make a full evacuation of all bad humours, as he accounted them, and knowing how full of difficulty and danger this might prove to the body politick, mens minds much loathing to violent a Purgation, how confidered that they were appears be led by a shew of Religion, and having searne; how Minds pretended to have received his Laws from Fapitar, with whom he converted in a Cave, he refolved to go to Delphos, and make use of that Oracle to the same advantage. There was he received with incouraging words , faluted, Belowed of the gods a god, rather than a man, and received in an Oracle the frame of a Commonwealth, which bringing home, he called Rheers to gain the more Authority to it. At his return he first consulted with his intimate friends, and drew others on by degrees, till having made a party he ordered thirty principal persons to go Armed into the Market-place betimes in the morning sthat they might thereby frike a terrour into their Adversaries. Charitans at this A.M. atzamuch affrighted, as thinking it some plot against himself, fled to Chalciacum (the Temple of Miner ba much spoken of) where he cook Sanctuary; but understanding how things were, came forth and joyned himself to his lincle, being of a most sweet and mild disposition.

o. The Rhetra according to which he framed his Model was of this tenour. Let him build a Temple of Jupiter Syllanius and Minerva Syllania : Let him divide the People into Phyla and Oba, ordain thirty

SECT. 5. Senators , with the Archagera : then let bim call together the People betwist Babyces and Cnacion , fo let him propose concerning matters, or null them. Gamedan, Gorian, &c. In these words of the Oracle, saith Plucarch, Obe, and Phyla (that is Tribes) fignific certain pares, into which the People was to be divided : the Kings are called Archageta, as Captains : and to affemble the People , is in Greek expressed by apollazein, for that he attributed the beginning and cause of the Commonwealth to Apollo Pythius. Babycas and Cnacion is at this day called Oenuns. Arifforle writeth, that Chacion is the name of the River, and Babycas of the Bridge. In the middle betwirt these the Concio was asfembled, though there was neither Gallery nor any other accommodation, because he thought, that those things conduced nothing to Council, but rather hindred, for that Statues, Pictures, the attiring Rooms of Thearres, and withdrawing-rooms of the Court , being too curiously adorned, made those that met light and vain, diverting them with toys and idle thoughts. The multitude being affembled into one place, power was not granted no any of the People to propose: they could onely enach what the Senators and Kings had propounded. But in after times the common People perverting and wrefting their suffrages, Polydorns and Theopempus then Kings , added this to the Rhetra : But if the people refolue upon any bad shing, let it be lawfull for the Senators and Kings to diffent; that is, faith Plutarch , let them not ratifie it, but forthwich difmisse the Assembly; seeing the People deprayeth the Degree, and altereth what is best. As for Gamodan and Gortan: , Plutarch doth not interpret them, and it cannot be understood what they mean. Anothat Rhetra was this; that they should use no written Laws : another concerning expences, commanded, that the roof of every house should be made with Axe onely, and the doors with a Saw and a third ordained , that War should not be often made upon the fame Enemies: left learning to defend themselves, they should thereby be made warlike:

The Kings.

bankly vill Provident

no oblaving prepared all things for his purpole, he diffelyed the Government of his forefathers. For though he left two Kings as he found. with ther lame right of fuccession, yet took he away, almost their whole power y inflicating a Senate to reftrain them, and be an equal poile betwixt them and the People, to reduce both parties into order. Withour the Authority of this Senate the Kings could not decree nor undertake any thing of confequence. He ordered they fibrild fit in the chiefelt Lege Plutarplaces as Members of the Senate, first speak, their minds and give their chumin Lycusfuffrages p but conclude nothing without confent of the Major part. All 80. Mustificates will the impudent Epheri took formuch upon themselves role ubbonen Emup to, and did them reverence. Their imployment was to take care of minm & Deup to, and them leveled Pythii, whereof two conflantly attended them, tills. Dr. Ho-Sacrifices; to command the Pythii, whereof two conflantly attended them, tills. Dr. Ho-Sacrifices; to command the Pythii at Dolphos; they took till to be fear to conflict the Oradle of Apollo Pythius at Dolphos; they took tills. The care of Ambasiadors and other Strangers, of the saufes of women that sumbling were Helis; adoptious afforthey had charge of, fo as none could be made block of Dif without them. They give answer to Ambassadors, and looked to the se- obedience dispairing of high-wayes, t. (This was their condition as home; which amount, covered , &c. ing to no more than citulary Royalty's after that the prefent Kings had either given away their just right (as Plueurch telleth us, that Charifant joyned with his Uncte) or were deprived of it by the treaton and violence of Lyeureus and his party; the attempt of forde men is as ridiculous as teditious, who taking it for granted that the Popular Villains, the Ephori, were 120 years after this fee up by the People to reftrain the Kings (which yet cannot be granted, though thost have for hought) thence would draw a precedent to the difadvantage of true, Royal Majefty. Ber these Kings were not real Kings as to Pserogatives of Majerly, being scarcely The last of the last of the fo much as a Duke of Venice. 11. Abroad which afterwards was laid to the charge of Agefilana in behalf of the The-

11. Abroad they were the Generals of Armies, which were left to their Sectis, ordering, or disposal; so as no Council of War, or any in Commission could thwart their Commands; they onely receiving orders from the State, for their expeditions and returns. They had Judges to accompany them, a General of the Horse, four Polemarchi, besides Colonels, and other inferiour Officers, whole advice, as well as help, in the War they might use, but were at their own disposal, and obnoxious to none of them. And what is here spoken of a King, is to be extended to his Protettor, Guardian, or Tutar in his minority, by the Lacedamonians called Prodicus, such were chosen to this trust and charge, as were nearest of kin by the father's side, to the Orphans, and confequently the next Heirs, that whose was the hope, his also might be the burthen. This appeareth by feveral examples of Lycurgus himfelf, Aristodemus, and Pausanius, to be related in their due places; which though it be not admitted in other Commonwealths, and perhaps with good reason, yet these Prodici having all in their power, scarcely ever any of them was found to have plaid false, or, by reachery towards their Pupills, gone about to make way for their own preferment.

The Senate.

policitions.

12. The Senate confifted of 28 persons, besides the Kings, not under 60 vears of age. The first were fuch as had affished Lyonryus, and been helpfull Lege Plutarch. to him in the settlement, whom he ordered to continue for life; except they in Lycurge committed any offence worthy of feclusion of conceiving it not fafe for this Platon de legib. his Commonwealth, to have a frequent change of Senators, which the Kings 'xenoph, ut fumight improve to their own interest. Into this second tanck of dignity, prd. were none to be admitted, but such as had well deserved of the State by good Aristot. Polit. were none to be admitted, but tuen as nace well deterved of the state of good lib.

Service or eminent virtue; that to it might be a reward to old men, and an lib.

Than Demolib, adverincouragement to the younger fort, to be conformable to the Laws. They Demoin acre had in effect the whole executive power an their hands. They had the Supreme power of Judicature, wherein they proceded not rashly, but with great advice and delay, deferring judgement most commonly for some dayes, till they had heard both parties, and received the testimonies of witneffes : yet it was lawfull afterwards to appeal from them to the people. They were not liable to be called to an account for what foever they did; which immunity, as exceeding the moderation of a Dommonwealth in (rogether with Politic, 1.2, c. $, their fuing to the people for their places, whereas able and honest men should be fought for) amongst other things is taxed by Ariffolds. On any change

13. A Reverend and most Learned man observerh, that whatever the Kings Dr. Heylin. loft, the People got little by the alteration, being defr out of all imployment in affairs of State, and forced to yield obedience auto thirty Mafters, whereas of party and before they had but two. ... Hor the Kings and Senato affembled, and difmiffed them when they pleased, and propounded to them what they thought convenienc. For the People fo affembled it was not havfull to propound any thing to be debated or determined, nor to delivet their opinion in the point propounded : there being nothing left to them; bupto, tellifie their affent to the and demonstrate Propositions made, either by the Kings or Senate. But the curiting flattens of the Ephori in after times much inlarged the power of the People By the appointment of Lyourgus it met at the River Onacion (afreelyands called Onmens) by the Bridge Babyenial Sometimes could alia. Spartanto to Inhabitants Plutarch, in Lyof the Citie met nogether, and then it was called the Leffer, A fambly ; but curso. sorherwhiles the whole body of the Lacidamenians gathered together out inf xenoph Hellenic. all Lacoust, that was free of the Commonwealth, which went by the name of lib. 3. 6 6. Greater Mountag or Affembly, called then fimply * Toplefadignous ar and "Execution

14. Having reduced the Government to this Antimonaschical paffe, the rightly judged accould not sublish without levelling. He therefore attempted Plutarch, in vi-An equality of a thing most difficult, and ever beyond all hope of attaining. Many that in Company Lyhad got much wealth in the late turbulent times), be perfivaded to part with curit or Nume. most of it, and to an equal division of the grounds surging, charling inequality Et in Agide was to be amongst them, but what vice and virtue made; and what by argu- alibi. ments drawn from convenience, as others from necofficy, that lay upon them from the indigent and displeased multitude, the brought his seeing to perfe-

SECT. 5. Ction. Then divided he the grounds into 20000 loss, or equal portions, whereof good he laid to the Citie of Sparia it felf, (the number of Citizens amounting to fo many) and distributed the rest to the other Lacedamonians inhabiting the Countrey. Each portion contained fo much as to maintain a family in a frugal way, and no more. To the Kings a larger quantity was affigned for the maintenance of their degree, so much as might serve with moderation, and not make them abound in riches.

Iron money.

of boys.

15. That he might take away coverousnesse, and the desire of hoarding up wealth, he forbade the use of Silver and Gold Coin, putting in the room thereof Iron money, of which a great quantity amounting but to little value, no considerable payment could be made, without the help of an Horse or Waggon. Hereby it came to passe, that they were unfit to Traffick with other people, no Merchandize being imported, which he herein aimed at, as well as by another Law made exprelly against the continuance of strangers in the Citie; fearing more the contagion of the mind in his people than that of the body. And eitherwayes to prevent Luxury, he forbade that any man Plutareh. should cat at home by himself , or with his family , or to make any private feasts, without some special occasion; but ordered them to sup together in common, without any distinction of Dignity or Fortune, by fifteen cogether. Each one fent in his Provision monethly; as Meal, Wine, Cheese, and Figs, with a little money to buy other victuals. If any had killed Venicon, or offered Sacrifice, whereby any flesh was gotten, the ancient men lest that to the younger fort, and contented themselves with Broaths, of which a black fort was most used, of no pleasant taste to such as were not accustomed to eat it. As for fish, and all kinds of delicate acates, they were utterly forbidden. None were to eat or drink beyond such a proportion as sufficed nature : the Kings indeed were allowed a double Messe, but this was, that they might have on-

The Phyditia, portunity to pleasure and countenance others with part of it. All came to these publick meetings (which first were called Andria after the name of or Sysfitia. those of the Cretians, from whom Lycurgus borrowed this constitution, afterwards Phyditia and Syffitia) with their Arms, and after Supper were to go home without Torch or Candle, though never fo dark, that they might learn, if need should be, to make the same shift when they lay abroad in the field. All stately buildings he forbade, and all Trades that tended any way to the maintenance of Luxury or Excesse.

16. But to have these customes durable, it being highly necessary to breed up the youth in suitable Discipline, he also provided for that in ample man-The education ner. The first thing previous to education was very unnatural and cruel; for the Infant as foon as born, was carried to the most antient of that Tribe to be viewed; and if it was found any way deformed, weak, or fickly, whereby might be judged that it would rather prove burtheniom than beneficial to the Commonwealth, then was it to be exposed upon the craggy places of the Hill Taygerus, there to take such quarter as wild beafts, fowls, hunger, and cold would afford it. But if it feemed ftrong, lufty, and worthy to live, then Plutareh. in was it reftored to its Parents to be nurfed. And nurfed it was very harfuly, Lycurge. not used to any delicate, or costly feeding, and so used to darknesse and solicarineffe as not to be afrighted at them. When the Children were seven years old they were not committed to any mercenary School-masters, after the custom of other people; but to the care of the publick, being distributed into several Companies, over which some that were most fierce, hardy, and prudent amongst them were fet as Captains, who governed them in their sports and exercises, and to whose correction they submitted. There were also most commonly some men present at their exercises, who would rebuke and chaffice them, observing which had the most notable spirits; Lycargus leaving it in charge to the Lacedemonians to take care of other mens Children as of their own. All manner of wayes were they inured to labour and pains. Their hair was cut close to their heads, they went bare-footed from their Infancy; fought with one another naked, with as much earnefinefie as might be, and after a certain barbarous and cruel manner, were once a year whipped at the Altar of Diana Laurica, (to which goddess facrifice could not SECT. 5. be offered without mans bloud) till the bloud ran down in great abundance, their Parents beholding the fight. They would bear it with admirable patience and emulation cheerfully (nay, many times with great delight which they took in excelling one another in patience) enduring the ftroaks unto death it felf.

17. When they were past their Childhood at twelve years of age, their Padonemus.

Iren.

labours and exercises were but increased, lest vice together with years should grow upon them. They were to be content with one Coat, both Winter and Summer, and slept by Companies together upon coarse, and uneasse beds. The antiene men also oversaw them upon occasion, but the charge was committed to one of the principal, called thence Padonomus, who had power to gather them together and correct them. Over several companies certain young men of twenty years of age, called Irens, were fet, who, if no men were present, had command over them, exercised them in watches, lying in ambush, and other crasts of War, wherein if any were caught they were severely punished to make them the more wary for the future; as also if they were taken in theft, stealing with them being lawfull, and incouraged as an exercife for War, but to be surprized therein was punishable. The same Irens supping with them would make some sing, and others propose questions, in answering which they exercised their wits, accustoming them to make a short, clear, and witty answer, in the dexterity whereof the Lacedamonians excel- Plutarch, in led all others; Orators with their long-winded speeches being utterly for- Apothegmat, bidden. When the Iren corrected them, there were men flinding by to Laconicu. take notice of it, and if it was not rightly done, nor upon good grounds, he had the same punishment inflicted on him. Those boys performed several forts of exercises; but amongst the rest those called Platanista (from the place thick fer with plain Trees) were most eminent, in which with hands and feet, teeth, and nails, they fought in good earnest, to the putting out of eyes. and fomerimes to the danger of life it felf, none giving over, or shrinking one jot, than which no differace was esteemed more hamous. Such strict, and constant discipline under-vvent they all their minority, till they arrived at 30 years of age (before which time they married not, went not out to war, neither exercised any Office) so that the greatest trouble in the field afterwards feemed much more easie to be undergone.

The education of Vir-

18. The education also of young women was agreeable to this of the other Sex, that by vigilancy, industry, and enduring labour, they might be furnished with courage and resolution against all evils, being married with more ease undergo the pains of Travel, and bring forth Children of the same constitution. According to their age they had exercises of fundry forts; most of which they performed in publick, naked, and that not onely in the fight of Kings and Senate, but the young men also; which yet because of the Lacomick modelly and temperance, with the cultom of it, was not judged at all to contribute to vice, but rather to an innocent, and harmlesse emulation, and honest love. Their diet was such as might nourish them, and not any ill dispofition in them. Such were their Cloaths, and all things else about them, as long as Lycurgue his conflicutions were in force; and therefore the too great power of the women, their Luxury, and the many great inconveniences that thence arose to the State, objected so much by Arisfoile, is to be ascribed to the married fort; & probable it is that this corruption crept in in after-times, it being well nigh as easie for him to reform the women as to make this great Politic, lib. alteration in the Commonwealth, though the contrary be afferted by the Philofopher, who as it feemeth was much fatisfied in the wilfulnesse of that Sex. The fee time for marriage of men was at 30. for women at 20 years, before which it was unlawfull; but if a man within some reasonable time after, betook him nor to that estate, he was publickly difgraced by command of the Law-giver. Women had no portions; yet the Heirs carried with them their father's inheritance. No plurality of wives did he allow; and yet as for adultery it was not heard of in that Citie, against which neither did he make any Law, having already provided sufficiently against it by such strict constitutions.

19. As he provided against the flocking of strangers to Sparta, so forbad he any Citizen, or Member of the Commonwealth to Travel, (except in any expedition of War) left he should bring home with him the dissolute and efeminate cultoms of other places. Merchandizing was effeemed a base imployment, as meerly practiced for getting of wealth. Drunkennesse they rendred more abominable to Children by making their flaves drunk, that then they might behold them in that beaftly condition. He that had been fo unthrifty as not to be able to bear the charge of the Phiditia was excluded from Spata unwal- all trust in the Commonwealth. To keep them vigilant, he commanded that the Citie should not be walled, they having sufficient leasure to look carefully to it; this being even their whole calling, with their heads and hands to attend publick affairs; the drudgery of Tilling their grounds, and gathering their fruits, being imposed upon the Hilora, or publick flaves, with other fervile and Mechanick affairs. Those slaves it was not lawfull for any one privately to manumit, or fell out of Laconia, whereby increasing to fo great a number, that they equalized, or exceeded that of their mafters, they fometimes affourded occasion of great danger; upon which account this constitution is taxed by the Philosopher. For the lessening of their numbers a course was taken not altogether clear from a note of cruelty: Certain The Cipptia, young men being sent about into the Countrey, who lying hid in the day time (whence this practice was called Cryptia) by night killed as many of them as they could light on.

20. Such was the form of the Commonwealth instituted by Lyourgen, which faved him the labour of erecting any other Courts of Juffice than what have been already mentioned. For Gold and Silver being taken away, and the use thereof forbidden upon pain of death, controversies and sutes most commonly thence arifing naturally fell of themselves. He forbad his Laws Plutarch, ut to be written in Tables, because he would have them rooted in the minds of fund. the people, to which he thought the strict Discipline he erected might sufficiently conduce. After the thing was done, as it hath hapned usually in this kind, he was but ill rewarded; for fuch as had parted with their Silver, Gold, or Luxury, were so intraged as to throw stones at him, which to shun he was glad to betake himfelf to his heels, and looking back had an eye struck out by one Arcander, who yet afterwards repented him of the deed, and was vety observant of him. "One telleth us he was cast our by publick rape.; but " Valerius he who hath handled the subject of his life with greatest industry, hath re-corded, that when things began to be seried, and he saw the Commonwealth Ext. Exemp. a. thus constituted able to support it felf, he calling the people together; told them, that indeed all things were so already settled as to provide for vertue and happinesse, but one thing, and that of greatest consequence was yet behind, which was not to be enacted before first he had consulted the Oracle at Kings, Senate, Delphos. Wherefore he defired them to keep the Laws already made, and change nothing in them till his return with such answer as the Oracle would give him. All confenting he took an Oath of the King's, Senare, and people, fworn to ob. and began his journey. At Delphas he enquired whether the Laws already made, and established, were not sufficient for the vertue and safety of the constitutions State. It was answered they were, and that it should continue most glorious fo long as it would fland to them. This answer then he fent to Sparta, but, resolving never to loose them from their Oath, he there made an end of gives.

His death.

The War

and people

ferve the Laws, and

of Lycurgus.

cause the Lacedemonians went about to alter his Laws. 21. Lycureus being dead, and the State settled after this great change, it renewed the War formerly begun with the Argives, and afterwards deluded with the Aiwith the ambignity of the Oracle, commenced another against the Tegesta, Paulan in Ara pe ple of Arcadia, by whom they were worsted, and Charilaus the King cadicis, was taken prifoner, through the especial valour of the women; yet was he Hered, lib. 1.

himself by abstaining from all sustenance. Some have said that he died in Crese, and that he ordered his body to be burnt, and the afhes thrown into the Sea, lest his Relicks being brought back to Sparta, they should account themselves freed from the Oath. But * Tertullian writeth, that he familhed himself, be- * In Apologit,

CHAP.V. The Lacedæmonian Commonwealth Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. 129

presently set at liberty, upon his oath never to fight more against them, which SECT. 5. he but ill performed. After this they overthrew divers Cities, on which the Acheans had seized, some whereof made their peace, as Pansanias telleth us, and departed out of Peloponnessus. The Colleague of Charilans (or Pausan in Charillus) for some time was Teleclus, whose death gave one occasion to the Messenicis. famous Messenian War. Charilans was succeeded by Nicander his Son, and Teleclus by Alcamenes. In * the 34th year of Nicander, was celebrated * flemens the first Olympian, after the restitution of those Games by Iphium, in which Strom. lib. t. Corabus a Cook of Elis got the Prize in the Courfe. These solemnities being of fo great confequence in the knowledge of times, must not be passed over

The first

22. These exercises had in former times been held by divers others, as Hercules (both the Idaan and the fon of Amphytrion, as fome think) Pelops, Endymion, Noiens, Pelias, Lycurgus, and others. After the descent of the Heraclida into Peloponnessu, Oxylus the Ætolian also (who as we faid, was chosen their guide, and according to agreement, had the Country Paufan in Eliof Elia given to him) renewed the Games; but they were interrupted as formerly, or feldom observed, for about 300 years, till Iphium the son of Praxonidas, and Nephew of Hamon, descended from him, and one of his Succeffors, again restored them; after which they never intermitted, but were kept up for many generations. But the occasion of the last restitution was this, Greece being almost ruined by sedirions and pestilence, Iphium inquired of the Oracle at Delphos, how those evils might be redressed: and it was answered, that it was expedient for him and the Eleans to reflore the Olympick A. M. 3229. Games, whereupon he proclaimed them, and for the better celebration of Offee 34. them, procured a Truce to be mide. The place whence they had their name was Olympia, a City situated in the territories of the Piscant, upon the River Alphem, upon which account the Piscant contended a long time with the Eleans about their interest in them. There was a Temple dedicated to Jupius Olympius, and a place for races and all forts of exercises, filled with many goodly buildings which refembled another City. Near to the Town was also a place where the Eleans sare and judged of the controversies arifing about Victories, to which Crowns were given. As long as the Eleans continued under a Monarchical Government, their Prince, of the posterity of Oxylus, was fole Judge; but afterwards there were two, chosen by the votes of the people, which were after increased to the number nine, then to ten, and last of all ro twelve. This Solemnity was held once every fifth year beginning, so that from the commencing of one to the beginning of another, passed four entire years, by some mistaken for five, because of the commencewhereof immediatly preceded the Summer foldice, in the moneth by them 23. Upon this occasion meetings and consultations were had, concerning the affairs of all Greece, befides the Inhabitants of which, many flocked from other Countries. Care was here taken concerning the form of the year, for the intercalation of a day at the end of every fourth. Charge was given to the Priests of the Temple, to take notice of every new Moon, especially of that wherewith the moneth Hecatombaon began, and to proclaim it: they were also not onely to register the names of the Viltors in the several forts of Games, with other things that concerned them, but also whatsoever memorable thing occurred in the intervals. The account of time henceforth never failed, and the affaits of Greece, and other Countries, were known in a most certain order. And here the fecond interval of time amongst three reckoned by * Varre, received it's period. The first began with the beginning of * Vide center. things, and ended at the Delage, called by him unknown; the fecond begin min de Die Nawhere the first and an analysis and concluded with this radication of the Olympiade tall, cap, 21. where the first ended, and concluded with this restitution of the Olympiads, which he termed Fabulows, because the Storie thereof is mixed with Fables;

ment of the Games. The time was at the full of the Moon, the change and the third commencing with the first Olympiad, reached to his own time, which he name Historical, for that things done therein, were truly and before the Era of Christ, A. M. 3229.

24. Towards the later end of the fewenth Olympiad, a great change was A. M. 3256.

The bringing made in the Government of Lagedamon, by the bringing in of the Ephoris Jothami 10. in of the Epho-who, according to Plutarch, haddheir beginning 130 years after Lycargus.

ri into Sparta. It feemeth that for all the means used by him to gain an equality, and clip the power of the great ones, yet it again grew extravagant within this time, to Aill Politics. that the people to provide against that of the Kings and Senate for the future; got these Officers created. Five they were in number (whereof one Elam was the fifth, chosen every year by and out of the people, without any diflinction of birth or wealth; infomuch, that sometimes the meanest fort of lib. 4. men were elected, which custom is noted as bad by Aristotle. But their use plutarch in and end being onely to protect the liberty of the people, such, what ever they with Litures. were, must be preferred, as made the greatest show of love to freedom, of a than and bold wit and aversnesse towards the power of the great ones. These-plate de Leeipompus the Son of Nicander, and Grandson to Charilaus was King at this bus lib. 3. time, who bringing in, or giving way to this Office, his wife rebuked him for fo doing, faying, that he would leave the Kingdom to his Son of leffe cicco de Levivalue than he had it of his Father; to which he answered, that on the contra- bus lib. 3. ry, he should leave it so much the greater, by how much more durable. Indeed hereby it came to passe, as Plusarch observeth, that the Kingly power being lesse, was not subject to that envy which ruined the affairs of the Kings of Messene and Argos, who would not moderate their power, nor at all Roop to any popularity; and the government here being poiled, continued longer, as freed from the intestine distempers of the neighbour Commonwealth. Yet it is also observed by * one, that the reason of the prosperity and long * Machiavelli duration of the Spartan State, above that of the Athemian and others, is to fopra la prima bee fetched from it's fo much patraking of Aristocracy, and the want of Decad, di Tito that influence which the heady multitude had into the greatest affaires else Livio. 25. The general and most probable opinion is, that the Ephori were brought in in the time of Theopompus. So writeth Ariffotle, Plutarch,

(1) ple76-, and Valerius Maximus; yet (a) Herodoins having reckoned up feveral Tourist, Tes things performed by Lycarges in the framing of his Commonwealth, at appears by report language addern. Further Lycarous ordained the Ephori and Elders: of which spiess 1, 7:01 length addeth, Further, Lycurgus ordained the Ephort and Elders : of which west spine Abo. opinion Xenophon seemeth also to have been in his Treatise of the Lacedamenian Commonwealth. But though they were brought in during the reign of Theopompus, yet it is not agreed of who was the principal cause of their creati-(b) O Teir on, because the end or defign thereof is uncertaian, though that ere now spoken swing vilver of be generally received. (6) Place, and Platarch (as he confesseth) from mag osar a him, will have them created to be as a bridle to the power of the Kings, for theirs it must needs be, which he calleth hereditary. Cicero also in his third oper of y Lin Book of Laws restifieth, that the Ephere at Sparta were opposed against the ALOV 1866 2AST Kings, as the Roman Tribunes against the Confuls, who as well as the Senate बेण्या राम रक्षे were, even at the first institution, feared by the Commons, for that they were aragon d'und the chief Patrician Migistrace at that time, and the animosities in that State pur 1770 The were caused by the distinction of the two orders. Valerius Maximus maketh 3 ar Junium, the same comparison betwixt Ephori and Tribunes, and makeththem institu-De Legious 1. 3. ted by Theopompus for this very end, whom Plato also deemeth upon the (Sure and account to call the third Saviour of the Lacedamonians; fo thir he muft pring the note have been at the leaft infrumental in their infitution. Ariffolle (c) accounteth this Magistracy as the nerves of the Commonwealth joyning the parts how xeller of thereof together; because the people by virtue of it being partaker of Empire, ANA, Ma Was quiet; fo that the people feemeth especially considered in this Office, by The which in another place the Philosopher expressly faith Theopompus moderated the power of the Kings. But Cleomenes King of Sparta, as (d) Plutarch pay less ne ... himself relateth the Story, affirmed in a speech to the people, that Lycurgus having added the Senate to the Kings, the Commonwealth was for a long time governed without any other Magistracy. Afterwards, when the Meffenian (d) In CleoCHAP.V. The Commonwealth of Lacedamon Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. 131

War was drawn out in length, the Kings because they were employed abroad, SECT. 5. chose some of their friends to administer Justice, whom they left as their Deputies over the people : and those were called Ephors from their inspettion, Being at first no other than Assistants to the Kings, by little and little they affumed power to themselves, and, no body aware of it, constituted a peculiar Office. Hereof, he faid, a fign remained at that day, for that the King being called by the Ephori, refused to come once, and again; but at the third call came to them : befides, Afteropus, who first inlarged the bounds of this Office, was Ephorus many ages after.

26. The power of those Magistrates, for what end soever constituted (as Their power, of others in other places) was moderate at the first, but in processe of time, as the ambition of them, and the confidence of the people thereupon increased, it exceeded the due and just bounds, and made the Government almost degenerate into a Democracy. They not onely consulted with the Kings and Senate, resolved about the affaires of State, and judged of controversies amongst the people; but afterwards grapled even the whole power into their hands, doing all things themselves that were of moment. They governed the Assemblies of the people, proposing and gathering suffrages, they made and disanulled leagues, ordered what forces were to be sent out, for which they also made provision, they rewarded or punished, according to their pleasure, other Magistrates, calling the very * Kings to account for * Agis, their lives; insomuch that, as the Philosopher observeth, they obtained a kind of tyranny: the onely remedy was, that their Office was but annual, Paufanias; and being five in number, the defigus and indeavours of one or two, were croffed and overthrown by the contrary party, nothing being done without Vide Platarth. the consent of the whole College. They rose not up , as other Magistrates, & Corn, Nepsin presence of the Kings, with whom they mutually sware every monerh; tem, the Kings that they would rule according to the Laws; and they in the name of the people to preserve their rule thus ordered, safe and entire to them. With their entring into their Office, the year began (constantly in Winter, as we learn from Thusydides) and from one of them as principal, the year Lib. s. was named (who thence was called Eponymus,) as from the Archon at Athens. At their first entrance they were wont to publish an Edict, that the men should take off all the hayr from their upper lips, and observe strictly Plutaceh. in all the Laws, left they should be constrained to punish them, requiring obe- cleaned dience in a little, thereby to inure the people to it. In the Wars two of Ariforde, them used to go out with the Kings, to affilt them in their Councils. They were wont to proclame open war against the publick slaves or Helots, giving liberty to kill them, and thence is to be derived that cruel custom of the Cryptia, rather than from any constitution of Lycurgue, as Aristotle thinketh. The cause thereof, as Plutarch judgeth, was the conspiring of these flaves against their Masters, during the Messenian War.

The Meffenian

27. In the fecond year of the ninth Olympiad this War began, though the ground of the quarrel had been partly laid several years before the bringing in Paulanius in of the Ephori. In the dayes of Teleclin Father to Alcamines now King, Miffenicia. there being a Temple of Diana in the borders, to which both the Lacedamos Strabo L. 6, nians and Messenians constantly resorted; it hapned that some Spartan Vir 68. gins, going thither, according to the custom, were abused by the Messenians, and Telectus indeavouring to prevent the injury, was there flain: moreover, the Virgins for very shame and grief destroyed themselves, as the Lacedamomians told the story. On the contrary, the Messenians pleaded, that at this Temple Telecise lay in wait for the principal of their City, by fending thither young men, disguised in the habit of Virgins, with Poniards under their clothes ; that hereupon the Messenians coming in to help their friends , slew Telcelon, and the counterfeits, for which at that time, the Laced amonians found nor themselves so much concernd as to stir. However it was, grudges hence arose, or were rather heightned betwixt them; for the Lacedamonians often complained, that in the division of the Territories obtained by the Heraclide, Eurysthenes, and Procles, their Kings, were cheated by their Uncle

Cresphonies,

SECT. 5. Crefphonies, of the far better grounds, for which now they envied the Meffemans, thinking themselves far worthier of them, as being the much more confiderable people.

28. Animofities being raifed upon these accounts, another thing hapned which increased them to that height as they brake out into open War. There was one Polychares a Messenian, who had got the victory in the course at the celebration of the fourth Olympiad. He let out fome Cows to one Evaphnus a Lacedamonian, on this condition, to have part of the profit. Evaphnus fold the Cows, and then coming to Polychares, told him that they, and their keepers were stolne from him; but while he was labouring to gain tredit to his tale, some of the Herds men (who, as it feemeth, with the consent of Evephnus, were taken away by force) escaped from the Merchants, and acquainted Polychares with the fraud, which now the other not able to denv. asked him pardon, told him for how much the Cattel were fold, and promifed to fend the money, if he would let his fon accompany him to Sparta. He fent his fon accordingly, but when they were come together into Laconia, Evaph. mus most perfidiously murdred the young man, with the horridnesse of which fact Polychares grievously moved, came several times to Sparta, complaining bitterly, and with many tears to the Kings and Ephori, but found no Justice; infomuch that growing into a great rage against all Lacedamonians in common, he killed them as enemies wherefoever he could meet them.

29. The Lacedamonians, finding themselves concerned herein, sent to the Mellenians, demanding Polychares. At that time Androcles and Antiochus, the fons of Phintas reigning at Meffene, promifed they would report the matter to the people, and know their minds therein. The mulritude being called together, Androcles was much for the giving up of Polychares, but on the contrary Antiochus urged how unjust, and lamentable a thing it would be for him to be formented before Evaphnus, and the contention grew fo hot betwixt the brothers, that it came to blows. Antiochus his faction prevailing, Androcles with the chief of his party loft their lives. Antiochus then reigning alone wrote to the Spartans, offering to refer the businesse to the Argives, who were of the same stock with them both, or to the publick Council of the Amphylliones; or else, if neither of these liked them, to the Senate of Arcopagus. They returned no answer by the Messenger, and within a few moneths Antiochus died, and his fon Euphaes succeeded him. Nei- Pauf, Polybins ther then did they fend any meffige, nor yet renounced amity with the Mef- 1.6. fenians, but entring into secret consultations provided for the War, and bound themselves with an Oath never to return home till they had subdued

Me Senia. 30. Being bound with this Oath, and having all things in a readinesse, under the conduct of Alcamenes, the fon of Teleclus, they went out by night and fell upon Aruphea, a Town upon the Borders, which by the suddennesse Idemibid. of the onset, no Watch being kept, but the Gates standing open, they easily took, and finding it a place for fituation, and convenience of water fit for A.M.3162. their purpose, put all to the sword, intending to use it as a Receptacle, and Olymp. 9. 41, 2. chief Fortresse in the War. After this they made excursions, and rather pra- Iothami. 16. Etised robberies than carried on a War, the Messensans declining the fight through the perswasion of Euphaes. But after four years, when they were now well exercised, and exceedingly incensed against the Lacedamonians, he gave them leave to make inroads into Laconia, where they wasted all about Taygetus. He then lead down his Army into the Borders to fight, which opportunity the Lacedemonians imbraced, and ingaged with the horse, and those foot that have the light Armour. But Euphaes having provided matter for miking a Trench, caused the place where his other Souldiers lay to be fortified (in them confifting his chief flrength) fo that, feeing they could not fight with them, and being unprovided to befrege the Camp, they returned home, where they had but cold welcom, because of this retreat made contrary to their folemn Oath.

31. The year after, for that the elder fort exceedingly upbraided them,

Aristodemus killerh his daughter.

they returned into Messenia under conduct of both the Kings: Theopompus, SECT. 5. the fon of Nicander, and Polydorus of Alcamenes, now dead. There they were received by the enemy, and entertained in a great and bloudy battel, wherein both parties with much earnestnesse and contention demeaned themsolves. The Spareans as they surpassed the other in skill, being trained up in exercises from their Childhood, so exceeded them also in numbers : but desperation and necessity made the Messenians valiant, as they abundantly shewed it, many breaking their Ranks on purpose to come to hand-stroaks With the enemy. In the main battel the victory continued doubtfull a long time; in the right wing Euphaes put Theopompus to flight, and in the left Polydorus did as much by the Mellonians, and neither party would give the chace; Emphaes for that he thought he had already done enough, and Polydorus because the Lacedamonians were deterred from it through their ignorance of the place, being in an enemies Countrey: so that fighting on even terms they were parted by the night. The day following neither fide would fight, nor had the confidence to erest a Trophy; but made truce fo long as to bury their dead.

22. After this battel none other succeeded for several years. The Messenians, for that their Countrey was the feat of War, were pressed with many difficulties. Their Garrisons had cost them so much money, as now they were rendred unable to pay their Army: their flaves fled daily to the Lacedamonians, and a certain disease not much better than the plague, seized upon them, which though not exceeding deadly, yet joyntly with the other difficulties, caused great trouble and perturbation. After a serious debate concerning the main of their affairs, it was refolved, that most of the Towns lying upon the Sea should be dismantled as far remote, and Ithome, a Mountain as large as any within the Istmus (whereupon stood a Town more antient than great) was to be fortified because of the natural strength thereof. When they had here fetled themselves, they sent to Delphos to enquire concerning the event of the War. The Oracle (agreeable to the disposition of the enemy of mankind) required a Virgin of the stock of Egyptus to be sacrifized; whereupon all that belonged to that family were subjected to the lot, and the daughter of one Lycifans was taken. She being to be offered, the footh-fayer forbad it, alleging that the vvas not the daughter of Lycifous, but brought in under-hand by his vvife that was barren, and vvhil'ft he was thus perfivading the people, Lycifcus fled away with her to Sparta. All hereat exceedingly startled, Aristodemus, another of that family, voluntarily offered his oven daughter; but a young man there present that was in love with her, and shortly intended marriage, stifly impugned it, and contended she was not in her fithers power, because betrothed to himself. Not herewith prevailing he affirmed he had lien with her, and that the was with Child, whereat deristodemus was so intaged, that he killed her with his own hand, and rip- A.M.3259. ping up her belly, shevved plainly to all that there was no such matter. Olymp. tr. an.t. Yet the footh-fayer avouched her death could not at all profit the State, and V. C. 18. commanded some other to be offered; but Euphaes persovaded the people Achazi 8. that the Oracle was already fatisfied, and required not the life of any o-

The Lacede-Warupon the Argives.

33. That rest which the Lacedamonians had in this interval was presentmonians make ly turned into action with the Argives about Thyrea, a Town fituate in the Borders of both Commonwealths. This fell out in the reign of Theopompus, paulan in whereat yet he was not present, partly by reason of his old age, and also for Laconicis & grief taken at the death of his fon Archidamus. The controversie was Argolicis. brought before the Amphylliones, who ordered that 300 on each fide Pullar. in Pathe Spartage Direct one by some Others and the Combat; but on radiction on the Spartage Direct one by some Others and the Spartage Direct one of the Spartage Dire the Spartan party onely one, by name Othryades, as good as miny, who Suidas in vice lived no longer than to make use of broken Spears instead of Crutches to su- Othryades. Ann his body, then to gither together the Targets of the fluin, and to erect a Troohy therewith, whereon he made an inscription with his own bloud. Because of this Trophy the Amphyetiones decreed the Town to the Lacedama-nians ;

SECT. 5. Cresphones, of the far better grounds, for which now they envied the Meffenians, thinking themselves far worthier of them, as being the much more confiderable people.

28. Animofities being raifed upon these accounts, another thing hapned which increased them to that height as they brake out into open War. There was one Polychares a Messenian, who had got the victory in the course at the celebration of the fourth Olympiad. He let out fome Cows to one Evaphnus a Lacedamonian, on this condition, to have part of the profit. Evaphinus fold the Cows, and then coming to Polychares, told him that they, and their keepers were stolne from him; but while he was labouring to gain credit to his tale, some of the Herds men (who, as it seemeth, with the consent of Evephnus, were taken away by force) escaped from the Merchants, and acquainted Polychares with the fraud, which now the other not able to deny, asked him pardon, told him for how much the Cattel were fold, and promifed to fend the money, if he would let his fon accompany him to Sparia. He fent his fon accordingly, but when they were come together into Laconia, Evaph. mes most perfidiously murdred the young man, with the horridnesse of which fact Polychares grievoully moved, came feveral times to Sparta, complaining bitterly, and with many tears to the Kings and Ephori , but found no Justice ; infomuch that growing into a great rage against all Lacedamonians in common, he killed them as enemies wherefoever he could meet them.

29. The Lacedemonians, finding themselves concerned herein, sent to the Medenians, demanding Polychares. At that time Androcles and Antiochus, the fons of Phimas reigning at Messene, promised they would report the matter to the people, and know their minds therein. The multitude being called together, Androcles was much for the giving up of Polychares, but on the contrary Antiochus urged how unjust, and lamentable a thing it would be for him to be tormented before Evaphnus, and the contention grew fo hor betwire the brothers, that it came to blows. Antiochus his faction prevailing, Androcles with the chief of his party loft their lives. Antiochus then reigning alone wrote to the Spartans, offering to refer the businesse to the Argives, who were of the same stock with them both, or to the publick Council of the Amphyetiones; or else, if neither of these liked them, to the Senate of Arcopagus. They returned no answer by the Messenger, and within a few moneths Antrochus died, and his fon Euphaes succeeded him. Nei- Pauf, Polybius ther then did they fend any meffige, nor yet renounced amity with the Mef. 1.6. fenians, but entring into fecret consultations provided for the War, and bound themselves with an Oath never to return home till they had subdued

Me Tenia. 30. Being bound with this Oath, and having all things in a readinesse, under the conduct of Alexmenes, the fon of Teleclus, they went out by night and fell upon Aruphea, a Town upon the Borders, which by the fuddennesse of the onfet, no Watch being kept, but the Gates standing open, they easily took, and finding it a place for fituation, and convenience of water fit for their purpose, put all to the sword, intending to use it as a Receptacle, and Olymp. 9.47.2, their purpose, put all to the sword, intending to use it as a Receptacle, and V.C. 11.] chief Fortresse in the War. After this they made excursions, and rather pra- Iothami. 16. Stifed robberies than carried on a War, the Mossens declining the fight through the perswasion of Euphaes. But after four years, when they were now well exercised, and exceedingly incensed against the Lacedamonians, he gave them leave to make inroads into Laconia, where they wasted all about Tayyetus. He then lead down his Army into the Borders to fight, which opportunity the Lacedamonians imbraced, and ingaged with the horse, and those foot that bare the light Armour. But Euphaes having provided matter for miking a Trench, caused the place where his other Souldiers lay to be fortified (in them confifting his chief ftrength) fo that, feeing they could not fight with them, and being improvided to befrege the Camp, they returned home, where they had but cold welcom, because of this retreat made contrary to their folemn Oath.

31. The year after, for that the elder fort exceedingly upbraided them, they returned into Messenia under conduct of both the Kings: Theopompus, SECT. 5. the fon of Nicander, and Polydorus of Alcamenes, now dead. There they were received by the enemy, and entertained in a great and bloudy battel, wherein both parties with much earnestnesse and contention demeaned themselves. The Spareans as they surpassed the other in skill, being trained up in exercises from their Childhood, so exceeded them also in numbers : but desperation and necessity made the Messenians valiant, as they abundantly shewed it, many breaking their Ranks on purpose to come to hand-stroaks with the enemy. In the main battel the victory continued doubtfull a long time; in the right wing Euphaes put Theopompus to flight, and in the left Polydorus did as much by the Moffenians, and neither party would give the chace; Euphaes for that he thought he had already done enough, and Polydorus because the Lacedamonians were deterred from it through their ignorance of the place, being in an enemies Countrey: so that fighting on even terms they were parted by the night. The day following neither fide would fight, nor had the confidence to erect a Trophy; but made truce so long as to bury their dead.

32. After this battel none other succeeded for several years. The Messenians, for that their Countrey was the feat of War, were pressed with many difficulties. Their Garrisons had cost them so much money, as now they were rendred unable to pay their Army: their flaves fled daily to the Lacedamomians, and a certain disease not much better than the plague, seized upon them, which though not exceeding deadly, yet joyntly with the other difficulties, caused great crouble and perturbation. After a serious debate concerning the main of their affiles, it was refolved, that most of the Towns lying upon the Sea should be dismantled as far remote, and Ithome, a Mountain as large as any within the Istmus (whereupon stood a Town more antient than great) was to be fortified because of the natural strength thereof. When they had here fetled themfelves, they fenc to Delphos to enquire concerning the event of the War. The Oracle (agreeable to the disposition of the enemy of mankind) required a Virgin of the flock of Agyptus to be facrifized; whereupon all that belonged to that family were subjected to the lot, and the daughter of one Lycifans was taken. She being to be offered, the footh-fayer forbad it, alleging that the was not the daughter of Lycifeus, but brought in under-hand by his vvife that was barren, and whil' If he was thus persivading the people, Lycifeus fled away with her to Sparta. All hereat exceedingly startled, Aristodemus, another of that family, voluntarily offered his oven daughter; but a young man there present that was in love with her, and shortly intended marriage, stifly impugned it, and contended she was not in her fithers power, because betrothed to himself. Not herewith prevailing he affirmed he had lien with her, and that the was with Child, whereat de ristodemus vvas so intaged, that he killed her with his oven hand, and rip- A.M.3259. ping up her belly, shevved plainly to all that there was no such matter. Olymp. 1. aa.t. Yet the footh-fayer avouched her death could not at all profit the State, and V. C. 18. commanded some other to be offered; but Euphaes persovaded the people Achazi 8. that the Oracle was already fatisfied, and required not the life of any o-

The Lacede-War upon the Argives.

Aristodemus

killerh his daughter.

33. That rest which the Lacedemonians had in this interval was presently turned into action with the Argives about Thyrea, a Town fituate in the Borders of both Commonwealths. This fell out in the reign of Theopompus, paufan in whereat yet he was not present, partly by reason of his old age, and also for Laconicis & grief taken at the death of his fon Archidamus. The controversie was Argolicis. brought before the Amphyttiones, who ordered that 300 on each fide Pintar. in Pathe Spartage Direy and you have no perfons furvived the Combat; but on rod lib. I. the Spartan party onely one, by name Othryades, as good as miny, who Suidas in visce lived no longer than to make use of broken Spears instead of Crutches to su-Othryades. Ruin his body, then to gather together the Targets of the sliin, and to erest a Trophy therewith, whereon he made an inscription with his own bloud. Because of this Trophy the Amphystiones decreed the Town to the Lacedamo-newed the War to their own daminage.

34. The offering up of Aristodemus his daughter seemed to the Messethe Mellonians vians to have done some good, the affairs of Lacedamon appearing to be Pausaniania in a declining posture, and that State flower in its Enterprizes than formerly. Mellenicis. But in the fixth year after the departure of Lycifons and the eighth from their removal to Ithome, the War was again renewed against them. Another battel was fought, but with the same successe as formerly. In the midst of the fight was the hottest contest, the most valiant on both sides betaking themselves thither, where Euphaes also venturing further, than either stood with his dignity or fafety, against Theopompus, received many, and deadly wounds. Herewith being so weakned as he fell, the Lacedamonians strove to take him, and a great conflict enfued; but one Antander so far resisting as to lose his own life in the quarrel, Euphaes was brought off, and died a few dayes after, having reigned 12 years, all which time he spent in the War against the La- A.M. 2274. cedamonians. He dying Childlesse, a great controversie arose about the suc- Olymp. 12. 211 cession, for that several of the family of Egypine stood for the Kingdom, V. C. 23. amongst whom was Aristodemus, who, though it was objected that having Achazi 13. pollured his hands in the bloud of his daughter, he was not capable, was preferred before all others through the favour of the people. After his Election he fent Prefents to the chief of the Argadians, Argives, and Sicyonians, whom he ingaged to his party. Affisted by some Arcadians he made encurfions, and the Lacedamonians did the fame, proceeding to no greater extremity; but at length, in his fifth year, another battel was fought near to Ithome, wherein the Messenians were assisted by the three States ere now mentioned, and the Sparsans by no other Peloponne sians than those of Corinth. The dispute was very sharp, and the event doubtfull, till the Messenians, having the upper ground, at last put their enemies to flight, of whom it is credible, as Paufanias onely writeth, that many miscarried.

35. The Lacedemonians, after this, almost despairing of successe, both parties fent to enquire at Delphos, concerning the issue of the War. The Mesfenians received an antiver to ambiguous as could not be interpreted: that to the Sparians plainly fignified, that as Cresphontes had obtained Messene by a wile in ordering the lots, so by wiles it was to be recovered. Several then they invented, but all were discovered, by the vigilancy, and cunning of Arifodemus. But the 20th year of the War approaching, the affairs of the Meflemans began exceedingly to relapse, and the Oracle again consulted, an-(wered, that who foever could first dedicate a hundred Treffles (or three-footed Roots) to Jupiter of Ithome should obtain Messene. The Messinians having the Temple within themselves, doubted not but to be able to do this first; yet the answer being brought to Lacedamon, one Oebalus a crafty man there made 100 of Clay, and while the Meffenians were busie about others of Wood (for their purses were not able to reach to brasse) disguised himself in the habit of a fowler, and carried them into the Temple. This Rruck the Messenians with great consternation, who were straightly besieged by this time, and hindred from getting in any provisions. Aristodemus was also tormented with fad dreams about his daughter, whereat forely moved, and exceedingly afflicted with confideration that he should kill his Child for his Countrey's good, which notwithstanding was desperate, he slew himself at

36. With this fad accident the Meffonians were more grievously firuck, and so despaired as to have thoughts of making their applications to the Lacedamonians; but as yet not able to stoop, they made no overtures, though almost oppressed with famine: they chose them Captains in the room of Ariflodimus, preparing to fallie out, and fight it out to the last man for their lives and fortunes. Yet at length distrusting their ability to do any thing that way, and confidering themselves urged hard with the want of all necessaries, they left Ithome, and yielded in the fifth moneth after the death of Aristodemus, the 28th year of the War being almost finished, in the first of the fourCHAP. V. The Commonwealth of Lacedemon Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. 135

teenth Olympiad, the Medomida at Athens yet enjoying the power for ten Sect. s. years, in the dayes of Hezekiah King of Judah, and the time of the deportation of the ten Tribes. The Conquerous atterly demolished Ishome, and, having gotten easily the other Towns of Messenia into their power, imposed what Laws they pleased upon the Inhabitants, who were commanded to till their grounds, and fend one half of the profits unto Sparta: to hind themselves by outh, to remain in perpetual feater to the Lacedamonians, and both men and women, when the Kings and Nobles of Sparta died, to attend upon their Funerals in mourning weeds; which things were injoyned them A. M. 3282. upon pain of death. As many as would not endure those hard conditions, Olymp. 14. 49.2. the first Mest and had hope of entertainment with the Arcadiant, Artives, and Sicyoni- V. C. 21. went thither, and fuch as were Priests to Elemfine : all the rest of the Ezech, 8, multitude departed every one to his own feat, and so the first Messenian fenian War.

27. Whilft the Lacedamonians were abroad, and lay under the obligation of their oath, never to return till the War should be finished, fearing, either, Justin, ex through the fuggestion of their wives, or their own recollection, that their Trogo I. 3. postericy might fail, they chose out of their lustiest young men fifty in number, who coming our under age, were not liable to the oath, and fent them

The Pathenia: to Sparta to lye with their Wives and Virgins (or the Virgins onely) in pro- 1,6,2,378. miscuous manner, whence arose a generation called Parthenia, as the Sons 279, 280, of Virgins. But after that the war was finished, and the Spartans returned 281. home, they looked upon them as a spurious brood, and as such contemned them; which these youths apprehending, and how they could not inherit any thing in the Commonwealth, entred into conspiracie with the Hilots, and made one Philanthas their Caprain, whose Father Aracus had given the advice, to fend the young Men to the Virgins. This plot being revealed by fome of the flaves, they were expelled, and forced to feek out new feats; fo that departing into Italy, they drove out the Barbarians and Cretians, who inhabited about Tarentum, and seizing upon that place, therein planted

The fecond Messenian War.

38. The Messenians thus brought under the york, endured it, though with much repining, for 39 years; but then, besides their most hard and service condition, wearied with the infolency of the Spareaus, in the fourth year of Paulan in Melthe 23 Olympiad, a little after the nine Annual Archons were constituted at senicis, Athens, in the 40th after the taking of Ithome, they revolted, at the inffi- A. M. 3320. gation of Aristomenes especially, a young man of a most active and couragious V. c.69. shirit, who had before hand sollicited for affiftance the Areadians and Argives now being jealous of the power of the Lacedamonians, and at open enmity with them. At this time Anaxander the Nephew of Polydorm, by his Son Eurycrates, and Anaxidamus the Son of Zeuxidamus, and Grandfon to Theopompus, by his Son Archidamus, who died ere he came to reien. were Kings at Sparta.

20. Aristomenes managed the whole businesse for the Messenians, being of extraordinary abilities both of body and mind. He first ingaged with the Sparcansac Dera, a Village of Messenia, where he is said to have behaved himfelf above the capacity of a man, and feeing he was of the Family of Ægypim, was chosen King by the people. Refusing this ricle, he was created General, with absolute authority, and afterwards, at the Monument of the Boar, (a place in Messenia, where Hercules made a league with the Sons of Nileus) by the affiftance of the Arcadians, Argives, Sicyonians, and Eleans, overthrew the Lacedamonians, terrifying all where ever he came. In the purfure he lost his Target, which whilst he was seeking, they had opportunity to escape. After this, he took and plundered a Town of Laconia, named fhare, whence retreating with much booty, he also overthrew Anaxander the King, who purfued him, and having in his intentions to muchagainst Sparsa it self, is said to have been deterred from it, by the apparitions of Helena, and her two brothers Caftor and Pollax.

40. The Lacedamonians much startled at this losse, thought to have put a

SECT. 5. period to the War, but were again incouraged by the Verses of Tyriaus. who perswaded them to fill up their armie with the Helots. A year or two Pausanian in

Aristocyatee

The Mellenia

paste inro

before this, sending to consult the Oracle about the War; they had answer, Mellenicu that they must send to Athens for a Counsellor. The Athenians were unwilling in the leaft to promote their affairs, being jealous of their growing power, yet fearing also to do any thing crosse to the Oracle, they fent to them this Tyriaus a School-master, lame on his feet, and not very found in his brain. In the third year of the War, another battel was fought, at a place called the great Ditch, wherein the Messenians having no other associates than their friends of Arcadia, these also failed them at this time, through the treachery of their Captain; so that, left to themselves, and compassed in by their Enemies, most of them were slain, though Aristomenes omitted nothing worthy of a General, or common Soldier. Having gathered up the reliques of his Army, he perswaded the people to quit all inland Towns, and fortifying onely Pylus and Methone upon the Sea, to fecure themselves in the hill Ira. Here they were prefently belieged, and iffuing out for booty. mide depredations, both in Laconia and their own Country, which drew out an Edict from the Lacedamonian State, that the borders of both Countries should, during the War, be left desolate; whereupon a dearth ensued at Spanea, and thence a Sedition, which Tyreens with his Poetry had work enough to suppresse.

41. Aristomenes in the mean time, like some fierce and greedy Lyon, with 300 choice men at his heels, to the great fear of all men, ranged up and down the Country, and made continual excursions into the Enemies Country. At length he was taken and carried to Sparta, where condemned to death, he was thrown into a deep dungeon; the ordinary way of punishing capital offenders. Coming fafe to the bottom, though others were killed by the fall, he perceived a Fox feeding upon some dead carkeiles, whereat confidering that this creature must have some hole to creep in at, he caught it by the tail, and defending himself from it's teeth by the other hand, it led him to the hole, which being but little, he fo inlarged with his hands, as contrary to the belief and expectation of all men, he returned fafe to his Companions. Presently after his return, he fell upon the Camp of the Corinthians, who affifted the Spartans in the Siege, and lay catelessly, without any watch, and killing the Capcains, plundered their Tents. Not long after a Truce was made for fourty dayes, during which, he wandring abroad too carelessly, was entrapped by fome Cretians, who affifted also in the Siege, and being bound with the thongs of their quivers, was carried into a Village, to the house of a certain widdow. This woman, understanding who he was, cast in her head how to deliver him, which the effected, by giving his Keepers fo much drink, that they falling afleep, with one of their daggers he cut the thongs. Being loofed, he stabbed the Cretians and escaped; and afterwards.

to require the womans kindnesse, married her to his Son Gorgus. 42. Ten years the Siege of Ira continued, the Messenians enjoying the grounds at the foot of the Mountain, as far as the River Neda, thereby being better provided for to hold out. But in the eleventh, when Aristomenes was rendered by a wound incapable of taking such care about the watch as he had been wont, in a rainy and dark night the fentinels, secure of him, betook themselves to their own homes. Amongst those there was one, whose wife in his absence entertained a certain Herds-man as a Lover, who belonged to Emperanus a Lacedamonian now at the Siege. He being hid by his Paramour upon her husband's coming, heard the man tell the Story, how he and his fellows had forfaken their charge, and flipping away, therewith acquainted his Master. Both the Spartan Kings were absent at this time, but Emperamus, unwilling to let flip fo fair an opportunity, led the Army thither, and got into the Fortresse before he was discovered. When the matter was A.M. 3337. perceived, a great contest there was betwirt the parties; but Aristomenes Ol. 28, an. I. feeing there was no hope of doing any good, and willing to fave what was V.c. 86.

Manafir 34.

left of the afflicted Meffenians, obtained liberty to depart; and so Irabeing taken the War ended, after it had lasted fixteen years; in the first of the SECT. 5. 28th O'ympiad, When Autosthenes was Archon at Athens, A. M. 3337.

43. When the Arcadians understood of the taking of Ira, they defired of Aristocrases their King to be led out, either to restore their friends, or die with them; but he having formerly betraied them at the great Disch. was now also corrupted with money, and refused to do it, alleging there was none left to whom they could give affiftance. Yet when it was clearly known that they were alive, they fent some before to comfort them, then met them with clothes, and meat, as far as the Hill Lycam, and kindly invited them to live amongst them. Aristomenes boyling with hatred and revenge against the Lacedemonians, chose out of the Company 500 men, whom he knew to be no whit defirous to outlive the fortune of their Country, and asked them in the hearing of Aristocrates (not knowing anything of his treachery) and the Arcadians, whether they would venture their lives with him. Upon their answer that they would, he acquainted them with his defign, to march straight for Sparen, which if he could surprize, now that all it's Arength was imployed in the plunder of Messena, then should be make an even exchange with the Lacedamonians; but, if not, death would be the worst that could happen. Besides the Messenians, 300 Arcadians gave their names to this Expedition; but being stayed by reason that the entrails of the beaft were not propitious, Aristocrates had time to give notice of the design to Anaxander King of Sparea. The treachery was discovered after the return of the Messenger, by some that suspected it, and the letter sent his treachery, the tetunin of the Anaxander, was red in the Affembly of the Arcadians, wherein thanks was given to Aristocrates, as well for the help he afforded the Lacedamonians at the great Ditch, as for this timely notice. Hereat the multitude was fo inraged, as they stoned him out of hand, cast him out unburied, and erected a monument to his infamy, with this note, that Perjury cannot escape God. They exhorted also the Messenians to throw stones at him, who > fixed his eyes on the ground and wept. 44. The Messenians defired of Aristomenes to lead them out, to seek some new place to inhabit; but he denied it, resolving to spend his dayes in doing as much mischief as he could to the Lacedamonians: onely his son Gorgus and Manticlus he offered to them. Those that had kept Pylus and Methone, with others which lived on the Sea-coasts, went by ship to Cyllene, the haven of the Eleans, to feek out the rest. The following Spring feveral places being proposed to go to, Anaxilas who then reigned at Rhegium, and was descended of one Alcidamidas a Messenian (that after the taking of Ishome in the former War, betook himself thither) sent some to convey them into Italy. After their arrival, he told them he had continual War with the which if they would help him to conquer, he would put it into their names.

>
> He then besieged them by Sea, and the Messians by Land, whereby being 0, 28, an, 3, looked upon Aristomenes, as expecting directions from him; but he onely

Zanclaans, a people of Sicilie, that inhabited a fruitful and pleasant Soil, which if they would help him to conquer, he would put it into their hands, diffressed, and the greater part of the wall now cast down, they sed to the V.C. 88. altars of their gods. Anaxilus would have had them flain, and their wives Manaflis 36. and children fold; but the other unwilling to commit fuch cruelty against any Greeks, (for fuch they were, the Town being first inhabited by R vers. and afterwards by others from several parts of Greece) gave them liberty to continue, and incorporating themselves into their body, changed the name of the place from Zancle into Meffene. Aristomenes for some time continuing in Greece, married his daughters very honourably, whereof Demagetus, Prince of Rhodes at that time, took the youngest to wife, having been advifed by the Oracle, to make choice of that man's daughter who was the best in all Greece. He carried his daughter to Rhodes, whence he intended to go to Ardys the fon of Gyges, then reigning in Lydia, and thence to Echarane, to Phraortes King of the Medes; but death prevented him, and he finished his dayes in that Island, being found in the number of those few, that lived and dyed in great glory.

The end of the fecond War.

Aleter.

SECT. 6. flaves.

45. Messenia thus subdued by the Lacedamonians was tilled by the common flaves, amongst whom such of the inhabitants as there still remained were intolled, and became a proverb for their hard bondage; being worse used tinued in than any, because, as some think, the War was carried on with them, not for Melfonia made glory and Empire, but for life and safety, not with a contention which peo-ple should rule, but whether should be preserved. The accession of this Countrey to their demeines very much increased the power of Lacedamon, and so they held it for two hundred years, till an opportunity was offered for the old inhabitants, in despight of them, to return. This thing being brought to passe long after, must be referred to another place : as also (because what further hapned betwixt the Arcadians, Argives, and this Commonwealth, is not very material) what soever we have further to observe concerning the Lacedemonians.

SECT. VI.

The most antient Kingdom of Corinth.

Corinth fir ft called Enlyrasand built by Sifyphus.

T. This Citie, seated in the Ishmus of Peloponnesus, had first the name Pausan. in co-I of Ephyra, and was built by Sifyphus (whose posterity reigned here rimhiacia fome 428 years) in the dayes of Cecrops, the first King of Athens, and a little before Deucalions Flood, about the 2486 year of the World. He married Merope, the daughter of Atlas, by which he had four fons, Glaucus, Ornytion, Therfander, and Almas; was accounted a very wife, and prudent Eufeb. in Chron. man, feigned also to have returned to life again, that he might chastize his A. M 2486. wife for not having performed what was due to his memory. After he was once got up he would not return of a long time to Hell, where he is also said by the Poets to roll a great stone up an Hill, which continually tumbling down again keepeth him in constant toil, having this punishment inflicted on him for discovering to Asopus his daughter Rolne away by Jupiter. Glauens his eldest son was the father of Bellerophon, and first celebrated Games in the Isthmus, Ornytion begat Phocus, who led a Colony into, and gave name to the Countrey cilled Phoeis after him, and Thous a younger fon that contimued at Corineh. Therfander had two fons, Coronus and Haliarius, who being adopted by Athamas their Uncle on the father's fide, then reigning in Baotia, (after he had loft his own two fons Phryxus and Helles, and his daughter Ino with her two fons) gave name to two places in that Countrey. Almus (called otherwise Halmus and Olmus) the youngest fon of Sifrphus had part of the Countrey of the Orchomenians bestowed on him by Executes the King, and from him Almon, or Olmon, a place of Bassia, was fo

2. B. Rerephontes, having committed man-flaughter at Corinth, was forced Billeraphonics, to fly thence, and went to Prains King of the Argives, whose wife Scheno- Apollodorus, bes enamoured of his beauty tempted him to lie with her; but he had the A. M. 2560. modesty to deny her, wherewith the was so incensed as to accuse him to her husband of an intended rape. Prains taking it in great difdain to be so used by his Guest, yet would not kill him, but fent him to Iolas, King of Lycia his wives father with Letters, wherein he defired him to make the bearer away. To fulfill his request, Iolas first caused him to fight with the Chimara. a Monster that vomited fire, not doubting of his destruction thereby; but he mounting the horse Pegalas, slew the Monster. Then he sent him against the Solymi and Amazons, whom he Conquered; then caused some of the strongest young men he could procure to ly in ambush, and fall on him, which also he having flain , Iolas admiring his valour gave him his daughter Philonee to wife, and when he died, left him his Successor in the Kingdom of Lycia. (a) Servine in Concerning this Chimara, what should be meant thereby is scatce discern- Virgit Entials. The chimera, able. (a) Some have understood by it a Mountain in Lycia, the top whereof i. 6.

vomited forth fire, the middle part had Pastures full of Gosts, and the foot, Sect.6. or bottom, abounded with Serpents. 'Tis conceived he might make this Mountain habitable, and thence be faid to have slain the Chimera, which had a mouth like a Lyon, middle parts as a Goat, and the hinder parts like a Dragon. (b) Others again say that Bellerophonies gave occasion to this sable by killing one Chimarus a Sea Captain, who insested the Lycians with pinetathbus mountains and the same of th racy, the flory being thence raised, for that Chimarus his ship had a Lyon litrum, painted on the prow, and a Dragon on the deck, and Bellerophon's Veffel called Pegafus, might have a winged horse for its fign. A third (c) fort think (c) Homer three kinds of enemies to be fignified by this Monster: the Solymi, Amazons, Iliad 3. Euft. & and Lycians; the former being for their valour compared to a Lyon, the next Ifac in Lycoph. for their nimblenesse in climbing of Rocks to a Goat, and the last to a Dragon, p. 6. for their crastinesse in ambushes. Lastly, a (d) modern, and most learned for their crattinetie in ambuines. Lattly, a (a) modern, and most learned Writer judgeth the three gods of the Solymi, whom Bellerophon over-chartic Canaan, threw, to have been painted in their Enfigns; refembling a Lyon, Goat, lib.1.c.s. and Dragon, like the three heads of the Monster, as tis described by 2. Bellerophoness being driven from Corinth , Thous the fon of Ornytion obtained the Kingdom, whom succeeded Demophon his son, then followed Paufan, ut Propodas, whose two sons Doridas and Hyanthidas reigning both together, prins, Aletes the fon of Hippotes (fon to Antiechus, and Nephew to Hercules) came down and subdued the Kingdom. The Heraclida having, before this, Vide Simfoobtained Peloponnefus, referved this part for him, who confulting the Ora- nium ad A.M. cle of Jupiter at Dodona, was answered, that he should then obtain it, when 2914. a clod of Earth should be given him. At his return this was fulfilled; for begging some meat of an Herds-man, he, having nothing to give him, offered him a clod, which he gladly accepted, faying, Aletes acceptesh of a clod, which became a proverb. Who gave the name of Corimb to the Citie is uncertain; but however, Aletes out of gratitude to the Oracle, named it Covinth of Jupiter, which gave occasion to the multitude to believe that Corinth the King that built it, was the fon of Jupiter, wherein they fo gloried, and so often vaunted of it, that nothing became more ridiculous, and they were laughed at for it throughout Greece. After Aleres the eldest of the fa- Eufeb in Chromily succeeded for several Generations. The first was Ixion, who reigned nico & Ex-

• A. M. 3048. 37 years, the next Agilaus, who ruled as many, Prumnic 35, and * Bacchis cupta Diodors full for many, who was fo famous, that where as he, and all his Ancestors were professions. called Heraclida, his Succeffors from him had the name of Bacchiada. The ter, this, or first after him was Agelas , who governed thirty years, the next Eudemus, 10. who reigned 25. then came Aristomedes, who having ruled 35. left a Child behind him, which his brother Algemon, whom he had appointed Guardian, deposed, and held the Kingdom himself sixteen years. After him followed Alexander for 25. whom Teleftes the fon of Ariftomedes flew, and obtained his fathers Kingdom, which he held twelve years. He was also slain by Arieus and Perantas his Kintemen, and then Automenes reigned one year, which being expired, the Bachida, more than 200 in number, seized on the Kingdom, and Governed in common; onely every year they created a Prytanued 90 years in the way of an Ariflocracy. 2. During this term, in the fourth year of the eleventh Olympiad, the Corinihians being powerfull at Sea, fent out a Colony into the Island of Sicily under conduct of Archias, one of the Heraclida, which, expelling the Siculi Olymp. 11. our of that quarter, founded the Citie Syracufu. More people flocking thi- 42.4. V.C. a Achan 11. thither out of Peleponnesses, this Citie grew, and increased exceedingly; so that it became not onely the principal of all in Sicily, but the greatest, and most beautifull of all Greece, as Cicero Witnesseth, and in its due place will be further discovered. Much about the same time was there another Colony fent into the Island Phaaces, lying nigh to Epirus, at a little distance from the Continent, conducted thither by Chersier another of the posterity of Hercules. Homer in his Odyse. Maketh this Island inhabited in the Trojan mis out of their own body to be in the room of the King, and so they conti-

Colmics of

the Corinthi-

140

Cypfelus.

SECT. 6. times, by the Phencians a most noble people, over whom reigned Alcinous the fon of Naulithous, who received Ulylles after his long wandrings, and helped him in his journey home to Ithaca. He mentioneth his Royal feat, called Scheria, (which P iny from him affirmeth also to have been the name of the Island, as well as Pheacia) and faith, the inhabitants were much given to Navigation, and most skilfull therein. In the soyl of this Scheria, the old inhabitants being expelled, this new Colony planted it felf, which taking the name of Coreyra, the whole Island came thence to be so called. The Citie, much befriended by the Commodiousnesse of the Haven, and the conveniency of the place for Sea matters, grew in a short time to be very confiderable; fo as it founded of it felf two Cities, viz. that of Epidamnus . as we have it from Thucydides, (by the Romans called Dyrrachium) and Apollonia, as Strabo writeth; both of them feated in that part of Illyricum, inhabited by the Taulautians. The form of this Commonwealth was (agreeable to the constitution of all Colonies) like to that of Corinth the Metropolis, which then was Governed by the Bacchiada in an Oligarchical way. When Corineh was afflicted by Tyrants, Corcyra felt also their influence upon its infancy; but at length it grew to that height, as to renounce such obedience as the other challenged, whence great and tedious Commotions were produced in Greece.

> s. The Bicchiada neither communicated the Government nor marriage to Head libs. any other person than of their own family, till one of their women being cap, 90, 606. Jame, and upon that account despised by them all of her own stock, had thereby an occasion given to break the custom. She (named Labda) married Ection (the fon of Echecrates, and Nephew to Antaffus of the Petrean Tribe) who, hiving no Children by her, or any other, went to Delphos, and inquired of the Orocle concerning iffice. He received an answer to this effect; that he should have a fon, who like a stone would fall upon the Oligarchy, and breaking it in pieces, amend the State of Corinth. This coming to the ears of the Bacchiade, who had an Oracle before much to the fame purpole, though under general terms, they resolved to hold their peace, and kill Ections Child as soon as it should be born. And as foon as his wife was delivered, they fent ten of their Company to destroy it, whom the mother presented with a fight of the Babe, thinking they had come to Congratulate her husband about its birth. They had agreed among ftthemielves, that who foever first came at the Infant should knock out his brains, but the Child smiling in his face, who first took it in his Arms, he was so moved with compassion, as he would not kill it, but delivered it to one of his fellows, who touched with the same compassion gave it to another, till it passed through all their hands unhurt. Being gone out, and flanding at the door, they blamed one another exceedingly, especially the first, whose part it was to kill it, and in they returned now to do the deed; but the mother, hearing their discourse, hid the Infant under a Bushell, or such alike instrument of measuring Corn, so that not finding it they returned, giving out they had done their errand, and so the Child thus preserved was named Cypfelus, from the measure under which he was hid, in the Greek Kullan.

tongue called Cypfele. 6. When he was come to man's effate, relying upon another Oracle (whereby he was plainly bidden to be King of Corinib, and his Children after him, but not his Nephews) he invaded the Tyranny, which to establish. many he deprived of their estates, but many more of their lives. He first A.M. 2250. lulled the people afleep with good language, and thereby petting all into his hands, made himself Lord of the Cirie; his power he preserved by removing consule Avill. those out of the way whom it most concerned; but once established he grew Politi, 2.c. 12. exceeding mild and frir, with good words, and no ill deeds, drawing the people into luch a respect of him, that all his time he stood not in need of any Guard; a rare thing in men of his condition, which Gelo at Syracufe onely imitated. This change happed at Corinth in the 2 year of the 31 Olympiad, in the dayes of Phraontes, King of the Medes, and Ardys Grand-father to Crafus, King of Lydia, 20 years after the fecond Meffenian War, and 30

Pfammetichus.

tial, scarce being ever out of War, very powerful at Sea, having so convenient Havens both upon the Ionian and Egean Gulfs. He reigned nigh Periander.

blithment of Solon's Laws, A. M. 3420.

CHAP. V. The Corinthian Kingdom Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire. after the nine Annual Archons were elibblished at Asheni, A. M. 3350. SECT. 6. Upon his seizing the power, Demaratus, a man eminent amongst the Baechide, and very rich, fled into Itale, and feated himself in Herraria, where, of a Wo. A.M.3350. and very tien, tied theorem, and react mander in Treatment, where so a wowhereof became King of Rome, by the name of Tarquinius.

7. Cypfelus having enjoyed the principality of Corinth and Corcyra the space of thirty years, then died, and left it to his son Poriander. He was Herodotus & much unlike his father, of a cruel disposition (if we believe Aristotle rather Aristot. than Solicles in Herodorus) infomuch as not truffing the good will of his people, he got a guard of 300 men about him, and would rather be feared than loved of his Subjects; yet being hardy and warlike, he held the power longer thanhe. Herodorus, out of Sofioles relaterh, that at first he was very mild and curreous, till by acquaintance with Thrasphylus the Tyrant of Miletus, he altered his humour; for fending to him for his advice, how he migh best order his affurs in Government, he returned no answer to the Messengerbut carrying him out into a plot of Corn, fell a plucking off the tallest and most eminent ears, till he had well nigh marred the whole plot. The Meffenger returning told Periander what he had feen, who eafily gueffed, that the most eminent and nowerful Citizens were to be removed out of the way; but * Aristotle maketh him the author of this counsel to Thras bylus. Lacrting * Polit, 1, 3,0,9, faith, he grew more cruel after it was known that he lay with his Mother & l. s.c. to. 8. He married Molissa the daughter of Procles (or Patrocles) tyrant of ornaments. Lycophron his youngelt fon, who onely was capable of Government, moved by Procles his Grand-Father, grew exceeding froward and refractory because of his Mother's death; infomuch as, differences and di-states increasing, Periand r banished him, first his house, then forbad all his Subjects to speak to, or comfort him, and at length forced him into Corcyra.

But after some years growing old, infirm, and unfit for businesse, he fent for him home, offering to paffe over all to him; but by no arguments or intrea-

ties could he move him to return, till he offered to change places, and develt himself of all power. Now, when this was agreed on, the Coregrans fearing above all things to have Periander come amongst them, to prevent it, killed the young man. Periander to be revenged, took away from them 300 of their choicest Boyes, which he sent to Hallattes King of Lydia his friend and allie to be gelded; but they being driven upon the Island Samus, the Inhabitants took fuch pity both on them and their relations, as to fend them home fafe, and disappointed the Tyrant. This so vexed him, now almost eighty years old, that he dyed of grief, though by some he be reckoned amongst the seven Wise Men of Greece. Suidmout of most antient Authors deliver-eth this character of him; That he was an harsh and cruel Tyrant, very mar-

Epidaurus, on whom he begat Cypfelm and Lycophron, whereof the elder Lacrim in vita was very blockish and stunid. At the instigation of his whores, he afterwards Pernandu, & killed his wife, kicking her when the was great with childe, then lay with Herod, ut supra. her when the was dead, and calling together the Corinthian women, as well adorned as possible, to celebrate the feast of June, caused his guard to strip them all naked, and made a parentation to Meliffa of all their clothes and forty years, and dyed in the fourth of the 48th Olympiad, seven after the effat A. M. 3420.

9. Periander being dead, his Tyranny as it were tottered for three years and some six moneths, during which time Pfammetichus the son of Gordia, Nabuch, 24. brother to Periander, or rather something akin to him, held it; as appeara eth by (e) Aristotle, who onely hath preserved his name to us from utter oblivion. After his removal the power of one man was laid afide, and the people put themselves into a Free-State, which continued as long as the liber- (e) Politic.

ty of Greece it felf. The form thereof is not described to us by any antient (f) In Timole-Author; onely this we know from (f) Plusarch, that it was inclining more to once & Dione. Oligarchy Calydnus.

Ogyges.

Cadmus.

142

SECT.7. Oligarchy than that of Syracule; the power of the multitude being more bounded. Yet, for certain, the Government was popular, things of greatest consequence never being resolved on, without the consent and decree of the people, (which kept those of highest concernment in its own power) and, if any other in the World, was a friend to Antimonarchical liberty, and an utter enemy to Monarchy, where ever it was found in Greece. For this City undertook many times great Wars for this very cause, and not out of any ambitious design, as is clear in the case of the Syracusians, and others; so that a Captain out of it was most defirable upon such an occasion; as may hereafrer be discovered.

SECT. VII.

The antient Kingdom of Thebes.

1. D world had on the West Phocis, on the East the Eubocan Sea. on the North the Eastern Locri, and on the South Attica and Megaris. The chief feat and Metropolis of this Country was Thebes, the builder of which is not certainly known. Calydnus is reported first to have reigned here; whence by a Poet of Chalcie, it is called the Tower of Calydnus, and in Hesychius, Calydnaan is the same with Antient. After him was Ogyges, or Ogygus, from whom Thebes by the Poets is called Ogygian, and that great Ogygian Deluge is named, which is faid to have happened in his time, 1020 .. years before the first Olympiad, in the dayes of Phoroneus King of Arcos. (as Africanus gathereth) and so overwhelmed all the region of Airica, that it made it inhabitable for 200 years, as Pererius noteth. Paufanias Writerh, In Buoticis & that he was King of the Ettena, the first Inhabitants of Thebais, and that Atticis. from his fon Eleusine a famous Town in Artica took both Original and name, as some were of opinion. These Ettene are reported to have been comfumed by Pestilence, whom succeeded the Hyantes and Aona, that continued in those parts, together with the Temmices (who came from Sanium) and the Leleges, till Cadmus coming to Greece, made himself Master of this place, in the dayes of Corax King of Sicyon, and Danaus of Argos, 247 years after the beginning of Ogyges. 2. This Cadmin, according to the tradition of the Greeks, was fon to Agenor the brother of Belm, Uncle to Danam and Agypun, who coming Apollod, lib. 2. out of Agypt into Phanice some 36 years before, on his wife Telphassa begat three fons; Cadmus, Phanix, Cilix, and a daughter named Europa. This Europa, Jupiter stole, and carried over Sea into Crete, in the likenesse of a Bull, where he begat on her Minos, Rhadamanthus, and Sarpedon. Afterius Diod. 1.4. King of the Island afterwards married her, and having no children of his own, P. 183. adopted her fons. Herodotus telleth us that fome Greeks (Afterius perhaps, Lib. 1, cap. 2. or fome for him) in revenge for what the Nation had formerly suffered from the Afiaticks in Realing away Ino, went to Tyre, and thence Role Europa the Kings daughter, bringing her away in a ship, whose ensign was a Bull, whence occasion was given to feign, that she was carried over upon a Bull's felves amongst the Phoenicians. Here he married Harmonia the daughter of SECT. 7. Mar and Venus, agreeable to which alliance, the gods are said to have come down unto Cadméa to the wedding. Out of Phanicia he first brought letters into Greece, giving them their peculiar names and characters, fitted for the Diod 13.0.140. language of the place, and thence they were called Phomician, though after Libs, p. 227, wards Polafoian, because they do of them was a few theorems they have a few they were called the managed by the configuration of the same after the managed by the configuration of the same after the managed by the configuration of the same after the managed by the configuration of the same after the configuration of the wards Pelaggian, because the use of them was, after they were brought over, first made known to the Pelafgi. 4. Of Harmonia, Cadmus begot Polydorus his fon, and four daughters, Semele, Ino, Antonoe, and Agave. On Semele Jupiter enamoured begot Idem 1. 3. Dienyfiss, or Bacchus, who found our Wine and Ale, and travelled through p. 147. out the then known World, to reduce men to civility. This he did with an Army both of men and women, and after an Expedition of three years returned out of India, first triumphing upon an Elephant. Ino was married to Arhamas the fon of Arlus and grand-fon of Hellen, to whom she bore Apollod, Polydorus.

3. Agenor fent out his three fons to feek their Sister, charging them never to return without her into Phanicia. Cadmus failed first into the Island Callisthe, (lying betwixt Crete and Callisthe) where he left a Colony, and p. 147. thence into Thasis (so named from Thasis one of his Companions, and Pausan, I. s. head of another Colony left here) and at length into Greece, where, in Baco. A. M. 2355. tia, being past all hope of finding his fister, and consequently of returning into Phanicia, by the command of an Oracle he founded Thebes; or re-edifying what was formerly built by Ogyges, anew laid the foundation of the Castle, which, ever after, from him retained the name of Cadméa. The Hyanta beaten by his Forces, fled the night following into Phocis; but the Strabo !, 9. Lona, upon their submission, were suffered to continue and imbodie them- p. 401.

CHAP: V.

Afteon that was devoured by his own Dogs. Agave became the wife of Eesion, to whom she bore Penthens. After Cadmus had reigned some time at Thebas, he was called by the Encheles, who had Wars at that, time with the Illyrians, and were bidden by the Oracle to fend for him and Harmonia to be their Captains. He left then the Kingdom of Th. bes to his fon Polydorus, and having subdued the Illyrians, reigned over them, and begot another fon called Illyrius, who either gave or took name from that people. The Poets feigned Cadmus and his wife, to have been turned here into Snakes, because they seem to have forgot their former civility, and learnt

What the Sidonians faid of Cadmus.

5. This is the fum of what the Greeks have delivered concerning Cadmus. But, though they, for their own credit, made him the fon of a King, yet the Sidenians, whose Country-man he was, denie this, alleging that being their King's Cook, he fled away with Harmonia, a certain minstrel. Histime, as it is computed, falleth in with that of Joshna, so that he seemeth to have led into Greece a Colony of those Canaanites, or Phoenicians, who were outed of their habitations by the Ifraelites. His family may be gathered to have been that of the Kadmonites, mentioned by Mofer, who were the same with the Hivises, and called Cadmonim, or Orientals, because they poffessed Mount Hermon, the most Eastern part of Canaan, taken for the East, as Thabor for the west. Hence came it to passe, that Cadmus his wife was called Harmonia, or Hermione, and apparent why they were feigned to be turned into Snakes, because an Hrvite in the Syrian language signifieth a Serpent. That he first brought letters into Greece is most probable, I. Because the antientest Greek letters, in most things, are like to the old Phanician, which the Samaritans at this day use. 2. Their names are plainly Phoenician, or Hebrew, as may be instanced in Alpha, Beta, &cc. of which the Greeks were not ignorant, as appeareth out of Varro. For Crates the Philosopher, disputing in Greece about some points of Grammar, demanded why they said not Alpha Alphatos as well as Gramma Grammatos, to which the Grecians answered, that the names were not theirs, but barbarous; and Plutarch rendered this reason, why Alpha is set before the rest by the Phanicians, because they called an Oxe by that name. 3. The Greek's kept the same order of letters as the Phanicians did, being most antient, as appeareth by some acrostick Verses of David and Jeremiah. Cadmus brought over the Rices of Bacchus into Greece, and thereupon is feigned to be Grand-father to him, who lived many Ages before, and indeed was Nimrod. To this City built or re-edified by him, he gave the name of Thebes, of which name there was a place in Canaan mentioned by the Book of (a) Judges, and by (b) Josephus allo written Theba, in the plural number; fo that an end may be put to that (a) (4), (4), 9, 50. controversie about the original of the word, which betokeneth mud or dirt. Cap. 9. But concerning all this, Bochartus is to be consulted, in the first Book of that admirable Work incituled Canaan. 6. Polydorus, succeeding his Father, marryed Notton the daughter of Labdatus.

Nyttens, by which he had a fon named Labdacus, whom, dying before he both wich Plusarch maketh her to have excelled.

Laius.

SECT. 7. came at age , he * left to the tuition of his father-in-law. Nyttens had an- *A.M.2601. other daughter, Antiope by name, which Epopens King of Sicyonia ftole away, whence a War infued, wherein both of them received mortal wounds, and Ny- Paufan, in Etens dying, left the tuition of the young King to his brother Lyens. After Bassisis & Labdacus came at age, Lycus restored faithfully the Kingdom to him, where- Corinth, fore the King dying also not long after, and leaving his fon Lains a Child but of one year old, having experience of his faithfulnesse, he committed him to his protection. Afterwards Amphion and Zethus, the fons of Amiope, invaded Thebais in revenge for their mother's hard usage and Captivity, the Diodor, 1,4. having been taken by Lycus in Sicyon, or delivered up to him by Lamedon P.1911. King of that Citie, when he led down thither an Army, at the defire of his dying brother, to revenge him upon her and Epopeus, as we before shewed. Lyou meeting them in the field was flain in battel , Thebes loft, and the Child Lains had miscarried, but that some well-wishers to his stock withdrew him out of the danger, lest the posterity of Cadmus should be utterly extinet. Amphion then and Zethus obtained the Kingdom; said by Homer to have built Thebes, which must be meant of the lower Citie distinct from a Cadméa. Amphion was so excellent a Musician, that he is said to have made Rones to follow him, wherewith he built Towers about the Citie. He married Niobe, the daughter of Tantalus, and fifter to Pelops, which brought him many Children, but boaffing her self mote fruitfull than Latona her self, pro-

> 7. Lains married Jocaste, the daughter of Menaceus, but was admonished by the Oracle to beget no Children, because else he should be killed by his fon; which punishment Pelops had prayed might fall on him for fealing his fon Chrysppus, begotten on a Concubine. Notwithstanding this he had a Apollod. fon, but as foon as he was born he thrull his feet in Iron fetters, and exposed him as a prey to wild beafts. Yet, either by those that had this charge, or Diodorns 1.4. others that found him, he was carried to Polybus, King of Corinth, who p. 185. canfed his feet to be healed (from the swelling of which he had the name of A.M. 2698. Oedipus) and brought him up. Many years after when he was grown, Lains, either hearing some rumor concerning him, or carried by natural affection. went to enquire of the Oracle what had hapned to his fon, and at the same time it chanced that Oedipus, having heard of some defign against himself, went thither alfo to enquire who were his true Parents. They met in Phocis, A.M. 2722. where Lains bidding the other somewhat imperiously to give way, Occipus moved with choler killed him, being utterly ignorant who he was.

cured the destruction of them all. For Apollo was commanded to kill the Boyes, and Diana the Girles, whereat the was fruck with fuch flupidity; as the is feigned to be turned into a stone; and Amphion with all his family at length died of the pestilence. Zeibus having his young son killed at unawares by the mother, pined away for grief; so that both brothers being dead, and their families ruined, the Thebans restored the Kingdom to Lains the son of

8. Lains being dead, Creon the brother of Jocaste (called also Epicaste) feized upon his Kingdom, and kept it for some time, till Oedipus explained the ridle of Sphine. Tis Munster, which the Bactions also called Phix, is feigned to have had an head and face like a woman, the hinder parts like a Apollodonus, Lyon, and wings as a Bird, and keeping upon the Hill Phicion, or Phiceon (so named from her) the propoted ridles, which whosoever could unridle the and down should have Josaffe in marriage with the Kingdom; but if not, the presently ratione utunim. devoured them. Her ridle to Oedipus was this : what is it that which goeth both on two Legs, three, and four? Many having loft their lives for a mif- A.M. 2758. interpretation, he expounded it to be meant of a min, who when an Infant creepeth on hands and feet, when arrived at ripenesse of age goeth upright on legs, and when he cometh to be old ufeth a ftaff. Some think her a deformed, and favage kind of woman, that living on prey used to lie in wait for passengers. But Pausanias writing that sie was the Bastard daughter of Lains, others judge her to have been for her wifdom preferred to determine the pretences of fuch as claimed the Kingdom, and that those who

Book I.

The Theban War.

Eteocles de

ANDA IL.

Polynices.

marched to Thebes, which they besieged, and divided themselves according to the Gates of the Citie. Eseocles made all preparations for defence, affigning to every Care its Officer, and confulred Tirefia a Prophet, then blind; concerning the event of the War- He answered that the Thebans should overcome, if Menaceus, the son of Creen, would devote himself as a facrifice to Mars, which he presently did, killing himself before the Gates. The The- Diod. 1.4. bans then made a fally, but were beaten back to the Walls, which, when the p.177. Argives approched, Capaneus, one of the feven Captains, first of all others fer to Ladders, and mounted; but he being killed, the other retreated, and many of them were slain in the pursue. After this it was agreed that the two brothers, in a fingle Combat, should decide the quarrel, and so doing they mutually fell by the hands of each other: then followed a very that p fight wherein all the Captains that followed Adrastus were slain, and he onely, escaped by the swiftnesse of his Horse Arion. Yet this victory cost the Thebans so dear, that being themselves almost ruined, hence Cadmea victoria became a proverb. This Warfell out 28 years before that of Troy.

of so ancient a thing as this Thehan-war, there can be little cereainty.

fons-in-law, promifed to reftore them to their Countreys and Estates. Beginning first with Polynices, he sent Tydens in Ambassage to Eteocles , who caused fifty men to lie in wait for him by the way, but he killed them all, and returned fafe to Argos, Adrastus, to revenge the injury, made all possible preparation for a War, and invited all the belf Souldiers from all quarters to the expedition. Seven Emineht Captains gave their names, whereof Am-Laodamus.

The expedition of the Epigoni.

fer the Argives to be buried, till Thefens, and the Athenians procured it. Ten years after the War, when Landamus was now grown up, the fons of those Caprains that had been slain, called Epigoni, made an expedition against Thebes to revenge the death of their fathers. Confulting before-hand the O- A.M.1795. racle of Delphos about the successe, they were bidden to chuse Alemson, the fon of Amphiarans, for their General, which having done, and marching into Thebais, they wasted all the Countrey round about the Citie. Hereupon the Thebans made a fally, and a sharp conflict instead, wherein Laodamus slew Agialeus, the son of Adrassus, and was himself killed by Aleman, though Egialeus, the ion of Aarajius, and was municul airce of Ellipsians. After this the Cirie was taken, and with other plunder, Tirefias the Prophet was a land with other plunder, Tirefias the Prophet was a land with other plunder, the way prefently died. Paufan. fent as a present towards Delphos; but drinking by the way presently died.

II. Escocles leaving behind him a young son, named Landamus, Creon, the brother of Jocasta, assumed the Guardianship of him, and would not sufdecesting raised the fable. Because of her abilities, this kind of Monster was made by * the Agyptians an Hieroglyphick of wifedom and strength, in * clemens 9. Ocdipus then married Jocasta his own mother, not knowing what she was to him, and obtained the Kingdom of Thebes. Diodorus telleth us that he had two fons by her , Eieceles and Polynices, with as many daughters , but others say he had them by Euryganea, the daughter of Hyperphas. At length all came to light; both that he had killed his father, and married his own mother, whereupon the prefently hanged her felf, and his fons kept him up close for the filthinesse of the thing, as some say, though others will have him driven from Thebes, and that going to Thefens King of Athens, he there died a little aftet. Polynices, while his father was yet living, went to Argos, where he married Argia, the daughter of Adrastus; but after his death re turned to Thebes to succeed him in the Kingdom. The two brothers then Diodour. agreed to reign by turns; but Eteocles, having the first course, refused to yield Apollod. up his power at the time prefixed; fothat Polyn ces was glad to return to Argos. At the same time there hipned to be with Adrastus one Tydens, the fon of Oenens, who having killed a man in Atolia, fled alfo to him : both these he kindly received, and by direction of the Oracle making them his phiaraus, who had married Eriphile, the lifter of Adrastus, was Chief, though 10. Having each of them his several Army (or Company rather) they A.M. 2785.

Unridicth the ridle of S max.

Cycon.

Octions.

147

Therfander.

This is he, who is faid to have experienced both Sexes, and lived feven Generations; even from the dayes of Cadmus to this time. The Epigoni having taken the Citie, and either flain, or driven away Landamus, placed Ther fauder, the fon of Polynices in the Kingdom, who failed with Agamemnon towards Troy as General of the Bootians, and was killed in Myfia by Telephin, as was before shewed. The Bxotians chose Peneleus for their Captain, because his son Tisamenus was then but young, and he was also slain in the War by Euryphylm, the fon of Telephus, who after the death of Achilles, brought Peneleus. Aurelion.

Xanthus.

Auxiliary forces out of My fia unto Priamus. 12. Peneleus being dead, Tisamenus, the son of Thersander, reigned at Paulaniae ut Tifamenus. Thebes, His fon Antefion left this place, and went to the Dorienles; where- Supra, fore Damasichthon, the Nephew of Peneleus, and fon of Opheltas, was chosen Damafichthou in his room. After him followed Prolomans, and then Xanthus the last King Ptolomeus. of all, who was flain by Melanshus the Meffenian in a fingle Combat. in behalf of the Achenians, about Celana, a place situate upon the Borders, as we have * already shewed. This hapned 56 years after the destruction of Trey, * Chap. have * already shewed. This hapned 56 years after the deartion of the second 24 before the descent of the Heraclide, 57 before the deart of Codrus the Scatta.

1 latt Achenian King, 252 before the first Olympiad, A. M. 2877.

1 Takkenian King, 252 before the first Olympiad, A. M. 2877. death, together with the possession of Celana, the Thebans quitted the Government of Kings, it feeming good to them no longer to be Governed by a fingle person, bur by many, as Pausanias writeth, from whom yet it appeareth not what kind of rule was erected; whether an Oligarchy at first, or the whole power was assumed by the people, which we know assuredly exer-

CHAP. VI.

cifed it in after times, in a Democratical way. Such was the Government when the Persians had obtained the Empire of the East, and Greece it felf most flourished; at which time, in the entire History of this Countrey we shall hear further of the Thebans.

The Original, and Kingdom of Rome, Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

SECT. I.

The Original of the Citie of Rome.

The antient of Latium,

I. THE Citie of Rome was feated in Latinum, the Western track of Italy, upon the River Tiber. The foyl, for as much as can be known, starth Diony fins) was first inhabited by the Sicult, who held many other places of Dionys. that Countrey. These were expelled by the Aborigines, who being the por Halicarnaffent sterity of the Oenogrians (who seized upon that Tract lying near Tarentum) 1.1. were Confectated first to the gods, & according to the custom of the Countrey, then fent out to feek them new feats, and fortunes. The Qenetrians came out of Lycaonia (afterwards called Arcadia) to seek a more commodious habitation under conduct of Oenotrus, the fon of Lycaon, from whom they received their name. These Aborigines here setled, were forced to admit of some Pelasgians to live amongst them that fled from Hamonia (fince called Theffaly) where, for some time they had continued, and afterwards certain Arcadians who followed Evander, fon to Mercury, and the Nymph Themis, from a Town of that Countrey called Palantium, which name they gave to an Hill on which they fixed, afterwards reckoned amongst the feven belonging to the Citie. Not long after, the Greeks will have Hercules come into these parts, as he was returning home from his expedition into Spain, and the Western Regions , and here to have left some Peloponnesians , who seried themselves upon the Hill called then Saturnius, and afterwards Capitolinus, at what time Faunus reigned over the Aberigines. 2. The

2. The Father of Faunus is faid to be Picus the fon of Saturm, who fly- SECT. 1.

ing out of Crete from his fon Jupiter, came into this Country, and here hiding himself, gave occasion for the Region to be called Latium. Some say the Father of Picus war rightly called Storces, and Sirnamed Saturn, from whom the Laurentine Kingdom took it's beginning, named from Laurentum Augustin, de the Town, and that from Laures or Laures. Piens had this name from the Civitat, Dei.

Bird Picto (a Wood-pecker) which he used, by it's flying to foretel things to lib.18. cap. 19. come, as Festus noteth out of Verrius. Plutarch faith, that he was by the forceries of his wife changed into this Bird, in the likeneffe of which he gave forth Oracles, and answered questions; and agreeable hereto, Dionysius of Halicarnassus compareth this Bird with the Dove of Dodona, as performing that to the Aborigines, which it did to the Thesprotes. But Servius thinkethall this feigned, because Picus was a Soothsayer, and observed the flying of this kind of Bird; and Bocharius telleth us, that Piccea in the Phanician dialect fignifieth a Seer or Prophet ; whence, as Phix amongst the Recitians was taken for a cunning woman, fo he for his skill in such matters, might, according to the termination of Latin words, have the name of Picas. This man, who in Suidas hath the name of Jupiter, (except Jupiter of Crete, that fole Io, was called Picus) hegat Faunus or Fainus, and a daughter named Fauna, and Fauna, which being in a furie would also foretel things to come; whence such as were thus taken, were said Fatuari. Being killed by Faunus her brother and husband, as it feemeth, the was worshipped as a goddesse, and called Bona Dea, because she was so modest, that never any man faw her except her husband. Diony sius maketh this Faunus the son of Mars, He is feigned to have served under Bacchus in his Expedition into the East; and this is their reason, because indeed he was the same with Pan, the constant companion of acchus: (a) One writesh that he was called also Sylvanus (a) Auv. Victor Invius, and Pan by some. (b) Another saith, his name in Latin was Invius, de Oug, gentis and in Greek Pan. So that his reigning in Latium was a meer Fable, in-Rom. vented by fome who knew not that he was the same with Pan the Arcadian, (b) Servius in whose Worship was brought into sells by Foundation with Pan the Arcadian, And, 6, whose Worship was brought into Isaly by Evander.

FAHRUS.

Pious.

3. After him reigned Latinus, as the story goeth, whom Festus maketh his fon, but others, as we have it from Dionysius, fathered on Hercules, who begat him on a certain Hyperborean Virgin, which having received as an Hoflige from her Father, he kept untouched till he came into Latinm, and afterwards gave her in marriage unto Faunus, therefore accounted the Father of Latinus. Fifty five years after the departure of Hercules, and in the 35th of the reign of Lauinus, Aneas with his wandring Trojans arrived at with the Tro. Laurentum, not far from the Mouth of Tiber. Live faith, it is most cerians arrive in tain, that Troy being taken, the Gracians raged against the other Inhabitants, but abstained from Antener and Eneas (the son of Anchises, who was son to Capys, and grand-fon to Affarasus, the brother of Ilus King of Troy) both for the friendship which had past betwixt them and their families, and because they were ever for peace and the restitution of Helena. But Dionysins relateth out of Hellanicus, that the lower part of the City being taken, Æneas with his affociates that came from Ophyrynium and Dardanus, to the aid of Ilium, timely perceiving it, retired into the Castle, where were the Idols and much treasure, protected by the most valiant Soldiers. Hither also A. M. 2811 betook themselves such as escaped the sury of fire and sword; and they easily repelled the force of the Enemy; but Anest confidering that the City could no way be preserved, resolved to quit the Castle as might stand with the safety of the Company. He therefore sent out with a guard the aged an infirm, in the mean time diverting the Enemy, and then marched out in order of bartel, when Neopsolemus and the Achaans had now taken part of the Fortifications. Whilft the Greeks were busied in plunder, they all escaped to the Mount Ida, where, fortifying themselves, the same night others flocked to them out of Dardanus, Opyhrynium, and the rest of the Trojan Towns, expecting till the Enemy fatisfied with the destruction of Ilium, would draw off and return into his own Country.

Latinus.

4. But the Actions having walted the City, and leffer Towns, provided also to storm the Hills; when a Treaty was defired by the Trojans. It was there agreed, that Anew and his Companions, with fuch things as they had, should depart out of the Country under safe conduct; whereupon he first sent away his eldest fon Ascanius, with part of his associates (whereof the greater number was Phrygians) to the Lake Afranius, for that he was defired by the Inhabitants of that Country to be their King. He continued not long with them, for the Scamandrida, with others of the family of Heltor, now dismissed out of Greece by Neoprolemus the son of Achilles, coming tohim he returned with them to Trey, and restored them to their Father's Principality. Anchifes his Father, and his houshold, passed over the Hellespont into a Peninsula called Pallene, whence he sailed to to the Island Delus, thence to another named Cythera, over against Peloponnefus. Touching at the promontory Cinathium (so called for that Cinathus a Trojan was here buried) they renewed their friendship with the Arcadians their kinsfolk, and passed on to the Island Zacynthus, which was so named from Zacynibus one of the fons of Dardanus. Thence they came to Allium, and so to Ambracia, from which Bay Anchises directed his course towards Barrotus an Haven of Epirus, and Aneas by land went two dayes journew to the Oracle of Dodoria, which having consulted about new Seats, in four dayes he came to the Navy at Barrows. From this Haven failing towards Italy, they touched upon some parts thereof, but passing into the Straights of Sicilie, they fell also upon that Island, where leaving part of their Company, they passed over and landed at Laurentum, the place appointed to put an end to these wandrings. This account Dionysius giveth us, as most probable, amongst others which he briefly toucheth. Alexander the Enhastian, as he is cited by Aurelius Victor, wrote that Ilium being betraylar by Amenor, Aneas took his Father upon his back, with his gods, and his little fon in his hand, and thus loaded made towards Ida, whither being fuffered to come by the Greeks (who were much moved at his piety) he there built ships, and by the advice of an Oracle came into Isaly. The piety of Aneas is much spoken of, and commended by many; and amongst others, by the pen of Xenophon, that Actick Muse; but some wrote that he joyned with Amenor in 5. The Trojans landing at Laurentum, there pitched their Tents in the place called Troy from this occasion, distant from the Sea about half a mile. Dianys. L. L. Taking their dinner on the ground, some laid their meat on Parley, that there grew, or, as some said, on crusts of Bread, which afterwards they did also ear up, and then understood that they had fulfilled the Oracle, which bad them go fo far Westward, as till they should ear up their Tables, and then take the conduct of a Som, which they should follow, till she lay down. and in that very place build a City. Now was Latime bufie in War against the Rutuli his neighbours, as some wrore, he was first overcome by Eneas, and then made peace with him; but others fay, he first sent to exposulate the injury offered him by these strangers in the invasion of his Kingdom, and then, understanding who they were, agreed to give them all the ground 1ving five miles about the Hill where the Sow lay down, upon their ingagement to affift him in his War against the Rusuli. This accord made, and Hostages delivered on both fides, they foon utterly subdued the Rutuli, and then built up the Trojan City which was called Lavinium, as the Romans faid, from the Nam to daughter of Latinus. Virgil too much indugling his Poetick fancie, in imi- jam feptima tation of Homer, bringerh Ancas into Italy not till the eighth year after the portat destruction of Troy. But Dienyfine and Solinus (out of the Annals of Caf- Omnibus erran sus Hamina) write, that he arrived at Laurentum in the second year, and sustibus allas. the later faith, with no more than 600 followers.

6. Aneas in the third year after his departure from Troy, and the second A. M. 3824. ccedeth Lati- of his abode in Italy, reigned onely over the Trojans, but the next brought him also the Kingdom of the Aborigines, by the right of his wife Lavinia, daughter to Latinus now deceased, and the favour he had purchased of this people, by his conduct against the Rains. For they had again revolted Sect.i. through the procurement of a certain fugitive named Turmus, who being the Nephew of Amaia, Latinus his wife, out of indignation that a stranger should be preserred to the marriage of Lavinia, before him, at the instigation of Amaia and others, revolted to the Ruinli with a party of men which he commanded. Livie maketh him King of the Rundi, and to have made War upon Latinus, because he had first made him a promise of his daughter. The Aborigenes had the victory, but lost Latinus in the battel. Dionyfins faith, that Turum was now also flain with many others, but Livie will have him again to renew the War, and to call in Mezentine King of the Herrafcans, who was already jealous of the growing power of the Greeks. Aneat, to oblige his new Subjects, caused both them and his own Country-men, to be called by the common name of Latini; but ingaging in another great and bloody battel with Mezentius, which night onely intertupted; he was never feen more, by some thought to be taken up to Heaven, and by others drowned in the River Numicon. This happened to him in the fourth year of his reign over the Latines, and the seventh afterithe destruction of Troy. He was honoured by a Chapel dedicated to him, under the title of Jupiter

7. Ascanius his son succeeded him, who before was called Euryleon, till his name came to be changed in their flight from Troy, as Dionysins writeth. Some thought him the fame with the eldeft fon of Ancas by Creufa, and called lalus, from whom the family of the Julis took it's name; but others accounted him younger. Mezentius grew very high upon the death of Ancas, and befieging Lavinium, forced the Latines to fubmit themselves; but reequiring all their wine to be yearly fent as a tribute into Heirwia, they would not endure so harsh terms, and encouraging themselves, sell upon their Enemies at unawares, and, killing Laufus the King's fon amongst many others, forced him to submitto equal conditions. Thirty years after the founding of Lavinium, Afcanius ledont a new Colony, and built another City called * Alba Longa, whither he berook himself, leaving the old to his Mother A. M. 2852. Lavinia, who, if his own Parent, managed the Kingdom for him in his non-ante Rom. age. He died in the 28th year of his reign, and was succeeded by Sylvius, 400.

Alba Longa

Ascanius his Successors in

Alba.

whom some make his son, others his brother, saying, that Lavinia being left with child by Eneal, for fear of Afranius fled into the Woods, and there was delivered of this child, who from the place of his birth had the name of Sylvins. Inius the eldeft fon of Afcanius contended with him for the Kingdom; but the people conceiving it to belong to him of right, as the Nephew of Latinus, gave the Priethood to the other, in whose family it thenceforth continued. From Sylvius all his Successors were Struamed Sylviu; whereof the fifth (after he had reigned 29 years) Was Aneus Sylvius his Son. Aneus having reigned to many, left Latimus his Succeffor, whom after 51 followed Alba for 39. After Alba, Capetus reigned 26 years, Capy: 28, Calpetus, or Corpennes, 13, and then Tiberinus eight, who being drowned in the River Albala, bestowed onit the name of Tiber. After him Agrippa reigned 24 years, then Alladius (called allo Aremulus and Romulus Sylvins) 19, who was very wicked and tyranment, informed that he would counterfeit Thunder, defirous to be accounted a god by his Subjects, and juttly perified by Thunder and inundation through excessive rains. Aventinus incceeded him,

8. Process the thirteenth King of Alba left two Sons, Numitor and Amu-Time, whereof the later and younger violently thrust his brother from the King- Oxie 14. dom, and that he might have no posterity to revenge the injury, caused his fon to be made away in a pretended hunting, and his daughter Rhea to be devoted to the service of Vefra, and a single life. In the sourth year of her Friefthood, 25 the was going to fatch water for the fervice of the goddeffe, fac was fight upon by forme one and ravished: fome said by one of her lovers, others by Amelius himself, who came disguised upon her, rather out of who gave name to one of the feven Hills, and after 37 left Procus Sylvius his

151

Rhea the eth forth

Twins.

SECT. 1. defire to make an occasion against her, than for any affection; but for credit of the cause the fact is laid upon Mars, in whose grove it was committed; and who came to her as 'tis faid in a terrible manner with Thunder and Lightning. Rhea (called also Sylvia and Ilia) conceived with two boyes, and when they were born, the was either put to death, or condemned to perpetual prison, Numitor bring and they were thrown into the River. At the fall of the water they were left A. M. 3235. upon the dry ground, and a Wolf moved with their cries came and suckled Olymp. a. a., 4. them with her teats, till they were taken notice of by Faustulus the King's Orie 40. Herdiman, who brought them home to his wife Acca Laurentia, that had been newly brought to bed of a Rilborn Child. Some thought that Numitor. aware of his brother's intention to make them away, caused other two to be brought in their rooms, and gave his two Nephews to be nonrished by this Faustulus. Others write that this Acca Laurentia was but the Paramour of the Herdiman, and for the naughtinesse of her life called Lupa (Lupanaria amongst the Romans fignifying brothel houses, and Lupa a Strumpet) whence the fable arose that the Children were nourished by a Wolf. Their names were Romulus and Remus. The boyes grown up proved active and couragious suitably to

The Original of Rome Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Ronulus and Lead out a

Colony.

their birth, but being educated as was agreeable with the fortune and employment of their Foster-father, they had occasion to fall out with the Herdsmen of Numitor, and Remus being taken prisoner was carried before the King. Now did Fauffulus reveal the whole matter to Romulus concerning Diones. their Original, who got together a company of Herds-men, and therewith falling upon the Palace flew Amulius, and restored their Grand-father to the Kingdom. After things were ferled at Alba, the young men had a defire to build a Citie in the place where they had been brought up, which their Grand-father well approving gave them the ground, with such of his subjects as he knew to be of his brothers faction, and all others that of their own 'accord would willingly go out in this new Colony. Most of the Trojans gave their names (whereof continued to the time of Dion) fins almost 50 families) the inhabitants of the place also as many as were left about Palantium and Saturnia were taken in , and the multitude divided into two parts, that by emulation the work might proceed with greater expedition. But what was intended for a laudable contention grew to a greater inconvenience; for hereby were two factions made, which preferring the brothers each before the other raised in them ambitious desire of preheminence. This soon appeared in that they could not agree about the place; Romulus would have the Palatine Hill (or Palantian) to be taken in, and Remns contended for Remuria, though on the other they were educated. The matter was brought before their Grand-father, who advised them to go apart, and observe the flying of Birds; and to whom hapned the most lucky flight, he should be accounted the Author of the Colony. Romulus went to the Palatine Hill, and Remns to the Aventine near adjoyning. Remns first had fix vultures come flying by him; but Romalus his flock doubled the number; fo that both of them were faluted King, and neither would give place to the other.

Several opi~

ning the

builder of Lame.

which his brother had made, faying, it would eafily be passed over by Enemies, and therewith leaped over it himself, for which he was presently killed by one Celer, who overlaw the work. Romulus compassed in the Palatine Hill, and made that the Rudiments of the Citie, with an Heifer and a young Bullock joyned together plowing up a furrow where the Wall should be reared, which use was afterwards observed by the Romans, both in the building, and razing of Cities. This is the most common, and received opinion about the Original of Rome, which some make built at another time, and by other founders. Cephalon Gergithius a most antient Historian wrote that it was built in the second age after the Trojan War, by Romus, one of the four

10. The contention grew to sharp asto proceed to a fight, wherein Remus had the worst of it , and was slain; which Dionysius thinkerh the most probable opinion. Others write that he fcoffed at the lownesse of the Wall fons of Anaas; with whom many other Authors agreed. Others made the founder of it to be Anem himself, whom they will have come in company SECT. 1. with My fes into Italy. Aristotle the Philosopher wrote, that part of the Achaens themselves, in their return from Troy, were by Tempests driven upon Italy, and forced to plant themselves in Latium. Callias the Historian. who Recorded the Acts of Agashocles, mentioned a Trojan woman, called Roma, that being married to Latinus, King of the Aborigenes, bure to him two fons , Remus and Romalus, who building the Citie, named it Rome after their mother. Xenagoras reckoned up three fons of Ulyffes by Circe; Romus, Antias, and Ardea, all which built Cities of their own name. D.ony. fins of Chalcis, with others, would have this Romes to be the fon of Afcamius; some of Emethion, and some of italia by Elestrathe daughter of La. sinus. Besides these many other Greek Authors dissented about the sounders

11. Neither have Roman Writers agreed amongst themselves. Some of them would have the fons of Eneas to be founders of the Citie, viz. Romulus and Remus; others, his Nephews by his daughter, which he gave up as Hostages to Latinus, King of the Aborigines. Some write how Ascanius being left Heir by his father, divided his inheritance with Romalus and Remus his brethren : he himself built Alba and other Towns, Romulus Capua, fo called from Capys his great Grand-father, Anchifa from Anchifes his Grand-father, and that place afterwards called Janiculum, which he named after his father Lucas; then laftly, Rome after his own name, which being afterwards desolate, the Albans repeopled by a Colony led thicher by Romalus and Remus. According to this History, this Citie should have been twice founded : First, not long after the Trojan times, and then again in the fifteenth age after ; but more than this, Antiochus of Syracuse mentioned a third Rome that must have been before the War of Troy, writing that from Rome came a certain Sicilar fugitive to Morges, the fon of Italus, King of Italy. By reason of this uncertainty of the sounders, some, whose prejudice against the Empire of the Citie moved them with envy, accounted it no other than a receptacle, and fortresse of Barbarians, Fugitives, and Vagabounds, and were ready to call into question the History of Romalus, as a meer invention made to hide the despicable Original of so great a Commonwealth.

Several opinions concerning the building.

1.30

Lag.

12. Whether it was a new Plantation, or reparation of an old Town, there is great variety of opinions concerning the time thereof. Timaus the Sicilian made its foundation contemporary with that of Carthage, and the 38 year before the first Olympiad: But of those which seem to approach nearer to truth, fome place the foundation of it in the fixth Olympiad; whereof Velleius Paservelus affigneth the first year, others the third; and Varro, from the opinion of Tarcutius a most excellent Mathematician, the fourth; which opinion is followed by many Authors of great note (befides Augustus, Claudius, Severus, and Philip, Emperours in their Sacular Games) as Plutarch, Tacitus, Die, Gellins, Cenforinus, Onuphrius, Cafar Baronius, Torniellus, Fofeph Scaliger, and Facobus Cappellus. Solinus will have Pomponius Atticus, and Cicero, to reckon from the third year of this Olympiad; but as Pliny, Paterculus and Livy, so Cicero varieth, sometimes counting from the Calends of Januaof the foregoing, one while of this, and another of the following year. M. Percias Cate knowing that Rome was built something before the seventh Olympiad, not standing upon minute and scrupulous deductions, began the Era of the Citie from the first of January that fell in the first year of that Olympiad; and so the year of his own Consulship he said to be the 758 year of the Citie. This Era is followed by the Fasti Capitolini, Solinus, Eusebins, Dionysius of Halicarnassus, (who taketh pains to prove the account good) Polybins , Sigonius , Pighius , Occo , Goltzius , Isaacus Casaubonus upon Polybius, and others. Fabius Petter wrote that Rome was built in the eighth Olympiad, the reason whereof, as Cappellus thinketh, is because Romulus might then have finished the Wall and Ditch ; some deriving the Era of a building from laying of a foundation, and others from the finishing of the Atucture. Laftly, L. Cineins, as Dionyfins informeth us, held that the Citie clients.

144

SECT.2. was built in the fecond year of the twelfth Olympiad. In this great variety of opinions we have rather more reason to approve that of Varro the most learned of all Romans, which placeth the beginning of Rome in the fourth year of A.M.3252. ed of all Romans, which placeth the beginning of American the fixth Olympiad, the fixth of Jotham King of Judah, and the feventh of Ol.6. and.

Pekah King of Ifrael, about the time that the Ephors were made at Sparta, in Pekachi 7. the dayes of Charops the first Archon at Athens for ten years. A.M. 3252.

SECT. II.

The Romam Kingdom Contemporary with the Baby lonian Empire.

From the building of the Citie to the destruction of the Kingdom, the space of 245 years.

of Rame.

The founding 1. Q Omulus being 18 years old, laid the foundation of the Walls on the _(a) eleventh day before the Calends of May, (which answereth to (a) Selinus the tourth of Ottober, after the Tulian account) betwirt the hours of two and cap. a. three, The Sun being in Libra, and the Moon in Taurus; Tupiter in Pifces; Cicero de divin, three, The Sun being in Libra, and the Moon in 1 aurus; Jupiner in cises; ibs. Sainri, Venus, Maris, and Mercury in Scorpie, according to the Computation of Tarratius the most noble of Mathematicians. (b) Varro, (c) Ovid, Plutarch in Commission of Tarratius the most noble of Mathematicians. and several others write that Rome was founded on the Parilia, or Palilia. (b) De re Ru-Festus telleth us that Parilia were so called a Pariendo, from bringing forth; stical, 2, c. 1. those Stars in the head of Tanrus, (or which make up the head of themselves (c) Lib. 4. as Gellins criticizeth against Tiro) named Hyades, and under which Rome Fast. Vide was founded, being also called Parilicium, and Paliticium Sydus. Servius de Emend. noteth that Pales was the Roman Goddesse of fodder, to whom a folemnity temp. 1.5. being observed on the eleventh of the Calends of May, it had the name of pag. 362. Pastia. Cappellus thinkerh that according to the mind of Tarratius, the first year of the Citie commenced from the first of January, and Capricorn, in the new Moon, three moneths after the foundation was laid. 2. The number of the Colony amounted scarce to 200 horsmen, and 2000

foor, wherewich Romalas (which some make but the diminutive of Romas his Diantlibe.

The number of the Colo-

· The division

and diftin-

zens.

true name) planted this new Citie, called Rome after himself. To increase Living lib.s. the number of his Citizens, he opened a Sanctuary to all malefactors, and difcontented persons, which then resorted to him in great numbers from the Countreys adjoyning. Setting about the frame of the Commonwealth by his Grandfathers advice, he remitted it to the choice of the people what kind of Government they would have, whereby obtaining the Kingdom in way of gift his power became the more plaufible. He divided the people into three Tribes, every Tribe into ten Curia, and every Curia into ten parts of Decuria, over all which he appointed Officers. According to the number of Aion of Citithe Curia he divided the grounds into thirty parts, onely excepting one portion for publick use, and another for superstitious Ceremonies. He made a distinction of his people according to honour and dignity, giving to the better fort the name of Paires, either for that they were elder, had Children, for the Nobility of their stock, or if detractors may be heard, he therefore named these Patricit, because they alone could shew their fathers, the other multirude being a rable of fugitives that had no free and ingenuous parentage; wherefore when an Affembly of the people was called by the King, the Pan tricians were by a Cryer cited by their own, and fathers name, but the inferiour fort, or Plebeians, were gathered together by the found of Ox horns. Having diftinguished his subjects into these two ranks he ordered what each should do. The Patrici were to take care of superstition, bear Offices of Magistracy, administer Justice, and Govern the Commonwealth together with the King: The Plebeians till the fields, feed Cattel, and exercise trades; 1: If by their medling in the Government, and by mutual contention of the poorer and ric er fort, such sedicions might arise as were too visible in other Commonwealths. 2. To bind each to the other, he commended to the Pairicians certain of patrons and the Plebeians, whom they should protect and countennice; liberty being SECT. 2. given to the common fort to make choice of whom they would for their Patrons. This cultome of Patron and Client was very ancient in Greece, espe- Dionyling. cially amongst the Thessalians and Athenians, where yet the Clients were very imperiously used, their Patrons imposing on them services ill beseeming freemen, and beating them like flaves, if they disobeyed their commands: The Athenians called them There for their fervice, and the Theffalians Penefta, upbraiding them with their fortune. But Romalus refined the use of Pairenage, rendring it profitable unto both. Patrons by him were ordered to advise their Clients concerning Law, of which they were ignorant, and take care of them as well absent as present, as their own children, in what concerned mony and contracts, undertaking futes for them when oppressed, and procuring them quiet both as to publick and private businesse. On the other hand it was the duty of Clients, to help their Patrons with money in the marriage of their daughters, if need should be, and redeem them, or their sons if taken captive: to bear the charges of private futes, or publick fines, and that at their own cost in way of gratitude; to affist them with their purses in defraying the charge of Magistracy, or honourable employments. This was common to both: that neither ought to accuse the other, to give any testimony or suffrage, or to be reckoned amongst his Enemies : which if any one did, he was held guilty of treason by Romalus his Law, and it was lawful for any one to kill him. Hereby, for many Ages, this Paironage continued in force, and was as effectual for love and mutual help as confanguinity of alliance: it was the glory of the Nobility to have many Clients devolved upon them from their Ancestors, and obtained by their own virtue. But not onely the Plebeians in the City found themselves secured by this Patronage, but in processe of time all Colonies, associate Cities, and such as were subdued by war, had their Patrons, to whom many times the Senate would remit fuch controversies as were brought before it from the said Cities, or Commonwealths, and ratifie their judgement. Lastly, such firm concord followed this constitution of Romulus, that, for 730 years, as Dionysius reckoneth, though many and great contests arose betwixt the Nobility and Commons about the Commonwealth (as is usual in all both great and little States) yet it never came to blood or stughter, but, mutually yielding and granting, all controversies were composed by civil exposulations; till Caim Grachus, Tribune of the people, overthrew the peace of the City; after which, they neither spared to kill and banish one another, nor to commit any other wickednesse, whereby they might compafie Victory and their own devices. 4. After this, Romulus refolved to chuse a Senate, which should assist him in the Government, and from amongst the Patricians selected 100 after this manner. Our of them all he first made choice of one particular man, to whom, Idem. when he was constrained to be absent in the wars, he committed the Government of the City: Then he commanded every Tribe to chuse three men, fuch as were eminent for birth and wisdom; and every Curia to elect three out The Senate. of the Patricians. This number he called a Senate, either for their age, or virtues or because, as Festiva will have it, nothing was done without their permission, the Senare being named a Sinendo. Perceiving after this, that he stood in need of a Guard for his own person, he caused the Curia by their fuffrages, to chuse him our 300 young men, (ten out of each) whom he cal-Celeres. led Celeres from their readinesse to execute his commands, as most have writren, or according to Valerius Antias, from their Captain, whose name was Celer. Under him were three Centurions, and other inferiour Officers : this Company with their Spears defended the King in the City, and received his orders: in battels were the first leaders and the keepers of his body, beginning the fight first and recreating last of all ; which custom Diony sims thinketh

Book I.

Ramalus to have taken from the Lacedamonians. Things being thus ap-The Office of pointed, he limited unto all their work and honours. The King's duty was to take care of their superstition; to look to the preservation of the Laws and Customs, either natural or written; to decide the most weighty canfes betwixt

154

SECT. 2. man and man, and refer those of leffer consequence to the Senate, into which he was also to have an inspection. He was to call together the Senate, affemble the people, first to speak his opinion, and ratific what was approved by the major part. This was the King's work at home, who in the Wars had ablolute authority. To the Senate this honour and power was given, to debate and resolve about such things as the King propounded, which were decreed by the greater number of voices, as agreeable to the constitution of Lacedamon, as our Author observeth. To the People he committed three things: to creare Magistraies, make Laws, and resolve about War what was propounded. by the King; yet so, as that the authority of the Senate interposed. All the whole multitude together gave not their votes, but the Carle apart, and whatfoever feemed good to most, was referred to the Senate, which custom was afterwards changed, when the Senate did not confirm the Decrees of the People, but the People the refolves of the Senate.

5. For the increase of the City, besides the opening of a Santhary (which Dionysim ranketh after this setlement of the civil policy) he forbad, when any Town was taken, that prisoners of ripe age should be slain or fold, be preserved, or their grounds lest untilled; but commanded a Colony to be sent from Rome, to which part of them should be affigued, and some of the Brangers' to be admitted to the freedom of the City; which device our Author eftermeth of great weight and confequence. He made many good and profitable Laws in refer Laws, whereof most were unwritten. He ordained in reference to marriage. rence to mar that the wife should be partaker of all that was her husband's, when chast and

riage.

modest. If he died intestate, she was his absolute Heir, and if he lest children, equally with them. When she offended, she was lest to his disposal Max, l, 2, 6, 1. for punishment, who admitted his kindred to judge with him concerning the fault, if the either violated chastity, or drank wine, which Romulus utterly condemned as an incentive to wantonnesse. So effectual became this conflicution to the preservation of the conjugal knot, that for 520 years there hapned not any divorce in Rome, till in the 137th Olympiad, when Marcus Pomponius and Caius Papirius were Confuls, Sp. Caruilius an eminent man. put away his wife; and then, though he sware to the Censors, that he did is onely to provide for posterity, yet was he ever hated by the people. He gave to Fathers absolute power over their Sons, and that for all their lives, either to imprison, beat, carry away bound to rustick labours, or kill; although the fon bore the greatest Office in the Commonwealth, or publickly commended and honoured. By virtue of this Law, fome eminent Persons making Orations to the People in opposition to the Senate, in the midst of popular applause, have by their Parents been pulled down from their seats, and led. away to be punished according to their pleasure : and as they passed along the Forum, none could deliver or rescue them; not the Conful, Tribune, nor multitude it self, which they had flattered. And because of this absolute paternal dominion, several valiant men have been put to death for their valour shewed in some way against the Enemy, contrary to the direction or command of their Fathers.

Parents and their Children, &c.

6. He compelled parents to educate all their male children and their eldest daughters: he permitted a child younger than three years to be made away, if it was born defective in some member or monstrous; and yet, then was it not to be exposed without approbation of the five next neighbours. If any one broke this Law, he, besides other punishment, forfeited half of his goods. The Father was permitted by the Law-giver to fell his Son, and that three times over, if it hapned that he recovered his liberty: a greater power than was had over flaves, who if once made free, thenceforth to continued. All fordid Arts, and fuch as were subservient to luxury he forbad, which being left to flaves and strangers, for a long time the Romans scorned to meddle with. Two courses of life onely he enjoined them, Warfare and Husbandrie, allowing a Market once in nine dayes. He divided equally to them the grounds, flaves, and money, taken from the Enemy. Concerning injuries, be prefently decided all controversies, or referred them unto others, inflicking punish near according to the crime; and feeing the people to be by SECT. 2. fear best retained in order, he set up his Judgment-sett in the most conspicuous place of the Forum, where his guard of 300 Celeres, and twelve Sergeants, or Littors, carrying rods and axes, and in the view of all men, either beating or putting to death Milefactors, mide a terrible thew. This is the form of the Commonwealth, as Romulus first established it, much admired by Diony fines above all the conflictations of his own Country-men the Gracians, whose Religion also (as giving occasion to the vulgar fort to contemn their gods involved in such mistortunes, or to abst in from no iniquity and filthineste to which they heard that their deities were also abnoxious) he esteemeth vain, frivolous, and dangerous, in comparison of that which was instituted by the Roman Law-giver. 7. Ramulus, confidering that there were feveral powerful Nations round about him, which with evil eyes beheld the growth or his City, bethought with himfelf how he might contract amity with hem. Concluding, that affinity was the onely means : by the advice and confent of the Senite, he refolved upon a course to provide wives for his Subjects. He caused at the suggestion of his Grand-father Numitor, a Solemn Feest, and exercises in honour of Neptune, to be proclaimed throughout the Country, to which many flocking with their wives and children, upon fign given, his men laid hold on fuch Virgins as were come to fee, and violently carried them to their houses. The number of them amounted to 683, for which Romalus chose out so many husbands, and married them after their own Country Rites, making them covenant a Society or Communion of fire and water, which cuftom continued for many Ages. Some write that this happened in the first year of Romulus, but others affign the fourth of his reign for it, which scarce could be done till matters were something setled. Some delivered, that scarcity of women was the cause of this rape : others thought, that by it an occasion was onely fought for War; but a third party will have, that by this violent act an affinity with the neighbouring Cities was endeavoured.

the Sabine Virgins.

Romulus his defensive wars.

8. Some were grievously moved, and others put a good construction u on the businesse: but at length the mitter brake out into a minyfold War, of which that with the Sabines was most grievous. The Ciries Canina, Antonma and Crustumium first began, after they could not perswade the Sabines to joyn with them. The two former, inhibited by the Aborigines, Romulus presently subdued, and afterwards the later also, which was a Colony of Alba; the grounds were divided betwirt some Romans, sent thither to plant, and the old Inhibitants, of which such, as would, were made free of the City. and without loffe of their former effaces, reckoned amongst the Tribes and Curia, to the number of 2000; fothet now, the Ronan footman were increased to 6000 men. Upon the Victory over Canina and Antenna, he first triumphed, and designed a plot for a Temple to Jupiter Fereirius (so called from Romulas his bringing home in triumph the spoils of Acron the King of Canina, whom he flew; The spoiles were named by the Romans Opima Spolia) The plot of ground was about 15 foot long, and this was the original of the Capitol. Having obtained a great name for his valour and clemency, many eminent men went over to him with their families, amongst whom was Calius, who give name to an hill in the City: and some whole people committed themselves to his protection (having taken example from the Medullini) and received Colonies from Rome. This successe the Sabines fore repined at, laying now the blame one upon another, that they had not withflood the beginnings of the Roman greatnesse: wherefore they resolved to correct their former carelessnesse by double diligence, and assembling together at Cures, their Metropolis, decreed War against Rome for the spring following, and made choise of T. Tatius their King to be General. Romalus made all possible provision for resistance, fortifying the Capitoline, and Aveneine hills. Lucumo from Solonium, a City of Hetruria, brought Auxiliary forces, and Numitor was not wanting to the affiftince of his Grand-fon.

9. The Sabines having demanded restitution of their Virgins, and to have

SECT. 2. the authors of the injury delivered up (that they might have a more specious pretence for their actions) received no fatisfactory answer, and therefore both parties drew out into the field. The Sabines brought 25000 foor, and almost 1000 horse, and the Roman Army contained 20000 foot, and 800 horse, a very great number for a new builded City. Tails pitched his Tents betwire the Quirinal and Capitolian hill, where feeing all places strongly fortified, and small hopes for him to attempt any great matter: as he despaired of doing any good, one Tarpeia, the daughter of Tarpeius who kept the Capitol, called to his men from above, and covenanted with them to hetray the place into their hands. Concerning the wages the was to receive several stories, or fables, are related. It is faid, that she required to have what they were on their left arms, meaning their bracelets, but when the len them in, they threw their Targets which they carried on their left arms upon her, and therewith pressed her to death. Being Masters of the Capital, they had thereby great advantage to continue the War at their pleasure, and first fome light Skirmishes insued: but at length they resolved to do their utmost on both fides, and for feveral dayes continued the fight, fo long as till night fevered them, for the most part with equal successe. This made the Sabines

The end of Sabine War.

cause of the War, through the perswasion of Hersilia, one of the principal amongst them, became mediators, and made peace betwixt these Fathers' and Sons in Law, after the War had lasted fix years. The conditions were, A.M. 2363. that Romulus and Tains should reign at Rome, with equal prerogative : Achazi 2. that the City from Romalus should be called Rome, but the Citizens Quirites from Cures the native place of Tatins. Such of the Sabines as would were made free of Rome, and a respect was had of those Matrons that procured the peace, that they which would live with their husbands, should bee exempted from all work and fervice, belides foinning and making of feriously bethink themselves, whether they had best carry on the War or retreat: and the Romans were rather more to feek how to hold out: ver neither party would floop to defire a Treaty. Whill they remained in this anxious condition, those Sabine women that were married to the Romans, and the

10. Some write, that from thirty of these women which undertook this reconciliation, to perpetuate their memories, the Tribes were named; but Teremius Varro denied it, alleging that they had names before, and that by this honour given to thirty the rest of the women were not passed by and discouraged. For five years the two Kings reigned peaceably together, and joyntly subdued the Camerini, a Colony of the Albans; but in the fixth, it hapned that some of Tatius his friends plundring the Lavinians, and by him being protected, notwithstanding Romalus and the Senate judged they were to be given up: moreover killing the Ambassadors sent to demand them.

The Veii

overcome.

wherein they were also born out by him; when he went to Lavinium to sacrifize, or perswade the injured persons to be quiet, the friends of the Ambaffadors fell upon and knocked him in the head. Romulus to his great contentment thus freed from his partner, made fatisfaction to the injured, and burying Tatins at Rome very honourably, subdued Fidena, a Town five miles off, which had seized on provisions coming to Rome in a time of famine. This ther he fent some of his own to inhabit, according to his custom, and then punished the Crustumini, who had killed those Planters which hee fent amongst them; and over them he obtained his second triumph. The Veii, a most powerful people of Herruria inhabiting a City no lesse than Athens, fituated upon a craggy Rock, at fome twelve miles distance from Rome, found themselves concerned in what the Fidenates suffered, and by an Embassie required the Romans thence to remove their Garrison, and restore the Inhabitants to their whole demesens. This being denied, they met at Fidena, and there fought two bloody battels, wherein Romulus had the better, and triumphed the third time. Plutarch writeth, that the Veientes ridiculously challenged Fidene to belong to them, and receiving a scornful answer from Romulus, divided themselves into two parts, whereof with one they fought the Fidenate, and with the other went to meet Romulus, who flew of them Sect. 2. above 8000, with the loffe of 2000 of his own men. In the next battel he is fabuloufly reported to have killed 7000 with his own hand, being half the number that was flain. The Veientes now betook themselves to intreaties, and entred into a League with the Romans for an hundred years, on these conditions: to quit a great part of their grounds, with the Salt-pits near the River, and give up fifty Hostages of their most considerable families. Romn-In triumphed over them on the Ides of October, leading with him their Captain an aged man, who had badly performed his office, for which he was afterwards personated by an old man in all Triumphs, 11. This was the last War managed by Romalus, who being grown exceeding high and cyrannical upon his successe, intarged his prerogative beyond grown tyran those bounds he had formerly set to it, and made use onely of the Senate to ratifie his commands. Hereby hee contracted the hatred of thit Order, (though the Soldiers loved him) which brought him to an untimely death. Is made away Some think he was torn in pieces in the Senate house, and the Senators by peece-meal carried out his body under their gowns, fo that it was never feen. Others wrote, that having drawn out the people to the place called Capra

Romulus

CMAP. VI.

Palus, and there miking an Oration to them, a sodain dirknesse and Tempeft hapned, wherein he vanished and departed from amongst mortals. The Senators took occasion from the secrecy of their fact, and concealment of his body, to perswade the multitude that he was taken up amongst the gods; and Julius Proculus, a man of prime Nobility and credit amongst the Pairicians, put all out of doubt, by swearing most religiously, that he appeared to him in the high-way, and cold him, that is pleased the gods, from whom he came, so long to let him continue amongst men, till he had founded a City, whose Empire and glory should excel, and then again that he should return to heaven. He bade him farewel, and tell the Romans, that if they did but use tempe-

Called Quiri- rance and valour, they should in power excel all mortals. And he would be a propitions god unto them, under the name of Quirinus, He lived 55 years, and reigned 37, in which space he much advanced the Sate of the City, which who first planted with him, were not much above 2000 foot, and scarce goo horfe, but when he died, he left of the one kind 46000, and almost 1000 of the other fort. After his Grand-fathers death, he succeeded in the Kingdom of Alba, which he governed by Deputies, continuing his refidence at Rome. The day on which he died, was the Nones of Quintilis (afterwards called July) which answereth o the 26th of May, as the Callendar was reformed by Julius Cafar. It was named Nona Caprotina, from the place where he vanished, and Puga Populi, because the people assonished at the King's death took them to their heels. Tarrasius the Mathematician observed, that the life of this Prince was fignalized by three Ectypies of the Sun: one at his conception, which is also the first that is observed by Authors; another the same day de founded Rome, and the third on the day of his death; concerning which, for that the calculation of the former is rather founded upon Aftrological than Aftronomical Principles, Jacobus Cappellus is to be

An Interior

12. Romalus dying childlesse, the Senate for a years space retained the An interroge.

num for a year. Power in their own hands, which is called an Inter-regnum. They governed by their courses, each man five dayes; but the People murmuring, and giving out, that for one tyrant they had got an hundred, at length they refolved that a King should be chosen. The Sabines thought it reasonable he should be of their Nation, not having had any fince Taims, and the other were averse to a stranger, being desirous he should be some one of the Patricians; but at length the Fathers fixed upon Numa Pompilius a Sabine, a man of al- A, M. 3191. most forty years of age, and the most considerable for knowledg and ability of P. C. 40. that time, who by consent of the People was advanced to the Government. Externa 17:

Numa.

At first he excused himself; but sollicited by his Father, and Marcins his Olymp. 16. an. 3. kindiman, not to let flip to fair an oportunity of his own and Countrie's preferment, he accepted of it. He thought it policy to raise that City by

SECT. 2. Laws, and religious cultoms which had been founded by force and Arms, and to in ten the Genius of it by diversion from warfare, it being as necessary to employ a people well at home as exercise them abroad. He built a Temple to Janus, which was to fland open in time of War, and be shut in peace, as it continued all his reign. But it onely hapned fo to be twice from his time to that of Tiberius Cafar. The first occasion was in the Consulship of Tiens Manlins, and Marcus Attilius, after the ending of the first Punick War; and the fecond in Augustus his reign, after he had subdued Anionius and Cleoparra. at what time there was an Universal peace. Numa disbanded the Royal Guard of the 300 Celeres, as standing in no need of them. To the two Flamens of Jupier and Mars he added the third of Romains. To him is also ascribed the bringing in of the Ponifies, whereof he himself was one, and the Original of which name is so much controverted. He also ordained the Kestal Nans, and the Feciales a fort of Priests which judged concerning the equity of War, and denounced it. His religion much fuited, in the manner and strictnesse thereof, with that of the Pythagoreans, which caused the report of his being Concemporary, and converfing with Pythagoras; although this Philosopher was born 100 years after his death. The reason of this mistake, besides the ignorance of the times, was his familiarity with Pythagoras

a Lacedamonian, who give him advice concerning the ordering of his King,

His religion much fuiting with that of the Pythagoreans.;

dom, travelling in lealy in the fixteenth O'ympiad, the third year of which was the beginning of Numa's reign, according to Plusarch. 12. As Pythagoras taught that the principle of all things is not to be perceived by fenie, or lyable to motion, but invisible, immortal, and to be apprehended by the understanding alone, fo Numa forbad the Romans to use the Image of any God which represented him after the form of a man, or any other living Creature. Neither in these antient times, was there are painted, carved, or molten image amongst them; but for the first 170 years, though they built Temples and Sacred places, yet had they no image at all, because they thought it wickednesse to liken more excellent things to those below them, and thought God no otherwise to be perceived than by the mind. Numa divided those grounds amongst the poorer fort which Romulus had gained in his Wars, cauting his subjects to apply themselves to husbandry, to cultivate their minds as well as the enth; and that he might take away the distinction of Roman, and Sabine, which threatned the State with endlesse emulation and prejudice, he diffinguished them all according to their trades and occupations, making every Art a particular Company and Fellowship. He abated the rigour of that Law made by Romulus, concerning the power of Fathers over their Children, ordaining it should not be lawfull for them to fell fuch fons as by their leave had married, because it was unjust that a woman which had married a free-man should be constrained to live with a flive. He reformed the year which in the time of Romulus was quite out of all order: fome moneths had fewer then 20 dayes, fome had 35, and fome above; the variety of the several courses of Sun and Moon was not understood; but onely this aimed at, that the year should consist of 260

14. Numa confidering that a Solar year exceeded the Lunar by eleven He reformeth dayes (the one confishing of 354, and the other of 365) doubled these eleven dayes, and every other year, inferted a moneth after February, confiling of 22 dayes, and by the Romans called Mercedonius, because at that time wages were wont to be paid. He changed the order of the moneths, affigning to March (formerly the first) the third place ; to January the first, and February the second; whereof this was the last, and the other the 11th in the dayes of Romulus. Many have been of opinion, that Numa added 3anuary and February to the rest of the moneths, and that formerly the Romans had but 10. which appeareth by the name of December, the last moneth, and because the fifth and fixth moneths from March were called Quintilis and Sextilis. Thus March must have been the beginning of the year, which Romalus fo named from Mars his supposed father. The second was April, SANS. VI. The Theban Kingdom Contemporary with the Babyloman Empire. fo called from Venue, as some thought (because her superflicious wo ship was Sect.2. performed in it, when the women were Crowned with Myrtle as they washed) or, as others gathered, from the opening of Plants at that time of the year. The ribird was May, named from Maia, and facred to Meron y; the fourth was June from June as some thought, others deriving the names of these two from Majores and Juniores, the Elder and younger. The rest had their names from their order, as Quinilla, Sextilla, September, Ottober, No. viember, December. Afterwards Quinilia was from Juliu Cefar called July, Sexilie August from Augustus. September and Offiber, the Empefour Domitian changed into his own names, but prefently after he was killed they recovered their former. Onely the two last ever retained their first appellations. Of those moneths which Numa either added, or ranked, Febrain, was fo called from the expiations which used to be in it, signified by the word Februa: then they were wont to make parentations to the dead, and celebrate the Lupercalia, certain Sacrifices and Games in honour of Pan, much like to the Sacrifice of Expiations, January was named of Janus, which Numa feemeth to have fer before March, because he would show that Civil vertue is ever to be preferred before what is exercised in Wars. For Janua was accounted one of the most antient Gods, or, Kings, (from whom reigning in Iraly, some make the Romans descended) very studious for civil fociery and humane converse, and who changed the course of mans life from brutish and savage to an humane and gentle kind. He is therefore seigned to be double faced, because he brought in another fashion of life than what formerly had been; and had a Temple built by Numa with two doors, that were shur in peace, and open in war as was before said. These things Plas tarob relateth in the life of Numa.

25. But Livie, and other confiderable Authors, (a) Solinus, (b) Macro- (a) C. 3. bins, and (e) Conformes, write that the first Roman year consisted but of ten (b) saure. moneths and 304 dayes; fix of the moneths having 30 dayes, and the other lib.t. 6.12. four 3r apiece. But this account differing from the course of the Sun, Numa, (c)6,20, to make them agree, added 51 dayes to the year. That he might make up the twelve moneths; from the fix, confifting of thirty dayes, he took one day apiece, and therewith made up 57. Which were divided into two moneths, whereof the one contained 29. and the other 28 dayes, and fo the year began to have 355. Of this opinion, besides Junius Graubanus and Fulvius, the other part of the first and Sucanius were, as appeareth out of Censorinus. Yet Licinius of Annals) delivered that the first Roman year consisted of 12 moneths, a greeable to the former opinion related by Plutarch. This a * noble pair of * foleph Scamodern, Criticks prove to have been the truer opinion, affirming that Ja- liger de Emenswary and February were not added by Nama, but transferred from the end dations Temp. to the beginning of the year, and endeavouring to thew that they who would libe. & Library who would library who w have the year burro confift of 10 moneths make it no shorter than they that are dyalias de view approximation of the state for 12. diffinguishing it not so much in number as placing of dayes; for the formic cap. 17. Romans in Romalus his time filled up the year, either by aligning more dayes than thirty to the moneths, or adding so many in the end thereof as seemed to be wanting. But it sufficeth to have couched these things for the direction 16. Numa, to gain credit and obedience to his constitutions, feigned that He had converte with the Goddeffe Eggrid. He married Taila, daughter to Tails, the King, by which he had a daughter hamed Pompilia. Some faid he neither had any other wife nor any more Children : but others both as to wife and children differred from them. He lived above 80. reigned 43 years, and at his death was buried with great honour. His body was not burned (which he forbad) but buried in a stone Cossin under the Janiculum; and the Books of his Ceremonies faid by him in another, which being twelve written in Latine; and as many in the Greek tongue, were 400 years after, when Publing Cornelius, and Marcus Babins were Confuls, by water Wrought out of the earth, and for that it was thought wickednesse to have such things discoexed 19 the multirude, (from which he also kept them, after the fashion of the financial by communicating dicipline by writing but onely by word of Hours, not communicating dicipline by writing but onely by word of Hours, burned by command of the Serate. He kept the State in conthe peace and his ability herein contributed to the general quiet of Isa's; to the local the contributed to the general quiet of Isa's; to the local the contributed to the general quiet of Isa's; to the local the contributed to the general quiet of Isa's; to the general quiet of be to have a Philosophical mind, and regal power concur in a Prince, who would make vertue superiour to dishonelty. But the fortune of the succeed-The Alega added to the luftre of his glory: For of the five which followed, the life Alega added to the luftre of his glory: For of the five which followed, the life Alega add none of the reft obtained a natural and auter end, according to Platarch.

Tullus Hofti-

tick leveral Interreges, at length Tulus Hostilius was created King, by the hower at content of the Citie. His Grand-father was that Hofilins, who A. M. 3338. Hower at the Citiadel, and married V.C. 83.01mg. After much valour shewn he was $7.48, E. The thirte and left a young fon, who at ripenesse of age, of a noble Mawhile the state of the second of the state of the second o Manafes King his first beginning he purchased the favour of the poorer fort by dividing them, man by man, that portion of Land which the two forther forms and the portion of Land which the two forther falls had kept to bear their charges, faying, that his own inheritance would fill be for his own expences. Left there should want room he took in the thill Calins, where such as wanted habitation, and now had gotten in the till Caims, where luch as wanted habitation, and had gotted grounds, duit them houses, and he also dwick himself. He was not onely of the same of the same in the Roman Terricories, and were again robbed by the Romans. At Cana Cluilius Coverned Alba, who envying the growth of Rome, han for this end he privately procured fome to prey upon the Remans, they would revenge the injury, and when they did so upon such as Could take, he periwaded the Albant that they had received a great Applifadors were fent to Rome to demand restitution, and such as Dienysius 13. -222 daylot and Amparadors were sent to some to demand resistation, and author playsful it.

His War with the Al-

-222 daylot and being style of the injury to be given up into their hands. This Hop living l. 1.

-222 daylot and being style of, and knowing that they who first resured to make satisfactors are the sound of the style will be at the Odium of the War, caused some of his friends kindly the satisfactors. The style will be at the Odium of the War, caused some of his friends kindly and the satisfactors.

of the formis cap. 17.

Ambasiadors, pretending he was by necessary occasions 18 19 dations Temp.
18 19 dations Temp.
21 of dyatus de va-Bring them audience, till he first sent some of his own to and restitution. They received a sharp repulse from Clailius, Toffilius having notice, then gave audience to the Albans, told which and the fent, had already received (tich an answer as argued the respectful broken : whereupon he denounced a just, and necessary War against the Albans, which he would carry on not onely with his domestick and the state of the st The state of classics of the state of the st pected suddenly to decide the quarrel, Civilius was found of the original state of the st a turbulent spirit, and scarce able for warlike matters, but a man, of a turbulent ipint, and icarce able to want as his predeceffor-TENNIE of danger that hung over his head from the Fidenates, (who Till log destruction of both) he drew out the War in length, and fearful to loteall, was inclinable to a present composure. Hostilius was now also not averse to a determination of the businesse, being desirous to punish the Fidenaies and Veiences, who, formerly overcome by Romulus, had fubmitted to the obedience of Rome, and in the dayes of Numa taken occasion of his peaceable Grovernment, to provide for the absolute shaking off of the yoak. This time they thought to prefent them with a fit opportunity; for gathering together at Fidena they were ready, when the Albane and Romans should in battel have weakened each other, to fall upon both.

19. This plot discovered, wrought so upon both the Caprains, that they came to a conference, wherein much being alteged for the justice and right of both parties, at length it was agreed, that three perions on each fide thould by combat decide the quarrel, and that City, whose Champions should have the better, obtain preheminence and command over the other. Whiles every Officer defired to be one of the three, Sufferius bethought himfelf of two ternions of brothers that were most fit, as he thought, to take it upon them. One Sequinius of Alba had two daughters, whereof one he married to Curianim his fellow Citizen, and the other to Horat is a Roman. It hipened that both being with child at the same time, brought forth, each of them three fons at the first birth, which their Parents educated as the hope of their Families: to these it was that Suffering thought the Combat concerning Principality was to be committed, being of equal years, strength, and courage, The motion was imbraced by the parties, who dispensed with their private affection (no whit unfuitable to their confanguinity) now that the honour and welfare of their Country was concerned. In the Combat two of the Horatii were flain first, and the third left to deal with three adversaries, spirited afresh by the great advantage they had of him; but warily retreating, so as he might have but one upon him at a time, he flew them all, and Rome in him remained Conqueror. As he returned into the City, he was met by his Sifter, that fell upon him with chiding and outragious words, for imbruing his hands in the blood of his Cousin-germans, whereof one was contracted to her. Now elevated by his successe, and transported with a certain kind of Ecftatical love to his Country, he killed her in the place, as one that preferring private respect before publick good, was unworthy to live. Hereof he was accused, and Tullus neither thinking it seemly to quit or condemn him, as same say, created the Desmoirs for capital Judgement, who condemed him; but, if fo, there lyis appeal from these Officers to the People, the multitude granted his life to the tears of his Father, who not onely took not minious burial. 20. Hoffilim dealt moderately with the Albans, but Merim Sufferins their Dillator, or King, thinking his credit much impaired by the event of the Combat, fought how he might betray the Romans, and wrest the power out of their hands. He dealt therefore underhand with the Fidenates and Veientes, who now called to account for their double-dealings, brake out into open rebellion, and by promife of affiltance, incouraged them in their enterprize, And when the Romans and the other came to ingage, he refolved to stand neuter till he saw wich party had the better, intending then to cloze with it. The Romans were discouraged to see their friends Rand aloof, suspecting the treachery, which Tullus, also apprehending, gave our, that it was by his order, as meaning by fome stratagem to surprize the Enemy, upon which report the Fidenates and their companions were discouraged, and at length by the Romans, who refurned their courage, put to the rout. After the Victory, he called the Albans together, and laying open the treachery of Suffesions (which favoured the more of Treason, because he had trusted him as his inward friend, and kept him three years in his place) caused him to be pulled in pieces; having beforehand fent Marca Heratius to Alba, who raied the City, and translated the Inhabitants thereof to Rome, after it had flood about 487 years, according to the account of Dionysius, which is to be preferred before the other of Livie, or that of LaFlorm, an Author ill his daughters death, but esteemed it an heroick act, and gave her an igno-

8

SECT. 2. not to be relied on, either as to Chronology or order, and disposition of matters; to fay no more.

21. To this end came Alba through the power of it's own Colony, ha- A. M. 3051. Alba destroy- ving flourished with riches, numbers of Inhabitants, and been the Mother of V.C. 100. thirty Latin Towns. After this, Tulins, having brought fully under the Fi- Olymp 31. and denaies, moved War against the Sobines, for robbing such Romans as used Manafia 48. to traffick into the Country, and refused to make restitution of the goods: he overthrew them at the Wood called Malitiofa Sylva, and forced them to beg peace. Now also the Latines and Romans fell out, because they refused to yield obedience to these, who challenged it as due to their City, which had conquered the Metropolis. The War was managed for five years, with great moderation; onely, besides continual depredations, Hostilius punished Medallia for an example, which in the time of Romulus had received a Ro- Livie. man Colony. Otherwise no battel was fought, nor any Town taken and Pliny. plundred, which made both inclinable to peace. But at this time Tullus Ho- Putarch. stilius died, having reigned 32 years; some say by Lightning, with his whole Family, for neglect of the Religion instituted by Numa: but most believed him taken away by the practices of his Successor, though Diony sius holderh their opinion to be improbable.

22. After the death of Tullus, the state fell into an Inter-regnum, ac- Dionys. 1.3. Ancus Marcius, cording to the custom, and, by the Inter-rex and Senate, Ancus Marcius was elected King, who being confirmed by the people, began his reign in the A. M. 3366. second year of the 35th Olympiad, wherein Spharus the Lacedemonian was Olympias, and Victor, at what time Damasias was annual Archon at Athens. He (who Tolia 6. according to what Feltus writerh, had the Sirname of Anous from his crooked arm, which he could not (trech out in length) was Grand-son to Numa, by his daughter Pompilia. She was married to Marcius, the fon of that Marcius. Who being the kiniman of Numa, came with him to Rome, after he Plutarch in had earnestly perswaded him to take upon him the Kingdom, being elected Numa. into the Senate, after the King's death, flood in competition with Hoftiling for his place, and miffing of it laid violent hands on himself. Marcius his fon marrying Pompilia the daughter of Numa (whether by Tatia or Lucretia, is uncertain) begot on her this Ancus Marcius, who was five years old at the death of both his Grand-fathers. Ancus confidering that much of the fupersition brought in by Numa was neglected, for himself to restore the use thereof, alleging to the people, that the diseases, Pestilence, and other innumerable calamities, which had lately fallen upon the City, together with the difastrous end of Hostilius, proceeded from neglect of their gods. He advised them to return to Husbandry, and other peaceable imployments, neglecting violence, and the profit that cometh by War. The State being thus restored, he thought as his Grand-father had lived, so to passe his time free from all War and molestation; but he found his expectation crossed, for that he was compelled to be a warriour against his will, and was never free from peril and tumult. Scarce had he began to reign, and had modelled the Commonwealth, when the Latines contemning him as a fluggard, and unfit for military imployment, made depredations upon the Roman Territories. Making preparation for War, Livie writeth, that he first denounced it, sending to the Latins beforehand, and now constituted the Office of the Feciales, the Rules whereof he took from the Equicoli an antient people.

23. He surprized Politorium a Town of the Latines, the Inhabitants of Livius lib. 1. which, he translated to Rome, where, (for that the antient Romans inbabited the Palatine, the Sabines the Capitoline, and the Calian had been given to Diony, 1, 3. the new Denizons of Alba) to them was granted the Aventine hill to inhabit, other neighbours being added, when, within a while, Tilene and Sicania were taken. The Latines much concerned at this loffe, conspired against him for the Spring following; but at feveral times he defeated their united powers, and forced them to ask peace; fo did he the Fidenates, Volfci, Veienies, and such Sabines as, not yet having felt the strength of Rome, forely repined at the successe of an upstart City. He laid a wooden bridge over the GHAP. VI. The Roman Kingdom Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire,

River Tiber, and fortified the Janiculum on the other fide with a wall, ha- SECT.2. ving by a bridge united it to the City: and in the midle of Rome he made a prison for Maletactors. Neither did he onely extend the Pomarium or Area of the City, but inlarged it's dominion. For having taken from the Verentes the Messan Forrest, his Territories reached to the Sea, upon which, at the mouth of Tiber, he built a Town called Oftia, to fecure the profit of Navigation unto his Subjects; for thither Commodities being brought by Ship, were in lefter Veffels conveyed to the City. Ancus Marcins reigned 24 years, coming behind the commendations of none of his Predeceffors, either for

24. Anom being dead (of a natural death, as should seem by Historians, fave that Plutarch, as was faid, included him in the number of those four that came to untimely ends) the Sonate received power from the People to order the affairs of the Commonwealth, and created certain Inter-reget, who holding the Assemblies for election, L. Tarquinius was chosen King, and began his reign about the fecond year of the 41th Olympiad, wherein Cleonidu the Theban was Victor, Ennochides being Archon at Athens, the 139th A. M. 3390. of the City, and the 30th of Joseph King of Judah. This man being of V. C. 139. forein extraction, what his Original was, why hee came to Rome, and 0! 41. 40, 2. how he attained to the Kingdom is to be confidered. There was a Co-Jose 30. rithian, Demaratus by name, of the tace of the Racchiada, who trafficking much into Herraria, changed his Merchandife for Tufcan Commodities, and thereby growing very wealthy, when troubles arofe at home by means of Cypfelm his Tyranny, with all his goods failed from Corinib, and fixed himfelf at Tarquinia a City of Herruria, where marrying a noble Matron, of her he begat two fons called by the Harrifcan names of Aruns and Lucumon. Arun died without hope of iffue. Demaratus for grief followed him not long after, fo that Lucamo possessed of the whole Inheritance, began to elevare his defigns, and to look after fome place of Magistracy in his Country. Here he received a repulse, not being able to procure any mean Office, at which forely diffaining, he heard that Rome received strangers with great courtesse, and gave them free admission unto honours. He then refolved to remove thither with his goods and friends, and after his arrival, was much made of by Ancus, to whom offering his Patrimony for the publick good, as exceeding that of a private man, he received freedom of the City, for himfelf and followers, with ground to build houses, and for their suffe-

nance. Now he changed his name from Lucumon to Lucius, and his wife from Tanaquil to Gaia Cacilia, and from the place of his birth superadded Festus in voce that of Tarquinius. During the reign of Ancus, who chose him into the Gaia. Senate, he flourished in great esteem with him, and in the favour of the people; in War no man shewing himself more hardy, nor in Council more dextrous, prudent, or successful; and his integrity seemed such unto the King, that he left him Guardian to his two fons, whereof both were under

25. He took advantage at the minority of the eldeft, as yet scarce fourteen He obtaineth years old, whom fending out of the way, under presence of hunting, he mide the Kingdom, a Speech to the People, faith Livie, wherein he plainly begged the Kingdom, drawing to his private interest the example of Taius and Numa, whom being meer strangers, they had chosen to reign over them; whereas he was not absolutely such, having lived a good space in Rome, and been trained up both in civil and military affairs, under Ancus: He unged then his liberality towards them; which things not being meerly pretended, he obtained his end, and was the first that came to the Government through his own ambitious seeking. His first War was with the Latines, from whom he took several Towns, and amongst the rest Collatia, over which he placed Governour his Nephew Aruni Tarquinius, the posthume issue of his brother, and Sirnamed Egerius from his poverty (having no Patrimony) and Collatinus from this place, which Sirname continued to his Posterity. Having forced the Latines to beg peace, notwithstanding their supplies out of Herruria, he turned his Armes

His Way.

164

SECT. 2. against the Sabines, whom after he had also forced to submit, all Hetruria combined against him, because he rerained such prisoners as he had taken of the Auxiliaries fent by them to the Sabines. It was decreed amongst them, that what Town soever refused to joyn against him should not be accounted of their body, and they presently possessed themselves of Fidena a Roman Colony. But he fo ordered the matter, that overthrowing them in fundry battels, and preparing for another expedition, they were humbled; to purchase peace owned him for their Prince, and as tokens of fealty, and allegiance, fent him the Enfigns of Soveraignty wherewith their Kings had wont to be adorn'd. These were a Crown of Gold, an Ivory Chair, a Scepter on the top of which was an Eagle, a Coat of purple wrought with Gold, and a purple Gown pinked; like to the Roads of the Lydian, and Persian Kings, save that it was not foursquare, but of a semicircular figure. Some write also that they sent 12 Axes for fo many Cities, it being their custom for every Magistrate in his own Town to have an Axe with Rods carried before him, and in a common expedition twelve to be born before their General. Others contended that Romulus used these Axes and Rods as a Badge of his Authority to punish Offenders; but Dionysius replieth, that Romalus might learn this custom of the Herruscans, and if not, yet might Tarquinius have these sent to him, seeing the people of Rome afterwards used to send Diadems, and Scepters to such Kings as they confirmed; which these Princes received, although they had worn the same Ornaments before.

26. In nine years he finished the Hetruscan War, and then fell again upon the Sabines (who alone contended with the Romans for superiority) a yvarlike Nation, possessing a large and fertile Countrey not far distant from Rome. Over them he obtained his third Triumph, and providing for another expedition they prevented him by their intreaties, giving up themselves fully into his power, whom he received on the same terms as formerly he had done the Herruscans. These were his military actions. At the beginning of his reign, that he might bind the people to him, he chose out an hundred of the

He encreaseth Plebesans, who for valour, or wisdom, were most eminent, and added them to the Senate, which now first confisted of 300. Romulus at the beginning chose an 100 out of the first planters, then added an 100 more of the most noble of the Sabines, which with these of Tarquinius were called Patres confcripti, and the last Patres minorum gentium. Zonaras agreeth with Diony. fins concerning the number of Senators made by Romulus, adding, that Tanine and he at first consulted with their Senators apart, but at length they were joyned together; fo that those are not to be heard, who will have but 200 in all during the time of the Kings, and 100 afterwards added by Brutus. He increased the number of the Veltal Nuns from four to seven, adorned the forum, built the Walls of the Citie (before parched up in haste) with 4 square stones, whereof each was a Cart-load. He caused the common finks to be made for voiding the filth of the Citie into Tiber; a work so admirable, that Diony fins thinketh, from the magnificence of it, as from the Aqueducts, and the h gh cawfed wayes, the amplitude of the Roman Empire appeared : and this is manifested from what C. Aquilius wrote, that those sinks being once Hopped, the Cenfors spent 1000 Talents in cleansing of them. In the Circus Maximus (a place dedicated to the beholding of Games, and exercises, betwixt the Palatine and Aventine Hills) he caused seats to be raised for spectators, whereas before, all flood; and he diffinguished their places according to their dignity.

The Veftal Wuits. Cloace, or Common finks.

27. Tarquinius intended to add three Centuries of horsmen, named after himself, and his friends, to the former three instituted by Romalus. That King first chose 300 out of the three Tribes, or Legions, and, after the taking in of the Sabines, increased the Legions, so that each contained 4000. (whence it was called Quadrata, as Festim observeth) yet afterwards a Legion comprifed full fo many men as were found convenient for the fervice of the Commonwealth. But he was forbidden by Actim Navim to change the con-

Assign Naviga. Assurance of Romulus, and therefore, without increase of the Centuries, doubled the number of the men. This Navins was the most famous Augur that SECT. 2. Rome ever knew, and so well versed in his Art, as he never missed in his predictions. Targumius on a time, to try him, asked if that was pollible to be done which he had in his thoughts, who answering yea, he laughed him to fcorn, faying that he had thought of cutting a Wherstone with a Razor which he held in his hand; but Nevins still replying he should do it, and bidding him to firike hard, he cut thorow it. This much inhanced the reputation of his skill, and he flourished thenceforth with great honour, till at length he was fuddenly miffing, and his body never could be found, which turned to the difquiet of Tarquinins. For the fons of Ancus Marcius, now grown men, grudged him their fathers Kingdom, and often thought of thrufting him out, expecting much from martial men, who generally bore love to their fathers memory. Now they accused him to the people of having made away the Augur (because he had contradicted his devices) and created him some trouble, till Tullius his fon-in-law answered the objections, and cleared him of the Columny. Miffing of their delign this way, they counterfeited repentance; and being easily reconciled to the old man, out of respect to their father, cloaked their malice for three years. Then they cloathed two of their companions like Shepherds, who going to the Court, and pretending to be faln our, did best each other, and called loud upon the King for Juffice, having at their backs other Conspirators apparelled also in rustick vveeds, who offered to give Testimony on both sides. Being called in to the King they wounded him to death, and betaking themselves to their heels were caught, confessed who were authors of the plot, and received their just reward. To this end came Tarquinius (firnamed Prifeus, after his Grand-son of the same name had obtained the Kingdom) about 80 years old, when he had reigned 38 years, and Tarquinius murdered.

and education.

done many and great good Offices for the Commonwealth. 28. Tarquinius Priscus being dead, Servius Tullius his son-in-law succeeded him in the fourth year of the 50th Olympiad, wherein Epitelides the Servius Tullius Laconian was Victor, when Archestratides was Archon at Athens : concerning whose Original, and private life, something is first to be spoken. A certain Dionysius 1.4. man of Corniculum, a Town in Latium, of Royal bloud, was flain when Tar- Livius I.i. quinius took the place, and left his wife Ocrifia big with Child, which wo. Florus l. 1, c.6. man Tarquinius give to his Queen Tanaquil. Ocrifia then was delivered of a fon in the Kings house, named Tullius, and sirnamed Servius by her in remembrance of her bondage. When being an Infant he lay in the Cradle a flame of fire is faid to have appeared, and incompassed his head, which raised great expectation of him in Tanaquil a woman skilfull in the mysteries of her Countrey. She brought her husband into a great opinion of him, so that he was educated by them, and answering what had been conceived of him at length was made their fon-in-law: then abroad he had Command in the Army, and at home managed publick Affairs for the King when grown old, in all things behaving himself with such integriry, valour, and prudence, as purchased him the love of all the people. Now whereas Tarquinius had at his death no fons (as Dionysius maketh most manifest) but lest two Grand-sons both Infants, Tanaquil having a defire that Tullius should succeed him, kept his death private for some time, will he had procured the people to banish the Marcii, giving out that the King, dangeroufly wounded though not dead, had referred all businesse to him according to his custom. Being secure of the faction of the Marcii, he then carried out Tarquinius to be buried, as newly dead, and as Tutor to the young Children, executed the Office of King , which Tanaguil out of the window had told the people, was her husband's will, when yet the feigned him to be living. But the Pairicians grudging Tullins this honour, confpired how, the next time he affembled the Senare, they might constrain him to leave off all the royal enfigns, and then go to an Election according to the usual manner,

29. He coming to the knowledge hereof Assembled the people, and producing the two boyes, pleaded their case and his own : he promised them to pay all their debts, and divide to those that wanted the publick grounds.

SECT-2. Hereby retaining the power under the notion Guardian: The Patritians were fore agrieved therear, but the wifest fort thought it not good to stir, though they plainly faw the Authority of the Senate much infringed. For they considered, that if they should make a King of their own body, the people would not approve the choice, and if it were referred to the multitude, Tullins would affuredly be the man: wherefore they thought it more wisdom to fuffer him to reign in an unlawfull manner, that fo they might ever have some just pretence against him, than by stirring in the matter to procure him a legal Title. But he prevented this their delign, going with his mother, motherin-law, and all his kindred in mourning habits unto the Forum, where he shewed the people how lamentable his condition was through the plots of the Patritians against him, which he deserved no otherwayes than by his good deeds towards the commonality: he laid to their charge that they would call in the Marcii that had murdred Tarquinius, and expose his posterity, who had fo well deferved of the State together with himself, to the same cruelty, and in conclusion, offering to lay down all, if such was the pleasure of the people, and undergo any hardship rather than be troublesom, he offered to descend from the Tribunal. A great clamour then arose mixed with prayers and tears of those that befought him to retain the Government, and presently some that were provided before and began to cry out that he was to be chosen King, and the Curia were to be called to the Vote, which thing was instantly resolved by the multitude. He gladly took hold of the opportunity, thanked them that they were mindfull of the benefits received from him, promifed larger if he were elected King, and appointed a day for the Comisia, or Assembly, whereof he intended to have present those also that were abroad in the Countrey. At the day appointed for the Affembly of the Curia (called Curiata Comitia)he was chosen King by the suffrages of them all, and so in despight of the Conscript Fathers, who refused to confirm the choice, as the manner was, obtained the principality. 20. Presently after his settlement he accomplished his promise concerning A.M.3427. the division of the publick Land to such as were forced to preserve themselves V. C.76.

by dayly labour in other mens grounds; and in the Curiata Comitia prefer- Olymp. 50, an 3. red fifty Laws concerning contracts and injuries. He added two Hills to the former five: viz. the Viminal and Elquiline, in the later whereof he lived himself, and was the last man that inlarged the Pomeria of the Citie, the Wall whereof was never any further firetched out, though very large Suburbs were afterwards added. After he had compaffed all the feven Hills within one Wall, he diffinguished the Citie into four parts, and instead of three, made four Tribes. And as Romulus diffinguished the people according to their Seats and Communion in Sacrifices into Tribes and Curia, fo Servins making every one give an account how much he was worth, according to their riches divided them into fix Ranks, or Claffes. Of these, the first and highest consisted of such as were worth 110000 Asses (each of which answereth to ob. 9. of our money) the next four decreased in value a fourth part, and in the last were contained all such whose Estates were of little, or no value. The cenfus.

Luftrum.

Obrainerh

the King-

21. The Classes he did also so subdivide into Centuries, as 192 were made in all; his design herein being to know certainly how many were sit to bear Arms, and what Treasure might be supplied for Wars, or other occasions. He also first ordained the Lustrum (so named a Luendo, (from paying) faith De Lineua La-Varro, as Flustrum a Fluendo) to be celebrated after this Census, or value tina lib s. of each according to their fubstance. On a certain day after the valuation he enacted that all the Citizens should meet in their Armour in the Campiu Martins, every one in his feveral Classis and Century; where by facrifice the Citie was expiated, or Lustrated. This folemnity was termed Solitaurilia, Libra caps. (or rather Snovetaurilia), because an Hog, Sheep, and Oxe were facrificed, as we read in Quintilian. These things being performed, the Lustrum was finished, which, because of continual change of mens Estates, he ordained should be reiterated every five years, so that he (who begun it according to Lip fins

64

CHAP. VI. The Roman Kingdom Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

Lipsins in his twelfth year) celebrated it himself four times, according to SECT. 2. Valerius Maximus. Every fifth year the Tribute or Taxe (called Cenfus) was paid and thence Lustrum seemeth to have had it's name. After the Lib 3. c. 4. banishment of the Kings, the Consuls managed this businesse, till the Cenfors (Magistrates proper to the work) were brought in. Lastly, Joseph Sealiger telleth us, we must distinguish the old Roman Lustrum from the later, or Julian, which is onely a Systeme of four Julian years, whereof the last confifteth of 366 dayes absolutely without any overplus of hours. For the Old and Proper Luftrum contained five years complete, which that cited by De legibus 1.3. Cicero, concerning the Cenfors, out of the Laws of the twelve tables, Let them be two, Let them obtain the Magistracy for five years, maketh minifeft; fo that this Lustrum cannot answer to an Oympiad, properly so called; of which beginners are to take notice.

32. Of the fix Classes, which contained 193 Centuries, the first and rich- Dionyfut fugra. est was divided into 08; the Equites or Horsmen being counted in : the frond into 22, taking in Artificers; the third into 20: the fourth 22: the fifth 30, and the fixth and last of the poorer fort, made up but one Century.

Men and moneys being levied, according to these Comunies, and not by poll (each Century such a quantity) it came to passe, that the richest being sewer, The Centuries and Cexturiate yet divided into more Centuries (here the word is not to be taken for 100 persons precisely, being made use of onely to expresse such a division) were never free from warfare, and contributed also more money than the rest: they that were but moderately or meanly provided of wealth, being exceeded by the other in twenty Centuries, went to the War by turns, and paid but little Tribute: and they that had not any estate to speak on, underwent no burthens. This seemed very just and equal to him, that they who were most concernd, should take most pains, and bear the greatest cost; the Romans at that time maintaining themselves in the Wars without any pay from the publick. But the richer fort fomething grieved to undergo all charge and danger, for the preservation of others as well as themselves, Servius sufficiently satisfactions fied and required, by giving them in a maner the whole prerogative in macters of State, the porer being almost wholly removed from any power in the Commonwealth, though at first they did not perceive it.

2. This secret lay in the Comities or Affemblies, where the people resolved about the most important affairs; these three things being in their power, viz. Creasion of Magistrates as well Military as Civil, making or abrogating Land,, and decreeing Peace or War; concerning which things the fuffrages of the feveral Curia were wont to be gathered, and the vote of the porest availed as much as that of the richest person : whence the poorer sort being much more numerous than the rich, ever prevailed by their Multitudes. Tulling understanding this, instead of those of the Curia, called the Comitia of the Centuries upon such occasions. First of all were called the Centuries of the first or richest Classis, viz. the 18 of Knights or Horfmen, and the 80 of Footmen, which being three more in number than all the rest besides, if they all agreed they overcame in number, and there was no need of calling any of the others to the vote. If they disagreed, the 22 Commiss of the second Classis were called, and if need were, the third Classis, and the fourth, till 97 Consuries agreed in their suffrages. If this hapned not after the calling of the fifth; (192 Centuries being divided equally in number, and of several opinions), then was the fixth Classis called conteining the last Centurie, free from Tributes and War; and to which fide it joyned, that overcame.

34. This rarely hapned, and was almost impossible, the Comitia being ended most commonly by the first call; but, however, seldom came it to the fourth Classic, so that the two last were supervacaneous. By this constitution the poorer fort were deceived, thinking it enough that every men, as well one as another, gave his suffrage, and not considering that the suffrage of the while Consumie was but one, whether it contained more or fewer persons in it. But at length, seeing themselves freed from danger and charge, they were content, and the richer injoying such priviledges for their pains and cost, were

SECT. 2. well fatisfied; and this order was kept for many Ages, till afterwards, by the violent actings of some, the common fort got more power, as Diony sus himself observed the innovation to have broken in, in his time. At the first Lustrum were found 84700 Citizens; but to increase their number, hee brought in the custom of making Slaves free of the Commonwealth, whom being before manumitted or set free, he distributed into the four Tribes of the City.

The custom of manunviting Slaves.

168

35. These Slaves were either made or born such, as Justinian the Emperor distingisheth them. The former fort were either taken in War (then properly called Mancipia), or bought of the publick, or of some private man. The later, were those that were born either of both Parents being such, or of the Mother onely. At first they obtained their liberty gratis, by well deferving some way of their Masters, or some by payment of money earned by their honest labours, they having a certain Peculium, though all was said to belong to their Masters. But in processe of time, when the Ramans degenerated from their former worth and honour, fome by Roberies, others by breaking of houses and other villanies, got money, whereby they purchased their freedom. Some by helping their Masters in these things obtained liberty as a reward; others on condition to let them enjoy the monthly allowance of Corn out of the publick purse, or other Largesses conferred by Princes upon poor Citizens. Sometimes they were manumitted through the levity and vain-glory of their Lords; some having by their Testaments set at liberty all their Slaves, to obtain a fame of clemency after their death, and that their Funerals might be celebrated by a great train of fuch as wore caps upon that occasion; in which pomp a thousand Rogues have been seen, who much better deserved hanging. This was laid to the charge of the Mistresse of the World, that challenging the Empire over all, the should defile her self with fuch impure Cuizens, which cuftom might have been reformed, as Diony fines observeth, by the care of the Censors, who inquiring into the lives of Senators and Knights, never considered what persons were unfit to be ad-36. Tullus not onely clipped the power of the Patritians and Senate, but took away half of the King's Prerogative also Whereas the former Prineth the King's ces called before themselves all controversies, and took cognisance of crimes as well committed against particular persons as the publick, he separated these causes, miking himself Judge of such as respected the Commonwealth, and referring the quarrels of private persons unto others, to whom he prescribed Laws and Rules for to go by. After he had thus ordered the Commonwealth, he caused the Latines to build a Temple at Rome to Diana, upon the Avenume hill, whereat they should meet and feast every year, and so preferve themselves as one body politick in unity and concord. If any controversie arose betwixt particular Towns, it was to be decided by the judgement of others, in such a manner as the Amphylliones in Greece were wont to proceed, the Council of the Ionians at the Temple of Ephefus, and that of the Dorienfes in the Temple of Apolla, built by common consent at Epitropium. These things were done by Tulling at home, according to Dionysius, Livie, and others ; to which we may add from Pliny, that he first stymped money with the image of Cattel, whence it was called Pecunia, whereas the Romans before his time used it in a rude lump or Masse. As for his actions abroad; he warred with the Herraftans 20 years, who refused to obey him, as an obscure man, and renounced the league formerly mide. In all battels both with the united Nation and particular Cities, he ever had the better, triumphed over them thrice, and at length forced them to submit to the york, on the same terms as formerly Tarquinim had imposed it, except that from three Towns that had been principal in the revolts hee took part of their secunds, which he divided to those that had newly been madefree of the City. Having done these things at home and abroad, when he was grown old and not far from the natural period of his life, he perished own daughter, by the devices of Tarquinius his fon in law, and of his own daughter.

Is murdered

their two Cousin-germans, the grand-fons of Tarquinins, joyning them in wedlock according to their age, as he thought it most equal and convenient. But it hapned that they were matched together with those of dispositions clean contrary to one another. Lucius the elder, a man of a bold, arrogant, and tyrannical nature, had an honest modest wife, and one most dutiful towards her Father: on the contrary, Aruns Tarquinius the younger; being of a mild and sweet disposition, light on a wicked woman, one of a bitter spirit against her Father, ready for to attempt any thing. Lucius breaking out into paffion against his Father in Law, for keeping the Kingdom from him, was still appealed by his wife, but Aruns being content to stay his time, and averse to any thing that might favour of difrespect to Tullins, was importuned ever and disquieted by his wive's earnest and redious sollicitations, to attempt the utmost, though with the destruction of her Father, for the obtaining of the Soveraignty. This woman being impatient of her husband's backwardnesse, and bewitched by the fury of ambition, resolved to change husbands if it might be, and march her felf to the other Tarquin, who fuited well with her own humor: she brake her mind to Lucius, telling him of what a fordid spirit they were, to suffer an Usurper so long to possess their Patrimony, railing against her own husband, as a man of a poor and degenerate disposition, and at length made a profer for them two to dispatch out of the way their present unequal york-fellows, and then unite themselves in that relation, thereby to bring about their noble and gallant defign. He was not backward to a compliance, and the device was accordingly brought about, after which, they refolved by force to expel Tullins from the Kingdom, if hee would not give place on his own accord, raifing a faction of the Patritians, that were difcontented with the King's new modelling of the State, and the poorest Plebeians, whose affistance they purchased openly, without any respect to right or modefly. Tullins was not ignorant what they intended, and feared also to be destroyed ere hee could provide for his defence; yet thinking it an unfeemly thing to make War upon his fon in Law, and his own daughter, and punish them as Enemies, he indeavourd by fair means to take them off, before their Friends, blaming, admonishing, and dehorting Tarquinius from the intended injury.

The Montain Kingdom Contemporary with the Babylonian Empire.

37. Tullius had two daughters by his wife Tarquinia, which he married to

38. Effecting nothing hereby, but the other faying, he would plead his cause in the Senate, he called together the Fathers, and gave him liberty to speak. Tarquin laid his claim to the Kingdom, as his Grand fathers Heir, and alleged, that Tullius kept it from hint unjustly, having got all his preferment from their family, and obtained the place illegally, without the confent of the Senate. Tulling replied, that the Kingdom was in the power of the People, to dispose of it to whomsoever they would, which he proved from the example of Tarquinius Priscus, who being a stranger, was preferred before the Marcii. He mentioned how well he had deferved of him, by proceeding and taking care of him in his minority; and as for his coming to the Government without the ordinary affent of the Senate, that concerned the Fathers and not him. He then appealed to the Senate, whether ever he had wronged or carried himself arrogantly towards any of them, that they should conspire with his son in Law against him, and in conclusion told them, that if they thought Tarquinus the fitter man, he should not be against the profit of the Commonwealth, but retire to a private life, and let the World fee, he could as readily obey as be obeyed, after he had reftored the honour to those from whom he had received it. Having struck a great reverence of him into the Senate, he affembled the People, to whom, after a great complaint against Tarquin, and a recital of what good things he had performed for the Publick, he offered to refign his place; but was confirmed therein, and after he refused to give ear to such as would have Tarquin dispatched, with great acclamations brought home to his house by the multitude. 39. Tarquin thus prevented of what he expected from the Parisians, counterfeited repentance, and a defire to be reconciled to the King, which

37. Tullius

with the Tufcans. Then went he forward with the work of the Temple

41. Tarquinim Priscus, in his loft War with the Sabines made a vow, that if he got the Victory, he would build Temples to Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva; and with great cost had in his life time levelled the Rock, and formed a plot for the building; but died before he could finish the work.

Tarquinius his Grandson resolving to perfect what he had begun with the plunder of Suessa, fet on all forts of work-men, at which time as they were digging to lay the foundation, a muns head was found bleeding afresh, which belonging to one called Tolus, thence the building had the name of Capitol.

He perfected a great part of the Temple, but could not confummate the work, being prevented by Exile, which was finished by the Citie in the third Confulship after its freedom. It was seated upon an high Cragge, eight Akers in compasse, almost two hundred foot wide on every side; and almost of the same length and breadth, as differing onely in fifteen feer.

After it had flood 425 years from its Dedication, it was confumed by fire

Buildeth the Sibyls books.

17 Ť hands. After this he made peace with the Aqui, and renewed the league SECT. 2:

fuch being Assembled as were appointed beforehand, took possession of the Kings Sear. Tullins having notice hereof, unadvifedly with a few followers. hafted thither, admiring the young mans impudence, whom feeing in his Chair, he fell of rating, and received as bad language; then going about to thrust him out, Tarquin took him up by the middle, and haling him to the door, threw him down the stairs into the Comitium. The old man hardly recovering his spirits was led homewards, when his daughter, and Tarquins wife, being come in her Charior to fee the event, faluted her husband as King, but told him his principality would be but uncertain, except, perfecting what he had begun, he would fend some who should overtake and disparch Tullius. He took her advice, and the feat being done, the prefently returned home the same way. In her passage when she came to the place where the body lay as yet almost gasping, her Chariot driver stood still, confounded at the fight, and not having room to passe besides it. Hereat she reviled him, and caused him to drive her over it, after she had first thrown her footfool at his head. The place formerly called Cyprim Vicin, was after- Dionyf. & Fewards named Sceleratus from that occasion. To this end came Servius Tul. flus in voce lins, after he had reigned 44 years, a man just and moderate, who abolished Sceleratus Vithe envy contracted in his illegal affumption, by his after acts, and was thought, if he had not been prevented, to have intended to lay down his Office. and restore absolute liberty with the care of the Commonwealth to the people, which some of the Pairitians percelving, took in the interest of Tarquinius, that they might preserve their own power. 40. Lucius Tarquinius obtained the Kingdom by violence, in the fourth Dionys, lib.4. year of the 61th Olympiad, wherein Agaibarchus was Victor, when Hera-Florus I. 1. Lucius Tavqui- clius (or rather Heraclides) was Archon at Athens. By his Tytannical 2 6.7. wise, strained and imperious carriage he soon got the straine of Superbus, as that of Prif-Superbus. cus, for distinction, was given to his Grand-father." He would not suffer his Father-in-law's body to be buried publickly for fear it should give occasion to the people to rile against him; laying, that Romalus died without burial. He murdered such as he suspected to favour the cause of Tullius; and fearing what end his wickednesse might bring upon him, got to him a strong Guard which continually attended his person. He reigned onely by his own arbi- A.M.3471. trary will, neither standing upon the consent of the Senate nor people. As V. c. 220, for the former, he much dimished it by the murder of the richer fort, whose Olymp. 61. an.4. wealth he feized on for his own use, and resolved to chuse no more in that Cyri 26. it might wear out, and grow contemptible. All controversies he decided himself, affisted by his intimate friends, and took cognizance of all offences, fo as he might kill, banish, or fine at his pleasure. He fought to establish himself, and confirm his Tyranny by great assance, marrying his daughter to Offavius Mamilius, the greatest man amongst the Latines; (being descended from Taleponus the fon of My ffes by Circe) and by false acculation, and a cunning device caused them to stone Turnus Herdonius, who had discoverred to them his basenesse and vitanies. He began a War with the Villes, His Wars. which ended not with him, but lasted above 200 years; and subdued the Sabines who refused to obey him. From the Volfei he took Sueffa Pometia, (where getting much plunder he first cast in his head the design of building a Temple to Jupiter, which his Grand-father had formerly vowed) and afterwirds the Citie Gabis by treachery, making Sextus his eldest fon to counterfeit flight from him for hard usage, whereby he was made their General, and having according to the fecret advice of his father (who in imitation of Thrasybylus the Milesian carried the messenger into the field, and cut down' the tallest Poppies, dismissing him without any other message) put to death the most principal Citizens, at length easily betrayed it into his

. I DE I Official King com Contemporary with the 2000 from an 2 mpties being continually follicited by his wife to attempt fomething worthy of a Kingdom, took his opportunity on a day when most of the people were out of the Citie, with the Roads of Estate, and all Royal Ensigns as King, to go to the Senate house. There he presumed to call together the Fathers, and,

SECT. 2. was eafily obtained. Covered with this Cloak he laid his defigns anew, and in the dayes of Sylla, when L. Scipio and Cains Norbanus were Confuls, as Tacitus writeth: Yet it rose again with greater cost and Ornament on the fame foundation. Its front looking toward the South, had a Porch, or Gal. Hist. 13. cit. lery with three rows of Pillars: on each fide were also a double row: the three Temples were contained within the same Walls, the middle belonging to Jupiser, and the other two to June and Minerva , under the same 42. In the time of this Tarquinius, another great bleffing, as it was counted hapned to the Romani. A certain strange woman came to the King, offering to fell nine books of the Oracles of Siby, which when he re-Sibils. fused to buy at her rate, she went away and burning three of them, returned and demanded as much for the fix, Being derided for a mad woman, the departed, and burning half of them, returned with the other three, still asking as much as at the first; whereat Tarquin aftonished, sent for the Augures to know her meaning, who answered that the nine ought to have been bought, and the three were to be purchased at the same Rate. The woman after the fale and delivery vanished, and never after could be seen. Tarquin chose two men out of the Nobility to keep them, to whom he allowed two publick servants. After his expussion the people Elected most Noble > till they perished at the burning of the place. Those that the Romans used afterwards were Copied out of fuch as belonged to other Cities, and private persons, wherein were some supposititious things, which they distinguished by the difference of the Acrofticks. 42. The woman that brought those books to Tarquin, having the name of Sibylla, and there being many found to whom it hath been given besides, fomething is to be faid of those women, for distinction. The first Sibylla, or woman Prophetesse (to which the * Council of Jupiter was communicated 15 * Zide Benn, the word importeth) was a Persian, according to (1) Varro, or else a Calthe word importeth) was a Persian, according to (1) Varro, or elle a Caldean, or an Hebrewesse, born at Noe, a Cicie near the Red-Sea; her name (4) Vide Luckan, or an Hebrewesse, born at Noe, a Cicie near the Red-Sea; her name (4) Vivenia persons, who all their lives executing this Office were freed from all other burthens, both Military and Civil, to whom onely it was lawfull to look in them. No facred thing was fo carefully kept as thefe Sibylline Oracles.

They were consulted by decree of the Senate when the Commonwealth was disturbed by any sedictions, when any great overthrow was received in War, or any prodigies hapned. They were kept by the December, or ten men appointed to this Office within a Vault under the Capitol, in a flone Cheff, was Sambetha, her father called Baroffus, and her mother Erymantha. The Augustin de fecond was a Lybian. Themis of Delphos was the third. The fourth was called Civitate Dei Cumaa, because she was born at Cimeriam; a Town of Campania in Italy, lib.18. cap.233 near to Cama. The fifth of Erythra, a Citie of Ionia in Afia, at this day called Cabo Bianco. The fixth was of the Island Samus; her name being Phyto. The seventh of Cuma, and called Cumana, her proper name being

Amal

SECT 2

SECT.2. Amalthea according to some; but Herophile and Demophila according to others. Suidas calleth her Hierophile, and saith she brought nine books to Tarquinius Priseus, and demanded for them 300 Philippines, being Gold Coyn of Philip King of Macedonia. Plin, contrary to the common account of Witers mentioneth three books, not nine, and writeth that she burnt two of them. But the eighth was called Hellesponiaca, being born in the Trojan Countrey upon the Hellesponia in a Village named Marmissus near to Gergetium, which Heraclides of Pontus affirmed to have flourished in the dayes of Solon and Cruss. The ninth was a Phryosian, and Prophecied at Ancyra.

Countrey upon the Hellespont, in a Village named Marmissus near to Gergetium, which Heraclides of Pontus affirmed to have flourished in the dayes of Solon and Cyrus. The ninth was a Phrygian, and Prophecied at Ancyru. The tenth was of Tibur, by name Albanea, being worshipped for a Goddesse at that place, near the Banks of the River Anene, wherein her image is said to have been found holding a book in one hand. These ten are reckoned by Varro. There were several others also. (b) Strabo maketh two to have (b) Lib. 16.

by Varro, There were several others also. (b) Strabo mikes two to have (b) Lib. I lived at Erystra, whereof the later flourished in the time of Alexander, page 33. There was another of Colophon, a Citic of Ionia, Elissa and Cassandra, the daughter of Priamus, were accounted Sibyls. There were also a Thessalian, Manto the daughter of Tiressa the Theban, and another of Epirus. Moceover, Carmenia the Arcadian, the Mother of Evander and Fauna, or Fauna; the sitter and wife of Faunus, King of the Aborigenes in Italy, might be reckoned in the number.

44. In the work of the Capitol Tarquin employed the people, and in The fiege of other baser works, wherewith he even tired them out; so that to appeale Ardea. them, and especially to recruit his own Coffers, he made War against the Rutuli, and befieged the rich Citie Ardea, five German miles, toward the East, distant from Rome. The quarrel he pretended to be for that they received the Roman Exiles, and endeavoured to restore them; but the truc cause was his thirst after the riches of this most flourishing place, once the Metropolis of the Rutuli. While he lay before this Town, taking great pains to gain it, and the other as eagerly refifting (yet fo as he feemed to have hope to carry it) an act of his eldest fon Sexim occasioned both the freedom of the one and other Citie. Diony fine writerh that he was fent to Collaira about some businesse concerning the War, and going to the house Sextus Tarqui- of Tarquinius Collatinus his Kiniman (Grand-fon to Egerius the Nephew of mus ravisheth Priscus) he ravished his wife Lucretia, the daughter of Lucretias a Noble Roman. Livy and Anrelius Victor relate that the Courtiers drinking toge-Lucretia. ther in the Camp before Ardea, and with them Tarquinius Collatinus the they agreed to this motion, and away they rode. They found not Lucretia junkering, and idely spending her time as the Kings daughters in law, but late at night hard at work amongt her maids, so that by content of all the far excelled the rest, and Collatinus nobly entertaining his Guiest returned with them to the siege.

45. Now was Sextus Tarquinius inflamed with a lussfull desire after Lucretia because of her beauty, and, as it hapnest cowards difficult, or sorbidden things, the more because of her eminent chastisty. Within sew dayes, without the knowledge of her husband, accompanied onely with one servant he returned to Collatia, where being kindly entertained by her, he was brought to his bed-chamber; but when he thought all assep, having observed where she lay, with a naked Dagger he went to her, and laying fon of Egerius, they fell feverally on praising each one his own wife: in fo much as proceeding to an earnest dispute, Collainus said there needed not many words, for that they might fee within a few hours how far his

Lucretia excelled them all; and he defired them to ride to the feveral places, and judge accordingly as they should find. Being well heated with wine fervant he returned to Collatia, where being kindly entertained by her, he was brought to his bed-chamber; but when he thought all afleep, having observed where she lay, with a naked Dagger he went to her, and laying his hand on her breast, threatned her with death if she offered to stir. He mixed threats with fair words, but yet could not prevail; till he told her he would first kill her, and then his slave, whom laying by her side he would report it was for having surprized her in Adultery with him, whereby obtaining his prey, in the morning he departed. When he was gone, she sent for her father from Rome, and her husband from the Camp, (or say some, went went her felf to the City) defiring they would call together fome friends, for that a matter of great importance had befallen her. With Lucreius came Publim Valerius, and with Collainus, Junius Brauus, who finding her in her chamber in a: fad and afflicted condition, the told them the whole matter, refused to admit any comfort, and intreating them to revenge her cause upon knife she had kept close about her for that purpose.

46. Lucius Tanius Stranged Resum, was the first the fore them, with a

46. Lucius Junius Sirnamed Bruius, was the fon of Marcin Junius, who be-Junius Brutus, ang descended from one of the Companions of Ancas, and, for his Virtue, very inent amongst the Romans, married Tarquiniathe daughter of Tarquiniu fem, of which he begar this Lucius. This Lucius was nobly educated, instructed in all disciplines of the City, and of a pregnant wic. But after thit Tarquin had privily murdered his Father (not for any offence, but to possesse his great estate, as he did several others) and with him his eldest brother, who feemed to bear fuch a mind as would revenge the injury; he being young, and destitute of any assistance from his kindred, counterfeited himself a fool, which he acted all along, and thence had the Sirname of Bruin, this being the fole remedy against the cruelry of the Tyrant, who thinking his folly not feigned but real, despised the man, and having spoiled him of his Patrimany, kept him as an Idiot in his house, and suffered him to converse with his children, not out of respect as a kinsman, but to make them sport by his ridiculous words and actions, as true Idiots are wont to do. On a time a great Pestilence having seized on the City, he sent him to Delphos with his two fons Sextus and Titus, to confult the Oracle. They were glad they had him to make them merry, laughed at him for offering to Apollo a wooden ffaff, wherein yet he had fecretly put fome gold, having made it hollow for that purpose. Having privately enquired which of them should be Prince of Rome, it was answered, he who first of all should kisse his Mother, which the young men milinderstanding, agreed betwire themselves, that at their return they would do it, and so reign joyntly together: but Brutus as soon as they arrived in Italy, knowing the meaning of the Oracle, fell and kiffed the Earth, which is mother of all. When under the Vizard of a Fool, he waited for an opportunity to revenge himself and family upon Tarquin, this disaster of Lucretia at length presented it self.

47. Being sent for beforehand, or coming in with Collatinus his kinsman after the death of Lucretia, as Dionysius writeth, while her husband and friends were lamenting over the dead body, he told them it was not time now to weep, but to study how to revenge the injury. He acquainted them with the cause of his assuming the name and behaviour of an Idiot, and manifesting himself to be a most cunning man, desired they might unanimously joyn

He urgeth the for the exputsion of Tarquinius and his friends from the City, speaking many of Tarquin.

Things efficacious to perfivade them to it. Finding every one very ready, he faid there was no need of words and promises but real deeds, if they mean to perform any thing, and that the first would begin. Then went he to the resto their gods, to cast out Tarquinius Superbus with his wicked wife and progeny, to profecute them or their friends with fire and sword, or any other way, and never after that, to suffer the Tarquins or any other, to reign in Robe. He made them all successively take the same Oath; then, for the way how to bring the matter, about, said the gates of the City should be sacrificers, should, as he might by his place, assemble the people, to which the dead body being exhibited, and Lucretius with Calainus deplorance their condition, they might procure the bantshen of Tarquin by a publisher.

48. But before Tarquinius flould be removed, they thought it wildom to confider what Magilatacy was fit to fucceed his; lest they should pull down the present dwelling before another house was prepared. Some were for Mostarchy,

SECT2.1

174

Monarchy, as indeed the belt of Governments, others for Aristocracy, or the rule of the Senate, and others would have the whole power put into the hands of the People; each party bringing examples of good Government in the several kinds. Bruius said the time was straight, and these matters required mature deliberation, which neither at length could produce fuch a form as would be void of all inconveniences : he faid, he hoped that after the expulsion of the Tyrants, they should have leifure to consider how they might. belt reform the Commonwealth, if any better may could be found out than what Romulus, Pompilius, and the other Kings had chalked out to them. wherein proceeding, till Tarquin for fook the path, the City had been had and famous, both for it's alts abroad, and constitutions at home. This could not for shame denie, yet however, he thought those incommodities, as he called them, had procured the Kingly power to degenerate into tyranny, new model of and therefore were at present to be abolished, and to be taken heed of for the Government, time to come. As first, because some men made a great matter of very Dionysius. names, he thought that of a Kingdom was to be left, and the other of Commonwealth to be affumed; fo that for the title of King and Monarch, some more modest and popular was to be invented. Then, the regal power he judged not fafely to be intrusted with a fingle person; but that two were to be chosen, who should govern with equal command and authority, and so be a counter-poise each to other. Of all royal enfignes or ornaments, such as procured the envy and grudge of the People were to be laid afide : viz. Seepzers, go'den Crowns, and Parple Rabes of Cloath of gold, except upon Fe-Rival dayes, and in triumphal pompes, which rare use of them would not be at all spoken against: but as for the Ivory Chair in which they sate in Judgment, with the white Robe edged with purple, called Pratexta, and the twelve Littors, or Sargeants, bearing Rods and Axes, they were to be continued. He added, that the main thing to keep these his Magittrates in order, was to prevent their perpetual power, which would keep them from giving account of their actions; wherefore he thought fit their Magistracy, after the manner of Athens, should be but Annual, that so each one might learn as well to be subject as to govern, and this would preserve the mind from being drunk with too much liberry. Lastly, that the name of King might not utterly perish (whence may be concluded, that his judgment was not against the Office though his paffion was) he would have the title given to one, who should be called Rex Sacrorum, and having this honour for his life, with immunity from warfare, should medle with nothing else, but these superflitious Rites, of which the Kings had charge before.

49. Having first got a decree of the Senate for the Kings banishment, according to the custom of publick proceeding, the Comitia were affembled by Brutus, and the body of Lucretia brought in her gore into the meeting place, where it was fet for a spectacle to all. Bruim then discovered himself, told them why he had feemed what he now appeared never to have been, and then declared the occasion of their meeting to be, that the Patritians might have their affent for banishing Tarquin, who having obtained the Principality illegally, had abused it more than any Tyrant that was ever heard of. He illustrated his affertion by a relation of his crimes; as of his poyloning his own brother before he was King, together with his lawful wife, and marrying the other fifter that was partaker with him in his wickednesse: his killing Servius I'ullius, and strangling his wife, whom he ought to have respected as Parents; then his invading the Government without decree of Senate or Suffrages of the people by force of Arms. He reckoned up the injuries received by the Patritians, most of whom he had made away, and reduced the rest to the citate of beggers; how from the Plebeians he had taken, Laws, Religious Meetings, the Comitia and Suffrages, and used them no berter thin Slaves bought with woney. He then demanded how long they should endu e this bondage; whether no longer than till the death of Tarquin, when as he had three fons more wicked and mischievous than himself, especially the elder, which he proved by the spestastle before their eyes, telling them then the whole storie. This advantage he improved to the utmost, SECT. 2. shewing how the King being now absent, and the Patritians resolved, nothing could be wanting to them, if they had but courage for the enterprize; not Men, Mony, Arms, Captains, nor forein aid; urging, that it was a shame they should think of commanding the Voisci, Sabines, or others, and be Slaves to other home; or maintain so many Wars for to serve the ambition of Tarquin, and undertake none for their own liberty. As for the Army now at the Siege, there was no fear, but, for their own freedom and accommodation, they would readily cloze with them; and if any should be found to intend the Contrary, they had their wives and children as Hostages, in the City, whereby they might eafily draw them off.

50. The multitude being variously affected with hope of liberty, and fear to misse of it, during his Speech, yet made acclamations to the particulars, and at the end, with one voice desired he would give them Arms. He said he would, if first they should confirm what was offered from the Fathers, as the beginning of their liberty; and therewithall recited the forme of this severe Decree, that the Tarquinit should be banished with all their off-spring, and be capital for any one to speak or all for their return. The several Curio being called, confirmed it by all their Suffrages, which being done, he acquainted them how it was agreed, that unto two men the Government should be com-mirred, whom they should elect in their Centuriate Comitia, which was also passed. Then, according to the custom, by virtue of his Office formerly mentioned, he named Sp. Lucretius to be Inter-rex for holding of the Comi-tia or Assemblie, who adjourned the meeting to the Campus Martius, where it was the custom for the Romans in their Armour to cleet Magistrates. There he named Brutus and Collatinus (as was formerly agreed on betwixt the con-

The people decree Tarquinius his banishment.

He is driven inco exile.

spirators) for to have the Regal power, and the Centuries confirmed them by their Suffrages. In the mean time, whilst these things were done in the City, Tarquinius having heard by such as escaped out ere the gates were shur, that Bruns called the people to their liberty, making none acquainted but his fons and some trustie friends, with them rode away post, to prevent the general defection, but finding the gates fast shut, and the walls full of Armed men, in great grief returned to the Camp. There now he could not be received; for Brutus foreseeing his sodain coming, sent Letters to the Army (or went himself by another way than that he knew he would come) wherein he acquiinted them with the decree of the People, and defired that they would revolt from the King. The letters were read to the Soldiers by T. Herminius and M. Horatius, whom Tarquin had left to govern the Army, and they being called to give their Suffrages also by Centuries, all thought that what their friends at home had done, was to be approved, and would not admit the King at his return. Frustrated of this hope, he went Care in Hetruria, faith Livie, to Gabii faith Dionysus, where he had made his son Sextus King, now gray-headed, having reigned 25 years. Herminius and Horatius took truce with the Enemy for 15 years, and breaking up the Siege before Ardea, returned with the Army. This happened in the 244th year of the City, after the account of Cato, but the 245th, according to the computation of Teren. A.M.3496. tius Varro, in the latter end of the 67th Olympiad, or the beginning of the V.C. 245.
68th, A. M. 3496. Pliny writeth, that it was the same year wherein the Olymp.67. an.4.
Districted ware builded Asham and Clement courses it with the course of Danie 13. Pisistratida were banished Athens , and Clemens joyneth it with the recovery of Babylon by Darius Hystaspie. This was somewhat above twenty years after the beginning of Cyrns, and the destruction of the Babylonian Empire.

AN

INSTITUTION

General History.

The First Part.

BOOK IL

Of the Persian Empire, and the Affairs of the World Contemporary with it.

CHAP. I.

The Persian Empire.

SECT. I.

Prom the beginning of the Empire of Cyrus, to the death of Carn-byses his Son and Successor.

the Conquest of Babylon, after a three years siege, as is Equal I. II.

whom he understood to have forerold it, and called him by name above 100 years before he was born) and out of obedience to his decree, gave leave to all the Jens that were in Captivity in his Dominions, to return to their own Countrey, the 70 years of their exile forerold by Jeremiah the Prophet being now expired. In compliance with this opportunity Zorubbabel the son of Salathiel, and Grand-son to Jechoniah as Captain, with Johns

The Jews recurn our of Captivity.

CHAP. J.

His iffue.

keth War

The Persian Empire. 178 shua the son of Fosedec (which Fosedec was brother to Esdras, and son to SECT. 2. Seraiab the Chief Priest, who being Counsellous to Zedekiah was flain by Nebuchadnefar, the year wherein Fernsalem was taken) and 42462 Tems Anique 1.12. (as Josephno reckoneth up the number) departed, and went into Judaa. Though the other Tribes formerly led into Captivity by Salmanafar might have the fame liberty of returning, yet having together with the memory of their antient Country volt their affection to their God, and is, regarded not the time the Lord having onely promised liberty of returning to those that were exported by Nebushadnefar. And a great part of the Tribe of Judah it felt (if por the greater) unwilling to leave their polletions got in a frange Land, as also discouraged by the difficulties and troubles they were to undergo, preferred perpetual banishment before the seat and habitation of their Anceltors. 2. In the second year of the Persian Empire, and the second moneth, when A. M. 3474. all things were in a readinesse, according to Commission given by the King Olymp.62. (who defrayed the charge out of his own Revenue , and restored the Golden Vessels carried away by Nebuchadnesar) the Levines were set over the work of the Lords house, and Zorubbabel laid the foundation of the second Tem-The fecond ple, to the joy of the younger fort born in Captivity, but with the lamentation Temple built of the elder, who had feen the glory of the former house. When the Chuat ferufalem. thites (whom Esarhaddon planted in Samaria' heard of their progresse in the work, they first fraudulently offered their assistance, pretending the same religion, and being rejected to corrupted the Courtiers (who either kept the thing from Cyrus, or he was then busied in his Wars, as Josephus writeth) that the building was hindred for feveral years, untill the fecond of Darius, the fon of Hystaspes. For this the Propher Daniel (who was yet alive, and Dan. 10. nigh 90 years old, as having been carried into Captivity 73 years before) mourned, and fasted three weeks, and had the great, and last Vision concerning the future Kings of Persia, of Alexander the Great, and his Successors in Afia and Egypt, untill the time of the Hasmoneans, or Maccabees. But whether he lived past the third year of Cyrus or no is uncertain.

3. Concerning the end of Cyrus many and several things are written. According to Herodorus, Trogus and othershe invaded the Massageres, and perished in their Councrey. The Queen of this Soythian people named To-The end of cyrus variously mark he first made a presence to spend for marking , but the being awaye of this defign to entrap her forbad him entrance; whereupon betaking himfelf from wiles to force he feld a bridge over the River draws, and provided for the paffing of his Army over. Whil'st he thus imployed himself, the was so hardy as to fend him a message, offering him either to invade her Countrey, or else to permit her a passage into his. Amazed at it, he referred the matter to his Council what thould be done therein, where some advised him to fuffer her to passe the River, but Crashirstiffy opposed it, shewing the danger in case he were overthrown but in one battel, and advised him after he had fet over his men, and discovered the enemy, to leave the weakest fort amongst his Army there in the Camp plentifully provided of strong wines, with which figuor being urrerly unacquainted, they would make themselves drunk, and so might be easily destroyed. This advice succeeded accordingly, and amongst the rest Spargapiles the Queen's son was taken prisoner, who as soon as he came to himself defired to be loosed, and put an end to his life with his own hands, out of a deep sence of his condition. His morkey keep rectains to the work hands, out of a deep sence of his condition. of his death, with threatning language required Cyrus to differ land and when the faw he returned not, gathered together all het forces, wherewith counterfeiting flight the trained the King into streights, and by an amount laid in the Mountains, cut him off with his whole Army to the reimber of 200000 men. His head she cast into a bason of bloud, upon the fair with cruelry in these words: sausse they self with bloud after which those hast

4. Bur Crefis wrote that the last War he made was against the Derbices, a this fed. To this fory Diodorus addeth that the nailed his body to a Lib. & people also of Scythia, whom though he overcame, yet he received a wound in fight, of which he died three dayes after. Kenophon faith he died aged, and in peace, and how, finding himfelf almost spent, he called to him his friends, with his two fons Camb fes and Smerdin, of I andonares, whom (after a long Oration, wherein he discoursed much concerning the immortality of the Soul, and the punishment and reward which is due to things committed in this life) He exhorred by the strongest arguments to perpetual concord and love. If so, he acted like one that had received the knowledge of the true God, which he had opportunity also to know from Daniel and others, being by them instructed in the Scriptures. Some think that the variety of these reports proceeded from the fludy of the Persians to conceal the shame of his being overthrown by the policy of a woman. Others observe, that had he lost his whole Army in Septhia; it is scarce probable that his son would have transported all his remaining Forces into Egypt fo foon, and hereby leave that fide of his Kingdom desticate and naked, when the Seythian Nation bordering upon Media was so victorious: not to add that Camby far would not have been able to undertake, and perform such a Conquest in so little a space. Considerable certainly is that which the Writers of Alexander's Acts have committed to memory, as Cursius, Plusarch, Arrianus, and even Aristobulus (who by command of the King was an eye witnesse of it) as he is cited by Strabo: That he was buried in his own Citie Pasagardis in Persia, where his Epitaph was plain to be read, in which after telling the Traveller who he was, he defired him not to grudge him that earth wherewith his body was covered. The Tomb was opened by Vide Plutarch. Alexander, either out of hope to find some Treasure, or (what was pre. in Alexandio) cended) out of defire to honour his dead body with some Ceremonies, and in it were found an old Targer, two Scythian Bows and a sword. The Coffin wherein he lay Alexander caused to be covered with his own Roab, and a Crown of Gold to be fet thereon. These things something weaken the credie of that opinion which Herodotus relateth as the most probable of those that were held in histime. But leffe credit is to be given to that * which will * Maletd. have him flain in a Sea-fight against the inhabitants of Samus; and * another * Lucian in that lengtheneth his life to 100 years, whereas he fearce passed 70. He Macrobia, rodotta giveth to his reign 29 years; but most agree that he reigned 30. which must be counted from his first obtaining the Kingdom of Mea

5. What time passed from the Conquest of Babylon, and the beginning of his Monarchy, unto his death, is controverred amongst learned Writers. Some reckon ten years, or thereabouts, and others but three, of which number was once Joseph Scallger, who afterwards retracted it as an error; but Ludoviens Cappellow hath renewed the affertion, making it probable by arguments drawn from Scripeure, who therefore is to be confulted in his facted * Chrono- * in mits ad logy. Green had iffne two fons, Cambyles and Smerais, or Tananxares, with In min, three daughters, Asoffa, Merce, and Artyfona, to which Ciefus addeth A. mytie. Atoffa and Meree their btother Cambyfes afterwards married; and Darins Hyftaspie obrained Arrystona, as also Asoffa after the death of Cambyfes, Of the two font, to Cambyfes he left his Kingdom, and to Smerdis or Tanaexares affigued the Government of Media, Armenia, and the Caduff. 6. Cambyfor presently after he came to the Government, made all possible cambyfes maprovision for a War with Egypt, the cause whereof is to be enquired after. Harddeins telleth a ftory how he fent to Amafis King of that Countrey to libt. cap.t. upon Egypt.

defire his daughter Nuesto in marriage, which he not daring to deny because of the ellen formidable power of the Persians, and not willing to gratifle him absolutely, sorthat he conceived his daughter would be entertained but as a Concubine, he found out a way as he thought to fatisfie Camby fer, and yell A. M. 3478. keep his daughter of There was one of Aprica his predecessor's daughters yet Olymp. c. z. unmarried, hon he fent to him under the name of his own, who when the 43,4 1/2,224, had sufficiently ingratiated her felf with Campyfes, told him how indeed the Campyfes 1. Was nothing a kin to Amafis, but begotten by his Lord and Maker & Whereat

. DOOK [1]

SECT. 1. the Persian conceived such indignation, that, to be revenged on him, he invaded . A oyot. But that which moved Cambyfes to fend for this woman, seemeth something strange. He had formerly defired from Amasia a Physician for the eyes, the belt that could be procured in Agypt, wherewith he gratitying him, the man took it so ill of Amalis to be fent out of his native Country, that in way of revenge, he moved the matter to Cambifes, concluding with himself, that the King of Egypt would not send his own daughter : This was the faying of the Persians, which Herodom rather approveth than what the Egyptians alleged, that Cambifes was fon to Niteres the daughter of Apries, and that the Persians ascribed that to the Son Which belonged to the Father, because they would have Camby ses born of Castandane the daughter of Pharnasper, of the noble race of Achamenes; and wet he confesseth there was a report, that besides Caffendane, Cyrus kept Mileria as his Concubine, whom he most affected, and that to revenge his mother upon her, Cambries when but young threatned, and after his Father's death made War upon Egypt. However things might go in reference to the daughter of Aprili, Cambries feemeth to have invided that Kingdom, upon pretence of the right he had to it as Ideir by conquest to Nebuchadnefar, who subdued it, though it revolted from his successors; which might be concealed from Herodom by the Priests, who spared not to invent lyes for a cover to the dis-

7. While Cambyfes was yet bufie in his preparations, one Phanes an Ha- Vide Merodita. lycarnassan by birth, taking something in distaste from Amasis, whom he cap. 4, &c. ferved, fled out of £gjpi by ship, and coming into Persia, adviced this King, that for his better passage of the sandy Delarts, he should fend to the King of the Arabians for fafe conduct . who being no good friend to the Exprian, came and mer him with Camels bearing abundance of water, which was necessary for the sustenance of the Army in that hot and dry place. Ere Cambyfes could arrive in Appt, Amass had prevented captivity by a natural death, and Pfammen in his fon having succeeded him, expected his coming at Pelufium one of the mouths of Nile. Here's battel being fought. the Egyptians were overthrown and fled to Memphis, whither Cumby fee

fenr after them to yield up themselves to him; but they gare in pieces the meffengers, and then being belieged, flood out for some time; but at length the City was taken. Pfammenium had his fon put to death before his eyes, to Conquereth Ægypt.

Paffeth

farts.

through the

Sandie De-

grace of their Country,

try his parience, though the Conquerour too late repented of it, and had given him his life with the Kingdom to govern, as a Province, had he not attempted new matters, for which he was forced to drink Bulls blood, 'and fo died, having reigned fix moneths after his Pather. 8. This work done in Level, Cambyfes betook himself to extravagant gant practi-

His extrava- practices. The dead body of Amasis he caused to be brought forth, to be beaten, pinched, and then burnt, contrary to the practice as well of the Persians as Egyptians, who abhorred such a thing, because the former accounted Fire a god, & the later a ravenous beaft, perifhing with the thing devoured by it. Then resolved he to make a three-fold War : One upon the Carthaginians, another upon the Ammonians, or the Inhabitanes of the place fituate about the Temple of Japtier Hammon, and the third against the longlived Athiopians, who inhabited Africk, near to the Southern Sea. He resolved to send a Fleen against the Carthaginians, an Army of Poor against the Ammonians, and as for the Athiopians, he would first fend to discover their Country. While his Messengers were dispatching towards Ethyopia, he gave order to the Phanicians (who having yielded themselves, were his onely firenerh at Sea) to fight against Carthage, which they flatly tertifed, because that City was a Colony of their own, and thereby this deligh was dalhed. After the return of his messengers, who brought him word how he was . flighted by the Libipian King, in great rage and hafte her for forwards against him without all thought of victualling his Army, commanding all this His fruitlelle , foot to follow, except the Grachers. When he wis come to holder, he lend about 10000 men against the Ammonians, with command after they had spoiled them to burn the Temple; and so he marched on with the rest of the SECT. L. Army. But ere he had passed the fifth part of his journy, all provisions failed, and all the beatts that carried burthens were eaten up; yet did he not now recollect himfelf, but proceeded till they were confrained to eat up every tenth man, and then returned he with great losse and differace to Memphis, where he dismissed the Grocks from his service. The forces sent against the Ammonians, never reached thither, neither ever returned, being all overwhelmed, as was reported, in the Sandy Wildernesse, 9. Cambyfes at his return to Memphis, found the Citizens in great mirth and jollity, for that Apis their god had appeared to them lately; which he interpreting as an expression of joy for his bad successe, wounded the beast in the thigh (thinking to strike him into the belly) of which he died. He derided much the Egyptians for such deities : those that were found rejoycing, he commanded to be fluin, and the Priefts to be heaten with rods. For such impiety they accounted him stricken with that madnesse, which afterwards appeared. For not long after, he fent his brother Smerdie back into Persia, having conceived great indignation against him, because he alone of all the Persians, could draw a Bow that was brought him by his messengers out of Athiopia. After this he dreamed, that one came and told him how Smerdis fate on the Throne, and with his head reached to Heaven, whereupon, he fent Prexaspes his greatest confident to make him away, who murdered He murdered him in a pretended hunting, or as some said, drowned him in the Red Sea. To his brother & this he added the murder of his own Sifter, whom, without any example, he had married, because she upbraided him with their brother's death. Memorable is the answer of his Judges, who, when he demunded, whether there was not a Law amongst the Persians, that a min might marry his own Sister, answered, they found no such Law, but one there was, viz. 7 he King might do what forver he lifted. Then married he one Sifter, and afterwards another, whereof the younger he killed being great with child, as the Egyptians reported, fo that the miscaried double. 10. To this rage and madneffe against his relations, he added fury towards those that were nearest about him. Asking Premaspes the minister of his paricide, what his people thought of him, and receiving this answer, that they thought him too much given to wine, that it might be feen how fober he was to do mischief, he said it should be a demonstration, if he could shoot with an arrow the fon of Prexaspes right into the heart, which accordingly he did. The day after he buried quick twelve other Persians for no fault at all, and commanded Crafiu the Lydian to be flain for admonishing him gravely concerning fuch enormities, having dispatched him himself with an arrow, if he had not taken him to his heels. His servants notwithstanding preserved $Cr\alpha$ fin alive, expecting a reward if he should afterwards repent of his death. And he really rejoyced in his preservation, when he returned to himself; but put them to death for their disobedience. Many more such like things he did whilst he remained at Momphie, and raged against the Images and Temples. of the Aseypians.

11. But whilft he thus spent his time, two of the Magi, Medians by birth, conspired against him. One of them he had left Overseer of his houshold affairs, named Paciecihas, who having certain knowledge of the death of Smerdes, though it was kept very secret, took occasion thereat to rebel, because most of the Persians thought this Prince yet living. For , having with him in the Kings housea brother as like him in the lineaments and proportion of body as in name, him he placed in the Throne, and font up and down through the Empire, to perswade every one rather to obey Smerds the fon of Cyrus than Cambries. One of these messengers coming down to the Army towars Agypt, found it at Echaiane in Syria, where standing in the midit, he proclaimed what was enjoyeed. Cambifes being much fartled, blamed Prexaspes for having neglected to execute his commands; but he protelling his obedience therein, and that he had buried his brother with his own hands, the mellenger was perfued and fetche back, out of whom PresCambyfes dieth of the Magi discovered.

him received it's period.

The Pernan Empire. SECT.2. aspes getting out that he had not himself seen Smerdie, but Patizothes had given him infructions as from him, eafily conjectured what was at the bortom, and therewith acquainted the King. Then too late did Cambyses bewail his brother, and refolving with all speed to march for Snfa, as he mounted on horseback his Sword fell out of the Scabberd, and wounded him in the thigh. Demanding the name of the place, he gave himself for lost, for that it had been cold him he should die in Echatane, which he had ever interpreted of the place in Media so called, where he hoped it would be in his old age. Twenty dayes after, he revealed the whole matter concerning his brother to the Nobility about him, conjuring them not to suffer the Empire to return to the Medes, but rather recover it the same way it had been betrayed. Not long after his thigh-bone being putrified, he died, when he had reigned seven vears and five moneths. He left no iffue, and so the direct line of Cyrus in

SECT. II.

From the death of Cambyles to that of Xerxes.

1. Merdis the Magician (called also Mardus, Sphendadates, and Oropa-Mes) reigned those feven moneths which were wanting to compleat the cap, 67, 66. eighth year of Cambyfes, whom the Persians believed not as to his brothers death, but thought that indeed he was alive and reigned, because Prexaspes feared to confesse that he killed him. In this time he, or rather his brother, wonderfully pleased all men, except the Persians, remitting to other Nations AM. 3488. their tributes, and excusing them from War for three years. But in the eighth 01. 64. 48. 3. moneth he was discovered by the means of Otanes, a man of highest rank in V. C. 23a. Persia, who suspected him for a counterfeit, because he never would appear in publick, nor admit any of the Nobility into his presence. He having a daughter then at Court, which had been Concubine to Cambyfes, and now was in the same quality to him that reigned, as all the rest of his wives; to her he fent to know, whether it was indeed the fon of Cyrus with whom the lay. The imposture She having had no acquaintance with that Prince, could give him no answer. and neither could the come near Aroffe, who being lifter to Smerdis might eafily know him, for that the Magician to prevent intelligence, kept them feveted one from another: This increasing the suspition, Oranes sent to het again, charging her as he lay afleep to know whether he had any ears; for Cyrus had upon some account cut off the ears of Smerdis the Magician. She obeyed her Father when it came to her course, notwithstanding the danger. and the day following confirmed him fully in what he had suspected.

2. Oranes presently discovered the matter to Aspathines and Gobryas, two men of prime rank also among the Persians, who easily giving him credit, as having suspected the same thing themselves, agreed to take three more, each of against them them one, into Council about it. Otanes brought Intaphernes, Gobrias chose Megabysus, Aspathines took Hydarnes, and Darius being then arrived at Sufa from Persia, which his Father Hystaspes governed, they also thought fit to add him to their number. Daring when admitted, fignified. that he had been affured of the cheat, how he was come to Town upon no > to him. 3. But while they were thus debating the matter, the Magi knowing that Prexaspes had made away Swerdis the some of Cyrus; and considering how nearly it concerned them to make him their own, had fent for him, and by vast promises endeavoured to purchase his secrecy in that privage affair. He other account than to kill the impostor, and urged them to joyn with him and attempt it speedily. Oranes was much against such hasty proceedings, desiring further to consult about it, but Darins alleging the danger of delay, for which cause, if they would not attempt something that very day, hee

would go and discover rather than be discovered, at length they agreed

CHAP. I.

The Mari

The Confpi-

Capitulari-

The Persian Empire. feemed to complie, and defired that the Perfeque might be called together un- SECT. 2. der the wall, that he might periwade them, that he who now reigned was the true Smer de: Bur after he had mounted the tutter, he began to reckon up the Pedigree of Cfree from Achamenes, related his kindnesse and good turns done to the Persians, and then relling the whole matter concerning Smerdis whom he had murdered, after he had laid many curses upon them, except they recovered the Empire, and revenged themselves upon the Magi, he threw biinfelf down headlong and died. The feven Conspirators utterly ignorant of this, arrived at the Court, at fuch time as the Magi were confulting concerning what had happened, where the Porrers eafily admitted them, because of their dignity, nothing being suspected of them. But coming into the house, they were stopped by such Eunuchs as there waited, whereupon they forced their passage with their Swords, and were encountred by both the Magi, who having taken the Allarm, and perceived the matter, betook themfelves to their weapons. One of them wounded Apathines in the thigh, and for our the eye of Incaphernes: the other retired into another room, whither he was purfued by Darius and Gobryus. Gobryus grapling with him, Darise flood idle for fear of wounding his friend; but Gobryse bidding him ftrike though it were thorow his fides, he did it at adventure, and flew the Magician. Both of them being flain, they cut off their heads, and carrying them out, acquainted the Persians with what they had done. Then fell they upon such Magicians as they could meer, which the Persians taking as an example, did the like, for that if night had not intervened, all that fore of men had perished, and this day was observed annually as a great Festival, in which none of the Magicians stirred abroad. This was the end of the usurgation, wherein seven Magi are faid by some to have been partakers; but if so, those two bro- Valer, Max, there are to be accounted the chief, one of them counterfeiting the right lib. 9. cap. 2. 4. This tumule being over in five dayes time, the seven Conspirators fell Hered, 13.6.60.

rators confult into confultation about a ferlement. Oranes spake for the taking away of about a feele- Monarchy, which he urged, from the example of Camby for and the Magician, was apt to degenerate into Tyranny, and would have had the Government remitted to the people in a Democratical way; Megabyzan was for Oligarchie; but Darin of all the three forts præferred Monarchy, as that into which at length the other would palle, through feditions and the ambition of fireh particular men as should be able to advance themselves above their neighbours. The other four fabscribed to his opinion as best, which thereford being agreed on by the major part, feveral capitulations were made in order to the election. Otanes defined that both himself and family might be exempted from the regal jurisdiction, which was granted, and all possible honour further decreed to bim for his pains taken in the discovery. It was agreed amongfithe other fix, that it should be lawful for them at any time to come into the Palace, except the King were with his wife, and the King was prohibired to take a wife any where but out of their families, As for the election, it was refolved, that all the next morning by Sun-rife riding into the Subon, it was retolved, that all the next morning by sun-rite riging into the sunurbs; he whole Horie first neighed, should obtain the Empire of Cambyses.

Daring obtained it through the cunning of Oebares his Stable-Groun, eth the King-Controverse was to be decided, but his Horie to Mare in the place whither c. 85.

The Horie the next morning remembring his mater rieight Valer. Mar.

ed, for which, as coming by accident, the other five adored Darim as King. L. 7. 6. 3. Having thus obtained the Kingdom, though he had children already by a daugh. Ett. Exemp. 2.

ter of Gobrias, yet the more to ftrengthen his title, he married the two Julin lib. v. daughters of Combr. which remained; Asoffa the wife of her brother Cambr. Polerus Sur.

for, and of the Magician, and Arryfonsyet 2 Virgin: he also took Pari. Polyenus Sivaary daughter to Smerdis the fon of Criul, and Pondains the daughter of tagen. 1, 2.

Orange. This he did, being also himself of regal extraction, both allied to Sulp Severus, afthem and modern Kings. He was iffued from Achamenes; Crim and His. Sacr. 12, his Backen. W. R. Carles Land.

his Father Hyftasper being brother's sons, the one to Cambyles, and the SECT. 1. other to Arfammes, as some have reported. This translation of the King-strong hand, as some have thought, obtained the Empire.

dom is faid to have been first revealed to Cyrus, at such time as having passed the river Araxes, he was marching against the Massageiss; For hee had three younger fons, Artabanus, Atarnes, and Artaphernes,) having wings on his sholders wherewith he overshadowed Asia and Europe. At that his reign, the allent of Arealhalma King of Perlia is joyned, which may well enough be taken for the faid Arraphernes; though others do otherwise dreamed that he saw the eldest son of Hyfraspes (which was this; for he Hered, 1, 1, time he was about twenty years old, and Armour-bearer to Cyrus (according to " Elian) who sent him back into Perfia, and as some said, caused him + Var. Hill. to be imprisoned. After his death he was delivered out of Prison, and made 116, 12, 6, 41 Governour of the Persian Magi, accompanied Cambyses into Egypt, and when he had discovered the imposture of the Magi, joyned with the other Princes against them, and then either by the neighing of his Horse, or by

6. Though thus Dariss obtained the Soveraigntys yet it feemeth to some Vide afforms to have been as a perpetual Dictatorship, who think it probable, that the other in Annal Vit. fix had also by turns the exercise of Tribunitial jurisdiction, together with him. Testam, pag. First, because As schylm who fought against the Forces of Darin at Mara. 187. thon, nameth two Kings, viz. Maraphia and Artaphrenes, betwist the flaughter of the Magi and Empire of Darins, who feem no other than Mardonism and Areaphernes, teckoned by Crefias amongst the seven. Then in the Holy Scripture, together with the edict of Darim in the second year of Bira 6, 14.

expound the place. And, to add formething not altogether so material, the other Conspirators foreseeing how burthensome they should be to Darine (which in what other way could it be than this?) bound him with an * Oath * Valer, Me. most facred amongst the Perfiant, that neither with poylon, sword, any o- lib, 9, can, 3, ther violence, nor by famine should he kill any of them; though it proved extern extent not so sacred as to be inviolable. 7. In the second year of Darim the building of the Temple which had been The building interrupted, began again and proceeded. The Samaritant bribed the Courof the Temple riefs in the time of Cyrus, to hinder the work, and Cambyles having been proceedeth. formerly no friend to it, when he came to reign fropped it by expresse command, through the calumniation of such as bore the Jews no good will. The Magician alfo forbad is upon the fame account, it being clear from Scripture, that two feveral Princes named Abafaerra and Arianoraes withflood it s, and that betwixt the reigns of Cyrm and Darim. But when the Adverfaries now Hifra 4. betook themselves to Darine, expecting from him a countermand to the Tews (who being reproved for their remissionelle by the Prophet Hageai, were fallen again to build upon the foundation formerly laid) he instead of any such inhibition, fent them an expresse command, not onely not to hinder, but at his own coff to further the Structure, allowing allo to the Priests expenses for the daily Sacrifices. The Jews therefore incouraged by this new Edict, and confirmed by the Prophecies of Haggai and Zachariah, proceeded profieroully in the building. 8. In the same year had the Prophet Zachariab a Vision, in which the Angel interceding for Jerufalem, and the Cities of Judah, mentioneth the Lord's having had indignation threefcore and ten years. The tile or beginning of these years Ludoview Cappellus sercherh from the destruction of the Temple. For from the first Edict of Carner, and the end of the Captivity, to this time, passed about eleven years (Cyrns, according to his account, reigning but three after the taking of Babylon, Cambriss, together with the Magician eight, and Darins one; from which must be deducted so much as the removal of the Jews would require) even to many as palled from the be-ginning of the Captivity to the defolation of the Temple, and to the Temple lay delotate full Seventy years. Hence is observable, that as the State and years before the destruction of the Temple, so was it renewed at the end of the Captivity to many years before the re-edifying of it, which hitherto had been attempted without faccelle, but now renewed, was happily finished in Sici. the finth year of Daviney as to the house it self, though three years more seem so have been taken up in the building the porches and other appendices to ft. And as the greatest part of the holy Vessels were carried away in the Captivicy of fechiniah, eleven years before the destruction of the Temple, so were they fent back again fo many years before the restauration of it. Lastly, this also is observed, that as from the destruction of this typical Temple to the rebuilding of it, passed Sevency years, so from the Conception of Christ the crue and spiritual Temple, to the final desolation of the shadow or typical one at Jerufalem, so many years passed, precisely Seventy. 9. Davins after his fetlement in the Kingdom, divided it into twenty Provinces (which the Persians called Sarrapies) over each of which he con-The Empire flitted a Prasident, withall appointing what cribute each Nation should pay. divided into For, hitherto, under the two former Kings, nothing was appointed contwenty Procerning tribute, the feveral people contributing money by way of benevevinces. lence, whereupon, because of this new imposition, they hyled Darins an Huck fler, Camby fes a Lord, and Cyrus a Fasher. Cyrus was mild, and used them as children, thriving to deferve well of them; Cambyfer was tharp and Intapherms put monose, and Darins by all wayes possible purveied for money. The next thing memorable concerning Darine, is, his putting to death Interphenes, one of the Conspirators, for abuffing the Portets, and violent intruding into one of the Compitators, for adming the Potters, and violent including into the Palace, contrary to the Capitulations agreed on amongst them. Having an intention to go to the King, they that kept the gate stopped him; Taying, that he was with his wife, which he thinking to be a lye, drew his Sword, and cutting off their cars and nofes, then tyed the reigns of an horfes bridle to cap tis, 119. their necks and let them go. They prefenting themselves in this case to the King, he first suspected some treasonable design of all the six, but finding that the rest knew nothing of the matter, he put Interpretes to death, with all his fons except the eldest, whom he granted to the intreasties of the Mos. Vide Val.

Policy of the Jewish Commonwealth was broken, and much impaired elever.

But not onely him, but all the rest also who were but then forms to him; Maxim, lib. 9. All the Conanother telleth us that he made away by a new kind of death. He cauted cap, a. extern. pirators many ashes to be laid betwine some walls , over which laying a rafter, there: exemp. d. nade away.

upon he feasted them very nobly; but being fast alleep the floor fell , and they therewith into the affect, where they perifhed. If he destroyed them in this strange manner, probable is is, that he defired to be rid of them, because of some power to which they mighe pretend by virtue of a previous agreement, not enduring any incombrance of restraint upon his prerogative; for that Soveraignty is imparient of any compatition in the throne. 10. About the tenth year, of his reign the City of Babylon rebelled agtinft Babylen rebellhim, having of late recovered that greatneffe of mind which formetime possess. Hand, as prins fed w's Inhabitants. Grus demolished not their walls, but left them int cap. 150. tire with the gares funding, which putting them in a posture of defence; they cook courings at the forein Wars of Camby fee, and the flirs that hippened afour the Magi. He gathered his forces together, with all freed, and laid fiege to it; but they being rafolved meat, and to fave provisions, killed all the reft of that Sex except their Mothers. Then, as if they had made thema folves impregnable, they derided the Perfiant, taying, they should be overcome when a Mule foaled a And above nineteen mondrhe they held our, not withflanding all their attempts and devices. At length in the work, Zoppens Conto Megabyuns, one of the chief Communders in Darins his Army, bea

And recover

ing incouraged by his Muse that fooled, mangled his face, curring off his ears and note , and in gore blood counterfeired a flight to the befreged, as this abused by the King. The Babylonians believed, and according to his expectacion chose him for their General, after which, he made several saffies, and the besiegers according to the former agreement fled; but within a while he betrayed the City to Davins. He demolished the walls, and nathing 3000 of the principal actors uncorroffes, pardoned the reft, for whom you'd women were fought, by whom they might sepair their decayed flock. Zeppras was rewarded.

SECT. 2. rewarded, as with other things in greatest account amongst the Ferliams. To with the City of Baby on for his life, The for of this Zopyras was Weenby-Aus, who afterwards conducted the Perfian Army against the Astronoms and their companions: and fon to this Magabyons was that Zopywas, who revol-

Darius goeth Scythians.

222 8 17

ted from the Persians to the Athenians. II. After the recovery of Babylon, Darins wanting neither men nor monv. undertook an Expedition against the Scythians, to be revenged on them (4) Vide h. for holding the (a) dominion of Asia 28 years, artichitime as perfuing the 6.2, 0.21 Cimmerians they overthrew and kept under the Medes, whom they found (b) Lib. 4. Lords of all in the dayes of their King Cyavares. This (b) Herodotus mak- 6. 1, 6. eth the pretended cause of the War, but (c) Justin from Trogus relateth. (c) Lib. 2.

that it was because Lanchius the Southian King denied him his daughter in marriage. Darius caused a bridge to be laid over the Besphorus into Europe half a mile long, and thereon passing his forces over, crossed the Sea himself food him. The Ionians prepared the bridge against his coming, whom, after he had transported his forces, he commanded there to expect him Sixty dayes, at the end of which if he returned not, he permitted them to return into their own Country. 12. The Scribians had no constant dwelling or habitation, removing with sheir wagons, wherein they lay, and cattel, from place to place, according as they were furnished with graffe, living upon milk and raw flesh, without Towns or corn, and taking their conduct from the Pole-Star, as the Chrim Tarears their posterity at this day also live, the great Chrim himself having no other City than an Agora, or one of the Carts, Having intelligence of his goming, they fent their wives, children, and cattel towards the North, then stopped all the wells, destroyed all fruits of the Barth, and sometimes appearing to the Persians, again recised on purpose to deride them. Daries feeing himself thus mocked, and despairing to come at them by reason of their perfect knowledg of the Country, and his ignorance therein, fearing also his provisions might fail, and especially lest the foniant should fot sake him at the bridge, now that the Sixty dayes were expired, berhought how he might make a safe retteut. The Scythians getting knowledge heteof, laboured to remove the Ionians from the bridge, telling them how good it would be for them to return home in fafety; for that now the time prefixed by the King ... was expired. They fell into confultation hereupon, and Militades Tyrant or perty Prince of the Chersone ws basought them, that, having this opportunity, they would not let it flip, but free themselves from the Persian yoak. But Histians Tyrane of Mileins a City of Ionia, and others, who had enflaved their own Citizens at home, fearing, left if the power of the Persians, by which they were maintained, were broken, they should be reduced into a privare condition or worle by their own Country-men, refolved, that nothing more concerned them, than that the greathesse of that Empire might be established. Yet it was judged convenient to break the bridge so far, as to be out of bow-shot from the Scythian side, therein to comply with that People, who perhaps else might force them to do it. Beginning therefore to break ie, the Serebians believed their promise of performing the whole, and returned to hunt out the Parfians. Expecting them to retreat that way which was best for Provisions, they missed of them; for Daring returned the same he went, and with great difficulty recovered the banks of Ifen. Here he argived by night, and was much discouraged when he found the bridge broken;

but upon the first shour Histiam came with all his Vessels and made it up for the transportation of the Army. 23. Daring passing over his Army marched through Thriace unto Sestins. and thence failed over into Afia, leaving Megabyles in Europe with an Army Earth and water demanded of Amyrtas King ot Macedonia.

CHAP. I.

by ship, and gave charge to the Ionians his Subjects (who together with the Estians, and others that lived upon the Hellespour, made up the Navie) to A.M. 3497. fail up the Sea 28 far as the River Ifter (which parted Scythia from Thrace) V.C. 246. over which he also enjoyeed them to make a bridge. In his march through Darii 14. Thrace all submitted to him except the Getes, who out of Ignorance with-

of 80000 men. integrables, according to order, subdued the Perinthians SECT. 2. and Paonians, whom he translated into Asia, and having reduced to obedience all the Maritime Coaft, sent into Macedonia to demand earth and Hevod. 1,5,6,1 water of Amintal the King. These were Symboles of subjection, fignifying &c. an acknowledgement of fealty, and voluntary homage, the chief Soveraignty Julia lib 1.

over all wherein propriety lay, being yielded up with these two Elements. Darins had formerly fent to demand them of the Soythians, and they in return sent him a Bird, Frog, Mouse, and five Arrows, leaving him to make the interpretation, which he framing according to his own wish, thought that they had yielded all those Elements wherein those Creatures live, and their Wespons withall into his hands. But Gobyjas construed the meaning to be this: O ye Persians, get ye wings like Birds, dive under the water, or creep into the holes of the Earth, for elfe our Arrows will overtake you; which exposition was accordingly verified. Amynias doubting of his own strength, kindly enrertained the Meffengers, and granting what they came for, magnificently featled them, infomuch that being well heated with Wine they defired that women, according to the custom of Persia, might be brought in to them. He reglied, that was not the fathion of Macedonia; but yet he would gratifie them therein, which being done, they began to be uncivil towards the women, whereat he inwardly fretted, but for fear suppressed his indignation. But his eldeft fon Alexander being present, a young man of prompt boldnesse and little experience, desired him to quit the room, and let him alone to envertain the Guests; and though he suspected him for his courage, and diffwaded him from any rath attempt, yet did he withdraw accordingly. A. lexander then told the Persians they might have liberty to enjoy these women, but for that it now grew late, he defired they would let them go out to wash, and make themselves ready, which done, they should come again. They affenting, he drefled fo many bare-faced young men in women's Clothes, who, being brought in, when the Persians began to dally with them, according to his command stabbed them with Daggers hid under their Clothes for that purpole. Megabizati heiring nothing of his Messengers, sent one Prubares a Per sian down with an Army to make diligent search after them, but him Alexander easily took off by giving him his fifter Gygea in marriage, with whom he had falln in love; so that he suffering the matter to rest in silence, no farther inquiry was made after it.

The Perlian Ambaffadors killed.

14. The year following, being the 26th of his reign, Daring fent as Succeffor to M. gabyzsu, Oianes the fon of Sisamnes, who took in the Cities Chalcedon, Bizantium, and Antander, with the Islands Lemnos, and Imber. He himself was now returned to Sufa, whither he carried along with him Histiam, who stood so much his friend at the Bridge of Ister. Histiams having begun to build a Citie of his own in Thrace, Darius out of colour of doing him honour, and using his advice in his most important affairs, drew him away from it, knowing his great abilities, and fearing his restlesses spirit. There he continued for some years, till not being able to hear so much talk of Empire, and rule, wherein he himfelf had no thare, he much preferred his antient Dominion though but over one Citie, before this Real, though plaufible imprisonment, and therefore sought how he might kindle a fire in Ionia, that for his interest in that Countrey he might obtain to be sent thither to quench it, and so with his liberty get some notable advantage for a great atchieve-ment. It hapned that his endeavours did but tend to the blowing up of that fpark, which was already kindled without his knowledge, in Arift agoras his fon The occasion of the Innian Rebellion.

Histiaus.

in Law, who Governed Mileum in his absence. The first rise was occasioned by the inhabitants of the Island Naxos, who having banished some of their principal Citizens, the Exiles fled to Anaxagoras for protection and succour. He knowing not well of himself how to restore them, sent to Artaphernes the Herod, 1.5, 6,30. brother of Darins, and his Lieutenant of Ionia then resident at Sardis, prope . Oc. fing the Conquest of that Island to him, and offering to subdue both it, and all the rest of the Cyclades to the obedience of the Persian Empire. Artaphernes acquainted the King with the bulinesse, and he approving of it, he

SECT.2. lent him 200 ships under the conduct of Megabates his Kinsman. They A.M. 3500. fivled together towards Naxos, and it hapned in the way that Megabaies Olymp.68. and harshly used one of Aristagoras his followers, for which he sharply rebuked V.C. 249.

him, as having no authority to punish those under his command. This the Davit 17. Per han took to hainoufly that he gave intelligence underhand to the Naxians of their coming, who being forewarned were forearmed fo that no good could Ar flagoras do, but spending his time to no purpose, was forced at length to raife his fiege. For this fruitlesse attempt, searing disgrace, or worse from the Persians, that he might prevent it, he studied how to revolt, and draw the

The Penian Empire.

Ioniams into Rebellion. 15. While he consulted with himself, a Message came from Histians, Iden c, 35. who because the wayes were so watched that he could send no Letters, Polyanus Ill, 16 shaved close the head of his trusty Slave, and thereon with an hot iron ingraved fuch marks as ferved to make out his fence, and after his hair was grown fent him to Miletus. Anfragoras shaving his head again as he was commanded (which was all the meffage that the flave carried by word of mouth) presently, and glidly apprehended the matter, v.z. that he should excite the Ionians to rebell. Coing now more cheerfully about his work, that the Milesians might more readily receive the motion, he restored them to a shew of libetty, and to oblige the rest of the Cities, by one means or other abdicated the power of their perty Princes, or Tyrants as they were called. But knowing how little able this strength would be to graple with the whole power of Afia, which presently would be upon them, he sayled to Lacedamon, there to defire affiftance from Cleamenes the King, who refusing to intermeddle, he thence went to Athens, where as before he laid open the riches of Asia, with the imbecillity of the Persians the present matters thereof; and added, that the Milesians, as a Colony of the Athenians, might justly expect relief from their hands. 16. The conjuncture of affairs at present were such at Athens, as he could not have had a more convenient opportunity. It hapned that Hippias the fon Herodot. 1, 5. of Pififrains being expelled from Athens had withdrawn himself to Sardie, c.96,97,98.

where he laboured with his whole might to make the Athenians odious to Arraphernes, and bring the Citie into the command of Darins, that so it might return to his own Dominion. They fent their Ambassadors after him, praying Artaphernes that he would give no credit to their Exiles; but he urging them, that, if they meant to fecure themselves, they would receive Hipping. they chose rather to become Enemies to the Persian; and therefore complied The Atherians with the motion of Ariflagoras. They agreed to fend out 20 ships under the affil the lon-command of Melanthius, a man of principal note amongst them, with which the Eretrians (out of way of requiral for aid formerly received from the Ionians) joyned other v. This was the beginning of those many evils, which afterwards fell both upon the Greeks and Barbarians, and of fuch Wars as ended not till in the destruction of the Persian Empire. It fell out in the 19th year of Darims, the second of the 60 Olympiad, sor before the Fra of Christ.

A.M. 2502.

17. Aristagoras with this force went against Sardis, which he easily took, all but the Castle wherein Artaphernes secured himself. A fire prevented the plundering of the Citie, which was all turned into ashes by the means of a 'ouldier's burning one particular house. The confusion being great, the capp. 59. 40. Persians and Lydians met together in the Market-place, through which rath the River Pattolus having Golden Sands, and imbodying themselves prepared to charge the Enemy, which when the Gracians perceived they fled for fear to the Mountain Tmoles, and thence to their ships lying at Coresus in the Territories of Exherms. The Persians in the pursue flew a great part of them. amonest whom fell Engleides Captain of the Eretrians so much celebrated by Simonides the Ceian Poet; and other eminent men: those that escaped disperfed themselves through the Cities. Aristagoras could not by any means perswade the Athenians from returning home; notwithstanding, for what had kapned to Sardis, Darius was exceedingly incented against them; infomuch that he commanded one of his servants where ever he sate at meat, thrice to SECT 2.

Defeated in his retrear.

Ariftagoras

CINIM revol-

found these words in his ears, Sir, remember the Athenians. 18. At this time all Cyprus revolted from the Persian, except the Amathusians, whom also the Rebels beneged. Yet Darins, blinded by the specious pretences of Histians, let him go, thinking indeed that being pretent Camp. 103.606. he might do him especial service in extinguishing the Rebellion. Though the Jonians were forfaken by their friends of Athens, yet they proceeded, and croffing the Hellespont took Byzanium with the Towns adjacent, and thence went into Caria, a great part whereof they drew into fociety with them in the War. But the Icene of affairs was presently altered. Artybus the Per- Capo, 108.00. Jan with a numerous Army was sent against Cyprus, and the Ionians followed with a Fleet to the aid of Onefilm, who first procured the revolt, and now lay before Amathusia. Both parties being well appointed by Sea and Land, they ingaged with their Fleets and land Armies. The Iomans had the better by Sea, but on Land the Opriots were betrayed by Stefanor, Tyrant of the Curienfes, and by the Salaminians, fo that being utterly routed, Onefilus was flain, and Arifto-Cyprus Prince of the Soliars, and fon to this Philo-Cyprus whom Solon commended in his Verses above other Tyrants, or Reguli. The Ioni. us receiving intelligence of this overthrow, and how all the Cities in the Island were besieged, except Salamis (which the inhabitants had already given up to Gorgus their antient Prince) hafted away. Of all Towns Soli food And is recolongelt out; but in the fifth moneth was taken by the Per fians, who undervered.

mined the Walls; and thus Cyprus was reduced into its former bondage, a year after it had cast off the yoak. 19. The Persian Lieutenants , or Satrapa, viz. Danrifes , Hymees, and Otanes, who had married the daughters of Darius, after they had driven the Capp. 124. . . . Ionians to their thips, parted the revolted Cities which each of them thould fall on. The two former reduced many upon the Hellespont and Proponitie, and the later by the affiltance of Artaphernes took Claumena in Ionia, and Cuma in Bolia, after which Ariflagoras was utterly discouraged, and thought of nothing but flight. Hecaiens the Historian, who had formerly distanced him from Rebellion, now advised him to build a Fort in the Island Lerus, where he might continue for some time, till it were convenient for him to return to Miletus; but his resolution being bent for Myrcinus, a Town built by Histians in Thrace upon the River strymon, and amongst the Edones, thither he soon after departed with as many Volunteers as would follow him, leaving the Government of Miletus to Pythagoras, a man of the most approved fidelity amongst the Towns-men. He obtained the Countrey thereabout without much trouble, but besieging the Town was cut off by the Thracians with all his Forces,

20. Histians being dismissed by Darins upon that account formerly mentioned was ere this come to Sardis. Artaphernes demanding of him what H rodotus 1.6. should have moved the Ionians to Rebell, he answered, that he knew not, but adinitium, wondred at the thing, whereto the other replied, telling him plainly that be had made that shoos which Aristagoras had pm: on. Fearing therefore to stay with him whom he perceived sufficiently to understand the matter, he fled the night after, and conveyed himself into the Island Chins, where the inhabitants supposing that he came to promote the affairs of Davius, cast him into prison, but upon farther advice restored him to liberty. Then sent he co some Persians lying at Sardis, who were partakers of his conspiracy, willing them to rife, but Artaphernes having timely notice thereof prevented it by putting them to death. This device failing, he procured the (bians to convey him to Milein; but there he could not be received, the inhibitants rejoycing that they were rid both of him and Aristagoras; so that endeavouring to get in by night he was wounded in the Thigh, and forced to retire himself again to Chius. Here now not being able to procure any ships by all his intreaties, he went over to Mitylene where he perswaded the Lefbians to furnish him with 8 Vessels, with which he sayled to Brzantium; and at this Port he intercepted all such ships of the Ionians as coming from Pontus

Miletus beficged.

21. The Persian Generals having much weakened the power of the Carians. SECT. 2. and subdued all the Jonians that lived upon the Hellespont, were now ready to go against Miletus both by Sea and Land. The Ionian Deputies affembling in Idenibida Can. Pavianium (the place of their publick Councils) resolved to levie no Land 6. ... Army against them, but withstand their violence from the walls of Miletus, and make as great and firong a Fleet as possible. They ranged in order of battel near Lada, a little Island lying over against Miletus. The wing that looked towards the East the Milesians themselves made up with 80 Sail; to them joyned the Prienians with twelve, and the Minsians with three. By them flood the Teians with seventeen, and by them the Chians with 100 Vessels. Beyond these were placed the Erythraans with eight ships, and the Phocaans with three. Next to them flood the Lesbians with Seventy, and in the 1st place were feen the Samians making up the Western wing with Sixry ships; the whole consisting of 353 Gallies with three ranks or Oars. But the Persian Navie contained 600 of Phanicians, Cyprians, Egyptians, and Cilicians.

The Pernan Empire.

22. Though the Persian Fleet almost doubled the other in number of Veffels, yet the Captains feard both the skill and valour of the Ionians, and therefore betook themselves to politick Councils. They sent for the several Reguli or Tyrants of the Cities, whom Ariftagoras had deposed at the beginning of the War, and defired that every one would endeavour to draw off his own Civizens. While they were using their utmost indeavour herein, Diany fius the Phocian Captain, and General of the whole Ionian Navie, exercifing his men continually for the fight, they being unaccustomed to fuch discipline, were after seven dayes weary of it, and pirching their tents in the Island, therein shaded themselves, and could not be got to their ships. The Samians doubting whitherto their fluggishnesse might tend, though it wisdom to hearken to the propositions made from the Persians by Eaces the son of Sylofon their Prince, who advised them by a timely repentance to fave their effices, rather than expose themselves to the anger of the Persian, who though he were beaten at present, was able to bring another Fleet five times as big, fo that their labour and danger would know no end. Their Captains therefore took occasion at the diforder of the Ionians, to deny any further obedience, and, when the Phanicians began to tow their Fleet together to fall on, they hoifed up their Sails and departed. After this pattern the Lesbians and a great part of the Ionians withdrew themselves; onely the Chians stood to it, who taking many of their Enemies thips, loft more of their own, and at length fled to Land. Some of them running their Gallies on ground at Mycale, went on foot by night unto Ephefus, where the women then celebrating the Thesmophoria, the Inhabitants taking them for thieves issued out and flew many of them. But Diony fins having light on the Perfian Gallies, retreated not home, knowing his own Country would go to wrack with the rest, but going into Phancia, there robbed certain ships of butthen of much wealth, and thus inriched failed into Sicilie. 23. The Persians having thus done their work at Sea, presently laid siege gun by Aristagoras. Some of those Inhabitants which survived their Coun- 18, 46. try, together with the Samians, transported themselves into Sicilie; the rest being brought to Sufa before Darins, he without any punishment inflicted on them, placed in the City Ampia, fituated where the River Tigres falleth into the Red Sea. As for their grounds, the Perlians took to themselves the Champain Country, and gave the Mountainous parts to the Carians of Pedafur. Histiaus seeing what was befallen Miletus with some Lesbians subdued Chins eafily, being weakened before, whence with many Ionians and Capp, 26, 44. Edians, he undertook an Expedition ag inft Thafus; but hearing that the Phanicians were gone from Miletus into the other parts of Ionia, he returned back to Lesbus. Here his forces not trusting themselves, he went over into the Province of Atarnes, as it were thence, and from the Territories of to Miletus, which by undermining the walls, and using all forts of Batteries, they atterly destroyed in the fixth year after the Rebellion was first be- Identibid. Cap.

It is taken.

the Mysians adjoying to gather forrage, where Harpagns the Porsian then History taken lying with a considerable force, ingaged with him in a fight at Malena, and SECT. 2 baying cur off the greater part of his men, took him alive. Being carried death. to Sufa unto Arrapharues, they nailed his body to a croffer, and fent his head as a present to Darrie, who was displeased that they had not presented him alive, and caused his head to be buried, as of a friend, and one that had well deferred of the Persians. Now not onely Caria, but all the Islands and Cities on the continent were also recovered without much trouble : the most beautiful of the Royes being made Eunuchs, and of the Girls sent to the Perhan Court. And thus the Ionians were subdued the third time; once by the Lydians, and twice by the Pansians: the tributes were established by Artaphermas, according to Darins his former prescription, and all things settled at the cost of the revolters. 24. Two years after the destruction of Milett, and in the 26th of his reign, Darins withdrawing the commissions of all his late Captains, sent Mardonins the fon of Gobryas, who had married his daughter Artezestra; with a great power to the Sea. Mardonins coming into Cilicia, fent away capp. 43, 44; all his Land Forces towards the Hellespont, and passing by Sea Into lonia, there ...

diffolved all the Tyrannies, as they were called, or powers of fingle men, and brought in the Democratical Government into the Cities. After this with his Fleet he subdued the Thafians, and with his Land Army other Mawith his riect ne tunding the 1 majans, and with his Land Army other 1244-cedonians besides them that formerly obeyed his Master; but loosing from 01, 71, 40, 1, Aconstant and coasting by the Mountain Athor, such a Tempest fell upon the V. C. 218. Navie as sunk three hundred Vessels, wherein perished above 20000 men. Dani 26. Then quaregring his Foot in Macedonia, the Thracians called Brygi, fell in upon him, by night, and killing, many wounded him alfo; whereupon, he turned his Forces upon them, and subduing them, carried back the Army into Affa. The year following Derins constrained the Thasians, who were acr capp. 46, 64. cuted by their neighbours of having an intention to revolt, to pull down their walls, and carry all their thips to Abdera. Then to try of what temper the Gracians were , he fent throughout Greece to demand Earth and Water,

The Lacedemonians and Ashenians threw the Meffengers into pits, bidding them thence to take Barth and Water to carry to their Mafter ; but the Inhabitants of Egina and other Islands out of fear complied, for which they were accused by the Athenian Ambassadors at Sparen, as intending with the Persians to fight against Athens. Hereupon Cleomenes one of the Kings, was sent to chaltize the principal revolters, but such a contention fell betwixt him and his Colleague Demaratus about it, as ended at length in the deprivation of the latter, who thus unjustly outed of his Patrimony, betook himself to Dayins, by whom he was bountifully entertained, 23. When Darins, fent into Greece to demand Barth and Water, he gave Darius senderh order to the Cities upon the Sea-coasts to build long ships and flat bottomed boars for the grant portation of Horse. The burning of Sardis by the means of the differiage and Brarians, was shrice every time he went to meat fill founded in his case. Hipping the late Prince of Athans was yet provoking him against that City, and at length procured forces to reduce him into his former places, Linder colour of restoring him, Darins intended, if possible,

Barth and

Water demanded by

to find up all Greaces, and cherefore, removing Mandonius, under whom the Casp. 94, 99, I fleet had of late miscarried, he put in his room, Davie & Mede, and Arta-Phirms his brothers fon , to whom he gave in charge to lay waste Athens with Ererie, and bring the inhabitants thereoff philoners into his presence. In their pallage they burnt. Naver, took fome Porces and Hostages out of the Islands, and landed their Horle upon the Coasts of Everia. They prepared to fight; but, the Enemy keeping himself within the walls, they strongly atis betrayed into their hands by Empherben and Philagens, two of the principal Citizens. The Alkenians hearing of their approach, fent Phidippides 2 famous, though ordinary Hoot-polt, to Lacedamen, to defire that State to halten their fuccorurs. They refolved to fend aid ; but faid it was impossible speedily

Are overthrown at

Larathen.

ceffor.

Dieth,

A. M. 3519.

Book II. SECT.2. freedily to do it, for that they could not break the Law. which forbad them to go forth on the ninth day of the moneth Or , except the Moon was at the full. Whillt they expected that feafon, the Aibenians made choice of ten Capcains for the War, and by this time the Perfians, now Mallers of Eretria, failed into Attica, wherein they were conducted by Hippins, to the plains of Marathon, as most convenient for Horse. After the Athonians had taken the field, the Plutaans came in to their aid, but a great dispute there was amongst the Capcains, whether they should stand to the hazard of a battel. Those that were for the Negative had carried it, but that Militades, who was all for fighting, drew over Callimachus one of the Polemarchi to his party. The major part of the votes then passing on his side, each Captain assigned his day to him (who had formerly been Prince of the Cherlenefee, and thence was expelled by the Persians) committing the management of the fight to his discretion.

26. Militades accepted of the charge, yet thought good not to fight till his one day (which was the tenth) should be arrived. Then fet he the Army in order, and being at a miles diffunce from the Enemy, led very fall upon him, which the Persians attributed to madnesse, seeing the other so few in comparison of themselves, and badly provided both of Horse and Arms. The fight continued long, wherein, in the middle battel the Persians put the other to flight; but in both the wings the Gracians prevailed, and turning themselves upon those that worsted their fellows, made great slaughter of them as far as the Sea fide, where they also seized upon seven of their ships. Concerning the number of the flain, Writers do not agree. Herodossu Writeeth of 6400 of the Barbarians, and 192 of the Gracians. On the one fide fell Hippias, as Justin hath recorded out of Trogue, and Callimachus Lib. 2. c. 9.

on the other. What year the battel was fought is not certainly known, but in the second or third of the 72 Olympiad, and four or five before the death of Daring. 27. Dans and Artaphernes returning into Persia, carried the Erections captive along with them to Sufa, where they presented them before Darius : Hered. 1, 6. though Ctefias wrote that Date was flain in the battel of Marathon, and that ". 119, 46. his body was denied to be restored. Darius placed the Eretrians in Anderica in Coffin, a Country to called, at 210 furlongs distance from Sufa, the polfession whereof their posterity held a long time together with their own language. Notwithstanding the defeat at Marathon, he left not off thoughts of conquering Greece, making all possible provision for another invasion. But in the fourth year after, more work fell into his hands; for though Diedorustelleth, that the Egyptians much honoured him as one of their Lawigi, Iden lib. 7. vers, they now rebelled. The year following he was provided for both Bx- 6. 1, 6.6. peditions, and was about to undertake them, when the custom of the Country first required that he should name his Successor. He had three children before he was King by the daughter of Gobryas, whereof the eldest Arrobanas nes, (by others called Artemenes and Ariamenes) challenged the Kingdom Darius declar- by virtue of his birth right. But it was judged due to Xerwes his eldest fon by exh his Suc-Mossa Cyrus his daughter, who was founder of the Empire, and he accordingly was declared at this time; although fome make this civil and loving Vide Julin.

rebellion of Egpt ending, after he had reigned 26 years compleat, in the Apathes & in third year of the 73 O'mpiad ending, before the Era of Christ, 485. Areaxerse, concest betwixt the two brothers, to have happened after their Father's death, and been judged by Areaphornes their Uncle. But as Darius Was about fet ting forwards for Greece he was prevented by death, the first year after the olas.

28. Xerxes succeeded his Father in the third year of the third Olympiad, Heredot, lib. je being the fourth King of Persia, the right to the Empire whereof he fetched ad intime. from Cyrus his Grand-father by the Mother's fide. He was scarce settled in Xerxes. the Throne, when Mardonius his kiniman stirred him up with earnestnesse not to give over the War which he had begun with Greece, promiting to himfelf great command upon the conquest of Europe, which he made Xerxes believe believe would be as readily performed as spoken. He, though ambitious SECT. 2. enough, was not at first of himself very forward, but as it concerned him, thought first of recovering Egypt, for which all things were left in readinesse by his father, and in the year next after his death turned his forces thicher with present successe. For, he reduced that Countrey under the yoak, which he laid heavier upon it than formerly, and committed the Government thereof to his brother Achamenes, who was after many years flain by Inarus the

29. Egypt being thus fortunately recovered, he was therewith much elevated, and now had refolved to follow on the War with Greece; but to hear what his Captains would fay, he called them together to advise about it, to whom with vanity enough he opened his mind, and was seconded by an indiscreet flattering speech of Mardonius, who seemed with words to be able to blaft the present condition of Greece. His Uncle Artabanus, a grave and long experienced man, ftrongly urged the contrary, thewing how vain humane confidence was, how britle and inftable the fortune of Princes and others, which appeared fufficiently in his fathers expedition against the Scythians first, and fince that, against the Athenians : that the Greeks were not so weak a Nation he proved by the battel at Marathon, that the thing which he attempted was most dangerous to be thought on again, and again, that without mature deliberation the attempt would be rash however the successe should happen; that God many times pulls down the highest things, and humbleth the haughty that trust in their own strength, by making them to fall into sudden calamities : and as for Mardonius, he chastifed his youthfull and ambitious heat with a sharp reprehension, forerelling him what would be the reward of his rashnesse. But this wise Counsel could not be heard from a grave man, the ears of Xerxes being stopped by the suggestions of one more agreeable to his head-ftrong, and youthfull humour; to that he imputed to his Uncle basenesse of mind and cowardife, inflicting this punishment upon him for it, that staying at home he should not partake of so glorious an expedition. To this enterprize he was also stirred up by the Alenada, or Princes of The flaty, who grudged at the liberties of the Greeks : by the fon of Piffframs also banished Athens, who living in his Court, abused his credulity by the help of a Wizard,

30. Yet not long after, confidering what Artabanus had faid, he changed his purpose, and calling his Council together again, after he had commended his Uncles opinion, fignified the same unto them, at which all the wifer fort much rejoyced; but the thing running much in his mind, fo that he was diflurbed in his sleep, he returned to his former resolution, and resolved on the expedition. In the preparation for it three years (Herodotts faith four) were taken up, all Asia being concerned therein fo far, as to seem to be removed out of its place. A Navy he provided out of all the Sea-Coafts of his Empire to the number of above 1200 Vessels, which he commanded to meet at Cums and Phocas; and having out of all his Provinces gathered great multitudes of horse and foot, at length he moved from Sufa in the fourth year of the 74th Olympiad, and in the fifth year (not after the Egyptian expedition as Herodoiss hath it, but) of his reign. All the land forces met at Critala, with which he passed the River Halys, and came to Celana, a Citie of Phrygia, where Pythius the Lydian (or Bithynian as Pliny will have him) entertained him and his Army, & presented him with a vast summe of money, which he returned with advantage. And so at length he came to Sardie, whence he sent into Greece to demand earth and water, as Symboles of sub-Idenibid, capp, jection. The Navy was come to the Cher sone see by this time, which that it might shun the inconvenience which that formerly Governed by Mardoniushad incurred, by fayling about the Mountain, or Promontory of Athor, he caused the Mountain to be cut off from the main, by a Ditch so broad as two Veffels might fayl a breaft, through which the whole Navy paffed. And He wintereth Wintring this year at Sardis, he communded a Bridge to be laid over the Hellespons (a mile over, wanting an 8th part) which being shattered and broken

Recovereth

Confulteth

about renewing the War

with Greece.

Egypt.

causing the heads of the work-men to be cut off, ordered other Bridges to be

31. In the beginning of the Spring he moved from Sardis with his whole Ibid.Capp.270 Army and came to Abyans, the day being turned into night by a sudden dark- 38,60% nelle (though no stars appeared) at his setting forth; with which portentous thing (being no true eclypse) Pythins, who formerly entertained him, was so terrified, that of his five fons listed in the Army, he defired the eldest, as the comfort of his old age, might be left to him, at which the King was fo angry, that he commanded the young man to be cut in two, and the parts fo to be laid afunder that the Army might paffe betwixt them. When he was come to Abydus he had an extream defire to view all his forces, for which purpose he had an high afcent raifed for him, where he also defired to see a Sea-fight, which in shew was performed, and wherein the Sidonians had the better : with the fight hereof, and all his Land forces on the shore, he was elevated into a great passion of joy, apprehending of how many thousands he was Master, and then presently again into another of weeping, the cause of which Artabanus his Uncle demanding (who had thus far accompanied him) he told him, it was in thinking that of so many thousands not a man should be alive 100 years after. Hence that wife old man took occasion to discourse to him most gravely of the vanity, and miseries of this life, and being again importuned to tell his opinion concerning the expedition, did it with the same faithfulnesse as formerly, after which he fent him back to Sufa to Govern as his Deputy in his Paffeth over into Europe.

32. Then prepared he for his passage into Europe, and having performed 1bid, Capp. 12. his Heathenish Devotions to the Sun, by one of the Bridges bending towards 53,000. the Euxine, passed over his horse and foot, and by another inclining towards the Æ gean, his flaves and beafts, seven dayes, and as many nights being taken up in the passage. The Fleet sayled Westward to the Promontory of Sarpedon, the Land forces marching through the Cherfone fus of Thrace to Agora, and Tobore down rowards the Bay of Melana, where a River of the same of N are N and feveral others in Affa are N and feveral others in Affa are N and N are N are N and N are N and N are N are N and N are N and N are N and N are N and N are N and N are N are N are N and N are N are N are N and N are N and N are N are N are N are N are N and N are N and N are faid to have done before. Paffing over, and moving Westward they came to Kerkie 6. Dorifous, where being a vast plain watered with the great River Hebrus, there they pirched their Tents, and Xernes mustered his whole Army, both by Land and Sea.

22. The greatest number of men it contained that ever were seen listed Herodotus libt. under the Banners of one man; but yet great is the variety found in Wri- cap.60,07. ters about the true number : Herodoins Writeth of 1700000 foot, and 80000 Diodoins l. 11. Horse, besides Camels, and Chariots; Diodorus Siculus not half so many foot, ad Olymp.75. viz. 800000. and yet what he affigns to the foot, Crefice attributeth to the Crefice in exwhole Army, which he writeth to have confifted of 80 Myriads, befides Cha-cerptic riots: Tustin from Trogus, and Orosius out of him, reckons 700000 men out Orosius lib.t. of his own Dominions, and 300000 Auxiliaries. Elian Writeth of 700000 cap.10. in all, Cornelin Nepos of 700000 foot, and 400000. (perhaps rather 40000) celian lib.13. Horse. Pliny 788000 (for the name of Darius, Xerxes being to be read) con New in and Iforraies agreeth with Elian, mentioning onely 700000 in all. As for Themilloc. the Navy there were found 1207 beaked ships, and other Vessels for carrying Plin. lib.33. of Horses, and for other uses 3000. according to Herodorus, from whom cap. 10. Diodorns little different as to the number of the Gallies, writing, there were Ifocrat, in Pafound above 1 200 of them, to which he addeth 850 Horse-boats, and other Vessels of burthen of 30 Oars apiece 3000, with the former agreeth Cresion (though often differring) and Cicero: with the later Ifocrates and Lylias. Orofins mentions 1200 beaked Gallies, and 2000 Vessels of burthen; and as for that place in Justin, which encreaseth the number of the Fleet to 10000. there is no doubt of its corruption. Herodotus by giving 200 men to every Gally, and furnishing all the other Vessels, conjectures 517610 men to have been bestowed in the whole Fleet, so that at this muster the Land and Sea-

DOOK II

of his men.

defence.

forces being added together, with the 20000 Arabians that drove Camels, and the Libyans the Chariots, at this rate would amount to 2317610. befides flaves and others that followed the Camp.

134. Notwithstanding all this number, he commanded all the Nations in his passage, from Dirifens towards Greece, to match along with him, so that hereby came an accession of 120 ships to his Fleer, to which giving 200 men a piece, the number will amount to 24008. and to his Land Arthy another of 30 Myriads, or 300000 men, as Herodoins gathereth (though Diodorns thinketh lefte fomething then 20 Myriads) and to the whole number of his A fan and Europaan Souldiers would on this account amount to 2641610. and yet he thinketh the number of flaves and attendants to have rather exceeded this, so that if it onely be doubled, the number of those persons that by Land came to Thermopyle, and by Sea to Sepies, amounted to 5283220. And for the number of women that baked meat, and of Concubines and Eu-The number nuchs which followed, no man can affign them, of carriage beafts, and for the Waggons, and of Indian Dogs no man could count; so that no wonder it is that to this stupendous multitude some sorts of Rivers failed to afford drink, or that Plutarch and Isocrates should write 5000000 to have followed Xerxes into Greece; the wonder is that no greater plague raged amonight them, that any concord could be preserved amongst so many Nations, & that proviflons could be procured for the prefer ation of the lives of formany Creatures. 35. The Gracians all this while having had intelligence, first of his defign all along from Demaratus the Spartan Exile, and then of his motions, were according to their several interests variously affected. Some, as the Thebans, and the rest of the Bassians (except the The pians, and them of Platea) and many Theffalians (perswaded by the Alenada) and several others, out of fear, had under-hand fent earth and water, as Symboles of subjection: Ma-The prepara- ny also were uncertain in their resolutions, not knowing what to do. The rest meeting at the Ishmus, and confulting for the publick fafety, refolved, and Gracians for (Wore to joyn together in War against the Pernans, and with United powered defend the liberty of Greece, at the prefent to mave all their private differences for that purpose, and to remit the monies owing to each other; to devote the tenth to Apollo, i.e. to do to death the tenth man of all those that had already given up themselves to the Enemy. The War which had often been patched up, and still brake out again, betwixt, the Athenians, and them of Egina, was composed. By occasion of this War the Athenians of late had Arengthned themselves exceedingly at Sea, through the procurement of Themissocies the fon of Neocles, a very wife man, who had brought the people to lay out the money, which issued out of the Golden Mines of Lauria, and was to be divided amongst the multitude man by man, upon shipping, whereby the Fleet was encreased to almost 200 sayl, and Greece came to be preserved. A=" bout the same time it hapned that the Athenians asking Counsel at Delphoi, the Oracle answered, that Wooden Walls alone would be security to them; which several enterpreting several wayes, he expounded ships to be meant by it, and preffed hard, that a Sea victory was promited them at the Island Salamine, which being received by the greater part, they fet themselves with all their might to the strengthning of their Navy. 36. But those of the League finding it convenient to call in the help of their friends , and Allies, fent into Sieily , Corefra and Crete, to defire aid and affiltance of the Greek Colonies against the publick Enemy; and to Argos to excite them to joyn against him with the rest of their Neighbours. But all was to no purpole; for Gelon, who then had all Sicily in his power, and was thought to have more thips than all the affociares put together, refused to give any aid except he might be declared Captain General of the whole Army; the Corefream promited great matters, confessing their fafety to be involved in that of Greece; but resolving to make use of the successe of either party, when danger threatned Greece from Xerxes they fent 60 ships, under shew of supply, but commanded the Fleet to hover about Laconia, and apply it felf to Xerxes, if the Conquerout, as coming in SECT. 2. to his affiftance, which being observed, after the fight the Officers excused themselves for being absent at the fight at Salamine, because the Etesian winds blowing contrary, they could not double the Cape of Malea. The Cretans very powerful at Sea put off the matter under pretence of hearing an answer from the Oracle at Delphos, whither they faid they had fent : and the Argives out of hatred to the Lacedamonians, proposed such conditions as could not be admitted, and afflicted them fore with the rest of the associates.

37. The Athenians then and Lacedamonians being most ingaged (against whom the design of the Persian was most bent) applied themselves with all their might to make relistance. Xernes being about to passe over into Europe, the Theffalians fent to them, demanding help to secure themselves, or else being unable to stand out they must yield. The Council General at that time being assembled in the Isthmus, thinking it wisdom to withstand him at the first entry into Greece, rather than to defend it in broken parts, sent present-Iv away by Sea 10000 men into The falia, under conduct of Eveneuw a Spartan, and Themistocles the Athenian, who in conjunction with the Theffalian Horse, at the River Penew, flowing betwixt the Straights of Offa and Olympus, might hinder the passage of the Persians; but after they came there, it being shewed to them to be but a vain thing there to oppose themselves against so great a multitude, especially seeing there were other passages into Thessalie, by Alexander King of Macedonia, they returned back again to the Ishmus, and the Theffalians thus forfaken, gave themselves up to the Persians. Afterwards the Council again deliberating what should be done, resolved to seize upon the Straights of Thermopyla, which are the only passage out of Thessalie into Greece, and better to be maintained by far than the other, and concluded on fending 6000 Foot thither under command of Leonidas the valiant King of Sparta. Sea matters were committed to the care of the Athenians and Eginatans especially, and it was resolved, that the Fleet should fail to the Artemilian shore, towards the North part of the Island Eubara, and not far from the Straights, Xerxes drawing near, this was done accordingly, both as to Land and Sea Forces; but the Navy receiving an Alarm, through a mifchance of three of it's thips, retreated into the Straights betwixt Enbas and Bassin, where Euripe floweth betwixe Chalois and Aulis : but understanding of a great Wrack suffered by the Persian Fleet, wherein by tempestuous weather were loft 400 Vessels, with a great multitude of men, and much treafure, it returned back after a few daies; in the mean while Xerxes drew down with his innumerous multitudes to the Straights.

38. He fent before a Spie to look how Leonidas and his men behaved themfelves, who bringing him word how he found the Spartans, who then kept watch, exercising themselves in gymnick games, and dressing their heads as on some Festival, he demanded of Demaraens their Country-man the reason thereof. He told him they were fully refolved to die for their Country, and ready to fight it out to the last man, if need required, whereat he derided him as before when he spake of the valour of his Country-men, thinking they would be so skared at his multitudes, as not to dare to come to hand-strokes. But finding no fuch matter, but Demarains his words to be true, on the fifth day after, he commanded a party of Medes to fall upon them, who being with great flaughter repulsed, he sent his Band of Persians, which being invincible as hethought, he named immortal, and they, though wanting no courage under the eyes of the King, who from an high throne beheld the fight, came off with the same successe; wherear he was astonished, grew melancholy, as being now follicitous for his whole Army. The next day the fight was renewed, but with the same successe, great slaughter being made of the Persians, so that the way being more narrow by the carkeifes, there was no room for a multitude to fight, which being driven one upon another, the confusion and consequently the slaughter was the greater. At this Xerxes was flruck with great consternation, not knowing what to do.

39. There was one in the Army, a Trachinian, named Epialtes of Ephialtes (as Pan fanias writch it) who understanding his trouble went to him, and ofThe fight at Thermopla.

fered to shew a way over the Mountains, by which, though with much difficulty, he might fend a Party to come about, and fall on the backs of the Greclass. Being cheared with this, he sent as many as shewed themselves most Forward, with him, under the command of Hydarnes, who paffing over the River Afopus, got in the dark of the night up into the Mountain, where bearing down the Guard of Phocians which there watched, they began to come into the more plain and easie way, when the thing was carried by some fugirives to the Gracians. They were stricken with great terror at the report, all but Leonidas with his Spartans, who for that the Lacedamonians were told by an Oracle, that they must either lose their City or one of their Kings, was very readie to abide to the atmost. Wherefore he willingly give way to his affociates to depart, bidding them to referve themselves for the better condicion of their Country, who all presently falling off, except the Thespians, and such Thebans as the rest of the Gracians had forced thither, not so much to help them, as to keep them as Hostiges; with them and his 300 Spartans he prepared himfelf to fight with a mind devoted already to death. When the Sun was up, and the Persians not yet got down, those resolute Grecians passing the Straights to redeem their lives at deerer rates, fell in upon the multitudes of their enemies, with which being compassed about, they were all cut off, with Leonidas, except (uch as retiring back into the Straights took an hill, and fighting valiantly With those Persians whom Epialtes had led down upon them, fold their lives as their fellows at a deer rate; 20000 of Xerxes his Army with this handful of men being flain. The Thebans alone litted up their Targets begging quarter, crying out they were brought thither against their wills, and that they were Xerxes his Subjects, yet were they flain, or being taken were fligmarized for difgrace. The body of Leonidas being found was nailed to a croffe-These things hapned at Thermopyla in the middle of Summer, while some of the Gracians in Peloponne fus Were celebrating the games of the 75th Olympiad, in the beginning of it's first year, wherein Callias was Archonat Ashens, as we are rold from Diodorn's Siculus, of whose history digested according to the years of their folemnities, that part now extant beginneth with this Expedition; at which sime 160 Philosophy was translated out of Ionia to Athens by Anaxagoras the Clacomenian, Scholar to Anaximenes the Milesian, who Lacrius in vita now being twenty years old begin to professe it in that City, way being made clomen strofor Learning there by the Library collected through the industrie of mat. lib. 1. 40. Xerxes having now had experience of what Demaratus had faid to him, asked his advice for carrying on the War: being in great doubt what to do, after he had heard how they of Sparia were able to arm well-nigh 8000 men of fuch temper as the former; and that the other Lacedamonians though inferior to those were very valiant. Demaratus being of this opinion, that all the Land-forces would affemble together at the Ifthmas, to defend that entric into Peloponnesus, advised him to fend 300 ships well manned to spoil the Country of Laconia, thereby to keep the Lacedamonians and their neighbours entangled at home, while having subdued the rest, he might afterwards fall upon them, who would be then too weak of themselves to sustain his power: he farther also advised, that 300 Vessels should seize upon Cytherathe Island, which lying near the Coasts of Laconia, might serve as a place of retreat or randezvouze for their own fecurity, and endamaging of the Enemy; Chilon the Lacedemonian having been wont to fay, that it were berrer for them to have it drowned in the Sea, than to fland so as it did for their disadvantage. But Achamenes the brother of Xerzes stifly impugned this advise, left by the severing of the Fleet after such losse by the Tempelt, they might prove too weak for the Gracians at Sea; and to this out of fear, the King submitted, hoping his Land-Army and Fleet should stand each the other in good flead, both holding one courfe, and not lying far afunder.

41. The Pleet of the Gracians flood all this while at Artemifium, as a Herodotus 1.8. bullwark to Eubera, commanded by Eurybiades the Lucedamonian, to whom the Arhenians for quiernesse and safety gave place. But now the Peloponinto Greece, and were onely flaied by the cunning of Themistocles, till such time as the Eubwans could secure their wives and children, with the principal of their goods. In the mean time the Persians thinking to incompasse them, fent 200 fail to come behind about the Island, they lying in the Straights betwixt it and the Main. They had knowledge of this device, and not ignorant of the loffe fuftained by the Persian Fleet in the last tempest, fer fail at midnight, and mer these 200 ships with a counter-surprise, took and sunk thirty of them, and forced the rest to take the Sea, where by foul weather they were driven upon the Rocks, and all cast away. The news of this was brought to the Gracians by 53 Athenian ships, fent in to encrease the Fleet, which doubled the joy thereof, fo that elevated with new hopes, they fet next day upon fome Cilician ships, which were severed from the rest of the Fleet, and damnifying them much, returned to Artemilium. 42. The Persians taking this in great indignation, and fearing the anger of Xerxes, resolved to redeem their credit with some notable exployt, and for that purpose the next day in the form of a crescent invaded the Gracians. They cheerfully gave them battel, and the fight indured from noon till night. A Sea fight. ending with equal losse to both parties. For though more of the Persian Vessels were lost, yet, the lesser damage fell as heavy upon the other, which being smaller could lesse bear it, though they fought most manfully for their Liberty and Country, the Atherians deserving best amongst them, and amongst the Atherians, Clinias the Father of Alcibiades, a famous man in the next Age. Amongst the Persians the Egyptians fought most soutly; and these things hapned at Sea those same three daies in which the Landaction was at Thermopphyla, in both the Straights the Greeks endeavouring to hinder the Enemies accesse into their Country. But shortly after they had intelligence by one fent out on purpose, what was become of Leonidas and those with him, they would needs depart from Artemisium, and draw their Navie, much battered in the former Fights, more inwards and nearer home. Themistocles seeing their resolution, before they weighed Anchor, perswaded them to kill up the Cattel of the Eubmans, and bring the meat on shipboard, Identibid. rather than to leave them a prey to the Enemy, and engraved upon Rones upon Plutarch in > Country, or elfe stand neutral in the fight, or fight coldly. This he hoped would either prevail with them, or at least render them suspected with the Persian. 43. From Artemisium they failed to the Coast of Attica, and at the defire of the Athenians took up their harbour at the Island Salamine : the Persian Fleet removed to Artemisium and the Coast adjoyning to Historis.

the thore, and at the watering places, where he knew the Ionians would Themiflec. come, an exhortation to revolt to the Greeks, and fide with their Mother-

Xerxes now having passed the Streights of Thermopyla, marched through the Country of Doris into Phocis, which being for laken of it's Inhabitants he wasted, and when he came to Panopea a Town thereof, he divided his Army into two parts. With the one he invaded Greece, and the other he fent to rifle and burn the famous Temple of Delphos, but, as it's faid, this party was almost wholly destroyed without humane help, by Thunder and Lightning. A party sent by Xcrxes to and two Rocks, which breaking off from the Mountain Parnaffus, overwhelmed it: those that escaped were generally killed by the Phocsans, who having fled into the Mountain for fear of Xeraes, fell upon them; fo that few remained and escaped to their Priends in Bassia. Xerxes now marched Thunder and through Beetia the Country of his allies into Auica, with intention to do his utmost against the City of Athens it felf.

44. In the mean time the Gracian Fleet lying at Salamine, though strengthned with a new accession of thips at the Coast of Trazene, could hardly be conrained there; for every one being follicitous for his own Countrey, and despairing of Autea, and the rest of Greece without the Isthmu, was busie in fortifying it, and laboured thither to bring the Navy, whence there might be a fafe retreat into Peloponnessu if need were; This the Athenians understanding, were fore troubled, as having justly expected that the Peloponne sians would joyn with them, and the rest of the associates in defending Assica, as they had fought for them at Artemissium; but making the best use of it they could, The Athenians themselves. Having obtained this, they published an Edict by the procurements.

The Athenians themselves. Having obtained this, they published an Edict by the procurements. The Athenians themselves where the procurements are the procurements. The Athenians themselves where the procure of the procurements are the procurements. purpose, and invented other devices) that all fit by age should come aboard, and transport their wives & children out of the Citie, with their flaves, & what they could, which was done, most carrying them to Trazane, where they were kindly entertained; and that Aristides, a man famous for wisdom, justice, and integrity, but lately banished for a time by the Offracism, by the potent fa-Rion of Themistocles, might return home; by the same procurement another Plutareb ut Order was made to recall all such as were so banished, that they might now in supra. time of need serve their Countrey, and out of sear less they should joyn

45. In the Fleet now at Salamina were 358 armed ships, besides other vessels of lesse importance, of which 180 were provided and surnished by the Athemians, 161 onely by the Lacedamonians, the Covintbians fent 40, the inhabitants of Egina 30. Which were notable for swiftnesse, the Megarians 20. they of Chalcu furnished as many, having the Vessels of the Asbenians : the rest were supplied in lesser numbers by the Chians, Naxians, Melians, and Seriphians Islanders. Whilest the Officers were in Council about the place of battel, news came that the Enemy was entred Anica, wasting all with fire and fword : for having in Bassia burned the Towns of the Thespians, and Plasaans, who had forfaken their habitations, he hasted into Ausica, where confurning all things, he entred Athens three moneths after he had passed over his forces into Europe. The Castle some few who would not leave their ancient feat held out to the last, and were all put to the sword, having refused quarter upon a vain confidence of the Oracle, that the Citie should be defended with wooden Walls, and thinking they fulfilled the same by fortifying themselves with Boards and Pallisadoes : the Temple of Minerus in the Castle he burnt to ashes. The message being brought, the Captains departed every man to his ship, decreeing nothing, and all the rest of the Peloponnessians

46. This resolution might have proved faral to all Greece, had it not been prevented by the wildom of Themistocles, who being stirred up by Mnoss. Herodotus & Platarob at philm of Athens followed Eurybiades the Admiral into his ship, and obtained prins, of him again to Assemble the Council. Here he overcame him by his mildnesse, who listing up his Rod in an hear to strike him, he bada him strike so he would but hear. When he came to speak of staying at Salamine, one Adimany upbraided him with the losse of his Country, saying, It was not sit that such an one should give Counsel to them that had theirs remaining to them; to whom he boldly replied, that though they, the Athenians, had left their houses and walls, dead things, and not to be valued at their liberty, yet they had a Citie left them, than which there was none greater in Greece, viz. 200 ships, which as yet was present, and ready to help their associats; but if they would depart, and betray them, he would have them know they should presently hear that the Athenians had both a free Cirie and Territories as good as that they had left, meaning Sira, a Town in Italy, in their power: Eurybiades hearing this, and fearing to be deprived of the Athenian Fleet, fo necessary for their support, inclined to his opinion, insomuch that the Grecians resolved to stay, and prepared themselves for the fight; but the Porfian Fleet drawing down to Phalerm the Achenian Port, and the Landarmy to the Sea-fide, the Peloponnesians were so assigned thereat, that having all their minds upon the Ishmus, the advise of Themsfoolss was not at all regarded, and they resolved to weigh Anchors, and to be gone that night, and notice hereof was given to the Mariners.

47. For now Norwes his Fleet was drawn down to repaired, and increased by a new Accession of ships, that it was altogether as considerable as before destroy the

Temple of

SECT. 2. the shipwrack at Sepies, and taking all Nations as he passed along with them. his Land Army contained as great a number as heretofore at Thermopyla. The King came down from Athens to Phalerus the Port, and called a Council to deliberate what should be done. All the Captains were for a Sea-fight. the Kings of Tyre and Sidon being first asked their opinions by Mardonius onely a woman, Artemisia Queen of Halicarnassim, a wife and valiant woman, who had followed Xerxes in this expedition with five ships, with grave and important arguments diffwaded a Sea-fight, and advited him to enter Peloponnesses with his Land Army, for thereby he would presently dissolve the Greekish Fleet, and finish the War. Though this advice followed would have been enough, and Xerxes could not but commend it, yet the major and worse part carried it, and it was refolved to fight the Gracians out of hand at Salamine. The Anchors then were weighed, and the Fleet made thitherwards; but night coming on suffered them not that day to reach the Island.

48. At this time were the Peloponnessans ready to depart homewards, and Plutaveh in thereby the Estate of Greece to be ruined, by their breaking their united Themistoc. power, and reducing themselves into their particular and inconsiderable conditions, had not Themistocles, born for the preservation of his Countrey, relieved it by his wisdom in its great necessity. There was one Sicinus a Perfian, who, taken prisoner, was a great lover of Themistocles, and raught his Children. Him he fent privately to the King, to tell him, that he preferring his good before that of the Gracians, gave him now first to understand that they were about to fly, and advised him not to suffer it, but prevent them, and fer upon them whilest they were disordered, and the Fleet was severed from their Land Army. Xerxes gladly hearing the message, as believing it to proceed out of Themifectes his affection to him, communicated it to his Officers, and whilest the rest could be furnished with Souldiers, sent 200 ships about the Island to block up the Straights, so that none of the Enemies might escape. Themistocles communicated what he had done to Aristides, who approving of it, went to perswade the Greeks to fight, when presently, whilest their minds hung in suspense, came a ship of Tenedos from the Persian Fleet, and acquainted them with what was done in the Straights, fo that necessity compleated what was but half effected by the speech of Aristides.

49. Then prepared they themselves unanimously to the battel. Themisto- 1dem & Hand cles made a speech unto them, wherein he shewed where their concernments we wins, lay, exhorting them to fight manfully for their Countrey and Liberty; for their Parents, Wives, Children, and what soever was dear to them, with which being provoked they applied themselves to their ships, and put forth the Fleet into the Main. Xerxes placed himself on an high Throne to behold the fight over against Salamine, and had some with him to write down the particulars thereof. A bloudy fight was fought with great earnestnesse on both fides, the one fighting under the eves of their King, who marked every paffage, and accordingly was affected, and the other for as much as could be dear to them in so dangerous a condition. Herein the Greeks had the advantage, that they were more exercised in Sea matters, and having all they had lying at the stake, they did it with the more earnesmesse, and in that they fought with greater order: the Persian with so great a multitude of ships, fought in disorder, and hindred one another, and if the Vessels sunk were all lost, whereas their Enemies by their skill in swimming saved themselves. At length their - Ionians, sollicited as was faid, by little and little withdrawing themselves from Fleet deseate the fight, the rest, what by that discouraged, and overcome by the pertinacious valour of their enemies, began to fly; the Athenians pressing hard upon them, and destroying many of their ships; of such as fled towards Phalerus, many were intercepted by the Ægenatans, the Emulators of the other in deferving well of Greece; fuch as escaped them, and got to the Port, thence withdrew themselves to the Land Army. 50. Of all the Gracians the Athenians and Æginatans deserved best, and amongst them Themistocles, the Captains of the Fleet each one, when upon their Oaths they pronounced who merited most, naming him after themselves. Sect.2. Amongst the Persians the valour of Artemisia the Queen was most conspicuous, acknowledged by Xerxes himself, who thereupon said, that his men were surned women, and women became men : she was faved as it hapned, and escaped to Phalerus. Many Noble Persians fell, amongst the rest Ariabignes the Kings brother, few of the Gracians, Xerxes exceedingly discouraged with this great loffe, confidered of his fafe retreat out of Europe, rearing the Ionians might break the bridge laid over the Hellespons; yet that he might colour any fuch intention, he began a new project by casting earth into the Straights, to joyn the Island Salamina with the Continent, But Mardonias understanding his temper, and bethinking himfelf in what case he himfelf might stand for being the first advicer to the War, went to him, and extenuating the losse, the Land Army being left intire, at length proposed to him, to serve to him 300000 men, with which he would engage to revenge him upon Greece, and reduce it all under his power, if he pleased to depart himself into Asia, being nothing tainted in honour for that things hid not so well succeeded in this encounter, because the mitcarriage was procured by the Cowardise of the Egyptians, Phanicians, Cilicians, and others no better thin flaves, the Persians having gullantly enough behaved themselves, and he, their Prince, having subdued already the greater part of Greece, and taken Athens it felf, against which the War was principally intended.

51. He liked very well the motion, but fill diffembled the matter, answering, he would refer it to his Council, which he accordingly called, and asked the advice particularly of Artemisia. She approved of Mardonius his Counfel, for that if he should subdue Greece it would be to the Kings advantage, and if he miscarried it would be no disgrace to him, who in his own person had accomplished the main defign of the expedition, in taking, and wasting Athens; he was pleased therewith, sent her beforehand away with his sons he had brought with him, and gave liberty to Mardonius to make choice of what, and how many Forces he pleased; all this being done the same day with the fight at Salamis. The night following in great fear and disorder the Fleet loofed from Phaterm, and fled amain towards the Hellefpont, which the Gracians seeing, persued them as far as Andros one of the Cyclades , and took in there, for that they could then no more differn them, and that Island had been of the Persian faction. Here it being debated in the Council of Officers whether the Enemy should be any surther persued, Eurybiades the General, for feveral grave and urgent reasons, disswaded it, a Bridge being rather to be laid for him, infomuch that he convinced the rest, and Themistocles, who as Herodous faith, was formerly for the perfute, or elfe diffembled, for that which followed, changed his mind, and restrained the Athenians.

52. And further foreseeing that through their inconstancy, & known ingra- Hecodotus, Plus titude, he might have cause in time to come to use friends, that now he might tarch Diodorus make one of Xernes, and therein also further provide for the good of his at supra. Countrey, he betook himself to his wonted craft and policy. He dispatched away to him his former trufty Meffenger, to acquaint him how carefull he was for his fafety, in diffwading the Gracians from perfuing him, and to advice him by all means to make towards the Hellespoon, ere the Bridge should be broken down, which he thought would be within a small time. He being much afrighted hereat retreated presently with all his Forces the same way he came, into Thessaly, where delivering to Mardonius 300000 men picked out of the whole Army, and setting other matters, with a small and obscure train fittest for haste (all the rest being commanded to follow) he hasted through Macedonia and Thrace to the Hellespont, where he arrived after 45 dayes. Here, whether he found the Bridge whole, and so passed over it, or (what the Gracians have believed) broken in pieces by Tempests, and so passed over obscurely in a fishers Boat, observable is the great change upon him, who with so great pride had formerly beaten the Sea, and cast Fetters into it. His Army following was a great part confumed by the plague, famine, and other calculties, so that the fowls of the aire continually followed it, the way be-

CHAP. I.

202

He flyeth.

behind,

SECT. 2. ing full of carkeifes. Being shipped also over to Abjans, very many died by intemperate use of diet, and drinking too much in the dysenterie . wherewith they were forely grieved. Those that remained, by flow journies reached to their King lying at Sardis. 53. Artabazus, a man of prime note amongst the Persians, accompanied Xerxes to the Hellespont, with a partie of 60000 men taken out of Mardoni. us his Army, who finding at his return the Inhabitants of Poridae in Macedonia to have revolted, fearing the Pallenians round about would do the same, and suspecting also Olynchus, which then was inhabited by the Bettieans, he befieged both Towns, of which the latter he took, and killing the Towns-men gave it to one Critobulus of Chalcis to govern, after which, they of that place inhabited it. He then more frongly befieged Potidea, but after three moneths having layn before it to no purpose, many of his men being lost in the Sea, which broke in with an unusual Tide, he rose up and departed to Mardonius, who, for that Winter was at hand, had taken up his quarters in Theffali, and the adjoyning places of Macedonia, The Persian Fleet being returned to the Coast of Asia, wintred at Cuma, for the greatest part, onely fome ships at Samos, whither in the Spring they all failed, being increased to the number of 300 by the addition of the Ionians, on whose Coast now they lay to keep them in obedience, being little defirous of failing any more Wellward, for the experience they had lately had of the Gracians at Salamina, and being in as little fear of their coming to them, whom they expected to be kept in awe, fo as not to ftir far from home, because of Mardonim. 54. They stirred not about providing any Land-forces wherewith to oppose Mardonins; but very busie they were at Agina in rigging their Fleet, over which Leutychides King of Sparta (iffued from Procles, and put into the place of Demeraius,) was made Admiral : Xanthippus Father to Pericles being General of the Athenian Fleet, which contained the most ships. Whilst they abode here, came fix men from Chios, who having conspired against Strathes their Tyrant, upon discovery of the plot, fled, beseeching them that they would undertake the freeing of Ionia; and fo far they prevailed, as to get them to Delm; but no further would they go, because unacquainted as yet with the affairs of Afia, they feared the Persians, so that both parties flood in awe of each other. Mardonius left 55. Mardonius thinking of his promife made to his Mafter, confulted the Oracles, but they refuling to answer, he fent Alexander King of Macedonia.

now in great grace with the Persians, through the marriage of his Sister to Butaris, in ambassage to the Athenians, to take them off from the society with the rest of Greece. He knew they gave the most mortal blows in the battel at Salamina, and thought, that if they could be taken off, the reft would be conquered with little or no difficulty. The fame of this Ambaffage flying abroad, came to Sparta, which netted the Lacedamonians, and made them with all speed to dispatch away Ambassadors of their own, to prevent the alliance fo dangerous to all Greece, and the Athenians refused to give audience to Alexander, till they were arrived, that they might also be present therest. Alexander told them how Xerxes had given order to Mardonius to fignifie to them how willing he was to remit what was past, to restore them their Territories, and more than them if they would, to leave them to their own freedom, and repair up their Temples at his own charges, if they would enter into a league of amitie with him, otherwise they could not be ignorant how great inconveniencies they drew upon themselves from so potent a Prince, able to fend other Armies if they now with Mardonisus should be overthrown: to these things spoken as from Mardonius, the Ambassador added as a friend, not to let flip such an oppoptunity. After him the Ambasfadors of Sparta spoke, and shewed how unworthy a thing it would be for the Athenians of all others, to forfake the publick cause, they having been the causers of the War, and their Ancestors been so renouned for setting others at liberty, wherefore they hoped that they would not be accessary to the slavery of all Greece. Their answer was to Alexander, that so long as the Sun should hold his course, they would never enter into alliance with Xerxes, but result Sect 2 his forces with their own; and him they defired, whom they respected as a friend, not any more to bring such an unwelcome message, lest he might suffer something from the angry people. To the Sparians they answered to this purpole: That they would never any of them as long as they lived enter into confederacy with the Persian; they thanked them for their kind offer to maintain their wives and children in case of necessity, which they hoped they should not have much cause to need, so as to be troublesome to them, and defired them to haften away to them their supplies, for that they thought the Barbarian would not lose time after the report of their answer, but prefently invade them; and they thought it most convenient to meet him in

Burnerh Athens, and goeth into Bæotia.

56. Mardonius having received this answer from Athens, in great wrath Herod, lib. 9. myrched thitherwards out of The falie. When he came to Thebes, the Inhabitants advised him to go no farther, for that he should never subdue Greece united together, but stay there in a commodious place, and corrupt with money those that were most prevalent in each City, whereby he might divide the Gracians into factions, and so easily mastering the differents, subdue the whole Country. But he not hearkening to this advice, proceeded, hoping by fires made in the Islands, to give notice to Xerxes still lying at Sardis, that he was again got into Athens, which the Inhabitants upon his approach, and the Peloponne stans deferring to send their succors, again quitted and departed to Salamine. He entered Athens the tenth moneth being now compleated after Xerxes had the possession of that City, and having so done, sent to Salamine to the owners of it, once more offering them the same conditions he had formerly proposed by Alexander of Macedonia, hoping, that upon this extremity to which they were once again reduced, they might change their stubbornnesse for a more complying disposition.

57. But they were so far from harkening to what he offered, that they Roned one Lycidas a Senator, for faying it deferved to be taken into confideration, and to be proposed to the whole body of the people, and his wife and children were used in the same manner by the women. Then sent they (together with the Megarians and Plasaans) seriously to expostulate with the Lacedamonians for the non-performance of their promise, whereby their Country was again exposed to the will and pleasure of the Enemy, and plainly to tell them, that except their affociates would better fland to their word, and dispatch away their succours in time, they must needs provide for themselves apart, for as much as yet a way was open for their entry into confederacy with the common Enemy. The Ambaffadors found them celebrating annual . games, and understood that the Peloponnone flane were onely intent upon their perfecting the wall at the Ishmus, having no regard at all to them, whereof they highly complained to the Ephori. They promifed them an antiver the next day, but deferred from day to day, until after ten dayes the wall of the Isthmus was perfected. 58. After this time came a man of Tegeato them, and blaming them for their neglect of their allies, convinced them of the vanity of the wall, in case the Athenians should joyn with Mardonius, for they could with ease convey him otherwise than by the Isthmus into Peloponnesms, wherewith being startled, in the dead time of the night, and without privity of the Ambassadors, they fent out 5000 men besides 7000 of the Heilots or publick Slaves, under the conduct of Cleombroum Tutor to Plift archus the young King. In the morning the Ambassadors came again to them exposulating as before, whereto the Ephori answered, that their succours were already on their way, whom then the other understanding the matter, followed, and with them other 5000 gathered out of the places bordering upon Sparia. Mardonine having intelligence how things went in Peloponnelus from the Argives, who all this while were of his party, was formething abashed, having till now had some hopes of the Athenians their compliance, for which reason he had spared their Territories. But now he destroyed all he could both

CHAP. I.

The battel at

Plates, and

Mardonius

SOU!

SECT. 2. in City and Country, and forfaking Assica as a Country dangerous to his Army, by reason of the unevennesse of the ground, and hard to be quitted sodainly in time of danger, he returned into Beerla a Champain Country, and in alliance with him, where in the Territories of the Thobans he pitched his Tents at the River Alopse, bringing much dammage to his friends round about, in taking up such things as were but necessary to the sustemance of his Army. The Spartant in the mean time lying at the Islams, the other Pelovenne figns after their example came also thither, whence they marched to Eleusine. Thither came the Athenians from Salamine, and joyned with them, whence they followed Mardenim into Bassia, and fate down over against his Camp at the foot of the Mountain Citheron.

o. The Greeks brought into the field 11 Myriads or 110000, according to Herodorus, from which number (a) others take the odd thousands, and (a) Diedorus, make them just 100000. The number of the Perfian Army Amounted to 30 Justin, Myriads or 200000, belides the Greek Auxiliaries, which he conjectureth to have been about five Myriads more; the 200000 are owned by Plutarch, another (6) numbereth but 200000 Foot, & 20000 Horse, but Diederns on (b) Smiling another (6) numbereth but 200000 Foots, & 20000 of Xerwey his Army, Problem the contrary faith, that belieds these Forces drawn out of Xerwey his Army, Bide. Mardonius had our of Macedonia and Thrace, and the affociate States, about 20 Myriads, and that his whole Army contained to Myriads or toocoo men. Mardonius when the Gracians were encamped, fent a partie of his Horse to Herodorus Me affail them, which objecting cowardife to them, and provoking them, very light supra. skirmishes ensued, wherewith the Megarians were fore put to it, being on disadvantagious ground, but being relieved by 300 flour Arbenians, all others refusing, a sharp encounter followed, in which Massified who commanded the Party of the Persians was flain. A great contest followed about the body, the Persians labouring with all their might to redeem it, all the Persian Horse coming in to the quarrel, and then the whole Army of the Gracians; but at length they were fain to return without it, and it was catled in triumph about the Greekish Camp. This as it brought great forrow to the Persians, so the other were much elevated in their minds thereby, and removed their Camp into the Tetritories of Places, whither Mardonius also followed them, and encamped over against them, both parties neglecting to fight (onely excepting such Skirmithes as was made by the Persian Horse) for ten dayes.

60. On the eleventh, it being palpable that the Greekish Army daily wasted, by the revolt of many of their Countrymen, and yet that the Persian gronned under it's own burthen, Mardonine called a Council of his Officers to confult what was to be done. Artabasan the fon of Pharnaces, a man of great Nobility, and an emulator of the General, contended with him, urging that the best was to decline the fight, and march to Thebes, where they might have plency of provision, here wanting, and whence by fending money into the principal Cities of Greece (according to the advice formerly given by the Thebans) they might dispatch the War with ease. But Mardonius being more hot and earnest, thinking his Army to be for the present stronger than the Enemy, refolved to fight, not fuffering himself by any perswasions to be removed from his purpose, for that because of his authority the rest durst not contradict it, and it was refolved to fall on the next morning by break of day. Notice hereof was given by Alexander the Macedonian to the Athenians, who advited them in case Mardonius should not fight to flay it out; for the Perlians were straightned for provisions. The Athenians bring this news to Paufanias the General, who being something struck therewith, he defired them to change places, because they were better acquainted with the Persian manner of fighting fince the battel at Marathon, and the Spartans were more used to the Thossalians and Bostians now opposed to the Athenians; they foon condescended hereunto, but Mardonius having notice of it, made his Persians change place with the Bænians and the other; and though Panfanius again reduced his men into the former place, yet was neither this hid from Mardonius, who still to prevent him did the like.

61. Mardonius upon this fent and upbraided Paufanian and his Sparrans with cowardize, especially seeing he had made a challenge to sight with them with his Parfiant, either a certain number of each, or all together, both which were refused. Then fent he his Horse upon them, which with darcs sore croubled the whole Army, and most of all in that it hindred the fetching of water, that the Gracians were confirmed to change the places, and resolved to passe since an Mand compassed about with the River, and trear the Walls of the Citie, which was very convenient for wancting, and lay also well for provisions. By night they removed, but most missing of the place went to the Temple of June in the high way to Plates, and there encamped themselves, whom the Sparsans being commanded to follow, much trouble arose thereupon by the means of one Amomphareus a valiant man, who for fome time would not fit with his Regiment, crying out, it was contracy to the Laconick. Discipline to fly from the Enemy, and supposing Pansanian and the rest durst not forfake him. But towards morning he came off from his retolution, and to all marched to the Temple of Ceres, square upon the River Molee, being followed close by the Persian Horse, 62. The Sun being rifen, Mardonius grievously inveighing against the convardice of the Gracians, and Arrabazus for his late opinion, marched with his whole Army, as to purfue the Enemy flying, and all his Horfe began fore to presse upon the backs of the Sparians and Tegeatans, joyned with them at the Chapel of Cores, fo that then enfued a flurp fight betwixt them, and betwire the Athenians who came in so their fuccour, and fuch Greeks as were confederate with the Persians. The Tegeatans charged the Persian infantty, in which after much toyl and bloudthed, Mardonius fighting on a white Horse in the midst of 1000 choise mentions slain by Armnest us the most valiant Spartan. After his death, his men discouraged, were slaughered in great numbers, and put to the rout, which Artabazus feeing, thifted for himself with a party of 40000 commanded by him, and fled towards the Helispont: the Greek that affilted Mardonius, though nothing inferiour to their Countreymen for valour, were put to flight; and 3 90 of Thebans, who most flourly behaved themselves were slain upon the place, 63. In the mean time the Corimbians, Magarians, Philasians, and the reft, who had taken up their flation at the Chapel of Juno, heating of the victory of their friends hasted to the place all out of order, the Corinchians over Hill and Dale the nearest way; but the rest through the plain, who were circumvented by the Theban horse, and many of them cut off. The Persians fled into their Camp, which they had fenced with a Rampire for security, whither they were followed by the Spartans, who laboured with all their might to florm the place, but were flourly repulted by the Defondants, till the Athenian coming in, and better exercised in such attempts, brake into the Camp. The Tegestans followed with great violence, and took, and plundred the Pavilion of Mardonius with his bralen manger, and then followed an unifeakable faughter of the Parsans, fo that of those 300000 left to Mardon's by Kernes, excepting those 40000, which fled with Artabass, not 3000 remained, 100000 according to Diodorm, without mercy being put to death within the Rampire, Of the Gracians not many were flain, according to Herodains, who reckoneth 31 Sparians, 16 Tegeatans, and 52 Athenians, mentioned at large by him ; but Platareh mentioneth 1 369 of the Greekish in Adlide. Army to have been flain, and Diodorus increaseth the number to above 10000. The Manineans and Eleans came after the victory, at which they were to ashamed that returning home they banish'd their Captains as authors of the delay. The Conquetours thence marched to Thebes, where the inhabicants gave up the authors of their revolt to the Barbarians, whom being carried to Carineb, all but Astaginus that escaped, he there put to

64. Whilest these things were this done in Baotia, the Greekish Fleet of which Lentychides the Spartan King was Admiral, harboured at the Island Delas: Hither came three Ambassadors from Samus, desiring aid against the Barbarians, and their Tyrant imposed upon them, shewing that it was most

SECT.2. equal that Gracians should one vindicate the liberty of another, and that this Enterprise would be without difficulty, for as much as if the. Ionians did but once fee their Fleer, they would revolt from the Persians, of whom such as were amongst them would either fly, or might eafily be made a prey; Lastly, if the Ambassadors were mistrusted as not representing things according to their Commission, they offered themselves as Hostages, till the truth might be cleared. Leniychides taking an Oath of them that they came impowered from the Samiani, retained Hegesistrains (because his name he took for a good omen) who had been the mouth of the rest, and sending the other two before followed the next day to Samus. The Sea-men that were there, ffricken with great fear at the report of the Fleet approching, difmified the Phonician Veffels, and fled with the rest to the Continent, hoping to keep them fafe under the protection of the 60000 Foot left on the Coasts by Xerxes to keep Ionia in obedience, over whom Tigranes was General, a man of a most proper and amiable personage. 65. The Persians having drawn their ships under the foot of the Mountain Mycale, near the Temple of Ceres Elen sinian, and barricaded them with great flones, wood, and other materials, came the Gracians with their Fleet prepared for a fight. But understanding what was done, Leneychides coming near the shoar, by the voice of a cryer aloud (as Themistocles had done before) endeavoured either to make the Ionians revolt, or at least to render them suspected to the Enemy; which being done, presently he landed all his. men, refolving to try the event of a Land battel. The Perfians suspecting the Samians disarmed them, and sent the Milesians to keep the passages leading up into the Mountain. As the Armies were going to meet, a finden rumour was spreadabroad through that of the Gracians, that Mardonius with his forces were cut off, which elevated their spirits, and made them to charge with greater alacrity, which was also increased, for that they were now to fight at the Temple of the same Goddesse, as they heard their friends had done with Mardonins in Baotia. Then charged they the Persians in a double

The I Cilian Limpire,

The battel at Micale,

reth.

by Xerxes.

Sca-shore; the Lacedemonians, and others joyned with them, through the mountainous and precipitous places, who whilest they were getting up, the Athenians fell on, and calling on one another to endeavour to deprive the Lacedamonians of the honour of the victory, charged the Enemy fo furiously, that at length they beat them back, and forced them into their Camp, whither also they brake in with them. 66. Hereupon ensuing a bloudy fight, all the rest fled except the Persians, who fighting with great resolution, were yet cut off and defeated upon the body, the Athenians with the Corinthians and others, on the plain by the coming in of the Lacedamonians and the rest. Two of the Sea Captains were flain, two escaped, and with the rest fell Tigranes, the General of the foot, and of the Greeks perished not a few. The Samians, though disarmed, and other lonians came in and helped their friends, and the Milesians fet to Guard the passages of Mycale fell down upon the Persians another way, and made great flaughter of them. So was Ionia rent from the Persian Empire again, and joyned to the Gracians. After this performed by Land, the Con-Ionia revolquerours burnt all the Persian ships in the Haven, and being inriched with great spoil returned to Samu. It was found out afterwards that this victory at Mycale was obtained on the felf fame day as the other at Placea in Bestia, the later in the morning, and the former at evening, which caused the wonder how intelligence could be given to these that fought at Mycale of the succeffe of their Countrey-men fo far of. This happed often in following times Diodorus ad as will be feen, although some have thought that no report was brought any Olymp 75 and way to the Army of the victory of Plaines, but that it was so given out on purpose as a stratagem by Lentychides to animate his Souldiers, who then being capit Except wholely ignorant of any fuch thing, he invented that which afterwards proved accordingly. These two battels, and victories, hapned on the third or fourth day of the moneth Boedromion, in the second year after the invasion of Greece

67. The

CHAP. I. The Persian Empire. 67. The Gracians lying at Samus fell into dispute about translating the SECT. 2. Ionians, and Lolians, out of Afia into Greece, for that they could not be alwayes in a readinesse to defend them, and they could not subsist of themselves; Heradous at and the Sparsans moved that those who had revolted to the Perfian should be given to see cast our, and they placed in their rooms, but the Athenians fearing to be de- Diadonis it prived of the right of their Colony, which yet the Ionians acknowledging print, themselves, might own the rest of the associates for their patrons, upon such a change, dashed the project. Then were the Samsans, Chians, Lesbians, and others, who had revolted, religiously and solemnly sworn to the observation of the league, and the Gracians departed towards the Hellaspont to break the Bridge there, which when they found broken to their hands, they confulted about returning home. The Athenians were for going into the Cherrenefus of Thrace to recover it out of the hands of the Persians, and though the Peloponne fians returned, proceeding in their resolution went and besieged Seftus an Lolian Town, fituate in the Cherforefus, over against Abyans. Before this Town they continued till the Autumn was far ipout, and then pined out the inhabitants, who forfook the Town, but wate overtiken, and either flain, or made prisoners, amongst the later fort of which was tragetes the Governour, who because he had violated the sepulche of the Chapel of Protestiant, a great Saint in that place, faw first his son stoned before his face, and then was hanged by command of Xanthippus the Athenian Admiral. The Median Then returned the Navy home to Athens, and nothing was done further this War endeth year, which was the second of the 75 Olympiad, and the 7th of the reign of after two years. Xerxes, of the World 3526. and before Christ the 477.

68. Xerxes all this while lay at Sardis, and thither those sew that escaped from Mycale betook themselves. In the way Massifes brother to the King fell foul upon Artaynes, one of the Captains of the Fleet, amongst other reproachfull words telling him that he had in this behaved himfelf more cowardly than a woman, whereupon the other drew his Dagger, and had stabbed him, but that one Xonagoras an Halicarnassem interposed himself, whom for this faving of his brother, Xornes rewarded with the Government of Cilicia. Whilest he lay still at Sardie he fell in love with the wife of Mafifier, but the being too honest for his adulterous intentions, he married her, and his brothers daughter Artaynta to his fon Davins, hoping to enjoy her this way, which Ceremony being over, he returns home, leaving part of his Forces to continue the War with the Gracians. In his (a) flight he burned all the Temples (a) Strabo of Afia except the Ephefian, out of indignation at his late bad successe, and lib.14. amongst the rest the Oracle of Didymean Apollo amongst the Branchidans, was very gracious, into rebellion against his brother. But Xerxes coming to the knowledge of the matter fent a pitty after him, which cut him off with his Children, and all his retinue. These things happed about a year after his who because they betrayed the Treasures of their God to him, durst nor stay (b) Herodotus. behind but followed him. (b) Some say he went to Susa, others to Eebatane, (c) Diadonus. a (e) third, that by Babylon into Persia. That in his way back from Grace (d) Crefias, he (4) destroyed the Temple of Bolus in that Citie, we also read, with all the Arriagus lib. 7. other religious places of the Babylonians, taking away a Statue off that Wall Herodoling at of twelve Cubits, and all of beaten Gold, and killing the Priest who offered Strab, lib. 16.

69. Being returned to Sufa, he fell from the Mother to the Daughter too, being in love with Artanna his Daughter-in-law, whom incessionally he used constantly. She begged of him a Coat which with much art and industry Amestris his wife had made for him. By her wearing of this the Queen knew how matters went, and thence followed the destruction of the whole house of Masistes; for on Xennes his birth-day, when he used not to deny her any request, the asked Masses wife to be given up into her power, which he doing, the cut off her breatls, note, ears, lips, and tongue, and in this case fent her home. Mafifies inraged at this barbarous utage, confpired with his Children how to be revenged, and refolved to fly into Baltria, of vvhich he was Governour, then to ftir up that Province, and the Saca with whom he

CHAP. I.

Xerxes murdered.

SECT. 2. return, with which endeth the history of Herodotus the Father of history (as Cicero called him) feeing he is the most antient of all Heathen Writers now

70. The same year being the third of the 75th Olympiad, and the eighth Diodorus ad of the reign of Xerxes, a year after the finishing of the Median War, to Omen. 75, 40, 31, called by the Gracians, the Lacedamonians sent Pansanian, famous for his Thucid. ibs. Generalship at the battel of Platea, to set at liberty such Greek Cities as yet were under the Persian, who accordingly with so Gallies set fail out of Feloponnesus, and taking 20 more out from Athens, commanded by Aristides, first went to Cyprus, where he set at liberty such Towns as were yet held by Persian Garrisons, and thence to the Hellespone, where he took Byzantium, and therein many Noble prisoners of the Persians, whom he delivered to one Gangylus an Eretrian, to be kept as he pretended, to be put to death. but indeed to restore them to Xerwes. For he sent this man secretly to the King, and bargained for his daughter to be given him in marriage to betray Sparta and all into his hands. He gladly received the message, and wrote back again to him by Artabazus the fon of Pharnaces whom he fent to the Sea-Coults to hold intelligence with him, and for that purpose gave him the Government of Dafcylis, recalling Magabases who was over that Province. But Paufanias growing more infolent, hereupon was fufrected, and afterwards at length discovered, and punished for his treason, as farther is to be discovered in it's proper place.

71. In the third year of the 77th Olympiad, and the fixteenth of Xerxes, Diodorns ad Demotion beng Archon, or chief Magistrate at Athens, the Athenians made olymp, 77. choise of Cimon the son of Militades for their General, and with a conside- an. 3. rable force fent him into the Maritime Coasts of Asia, with order to relieve the Affociates, and fet at liberty fuch as were still under the flavery of Per fian Garrisons. He bends his course towards Byzantium, and took Eione and Scyrus, inhabited by Pelafgians and Dolopians, and divided the grounds thereof by lot; then casting in his mind greater designes, sailed back to the Piraus, and furnishing himself with more ships, increased his Navie to the number of 200, to which he added of the affociates 100 more, and with all this power failed towards Caria. Here all the Maritime Greek Cities revolted to him, and what did not, he subdued by strong hand, which having done, he failed to Lycia, where he had the fame fuccesse, and now requiring thips to be provided by such as had joyned themselves in society with the Athenians.

he thereby mightily increased his Navie.

72. The Persians now levied both a Land and Sea-Army, the former within themselves, and the latter out of Phanicia, Cyprus, and Cilicia, the General being Tithranstes the base son of Xerxes, who by some other is said to have only had command of the Fleet, and that Pherendates was over the Landforces, though this place by another is given to Ariomandes the fon of Gobryas. Cimon having made discovery that the Persian Fleet rode nigh to Crorus, failed thither, and with 250 thips made head against 240, whereupon ensued a sharp fight, both parties fighting with great courage and animofity, till at length the Athenians overpowerd the other, and spoiling many of their Vesfels, took about too with the men in them, the rest escaping to Land at Cyprus, the men faved themselves by flight, but the ships fell into the hands of the Gracians, Cimon not contented with this Victory, failed towards the Land-Army of the Persians, then lying upon the River Eurymedon. To de- Iden ibid. Land-Army of the Verifams, then lying upon the River Eurymaans. 10 de-*Diodonis in*ceive the Enemy, he put his most valiant man, aboard those Vessels lately taprins.
ken in the fight, adorned and clothed after the Perssan fashion, so that Paspenusl. 1. the Persians not doubting at all but that it was their own Fleet, kindly wel- Frontinus Stra comed these counterfeits as their friends. Hereby Cimon received as such, tag, lib, ult. landed his men by night and fell upon the Enemies Camp, whence enfued cap, ult, exemple great fear and tumult, his men presently killing all they meet, and amongst the rest Pheredates Nephew to the King by his brother. Of the common fort many were flain, others forely wounded, and shortly all put to flight, yet they knew not by whom, not suspecting the Gracians to have any Land-

Army and therefore concluding themselves surprized by the Pifidians upon SECT. 2.

73. Suspecting therefore this storm to come from the continent, they betook themselves to their ships, and the Moon then not shining, and the night being very dark, the error was the more increased, so that nor discerning any thing they ran upon their own ruine, and great flaughter was made of them on all fides. All things being thus in confusion, the Gracian General fearing the straggling of his Soldiers too far for booty, according to former order, that when he fet out a Light they should all come back to that place, gave out that fign by the ships, upon fight of which they withdrew themselves thither. Notwithstanding these two Victories, which in some sence seemed to excel those of Salamina and Placaa, being fought on the same day, yet would he add one thing more as a supplement to them. Understanding that 80 Phanician ships (expected as Plutarch saith, by the Navy at Eurymedon, which was Plutarch ibid. the cause why he set upon it so soon, being unwilling they should joyn) to be arrived at Hydrus, he failed hastily thither, where as yet the news had not arrived, but now the Phanicians suspecting the truth, and thereby discouraged, he eafily overcame, took and funk all their ships, and therein the greatest part of themselves miscarried. Hereupon ensued a certain agreement be-74. The next thing confiderable concerning Xerxes, is his death, placed Diodorus ad in the fifth year after the former transactions, by Diodorns. There was one O'yop, 78, 22, 4 Artabanus an Hyrcanian by birth, of great power about him, as Captain of Juliulib. 3. his Guard, who confulted about making him away, and transferring the cap. 1.

Kingdom to himself, and for that purpose inveagled Mithridates the Eunuch Ciesias. the King's Chamberlain, by whom being fer in by night with his feven fons, they strangled him in his bed. Hee reigned 21 years, or 20 with odd moneths, though some there be that cut off nine years from that number. Their ground is, for that Themistocles the Athenian being banished his ulhn. Country, came to Artaxerxes, then the new King of Persia, according to Thucydides, so that Xerwes must at that time have been dead. Now the same Author placeth this flight of Themistocles betwirt the Siege of Naxus which the Athenians subdued, and the former exploits of Cimen, so that his Expedition must have happened also not in the dayes of Xerxes as we have fixed it according to Diodorus, but in the reign of Artaxerxes his successor: and Enfebins placing the flight of Themisfocles in the fourth year of the 76th Olympiad (though Diodorus in the second of the 77th) hence it must follow, that the beginning of the reign of Artaxerxes must be placed higher by near to nine years. The authority of that grave Author is in no wife to be despited, yet notwithstanding, this shortning of the reign Xerxer which must necessarily follow, is not agreeable to the testimony of other Writers: especially it is to be considered what difficulty will arise hereby to the Chronology of the facred flory, it being most probable, that the seventy weeks of Daniel commencing in the seventh year of Artanerses, end at the death of Jesus Christ; which cannot be, if their beginning be to be assigned nine years higher. This may incline us to believe, that some reason Diodorus had (who could not but have opportunity to see and compare several histories) not to follow Thucydides, and make us rather subscribe to the number of years by general consent ascribed unto the reign of Xerxes.

Еė

SECT

Provinces, and carrying all things with much moderation and Juffice, gained great Authority from his subjects. In the mean while the Egyp iaus hearing

210 SECT. 3.

14 Chron.

to death,

SECT. III.

From the death of Xerxes, and the beginning of Artaxerxes Longimanus, to the death of Artaxerxes Mnemon, containing the svace of 103 years.

I. TERXES. left three fons, Darius, and Arraxer wes, both of them at Diodorus ibid. the time of his death refident in his Court, and Hyftaspes, who was absent in his Government of Battria. Artabanus having murdered their see Jullin,

Father, presently in the dead time of the night went to A taxerxes, and made him believe that his elder brother Darius had made him away, out of ambition to reign himself, counselled him to provide for his own tafety and

Artaxerxes. honour, before he should establish himself, and offered him the guard to rid him of him, whereby he being perfwaded, fent and flew his brother. When this was done. Artabanus called his fons together, telling them this was the time of obtaining the Kingdom, and drew his sword with an intention now also to kill Artaxerxes. But he being onely lightly wounded, laid so about him, that he flew him upon the place, as we have it from one; though others with more reason defer the time of Artabanus his death, to whom also feven moneths in the Empire are attributed by * Enfebius. 2. It is probable, that for that time the treason of Artabanas not being discovered, or for some reasons winked at, he might by a Vicegerency govern the Kingdom. By his means came Artaxerxes to it in his youth, a Prince of a great spirit, and yet of a mild nature, Sirnamed Mantbxesp, or Longimanus, because his right hand was longer than the other, in the fourth year of the 78th O/ympiad, or in the beginning of the 79th, Lyfitheus being then Archon at Athens. A. M. 3540, 463 years before the birth of Christ. Within a while Artabanus laid in wait for his life also, communicating his design to Megabyzas, who had married the daughter of Xerxes, and for her loose life was fallen into a discontent, Megabyzus swore secrecie as well as he, but revealed the whole matter, fo that Artabanus finding not the same fuccesse as in his other treasons, was sent the same way, and by the same means with which he intended to dispatch Areaxerxes. Now came out the whole truth concerning Xerxes and his fon Davins, and Spamitres (or Aspamitres) the Eunuch, who was accessary to the murders, was tortured to death. Tustin telleth us, how the King fearing the number, and power of Artabanus his Sons, commanded his Soldiers to be ready armed the next morning, both for a muster, and to exercise them. Amongst the rest appeared he according to his place, with whom Artaxerxes defired to change his coat-armour, pretending his was too fhort for bign, which to do, he first putting his off, the King took the advantage and ran him thorow with his fword.

3. After his death, his party being strong, great troubles ensued, which ended at length in the destruction thereof, three of his sons falling in fight, and Megabyzus who opposed them being sorely wounded, for whom now great lamentation was made through the Court, rill at length he escaped the danger by the skill and industry of Apollonides the Physician, native of the Island Cos. The Battrians also, according to Cresias, revolted, with another of the King's Officers named Artabanus, who feemeth to have had fome other command than over Baltria. For we are told elsewhere, that Hyftaspes the fon of Xerxes was Satrapas or Governour of that Province, and thence may almost conclude him to have been the principal cause of the revolt, out of indignation that being the fecond brother, the youngest of all the three should be preferred before him. Two battels were fought in this quarrel, in the latter of which the wind being full in the faces of the Baltrians, fo disturbed them, that thereby Areaxerxes became Victor, and reduced all that Coun-Bathia recove try into obedience. Areaxernes having thus revenged his Father's and Bro- Diodonus as ther's death, and brought Areabanus and his complices to condign punish- Olymp, 79 441 ment, and recoverd Baltria, fetled the affairs of his Kingdom. He took Thurydina of the death of Xerxes, and in what disturbance the affairs of the Persians were, out of defire to recover their liberty, hearkned to the Counfel and perswasions of one Inarm King of Libya, the son of Pfammerichu, so that the greater part of the Countrey revolted, and making him their Prince, sent The Egyptians about to crave aid, and amongst others to the Athenians. They thought it their interest to impair all wayes possible the interest of Persia, and concluding it not amisse to get some sooting in Egypt, resolved upon sending three hundred ships, and prepared for the serting of them forward with all earnestnesse. Artaxerxes hearing on the other hand how things went in Egypt, determined to overmatch the revolters in provisions for the War, and for that end levied Forces throughout his Dominions, Rigged his Fleet, and omitted nothing requifite for an expedition of that moment. 4. He thought first of going down himself, but being overruled by his friends fent Achamenides his brother, according to Ciefias, but according to Diodorss, Achemenes the fon of Darius, and his great Uncle, with an Army of above 300000. faith Diodorns, or 400000 foot, and 80 ships, who marching as far ras the River Nile there pitched his Tents, refreshed his Souldiers, and prepared all things for a battel. The Egyptian affilted by the Libyans expected the Athenian Fleet, which at length arrived, and gor possession of the River. Presently after this a Land battel ensued, in which, though the Persians for a time prevailed by their multitudes, yet the Athenians, who were now acquainted with their manner of fighting, preffing fore upon that Wing with which they joyned, did fuch execution as put it to flight, at which all the rest out of fear betook them to their heels. Great flaughters were then made in the perfute, the greatest number of the Barbarians fell, and the reft betook themselves to a Fort called White-wall, whither the Athenians perfuing, took two parts of Memphis, and belieged them in the 3d division colled by that name, of 400000 that came into Egypt, Cresias writeth 100000 to have been flain, and with them their Captain, killed by the hands of Inurus, whose body was sent back to Artaxerxes. That Achamenes the fon of Darius was flain with many Persians, * Herodotus tells us * Lib.7. cap. 82.

BOOK II.

The Persians defeared.

5: Antaxe xes understanding what bad successe his affairs had in Egypt, Diodorus ad and knowing the main blow to have been given from the Abenians, fent Olynp, 19.00. 3.

Magabyzins with a great fumme of money to Lacedamonto him that State Thursd, at far. Megabyzus with a great summe of money to Lacedamonto hire that State più, to make War upon them, and give them something to do at home, to divert them from the affiltance of his Rebels. The Lacedamonians vivould not be bribed to fall out with Athens, and refused to hearken to any thing else the Ambassador offered on his masters behalf, so that he recalled him home, and gave in charge to Megabyans the fon of that Zopyrus vvho recovered Bacyton to Darins, to prepare for another expedition, with whom he also joyned Artabacus, making choise of them both out of respect to their great valour, and skill in Military matters.

They by the Spring having got together an Army of (above 300000 men, Diodorus ad faith Diodorns, 200000 onely faith Ctesian) marched down into Cilicia, Olymp. 80. an. 1, Where, and in Phanicia they rested their men, and caused the inhabitants of Thusyd. chele places, together with the Cyprians, to provide a Navy, which being done, to the number of 300 ships, they furnished them with the ablest Souldiers, and all forts of Weapons, and what soever was requisite for a Sea-fight, and in this preparation together with the exercifing, and training of their men, spent shey almost all the Summer. In the mean while the Athenians laboured to fform the Whise-wall wherein the Persians were belieged, but they made such effectual refisfance as they kept them out all this year. When Winter was over, Megabyzus and his Colleague led down their Army through Syria and Phanicia, the Navy Coasting all along not fir off; and at length came to Mamphis, where the fear of them presently soosed the siege of their Countrey-men, whom joyning to themselves they gave battel to the Egyptians and Custan SECT.3. their Associates. Many fell on both sides , but most of the Egyptians ; at length Megabyzus wounded Inarus in his Thigh, and put him to flight, who betook himself to Byblus, a Town situate in an Island of Nile, called Prosepitis, and with him fuch Greeks as had escaped the fight, after which the Egyptians returned into obedience, making their peace with Megaby-

GHAP. I.

200

Egypt recovered.

212

6. Megabyzus perfuing them, befieged the place, which yet was fo de- Thucyd lib. 1. fended that they held it out a year and fix moneths in despight of him. The Died, Ibid, Athenian Fleetlay in the River before the Town, which the Persians at Ctesias, length confidering, and how it was possible by Ditches to drain the water, and derive that course thereof another way, set about it, and so drained the Chanel that the Island was now joyned to the Main, and the ships rested on dry Land. Now Diodorus faith, the Egyptians forfook their confederates, and returned to obedience, which the Athenians understanding, and how their ships by this stratageme of the Enemy were rendred uselesse, burnt them all, and nothing afrighted with fo great a danger in which they were involved, called upon one another with exhortations not to commit any thing unworthy of their former noble archievements, so that excelling those their Countrey-men if possible, who lost their lives at Thermopyla, they resolved to fight. The Persian Commanders seeing their courage, and considering their own losses already great, having lost many thousands, though they had recovered the Island, yet gave them there terms to return with fafety out of Egypt. Their number being something above 6000. they returned home by Cyrene above their expectations, having confumed fix years in this War to no good purpole, Inarus taken and Crucified; Artaxerxes then recovered all Egypt except some fenny place, and the fiercenesse of the people, could not be reduced into order.

In the mean time, whilest the Ashenians travelled homewards, came 50 Thuryd, ibid. ships more to their relief, which being utterly ignorant of what had passed, took up their harbour at Mende fium, one of the mouths of Nile. Here they were fet upon by the Persians on Land, and the Phanicians by Sea, and lost most of their Vessels, a few onely escaping home, and such was the end of this expedition of the Athenians with their affociates into Egypt.

parts, near which Amyreaus reigned, who by reason of the difficulty of the

7. Arraxerxes in the seventh year of his reign made a decree in the be- Efra 7.13. half of the Jews, that who oever of them would, might go up with Ezra to Jerusalem and inhabit it. He and his Counsellors contributed much Treafure, and gave them liberty to Collect what they could, and commanded his Treasurers beyond the River Euphrates to furnish him yearly with what he wanted, as far as 100 Talents of filver, 100 measures of Wheat, 100 Baths of Wine, 100 Baths of Oyl, and Salt without measure, for the sacrifices and other uses, according to the discretion of Esra. He commanded that all things should be done according to the mind and will of the God of heaven, lest his anger might break out against the Kingdom of him and his sons: the Priests and Levites he made free from all impositions, and gave power to Eldras to constitute Judges and Governours over the people, for the setlement of the Politie or Commonwealth.

8. Now though here in this Edict be no expresse mention of repairing the Walls of Ferusalem, or of the Request of Esrain that behalf, yet is it probable enough that he would defire it, because of the often incursions of their Enemies, the Samaritans, and others, neither could their habitation in the Citie be secure, nor the work of the Temple go on with safety and in what could all that Treasure be spent but in Fortifications? So that we may even conclude sufficient Licence and Authority to be included in this Decree, and that Efra began to build the Walls, but was either hindred by other occasions, or the negligence of the Jews, or (more probably) the molestations of their Enemies; who because the Licence was not expressed, took thence occision to interrupt the work till thirteen years after it was renewed, and perfected by the procurement and industry of Nehemiah, who obtained a confirmation rather of the former Edict, than any new Decree; So though Syrus had first of all granted Licence for the rebuilding of the Temple, yet SECT.3 because the work was hindred by the Enemies of the Jews, there was need of another Edict granted out by Darius. As the decrees of these two Kings were in effect the same, so also those were onely put in execution afterwards by Nehemiah, because the execution of it, as to the rebuilding of the Walls, was either remitted by negligence, or by malice of the Bor-

9. If so, the beginning of the seventy weeks of Daniel, fitly may be taken hence, ending most probably in the death of our Savious Jesus Christ, Seventy Daniel 9, 24. weeks faith the Angel, are determined upon thy people, and upon thy hely Citie, to finish the transgriffion, and to make an end of fins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousnesse, and to seal up the Vision and Prophecy, and to anoint the most holy. Know therefore, and understand, that from the going forth of the Commandment, to restore, and to rebuild Jerusalem, unto the Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks, and shreefcore and two weeks : and the street shall be built again, and the Wall, even in troublous times. And after 62 weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself: and the people of the Prince that shall come, shall destroy the Citie and the Santtuary, and the end thereef (hall be with a Flood, and unto the end of the War desolations are determined. And he shall confirm the Covenant with many in one week; and in the midft of the week he shall cause the Sacrifice and the Oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even untill the consummation, and that determined shall be powred upon the desolate. Thus the Oracle, in which is contained a Prophecy concerning the rebuilding of Jerufalem, and the coming of Christ, who should bring unconceivable benefits along with him, and yet at length be put to death, not for himself, but others, and this should be all accomplished within 70 weeks of years, which contain 490. Lastly, it foretels, that for that horrible fin of the Tews in murdering the Messian, they should lose both Principality and Priest-hood, and be punished with perpetual Exile, and the utter and unreparable desolation of the

10. Many are the opinions concerning the beginning and end of these feventy weeks amongst Chronologers. Some begin them in the first year of the Empire of Cyrns, and end them in the Nativity of Christ. Others fetch their rife from the second of Darius Nothus (Successor to Artaxerxes) and conclude them with the destruction of Jerufalem, by Time Vespasian. Some make them Commence from the 20 of Arraxerxes (when Nehemiah obtained another Decree of him) and to conclude with the passion and death of Christ; and others will have them begin in the 20th year of Artaxerxes Mnemon, and end in the defolation of the Citie by the Romans. But many there are who rejecting all these, with best reason, fix the beginning of them in the seventh of Artaxerxes Longimanus, and their conclusion in the death of Christ, in which termination most of the Learned, both ancient and modern, xI. For if we seriously consider the account of time, and judge of it ac-

The beginning cording to the best approved Authors, the three former opinions will be found of Daniel's fe- either to exceed, or come short of the number. From the beginning of the venty weeks. Persian Empire to Christ's Nativity passed about 530 years. From the second of Darius Noshus indeed to the destruction of Terusalem, near upon 490 years intervened; but concerning any Edict made by that Prince, there is not a word in Scripture. From the 20th of Artaxerxes Longimanus to the death and passion of Christ, are found 476, or 477, which come too short by thirteen of the 490. and betwirt the twentieth of Artaxerxes Mnemor, and the destruction of Jernfalem, are found but about 450, which come far short of the true account; as also the Chronology of such as would fetch the rife of the 290 from the first of Darius Medus; and the second or fixth of Darius the son of Hystaspes. And although the Angel mentioneth the pu214

cimon dieth

in Cyprus.

SECT. 3. nithment to be inflicted on the Jews, yet doth he not comprise it in the ago years, the end of which he fignalizeth by the annointing and Jufferings of the Maffins, but affigneth half a week or of feven years for the accomplishment of those plagues, which in such a quantity of time were to be inflicted upon

12. But if we reckon from this feventh of Artaxerexes Longimanus Vide Ludovic, down by his Successors in the Persian Empire, the Peolomies of Egype, after las in Chien. that of Alexander the Great, and then by the Affamonaans or Jewish Prin- Satra. ces till we come at length to Herod the Great, and so to Chrift, the just number of 290 we shall find accomplished at his death, with such small difference, as is pardonable to fo many Authors handling fo many things. Or if we reckon by the years of the Olympiads and the building of Rome, we shall find Christ to have died in the 490th year after the promulgation of this decree. Theseventh year of Artaxerxes Longimanus fell in with the second and third of the 80th Olympiad, according to Eusebius, and the 295, or 295 th of the City, from which continuing to the fecond year of the 202d Olympiad, and the 785th of the City (in which Christ was crucified) 289 years or 290 are precifely found; so that farther we shall not enquire about these feventy weeks, having therein already facisfied what this defign and work requireth, leaving the further enquiry thereof to the studious Reader, and the iudgement to the Learned.

13. In the fifteenth year of Artaxerxes the Athenians having recalled Thucyd, lib.1, Cimon, whom for ten years they had banished by the Offracism, fent him Diodorus ad with a Fleet of 200 Sail against Cyprus subject to the Persian. Sixty of 21mp, 81, 44 these ships he sent into Egypt.cothe aid of Amricans, who still was up in the marifues, and with the reft he fee upon Cisisum a Town in the Hand. At this time were Ariabazus and Megabysus still Generals of the Porces of cimons. Persia: the former lay with 300 ships in the Road of Cyprus, and the other with a Land-Army of 300000 men quartered in Cilicia. Cimon when he had belieged Citium fent some messengers to Delphos to enquire something of the Oracle, but ere they got to their journeyes end, he died before the place, either of ficknesse, or by some wound, both which are affirmed. When he faw he flould die, he counfelled his men forthwith to depart, and conceal his death, and they doing to, it hapned that neither the Enemy, nor Affociates knew anything of it. At this time came back the Fleet fent into Agnu, to that all joyning together again, they failed to Salamine a Town in Cyprus, where they fought with the Phanicians and Cilicians, who were come to aid their friends of Cyprus. In a Sea-fight they funk many of their Veffels, took too with the men in them, and pursued the rest as far as Phanicia. The Persians with that part of the Fleet which yet remained, fled into Cilicia, where Megabysus lay, but the Athenians followed them with speed, and landing fell upon them, and making great flaughter, amongst the rest flew Anaxierates the Sea-Captain, who most gallantly fought whilst life lasted. Then the Greeks victorious got them to their hips and failed home.

14. The King underfunding what loffe he had received in Cyprus, called a Diodorus ad Council to deliberate what should be done thereupon, at which, when all was Olymp, sullan confidered, it was resolved that it was requisite to procure a Peace if possible. and 4. He wrote then to his Captains about Cyprus, to make peace upon as good terms as might be; according to which order Artabazus and Megabyzus fent to Athens to treat about it. The Athenians not being averie from hearkning to them, both fides fent their Commissioners with full power to conclude; at which time also the Argives sent to Arraxorxes to demandiof Herod, lib. 7. him whether the confederacy into which they entered with his Father remained, or they were accounted by him as Enemies; to which he answered, that he did not doubt of it's continuance, and as for his part he accounted no City more friendly to him than that of Argos.

The Articles of Peace concluded with the Athenians were, That all the Greek Cities in A sia should be free : though in the Peacewith Lacedamon it Plutarth & was agreed they should be under the Persian; that the Persian Generals should prins.

DOOK

not come within three dayes journy of the Sea, that none of the Persian Subiects should come with a long ship between the Cyanian and Chelidonian Islands. The Athenians on the other part took an Oath, not to invade the -King's Territories. For the joy conceived about this Peace, they built an Altar of Peace, and graced Callias the principal of the Embassie with the greatest honours. Cimon was dead, and with him in a manner the true gallantry of the Greekish Nation; for none of their Captains after him did any Diod, ad Olymp. thing to purpose against the Barbarians (as they termed all except themfelves) but being drawn by their Orators to intestine differences, and none after him being left to take them up, they fell one upon another, and so afforded an happy occasion to the Persian to breath himself, and for a good time to effect his own security with the impairment of their interest. For though Agesilans afterwards (as will be seen) passed over his Army into Asia, and made a short War with the Persian Commanders on the Sea-Coasts, yet without doing anything of much confequence, was he recalled by Seditions at home, leaving the Persian Officers behind him, who exacted impositions from the Cities confederate with Greece: whereas whilst Cimon was in command, nor fo much as a Carrier appeared in these quarters, nor an Horse came within 400 furlongs diffant from the Sea. 15. In the twentieth year of Artaxerxes, Nehemiah his Cup-bearer the Nehem 1. fon of Hachaliah the Tew received a message, that the remnant of the Cap- 11, &c.

tivity left in Judan were in great affliction and reproach: that the wall of ferusalem was broken down, and the gates thereof burnt with fire. Because of this he wept, fasted, and mourned certain dayes, and praying to God to make taineth leave the King favourable to him, obtained to be fent with ample commission to to repair Jeru- build up the walls. Now was no new Edict promulgated in behalf of the Jews, which had been done sufficiently thirteen years before by the consent of the Princes: onely letters were written to the Keeper of the King's Forest. to furnish Nehemiah with wood sufficient for the building of the gates and walls of the City, for the Temple, and an house for himself; and the Governours beyond the river were ordered to convey him over till he came into Tudah. By virtue of this authority he came to Ferufalem, and notwithstanding the indignation and opposition of the Enemies of the Jews, by his great diligence and valour, finished the work of the wall in 52 dayes. From the new Moon of the moneth Nifan, which followed this repairing of the walls, to that new-Moon of the same moneth in which Christ suffered, passed 475 Julian years, which make up 490 Lunar years, confisting each of twelve Lunar moneths. This being not without a providence, that as from the going out of the decree to the death of Christ intervened 490 Solar years; to also from the rebuilding of the walls to his death, should intervene so many consisting each of twelve Lunary moneths. This gave occasion to many eminent men both Antient and Modern to follow the opinion of Africanus, in placing the beginning of the 70 weeks in the twentieth year of this King, and concluding them with the death of Christ: although he reckoneth from that time to the fifteenth of Tiberius 475 years; whereas there are to be accounted but 472; and Christ died not in the fifteenth year of his reign, but was then bartizéd.

16. Nehemiah not thinking it sufficient to repair the walls whilst the frame Nehem, 7. of the State was out of frame, restored both the Ecclesiastical and Civil Po- &c. lity thereof. Taking notice how all ranks of men, and especially the Priests were out of order, no certainly being of their Pedigrees; he caused to be fought for, and read, the Register of those who returned with Zorubbabel, from which who oever could not prove his descent from some Priestly Family was cast off from the Priesthood. Twelve years staied he at Forusalem, governing with great moderation, and felf-denial, and reforming abuses both in Religion and the State. The Rulers of the People dwelt at Jerusalem, the rest of the People cast lors to bring one of ten to dwell therein, for that it was little inhabited, and nine parts to dwell in other places, the People bleffing all such as willingly offered themselves to dwell in Ferusalem. Then redieth.

Artaxerxes

Ochus:

.7 /

turnd he to the King, from whom he yet obtained leave to come again into Fudah, where he seemeth to have lived untill the fixteenth year of Darius Nothus, in which the first part of the seventy weeks endeth, confisting of 49 years, viz. feven weeks, which are thought to be those of which the Angel spake, that the street should be built again and the wall, even in troublous

17. After Artaxerxes had made peace with the Gracians, he fell into tivil and intestine broils with Megabyzas, who had done him such service in Ægypt and elsewhere, if credit be given to Ctesias, from whom we have a relation of these transactions. This Megabyzus, after he had quieted Agipt, and committed it to the Government of Sartamas, departed thence and went to the King, leading along with him Inarm and some Greekish prisoners, with Megaby- after he had obtained a promise from him that no punishment should be inflicted on them, though Amytis (or rather Amestria) the King's Mother had To favo upon him to deliver into her hands not onely them, but Megabyzas himself her son in Law, being inraged for the death of Achamenes, who in the former Expedition was flain by the Ionians. For five years he endured her importunity without yielding, but at length being wearied and overcome, he gave up the Greeks and Inarus into her power. His body she nailed overthwart to three crosses, and beheaded so of the Greeks, which were all she could take. That Inarus was crucified Thucydides witnesserh, though nothing of this time or manner; and Herodottus reporteth, that his fon Thanny Lib. 3. cap. 19.

ras was restored by the Persians to the Principality of his Father.

18. Megabyzan being forely moved with the usage of his prisoners, concealed his displeasure for a time; but getting leave to depart to his Government in Syria, whither he had privately sent some Greeks beforehand, broke out into open Rebellion, and got an Army rogether of 150000 men. Against him then was fent Ofris with 200000, who joyning battel with him wounded him in the thigh, but received two wounds from him, one in his thigh and the other in his shoulder, with the anguish whereof, and losse of blood, he fell from his Horse and was taken prisoner; and though his men well behaved themfelves, yet were they overthrown, and Megabyzus getting the Victory used him very courteously, and sent him back to the King who defired it. After this was fent more forces, commanded by Mexistenes Nephew to Artaxerses. by his Brother Artarius the Governour of Babylon. He also giving battel to Megabyzes, was wounded by him both in shoulder and head though not mortal-

19. Things going thus, Artarius dealt with him by Messengers, then Artoxares the Eunuch Governour of Paphlagonia, and Amestris also advised him yet to be reconciled to the King, afterwards Artarius himself, Amytis his wife, and Artoxares (now twenty years of age) were fent to him to perfwade him to go to him : Being perswaded, after his return the King signisted to him by a message, that he freely pardoned him all that was past, but going on a time a hunting with him, when a Lyon fet upon the King, as he raifed himfelf up Megabyzus flew him, whereat Areaxernes was in a great rage that he had stricken him before he could touch him, and commanded his head to be cut off. But by the intercession of Amestrie, Amytis, and others, his life was spared, yet was he banished to Cyrea, a Town upon the Red Sea, and Artoxares the Eunuch into Armenia for speaking freely to the King in his behalf.

ly, and being put to flight Megabyzus obtained another famous Victory.

Five years he then continued in exile, at the end of which feigning himfelf to be a Pifagas (which in the Perlian tongue fignifieth a Leper at whom no man might come) he fled away and came to his wife Amyte at his own house, by whom scarcely being known, he was by her means and the help of Amestris reconciled once again to the King, who made him eat at his own table as formerly, and so continued in great favour till his death at 76 years of age, for which the King was much troubled.

20. Whilst the Gracians were busie with one another in the Peloponnesian War, of which now several years had passed, Areavernes sene Areaphernes a Per Gan

Persian to the Lacedamonians, with a Letter written in Affrian Characters, Sect. 2 in which, amongst other things, he defired to know plainly of them how they flood affected, for that he was utterly ignorant of what they thought, many Ambaffadours coming, and no one of them agreeing with another, wherefore he defired that if they intended to declare themselves, they would fend some of their own back with Artaphernes. What was effected hereby is not known, but we find elsewhere, that the Lacedamonians entred into a League known, but we find elsewhere, that the Lacedamonians entred into a League with him in one main matter, contrary to that formerly made with the Aine- Olymp, 84, an. 3. nians. For whereas it was provided first in the one, that the Greekish Cities in Asia should be left to their own liberty, in the other they were exprestly left under his Dominion; fuch influence had then the Civil Wars of Greece upon the matters of Asia; perhaps because the Lacedemonians were jealous of the Ionians, as the Colony of their adversaries the Athenians, who, it not now, entred into War with them, were much suspected, jealousies abounding betwixt them. Not long after this Meffage, Areaxer tes died , having Al Olymp 884 reigned according to Diodorus fourty years compleat, according to Sulpi- at. 4.

cius Severus 41. but after Ctesias 42. amongst which opinions 'ris probable that he died in the beginning of the 42 year, after the death of Xernes, in the second year of the 89 Olympiad. A. M. 3582. 421 years before the birth of Christ.

21. Artaxerxes had onely one legitimate fon by his wife Damaspia, Ciclias in Exnamed Xerxes, but 17 by Concubines, amongst which were Sogdianus, Peofic. Ochus, and Arfites. Xerxes succeeded his father, but was flain by Secundianus, as he was drunk, in the 45th day after his death. Secundianus then became King, but causing Bagorazus the Eunuch to be stoned for something done about his fathers body, incurred the displeasure of the Army, which because of this, and his brothers death, could never be taken off by all the gifts he bestowed on them. Being jealous of his brother Ochus, whom his father had made Governour of the Hyrcanians, he fent for him; but he refused to come, and so did several times, till he had got a considerable Army. For Arberina General of the horse revolted to him, then Arxanes the Viceroy of Egypt, and Artoxares coming out of Armenia caused him to take the Cidaris (or Citaris) a Cap peculiar to the Kings and Priests of Persia. Ochos thus taking the Royal Enfign and Title of King, changed his name Idem. into Dariam, and was also most commonly called Darins Nothus. By the advice of Pary fatis his wife, he entited by all means Secundianus to come to him, not sparing Oaths, or any other wayes to get him into his hands, and so far prevailed, that though Menostanes the Eunuch counselled Secundianus not to trust himself, yet he came to him, and being cast into ashes he died the fame way as Darius the fon of Hyllaspes formerly made away his Emulators, Jacobus Capa. though some think this Darius to have been the first inventor of this punish- pellius, ment, and that it is falfly ascribed by Valerius Maximus, to the fon of Hystafpes. Then reigned he alone by himself after his brother had reigned fix moneths and twenty dayes. The three Eunuchs, Artoxares, Artibarxanes, and Athons were in great power with him; but especially, he was advised by his wife, by whom he had two Children, Amistris a daughter, and Arfaces a fon (called afterwards Areaxerxes) before he came to the Kingdom. Afterwards he begot of her another son, called Cyrus, from the Sun; and others to the number of 12. But all the rest died young, except these two Ctelias. Srirs in his time.

His Children,

and his fourth fon named Oxendras. 22. After this After his own brother, both by father and mother, and Artyphius the fon of Megabyzus revolted from him. Artafyras was fent with an Army against them, who falling upon Artyphins, was worsted in two battels; but in the third overthrew him, and corrupting the Greeks that fought for him, drew away all his Company, except three Milesians; so that upon the Oath of Artaffras for his fecurity, for that Arfires could not be found, he yielded himself to the King. He was minded to put him to death, but Paryfais his wife perswaded him to spare him for a time, for Arfites seeing, him unpunished would also be moved to yield himself, and then he might cwus for his mildemea-

Ochus dieth.

Cyrus at-

death.

tempting his

The second Empire.

SECT. 3. rid himself of them both together, which accordingly came to passe, both being cast into the ashes; though Darins was hardly brought by her perswafions to make away his brother : now also Pharnacyas, who with Secundianus had flain Xerxes, was put to death, and Menostanes being apprehended fhunned the same punishment by laying violent hands upon himself.

This Rebellion was followed by the revolt of Pifarbnes the Governour of Lydia, against whom Tiffaphernes and others being fent, he mer them, having in his Army Lycon the Athenian, with such Greeks as he had brought with him, who being corrupted by the Kings Captains revolted from him, fo that with fair words he was drawn in, and carried to the King, who cast him into the ashes, and gave his Government to Tiffa; bornes, and the Cities with the regions adjoyning to Lycon for a reward of his treachery. After this followed the treason of Artoxares in great power with Darius, who conspired about killing him, and transferring the Kingdom to himfelf. For this purpose being an Eunuch, he caused his wife to make him a beard, that he might seem no other than a perfect man; but the matter being revealed by her, he was delive ed up into the hands of Parafytis, who put him to death. 23. Arfaces (afterwards called Artaxerxes) the eldeft fon of Darins, married Seatira, the daughter of Idarnes, a min of prime rank amongst the Persians; and Terituchmes the son of Idarnes, who after his death succeeded in his Government, married Amifris daughter to the King. She had a fifter named Roxana, who being very beautifull, and well skilled in shooting, Terituchmes fell in love with her, and having to do with her detefted his wife, infomuch as he refolved to murder her by the help of 300 men, with whom he practifed to revolt. Whilest he thought hereof, one Udiastes, a man in great power about him, being promited great matters if he could deliver the Kings daughter from so great a danger, slew him; but the son of this Udiastes, who was Armour-bearer to Terituchmes, and was not present at his death, after he had notice thereof curfed his father, and feizing upon the Citie Zaris delivered it up to Terituchmes his son. Then did Parysatis bury alive the Mother, Brethren, and Sisters of Torinchmes, and commanded Roxana to be cut in pieces alive. Darins would have had her to have made away Statira his daughter-in-law together with the reft; but through the insportunity of Arfaces her husband, the spared her; of which Darins cold her, that afterwards the would forely repent, as it came to passe. From the fecond year of this King, * Sulpieius Severus, and * many learn- * Hift. fatt. ed men with him, count the beginning of the feventy weeks of Daniel, end-lib.2. ing them with the defruction of Jernsalem, because the number of years do * Josephus agree, and the Angel maketh manning of these defeation, the state of years do Scaliger, Edn. agree, and the Angel maketh mention of that defolation; though nothing be Livelens, spoken in any place concerning any going out of a Decree during the reign of Junius, this Prince, from which those weeks must needs have commenced. They must needs allow the work now to have been carried on by the sollicitation of the Prophets Haggai and Zathariah, which had been interrupted for 115 years, ever fince the second year of the return of Zerubbabel and Jestina, at which time they began to build. But now at this time, and before this, lived Malachias the last of all the Prophets, who exhorts not the people to the building of the Temple as the others did, which is an evidence of the finithing of it before; but reprehends those corruptions which * Nehemiah in * cap, ult. his second Government had observed amongst the Jews, viz. marriages with strangers, unjust detention of Tithes, and corruption of Divine worship. And because the succession of Prophets was no more to be expected; in the later end of his Prophecie he exhorts the people to keep the Law of Mofes, until fuch time as the great Propher the M flas should be revealed, before whom John Baptist was to come, in the spirit and power of Elias. The ending of the Canon of holy Scripture is by Eusebins placed in the 32th year of Artaxerxes Longimanus. After these Prophets the Hebrews held the men of the great Synagogue to have succeeded; but the later Tews reckon the three last Prophets amongst them, and Esta as the President of the Council.

24. Against this Davius the Medes rebelled , but were after some time SECT. 3. reduced again into obedience. At this time the States of G ecce being plunged deep in the Peloponnesian War, he mide his advantage thereof as Xcoobh, Hele much as he could, fiding with the Lacedamonians against the Athenians, who lenc, 10. did him most hurt in Asia, both by their great skill and practice in Navigation, and being allied to the Ionians, whom as their Colonies they helped against him; so that much entercourse, and great transactions passed betwixt Tiffaphernes his Lieutenant, and those of Spirea, which are involved in the affairs of Greece. In the 17th year of his reign he fent his fon Cyrus (born Idem ibid. 5 fince he came to the Government) down to the Sea-side as Satrapa, of Lieu- Exped, Cris tenant, with a kind of power over the other his Lieutenants there, and Cap- lib.1. tain General of all the forces which were wont to muster at the plains of Diolorus ad Castolas: giving him in charge to affift the Lacedamonians in the War Olymp 93. against the Athenians, and by his help did they recover to the hopes of their tymp 94.22.

former fortune. When he had continued in his charge a year or two, he grew Julha, lib.s. so high that he killed his two Cousin Germans, Autobasaces and Mitraus, because they came not to him with their hands folded under their Clothes, which Ceremony was onely observed in the presence of a King. Their Parents of this complaining highly to his father, and alleging how unjust it was to connive at such practices, he sent for him to come to him, alleging he was not well, lying then incamped in the Gountrey of the Medes, against the Cadusians, bordering thereupon, who had revolted,

25. Leaving the command of the Cities, with all his Treasure, and the af xemph, ibid. figument of his Tributes to Lyfander the Spartan, he went up, taking along with him Tiffaphernes as his friend, with 300 Greeks, under the leading of Xenias the Parrhasian. His father lived not long after he came to him, whom in his ficknesse Parasysis his wife having ruled him all his life, loving Cyrus above her eldest son, urged him to leave him his Successor, as Darius A.M. 2600.

the fon of Hyffaspes did Kernes, for that he was born to him being a King, 01.93, 414. and the other but a private person. But he thinking it not just refused to do V.c. 349. ir, but left him those Cities over which he had made him Governour, and his Kingdom to Arfaces, or Areaxerxes his eldest fon, and so died after he had reigned 19 years, in the fourth of the 93th Olympiad, the 27th of the Peloponnessan War now ending. A. M. 3600. 403 years before the birth of Arfaces then, by the pleasure of his father, or his interest in the great Artaxerxes ones, obtained the Kingdom, and changed his name into Artaxerxes, being Manna firefor the excellency of his memory firnamed Mnemon. When he had made fure ceedeth, his possession, his wife Statira thinking it then time to revenge the death of ciclias. her brother, and the rest of her kindred, caused Udiastes, who slew Teritache, mes, to have his tongue drawn backwards through his neck, and cut off, and got his fon Miridater, who had delivered the Citie Zaris into the hands of Teritachmes his fon, to fucceed in his Government. Not long after his fathers death Areaxerxes went to Pasargada, there to be initiated by the Persian: Plutarch, in Priests in the royal mysteries. There was a Temple dedicated to some war- Anaxerx. like Goddesse, thought to be Diana, whose Temple he that was to be initiated entring mult put off his own Clothes, and put upon him a Garment worn by Cyrus the Great, before he came to the Empire; there was he to eat fuch a quantity of Figs, to drink Milk mingled with Vinegar, and perhaps used some other unknown Ceremonies. Whilest the King was about these things came Tiffaphernes unto him, and with him a Certain Priest, who having been appointed the instructer of his brother Cyrus had raught him the Magical Arts. He accusing him of treasonable practices, had more credit given to him, because Cyrus had resolved to set upon the King in the Temple, and killhim as he should put off his Clothes; some say he was apprehended upon this accusation, others, that he came indeed into the Temple, and being hid by the Priest, was discovered and taken.

26. The King was minded to put him to death, and out of reverence to his nooh Expedit, Family caused him to be bound in golden chains, but their mother took him cyrilib.s.

SECT-3. in her arms, wrapped him in her hair, laid her neck to his, and with great lamentations and intreaties prevailed for his pardon, and fent him back again 1dem of Xr. into his former Province of Lydia, and the Sea-coasts. When he came there, noph, Expedit, not at all contented with this command, nor so much as remembring that he cyri, lib. 1. Is pardoned was fayed by his mother's intercession, as that he was taken and bound by his brothers, burned more than ever with a defire of reigning. And to this purpose as secretly as he could gathered forces of the Greeks; and under one pretence or other, laid out for forein aid both far and near, hoping to surprise his brother, The Ionian Cities given up now into the hands of Tiffaphernes revolted to him, all except Miletm, the Inhabitants of which he finding to prachife the same, killed some, and drove away the rest, who slying to Cyrin, he befieged the City both by Sea and Land, endeavouring to reftore them. Then wrote he submissively to his brother, desiring he might have the Government of those Cities rather than Tiffaphernes, and herein he was furthered by his Mother, who lying as it were his Lieger at Court, made the best of all things. new matters. Hence was Artaxerxes deluded, suspecting nothing, but accounting these forces to be kept together against Tiffaphernes, betwixt whom and Cyrus he little regarded though there were a War, and the rather, because Cyrne sent him the Tributes due from the Cities, which Tiffaphernes had formerly kept in hishands.

220

27. Clearchus at this time being banished from Lacedamon, came to Cywho after conference with him admired the man, and gave him 10000 Daricks, wherewith he levied an Army, and passing out of Cherrones wared upon the Thracians that inhabited above the Hellespont, thereby greatly promoting the affairs of the Greek Cities, infomuch that they willingly furnished him with money to maintain his Forces Which were onely raised for Cyrus, though thus employed for a cover to the delign, and till he could be in a readinesse. There was also one Aristippus a Thessalian a guest of Cyrus, who being overpowered by his Country-men of the contrary faction, came to him, and requested him to spare him 2000 Mercenaries and three moneths pay, alleging that thereby he should be able to overcome his adversaries. He granted his request, and doubled both the number of men and fum of money, defiring him withall, not to agree with his adversaries till they two had had conference together; and so this Army in Theffalie (though not discovered) was kept on foot and maintained for him. Further he fent to Proxenss the Baotian, his friend, to bring unto him as many men as he might, under pretence of warring against the Pisidians, who spoiled his Country; and Sophaneins the Stymphalian, with Socrates the Achean, who likewife were both his Guests, to come to him with as many men as they could make, under colour, together with the banished Milesians, of making Warre upon

Tiffaphernes. 8. When he was now resolved to march up into the higher Provinces against his brother, and for that purpose must gather all his Forces together, he gave out, that his purpose was to chace the Pisidians wholly out of the Country, and so, as for that intent, affembled both his Barbarian and Gracian Troups. He commanded Clearchus with the Army he led to come unto him, Aristippus to compound with his adversaries, and fend him his Forces, and Xenias the Arcadian (whom he had appointed General of the Mercenaries that lay in Garrison in the Cities) leaving onely so many as should be necessary to keep the Cittadels, gathered those Forces together, and brought them to Sardis, being about 4000 armed Foot. He fent for those that lay before Mileim, and invited the banished men to his service, promising, if his affairs succeeded, not to give over till he had restored them, which they gladly accepted of. Proxenus came with 1500 heavy-armed and 500 lightarmed foot. Sophaneise the Stymphalian brought 1000 armed, Socrates the Achaan about 500, Pasion the Megarean 300, and as many Peltalis or Targetiers,

29. He had before this fent to Lacedamon, desiring of that State, that Olymp. 94. 41. as he had formerly aided them against the Athenians, so they would not refuse 4.

now in his need to do the same for him: boatting in his letters, that if they fent him Foot-men, he would provide for them Horses, if Horse-men, Cha-SECT.3. giots, if they had before of their own certain pieces of ground, he would give them whole Villages, and that he would not count but measure their pay to Plutarchia them. They counting it but just and agreeable enough to their own interest Atlanta. (not confidering against whom they ingaged) decreed aid to be sent to him, thinking hereby if he overcame to ingratiate themselves with him; but if Justin; lib. 5.

Artaxerxes should get the better, to excuse themselves well enough, as having decreed nothing against him absolutely. The Epheri then presently wrote to their Admiral, to do whatfoever he should command, who accordingly went to Ephessa and joyned himself with Tamos the Egyptian and Admiral to Cyrne, with whom he failed into Cilicia, and there prevailed that Syenness the Prince of that Country hindred not Cyrus as he passed by Land against his brother. Tissaphernes conceiving that these preparations were Konoph. Expegreater than firted the War against the Pifidians, with a Parry of 500 Horse dit. cpi, lib. t.

hasted to the King with all possible speed, who as soon as by him he had the intelligence, made contrary preparations. Cy mafter he had committed the Diodorus. care of Lydia to some Persians of his kndred, and given the charge of Lydia, Lolis, and the parts adjacent to Tames of Memphis his faithful friend, he presently set forwards toward Cilicia and Pissdia, it being bruted up and down that some of these people had revolted. From Sardis he marched through Lydis, and after four encampings, came 112 miles and anhalf to Colo fe, a great, rich, and well inhabited City, where he stayed seven dayes, and Menon the Thefalian came to him with 1000 armed Foot, and 500 Dologian, Enian, and Olynthians Peltasts. From thence he marched in three en- Xenoph. ibid. campings 75 miles and an half to Celane a great and rich City of Phrygia, where he rested thirty daies, & Clearchus the Lacedamonian came to him with 1000 armed Foot, and 800 Thracian Peltalts, and 200 Cretian Archers; and Sofias the Syracufian brought 1000 armed Foot, and Sophaness the Arcadian the same number. Here he also mustred the Greeks, and found them to be 11000 Armed, and about 200 Peltasts or Targetiers. 30. From Celane he marched in two encampings ten Paralangs, or thirty th up against seven miles and an half, and came to Pelia, where he stayed three dayes; and thence in two encampings 45 miles, and arrived at the Market of the Ceramanians, a City full of People, and the last in the Country of Mysia: and hence in three encampings he marched 30 Paralangs 112 miles, and reached to the Plain of Capfter, a Ciry well peopled, where he refted his Army five dayes. Here the Army made much adoe for pay, being more than three moneths behind, which he was enabled to pay them, with a moneth over, by the coming of Epiania wife to Syennelis King of Cilicia, who brought good fore of treasure with her. From thence in four encampings he proceeded 75 miles as far a Tyriaum, a City full of people, and hence in three encampings 75 miles and arrived at Iconium the last City of Phrygia, He stayedhere three dayes, and then marched in five encampings through Lycaonia 112 miles, which Country he fuffered the Greeks to spoil as Enemy. Now he fent away the Cilician Queen by the nearest way into her own Country, and with her Menon the Theffalsan and his Regiment, to make way for his passage into that Country. 31. Cyrus with the rest marched through Cappadocia 25 Parasangs, or 93 miles and an half in four dayes, and came to Dana a great and wealthy City, where he put to death two Persians for treason against himself. From hence attempt was made to break into Cilicia, but the Streights were so narrow, that one Chariot could but puffe at once, and withall exceeding fleep, fo that if refiftance was made it was impossible, which Syennesis the King was faid to be ready to make at the height of the Streights, and the Army, for that reason staid in the Plain. But the next day word was brought that he had quitted the passage, after he perceived Menon's Troops to be got into Cilicia beyond the Mountains, and heard how a Fleet of Lacodamonian Gallies were with those of Cyrus, under sail to passe from Ionia thither, under conduct of

SECT. 3.

Book II

- Tamen. Then accended he the Mountain without any opposition, from which descending, in four encampings he marched 93 miles and an half, and a me to Tarfu and a great rich City of Cilicia, where was the Palace of Syenesis, and through which runneth Cyanus, a River two hundred foot in r edth. 22. The Inhabitants thereof, except such as bought and fold, fled with the ir King to the tops of the Mountains, leaving the City to be facked with the Palace by the Soldiers, inraged for the loffe of 100 of their Companions of Menon's Regiment. Cyrus fent for the King to come to him, who refufed it, till overcome by the perswasions of his wife, and then he gave him great sums of money to uphold his Army, and received back such gifts as were accounted most honourable amongst Kings, as an Horse with a golden bit, a Chain of gold, Bracelets, a sword decked with gold, a Persian Garment, and Freedom of his Land from spoil; as also restigution of Slaves taken in spoil by the Soldiers wherefoever they could be found. Here the foldiers now imagining that they were lead against the King flatly refused to go any farther, it being, as they faid, no part of their agreement. Clearchus went about to force his men to proceed, but they, as foon as he offered to go forwards, cast stones at him and at his carriage beasts, whereby he was forced to betake himfelf to a fair and politick way, and to effect it (which with trouble enough he did) Cyrus gave our that he went against Abrocamas an Enemy of his, who lay upon the River Euphrates about twelve encampings from thence, that if he found him there, he would be revenged on him, and if he fled away they should deliberate what to do. Hereupon, though they suspected the matter, ver they refolved to hold on, and upon demanding more pay, he promifed them half as much more as formerly they had : viz. a Darick and an half instead of one Darick to every Soldier. All this while no man heard in publick they were led against the King. 33. From Tar/w in five encampings he marched about 83 miles to Islos. the last City of Cilicia, well peopled, large, and rich, and situated upon the Sea, where he remained three dayes. Hither out of Peloponnesso came to Cyrus 35 Lace damonian ships, under the command of Pythagoras, together with Tamos, who brought from Ephefus 25 of Cyrus his ships, wherewith he had befieged Miletus, and Cherifophus the Lacedamonian whom Cyrus had fent for, and who brought with him 700 armed Foot. Whilst the Army lay here, the Gracian Mercenaries that served Abrocamus, viz. 400 armed Foot revolted and came to Cyrus. From hence in one encamping he came about eighteen miles to the Streights of Ciliera and Syria, defended with a wall on each fide, betwixt which ran the River Kerfos 100 foot broad. The distance betwixt the walls was three furlongs;, admitting no passage by force, the neither way toward the Sea being narrow and fenced with strong walls, and the upper nothing but inaccessible Rocks, in either wall there being fet a gate. This paffage Cyrus suspecting to be stopped by Abrocamas, sent for his ships to transport so many men as might force it: but he upon hearing of Cyrus his coming into Cilicia, returned with all speed out of Phanicia to the King, though reported to have an Army of 300000 men. 34. From the Streights he marched in one encamping eighteen miles, and upwards, and came to Myriandrum a City of Syria, inhabited by the Phanicians, upon the Sea, being a place of traffick, where many thips of burthen then rode in the Haven. Here he remained feven dayes, and Xenias the Arcadian Collonel, with Pasion of Megara shipping themselves sailed homewards, discontented, as was thought, because Cyrus suffered Clearchus to keep their Soldiers, which refuling to go any further against the King, removed into his Camp, with intent to return into Greece. From thence in four encampings he marched 75 miles to the River Charos, 100 foor broad, which was full of great tame Fish, which the Syrians counted gods, and therefore fuffered them not to be harmed no more than Pigeons. The Villages wherein they encamped belonged to Parifatis, being affigned her for her maintenance. Thence in eight encampings he marched 168 miles to the River Enphrases.

Euphraies, whose breadth was 3 furlongs, and upon which was built the great SECT. 3 and rich Citie Thapfacus, where the Army remained 5 dayes. 35. Here it was openly declared to the Oweks, that they were led against the King, for which they were very angry with their Officers, who, they faid they were fure, knew it before, for not acquainting them fooner with the defign; and refused to shir one foot forwarder, except upon promise of as much as their Countrey-men had, who formerly waited on Cyrus to his father. He promised to give every man five pounds of filver (of the value of 14.1. 11.1. 8. d. fterling) as foon as they came to Rabjon, and to continue their whole pay, till they should be sent back into lonia, to which conditions most of them yielded, and Menon prevailing with his Regiment to passe over the River first, whitest the other were yet in consultation, thereby to gain greater f. vour with Cyrus, all the Army followed, not a man being wet above the breasts in wading over; so that this passige seemed to be miraculous, and to portend more good to Cyrus than followed, the River giving way to him, which they of Thapfacus reported never to have been passed over on foot before, but onely with shipping, which Merocamus had burnt to hinder him in the passage. Thence in nine encampings harached fifty parasangs, or 187 miles and upwards through Syria, and came to the River Araxer. Here they flayed three dayes, and made provision of victuals, and then departing thence, marched through the Wildernesse of Arabia, 130 miles in five encumpings, having Euphrates on the right hand, and proceeding through this Countrey came to the River Majea, where they stayed three dayes in making provision for the army; whence in 13 encampings they marched through the defart 90 paralangs, or 227 miles and an half, and came to the Straights.

36. Proceeding in their journey hence, they might discover the footings, and dung of horfes; for a party had been fent of about 2000. which going before the Kings Camp, burnt up the fodder, and made havock of all things profitable for ule. Now came Orontes a Persian to Cyrus , whom having fought to betray him in times paft, and pardoned by him, attempted now to do the like, but was discovered, and put to death. Marching still forward they proceeded in three encampings 45 miles through the Countrey of Babylon. In the third encamping at midnight Cyrus feet his men in order, thinking his brother to be near, and would give him battel the next morning. The Gree cians were in number 20400 Armed, and 2400 Targetiers, the Barbarians with Gyrm, were ten Myriads (or 100000) besides about 200 sythed Chariors. From hence in order of battel he marched fome twelve miles, thinking the King would have fought that day, because at the end of this half dayes journey he found a Trench cast five fathours broad, and three deep, tunning up 45 miles into the Countrey, as far as the Wall of Media, where the four Chinels begin that derived out of the River Tignis, fall into Emphrates. This Trench the King cuifed to be made after he heard that Cyrm was firrings who now passing it without any disturbance, he and all his Army were strongly perswaded that the King determined not to fight $ whence he had not so great care of his March the next day, and the third day after he advanced fitting in his Charlor: the most of his Army marched confusedly, many of the Souldiers having their Arms laid upon the wains, and carriage of beafts. 37. Now it was time, the Market was full, and the place of encamping where they should quarter was at hand, when Paragow a Persian, one of the faithfulleft of Cyris his Train was feen to come upon the four, his horse dropping with sweat, crying out in the Persian and Greek language that the King was hard by, with an huge Army, ready and prepared for fight. This news made a great confusion, all thinking they should be charged in that disorder, Cyrus leaping from his Charlor, put on his Curace, and mounting on horfback, took his Darts in his hand, and commanded the rest to Arm, and every man to take his place. Clearebus flood in the point of the right Wing , by the River Euphrases, Monon and his Regiment held the point of the left, and Creas himself the midst with 600 horf-men Armed with great Curaces, and Tafes, and all of them with Casks, except he alone, who flood waiting the

225

cyrus flain.

CHAP. I.

The Persian Empire.

224 SECT-3. fight with his head unarmed, according to the custom of Persia. The King had with him 90 Myriads (or 900000) and 150 Chariots, having on both fides lythes prominent, and bearing straight forth from the Axle-trees, and fome from the former feat of the Chariot with their points turned toward the ground, that they might cut in pieces what soever they met and struck upon: His purpose was to send them with high speed against the Ranks of the Gracians, to break and rent them afunder.

38. The Kings Army came on an equal and flow pace, in great filence, quietnesse, and order, which amased, and discouraged Crrm, and the Graci-Enemies battel, because the King was there, saying, that if he were over-

Artaxerxes and ans, little expecting any such thing. Cyrus now galloping up to the right cyrus joyn bar. Wing, cried out to Clearchus to lead the Gracians against the middest of the come, there would be no more for them to do. Clearchin feeing the middest of the battel, and hearing from him that the King, by reason of his multitudes which stretched out the body, was far without the point of the left Wing of the Gracian Phalang, would not for all that draw away the right Wing from the River, fearing to be confronted, and incompassed on both fides: but answered, he would have a care that all things should go well. The word was betrayed before they joyned, fo that they were forced to change it to Inpiter the Saviour, and victory, after the giving of which the Gracians finging the Paan, and running on with a shout, the Barbarians, before they came within an Arrows shot turned their horses and fled, the other following the Chace with all speed, and crying to one another not to haste too much, but to follow in good order. The Chariors void of Guides were carried, some upon the Enemies themselves, some upon the Gracians, who upon a forecast opened, and let them passe through, onely some were overthrown by fear, who notwithstanding were reported to have had no harm, nor yet any other Gracian in this whole fight, one onely excepted, who was firuc-

ken with an Arrow in the left fide. 39. Cyrus beholding this fight much rejoyced, and was now worshipped as King by those about him; notwithstanding he followed not the Chase, but ped as King. keeping by him his 600 horse, observed what the King would do, who being in the midft of his Phalang, without the point of Cyrus his left Wing, and feeing no man to fight against him on the contrary part, wound, and turned his battel to the left hand, to overwing, and encompasse in his Enemies. Cyrus perceiving it, and fearing, left coming on the backs of the Gracians he should cut them in pieces, galloped forth, and met him in front, and charging with his 600, overcame, and put to flight the 6000 that were ordered before him, and with his own hands (as was reported) flew Artagerses, one of his Generals. His 600 pursuing horly were dispersed, except a few that were left with him, for the most part such as usually fat at his Table, with which being accompanied, he espied the King, and the Troup about him, and after he had faid I fee the man, flew out directly against him, struck him on the breast, and wounded him through the Curace, as Ciesias of Gnidus the Kings Physician related, who reported also that he cured the Wound. Whilest Cyrus thus fought, one with a Datt hit him a fore blow under the eye.

> thus coping together, Cyrus was flain by the King, as his flatterers faid, as others pa & Ple by a Carian, though Ciefias Writeth his death to have hapned after the King tarth in All had withdrawn himfelf to an Hill, being first wonuded besides the eye, and then dispatched by a thrust into his left Leg, by a Caunian of a base condition, who with other of his Companions had thrust himself, it being now dark, in amongst his followers. Here he died in the battel of Cunaxa a place distant from Babylon 500 furlongs, or 60 odd miles, a man in the opinion of fuch as had acquaintance with him, of a most Kingly disposition, and most worthy a Crown of all the Perfians that succeeded Cyrus the Great. Clearchus before the fight advised him to keep himself behind the Army, and not to venture into danger, to whom he replied as one who wished him to carry himfelf unworthy a Kingdom whilest he fought for one. In the opinion of Plu-

40. The King and Cyrus with their followers in defence of either of them Xenoph, wife sarch, not so much his rashnesse (though inexcusable) as the lazinesse, not to SECT. 3. say cowardise, of Clearchus is to be condemned, who having marched so many miles for no other purpose than to place him in the Throne, not so much endeavoured his safety and Conquest, as his own ease and secu ity: The event of the fight shewed, that none of those about the King would have endured the least brunt from the Graciani, and that after they had been put to flight, and he with them, or elfe killed in the place, the victory and Kingdom must have remained to Cyrus. But this advantage was lost by Clearchus, who to placed his men that Areaxerxes could not have defired a more convenient order, on his part, they being at greatest distance from him and his Army, informuch that he neither perceived himself overcome by them, and A.M. 3607. Army, informuch that he neither perceived himtelf overcome by them, and Cyrus was fooner flain than they could reap any fruit of their victory. This V. C. 393.

Xenoph, & barrel was fought about the beginning of the fourth year of the 95 Olympiad, Phiarch, at Epanemi (or Xenanatiu) being Archon at Athens, in the third ending, or prins or in fourth beginning of Artagerses.

41. Artagerses commanded the head, and right hand of Cyrm to be cut off, and following the Chace, chanced upon his Camp, which they plundred, and took thence his Phocean Concubine, called the wife and beautifull, whole name in Her own Countrey was Mitto, but by Cyrus called Aspasia, whom the King most loved, and kept amongst his 360 Concubines. Now were he and the Gracians near four miles afunder; these 1sst giving Chace to such Enemies as food before them, as if they had been Conquerours of the whole Army; the other rifling the Camp of the Gracians, as if his Army had gained the victory. After this, both parties rallied again for a new engagement, but the Barbarians received not the Gracians, but fled with greater The Gracians speed than before. Having persued them some way, the Gracians made an Hole, and rested themselves, wondring they saw not Cyrus, being ignorant having the better in the what was befallen him. Then after fome confultation what was to be done battel, are they returned to the Camp about Supper time, where they found the most ignorant of of their other goods rifled, and especially the meat and drink, and the 400 One his Wains loaden with Meal and Wine, which Cyrus had prepared to relieve them, in case the Army should at any time be driven to want. The most of them therefore were supperfesse, having also wanted their Dinner that day: for that the King came in fight before they could refresh themselves. Thus this day ended, and together with the story the first book of the Ascent of Cyrus commonly ascribed to Xenophon as the Author. 42. The Gracians hearing of Cyrus his death were much troubled, and of xenoph, An.

fered Arians (a Persian, who followed Cyrus, and commanded his lest liba. Wing) to place him in the Throne; but he refused it, for that, as he said, there were many Persians in all respects better than he, who would never endure that he should be King. Artaxerxes sent a Message to them to lay down their Arms, and to repair to his Gate, there to submit themselves to his mercy. The Coronels were divided in their opinions concerning ir, and gave feveral answers according to their apprehensions, but Clearchus, for all a doubtfull one, viz. that if they might be accounted as his friends, they should be better friends having Arms, than delivering them up to any man; if no remedy there was but War, they should better make War with Arms, than without, after they had rendred them up. And whereas he offered them Truce, as long as they abode in the same place, but threatned War if they firred thence, he replied onely, that they would expect accordingly.

Then refolved he, after he knew Ariens his answer, and how he invited them to march back again into Ionia, for that the facrifice killed about marching against the King was not prospicious, to joyn the Army unto his, which accordingly he did, Ariam, and the Officers of the Gracians taking an Oath to be friends, confederates, and not to berray one another.

The League was entred into on this manner: They killed a Boar, a Bull, a Wolf, and a Ram; and the Gracians dipped the point of a sword, the Barbaplans of a Spear in the bloud of these beatls, being powred out into the hole

They joyn with Acieus,

death.

lownesse of a Targer,

and retreat,

tarch

SECT.2.

The King

to difmiffe

officers.

them,

and is forced

pursueth

43. The length of the journy from Ephefus in lonia to the place of the battel was 93 chicampings, 535 parafangs, 16030 furlongs, 4000 miles and Xenoph, above, which though very long, yet refolved they to take another and longer Aften, cm. way through Paphiagonia, because the former was destinute of provisions. iib. a. & Then fet they forward that way, marching more flowly for the better gather. Diodonus ad ing of necessaries, and after the King had formewhat recovered of, his wound, ann. 4. Olymp he purfued them, and pitched his Tents hard by theirs; but, with the noile of them his men were so affrighted, that lome of the nearest to them removed their Tents, and on the next day terring their men, in order for hattel, he who before had made fuch large demands, fent and offered them truce, and covenanted to let them have free passage through his Territories till they came to the Sea, and afforded them provisions for their money, which was also granted to all the Mercenaries who ferved under Ations (or Aridens) and Clearchus. Then proceeded the Greeks on their journy, and the King returned to Babylon, where rewarding those that had best deserved of him in the last battel, he judged the service of Tissaphernes to have been most eminent. therefore as a reward (amongst feveral other noble gifts) he gave him his own daughter to wife, and the government of fuch places as formerly had been under Cyrus, binding him to him thereby fo, as he proved ever most faithful to him,

44. Tiffaphernes feeing how the King was incenfed against the Gracians, promised him to destroy them all, if he were but furnished with Forges to that Tillashernee in purpose, and could but withdraw Arians from them, by whom he doubted trappeth their not but they might eafily be berfaied. The King accepting his offer, gave him leave to chuse of the most valiant of his Army as many as he would, with which he followed after, and incamping near to them, fent for Glearchus and the other Coronels to come to him, pretending he had somewhat for their good to fay to them. They with the Captains of the feveral Companies going to him, with 200 more (who went to buy Victuals) he secured the Coronels called into his Tent, and killed the Captains at the door with the other 200, of which one chanced to escape with the news thereof to the Camp. The Coronels were fent to the King, who put them all to death, except Menon. The Soldiers at first greatly terrified, having now no body left to command or lead them, by the advice of Xenophon made choice of other Leaders, amonst whom Cherifophus was chief, and he himself was one, being elected into the place of Proxenus, who being his ancient friend and guest Renount Expl. fent for him, and promifed him if he would come, to make Cyrus his friend, lib. 3. who, as he effected him, would be more to be offized than his own Country. He communicated the matter to Socrator the Philosopher and his Matter, who, for that Corns his interest feemed crosse to that of the City of Athens, feem-

The Soldiers make a new choice, in which Xcnophon is one.

ing to fland with the Lacedamonians, advised him to consult the Oracle of Delphos. Thirher he went, and enquired how he might belt accomplish his journy, to which was answered, that he must factifize to those gods to whom he ought to facrifize, which he reporting again to Socrates, he blamed him for so propounding his question, alleging he ought to have asked whether he should travel or no, and not as one resolved already to do it; but seeing it, was so, he must do as he was bidden, and accordingly he followed Cyrus to Sardis, where Proxenus prefented him to him. 15. The Gracians marching on towards Paphlagonia, were dogged at the Identitid & heels by Tessaphernes, who being affraid of the valour of desperat men, net Diederus # ver durst ingage in any battel with them, but onely flancked them, or fell in prins. upon their Rear, as he could have opportunity, and yet followed them as far as the borders of the Carduchians, after which, feeing he could not do them any confiderable hurt, he departed with his men towards Iania another way. The Carducians a warlike Nation and at Entity with the King, and much exercifed in flinging of great and maffie Hones, much disturbed the Gracians Xenoph, lib. in their passage of their Country, and in the passing the Mountains thereof Diorus. were spent seven dayes. With great difficulty and danger having passed it, they went over the River Contribuinto Armania; of which Ariabazus beto Trapezond upon the Euxine Sca.

They came

ing then Governour, entred into league with them, and suffered them quietly Sect. 3. to passe; but in travelling thorow the Mountains they were near all being overwhelmed in the fnow, the differring of wayes being taken away thereby The whole Army had perished also by extream cold, had they not light upon forme. Villages near hand, wherein being furnished with plenty of necessaries, they refreshed themselves. The houses stood within the ground, into which the Men descended by stairs, and their Cattel by desents made for that purpose. Having here stayed eight dayes, they journyed thence to the River

46. Having continued four dayes at this River, they marched through the Country of the Tacchi and Thafiani, by whom being opposed, they fought, and made great flaughter of them, and then feized upon their Villages, which were plentifully furnished with such things as they wanted, they there rested fifteen dayes. Thence marching through the Territories of the Chalcidenstans, in seven encampings they came to the River Harpasus, and thence coming into the Plains of the Tafoutini, they there refreshed themselves three dayes, and proceeding, in four encampings they arrived at a great City called Gymnafia. The Prince of this Country entring into a League with them, furnished them with Guides to the Sea, of which, after fifteen dayes being got up to the hill Chenius, they got a fight afar of, at which the Front shouted to for joysthat those in the Rear thinking they had been set upon by some Enemy, prepared themselves for a Fight, and there laid they a great heap of stones as a Monument to Posterity, of the spoils obtained from the Barbareans; and the immortal memory of their Expedition.

47. Then came they into the Country of the Macri, with whom they made a League, by taking and receiving a Spear, according to the custom of thele Barbarians. Having got over their Mountains they came into the Tertitories of the Geleti, where a great multitude oppoling them, they made no small slaugheer of the Inhabitants, and made great spoil, where they found a kind of Honey, of which who oever did eat, become according to the quanciry eaten, drunken, mad, or as dead, but the next day at the fame hour return ed to their right Senses, and after three or four dayes arose as having received fome Medicine. Thence in two encampings they come to Trapezond a Gracian City well inhabited, fituate upon the Envine Sea, being a Colony of the Sinopeans, placed in the Colchian Country. Here Jajon with his Companions are reported to have arrived with their thip Argos. They facrifized to Hercules, and Jupiser, and celebrated Games of Exercise, and hence Exped Cyris was Cherifophia fent to Byzanium to provide ships for the transportation of 4.5. them home, and for him here they flaied thirty dayes, but after that term he returning not, their provisions growing scarce, though they had made excursions both by Sea and Land, they put on shipboard (having obtained a supple. little thipping of the Trapezunians) the fick, all those above forty years of age, with the women and children, and passed in three dayes to Corasunta Gracian City fituate upon the Sea, being also a Colony of the Sinopeans in the Colchian Country. Here they remained ten dayes, and taking a muster, found 8600 remaining of those that ascended with Cyras into Persia, the rest being consumed by the Enemies hand, or Snow, or sicknesse. Here also they divided the money that arose out of the sale of Captives, the tenth part of which the Officers took into their hands, being severed as an offering to be made to Apollo and Diana of Ephofau; every one keeping and preferving a

1: 48. From Corafuni they came into the Country of the Mesynecans, the verieft. Barbarians, they had met with in the whole journy, which they passed by force in eight encampings, and in three more that of the Tibarenes through which they came to Cotypra a Gracian Colony alfo of the Sinopeans. Thus far the Army marched on foot, the whole length of the retreat from the place of the battel in the Babylonian Territories inther, being 122 encampings, 620 paralangs, 10820 furlongs, 1352 miles and something more. At Cospera they continued so dayes, making encufflons upon the neighbouring

SECT. 3. people of Puphlagonia, Then the Heracleans and Synopeans, a Colonwork the Milesians in Paphlagonia, furnished them with shipping, into which they put themselves and their baggage, and sailed away, Cherisophus meeting them with a few Vessels. Holding on their course they failed by Jason's shore, Diedorus. wherethe Ship Argo is faid to have anchored, and by the mouths of the Rivers Thermodon, Halys, & Parthenius, by which after they had passed, they arrived at Heraclea a Gracian City and Colony of the Megaraans, figuate in the Territory of the Maryandens, and came to anchor near the Cherronnelus or Peninsula of Acheronsia, where Hercules is said to have fetcht the Dog Cor-berus our of Hell; the marks being there shewn of his descent, and the

49. Here the Soldiers, through the perswation of Lycon an Achaian, makdepth of the place, being more than two furlongs.

They part Heraclea.

ing unreasonable demands of money from the Heracleans, they shut their gates upon them, and provided for their own defence, which bred a fedition in the Army, so that they parted afunder. The Arcadiums and Achams being more than 4500 all heavy armed, sailed away first, having got shipping of the Heracleans, that falling fodainly upon the Bithynians, they might brevent the rest, and make the greatest prey. Cherisaphus a little before chosen General, having 1300 armed, and 700 Pelcalts, (who were the 7 bracians that followed Clearchus) marched on foot from Heraclea, and as foon as he entred Thrace, led along by the Sea-coast being now sick, and presently dead of a Medicine he took in an Ague. Xenophon with 1700 Armed, 300 Péltasts, and 40 Horse, taking shipping, landed in the confines of Thrace, and marched through the midst of the Land. With great difficulty passed they through the Country on foot, the Thracians of Afia and the Bithynians, grievoully afflicting them, till meeting together again, they refolved no more to part, and decreed it should be death for any one to move such a thing. Then came they fafe, though with great difficulty, to Chryfopolis a City in Chalcedonia, whence without much trouble some returned home, others were Xenoph. 1,7 home.

Tillapbernes. 50. The Governours of the King's Provinces through which they journved were Arrymas of Lydia, Arragamas of Phrygia, Mithridates of Lycamia and Cappadocia: of Cilicia Syenefis, of Phonicia and Arabia Dermet, of Syria and Affria Bilefis, of Babylonia Reparas, of Media Arbacas, of the Phaliens and Hefperites Teribazus, The Carduchaus , Chalybers them to the rest of the Gracian Forces, made War with them against employed by Senshes the King of Thrace; and after that Thymbro forning Diedorm.

nous of the Chaldaans, Macrons, Cholgans, Mofynecans, Coitans, and Tibarens, Were free people, and under no man's subjection. Paphlagonia was ruled by Co. vinces at their rylas, the Birbynians by Pharnabanns, the European Thrucians by Senthes. The total number of the Afcent and Defcent, was 212 encampings, $140 paralangs, 34255 furlongs, 4281 miles and more. The time of the Afcent and Descent one year and three moneths. Thus these Strangers wanting all things, ignorant of the Countries through which they passed, over precipitous Mountains, Attaight and (almost) impassable waves, notwithstanding the malice of Enemies, tharpnelle of air, and difficulty of the Soil, by the wonderful Providence of God, and fingular prudence of Xenophon, returned home into Greece, as we have it described by Xenophon himself, though the seven Books of this Expedition, notwithstanding the constant opinion of Antiquity, are adjudged by a late Learned Man (by reason of the disagreement of their manner of writing from his other works) from him, and are ascribed to Themistogenes the Syracusian, whom elsewhere he mentioneth to have related * Helles. 3. these matters. However this service performed to Cyras cost him the losse of his Country, being for that banished by the Athenians his Countrymen; but the Lacedemonians taking pitty of him, gave him some Lands in the Country of Elis and the Territories of Triphyllis, whence we may very well fetch an account of his writing that elegant. Treatile of the form of their > Commonwealth. 51. In this mean time whilft the Gravians were on their way homewards, Artaxerxe.

Plutarch in

Pary fairs the Queen-mother of Persia greatly lamented the death of her son SECT. 3. Cyrus, and medirated nothing but revenge upon such as had been instruments in his death, whom one way or other getting into her hands, she killed with most exquisite corments. The Carian, who vaunted he, and no other, Parylatis Tahad killed him being designed by Areaxerxes to be beheaded, because he geth againft robbed him of the glory of so valiant an action, she begged of the King, that fuch as had any hand in the might have the punishing him, and to delivered him to those, who for the death of ten dayes cormenced him; then digged out his eyes, and laftly made an end her fon Chine. of him by powring melted brasse into his ears, Mithridates guilty of the same Crime of boassing, and thereby greatly incensing the King, who would have had all men to believe that he alone in a fingle Duel had flain his brother, was condemned to be put to death after an odd kind of punishment full of cruelty then in use in Persia. The Malesactor was laid on his back between two hollow things, in form like to Boats, fo fitted together that his head, hands, and feet might ly out, and the reft of the body be contained within. Being thus made fast meat was given to him, and if he would not receive it, he was forced to eat by pricking of his eyes; and when he did eat, instead of drink, honey and milk mixed together were powred into him, being to placed as ever to have his eyes against the Sun. Hereby it came to passe, that his face would be wholely covered with slies; and doing that within the Engine, which a man needs must who keepeth constantly eating and drinking, from the putrefaction of the Excrements were Maggots and Worms bred, which creeping up into the entrails fed upon the body, fo that the miterable man being dead, and the upper part of the Engine removed, they might fee the flesh devoured, and swarms of filth sticking on the Carcasse: After this manner was Muhridate by degrees extinct, after seventeen

52. Pary face after this, having won from Artaxorass her fon at Dice, the Identitid. Bunuch Megants, who had cut off the head and hands of Cyrus, caused him to be flead alive. Her fludy then was how to rid herfelf of Scatted her daughter-in-law; whom the never cared for , now hated mortally, and emulated her by reason of her harred against Cyrus, and her power with the King her husband, so as the resolved in the procurement of her destraction to hazard her own fafety. Being now in appearance reconciled, and all old things forgotten, fo as they must and supped togerate, the thence took occafion feeresty to work her death. There was a bit and Perfia, called Rhynta-The Bird ers, in which being nothing superfluous, or of excrement, all the inward parts Rhyntaces. wherein Part- were filled with fat. This, as Crefin wrote, the out it in two with a knife, whereof the one fide was onely poyloned, & ther taking the clear half to her felt; the gave the other which the poylon had touched unto Statura, who fuspecking northing, for that she see her ear hersels of the bird before her, did ear is up, and died after great convultions and corment: She suspected her before her death, and possessed the King with the matter, who knew sufficiently the cruef and implacable disposition of his mother. He presently with Tortures examined her neerest servants, but she kept Gygik a woman who had been accessary to the fact, and would not give her up to him, till at length having notice that she stiousd go out of the house by night, he surprized, and condemand her to die the death due to poyloners by the Perfian Law, which was, that the head of the Malefactor being laid on a great stone, with another it was broken and flatted. As for his Mother he hurt her not at all, either by this, that he would not fee that Citie fo long as she lived. This was the state of the Domestick affairs of Areanernes. 53. After the overthrow of Cyrus, he fent down Tiffaphernes (not Phar- Diedorus ad mahazus; as is falfly written in Diodorus) to the Sea-Coasts to recover them an. I. Olymp. 9: into his power, the Governors of which fearing now to pay dearly for their compliance with Cyrus, fent to make their peace with this new General, and fought all wayes possible to be received into his favour. But Tamos a man of prime note amongst them, and Governour of Johns, shipping his word or deed, but the defiring to go to Babylon, he fent her, adding onely

Pary (asis

Pfammitiches the King, hoping for former curtelies to be received; but he, without confideration of former benefits, to get his ships and money to himfelf, murdered his friend with his Children. In the mean time the Ionians feating Tiffaphernes, and defirous to enjoy Idem ibid, their liberty, fent to the Lacedamonian, now the chiefest State in Greece, Xenoph, Hellon, goods, and all his fons (except one, named Cyaos, who afterwards became Captain of the Kings forces) sayled for fear of Tissaphernes into Egypt to their liberty, tent to the Laceazmonian, now the chieff state in Swould lib. 3. Julin, defiring, that being the Captains, and Protectors of all Greece, they would lib. 6. init. not neglect them Originally of the same stock, but endeavour that they might enjoy their liberty, retain their Lands, and not utterly be destroyed, as danger seemed to threaten them from Tissaphernes, whom they had incensed by revolting from him to Crrus. They, who were nothing contented with the doubling of their power by the accession of that of Athens lately subdued , but still according to the nature of men desiring more, began to cast in their heads how they might attain to the Empire of Asia, being also encouraged by the retreat of their Countrey-men, did not unwillingly receive the embaffy; but promising them speedy relief, first sent to Tiffaphernes, desiring him not to offer any violence to the Greek Towns, but he neglecting their. Message, and falling upon Cuma, in the Territories of which he did much harm, and took many prisoners, they then created Thymbro their Captain General against the King, giving him 1000 of their own Citizens, and order; to take up as many from amongst their associates as he should think convenient. 54. Thimbro then with these marched to Corinth, where making them up Diedorus & to the number of 5000, besides 300 Athenian horse, he thence sayled to Xenophut piti, wrhe aid of the Greek Cities, falleth on Magaefia.

Ephefus. Having there out of the Affociates and others, raifed 2000 men more, he removed, and fell upon Magnesia, a Town subject to Tessaphernes, which he took at the first onset, and presently after attempted Tralles , a Town of Ionia; but it being to no purpose, he retreated to Magnesia, which being Fortified with no Wall, fearing that Tiffaphornes might after his departure recover it, he removed it to an Hill hard by, named Thorax. Then: invaded he, and harazed the Enemies countrey, but hearing that Tiffaphernes was coming towards him with a great power of horse, he thought himself unable to graple with him, and therefore returned unto Ephefin. Not long. after upon promite of part, he procured Xenophon his forces to joyn with him, with which then he the field against Tiffaphernes, whereupon Pergamus yielded to him, together with Temperane, and Halifarnia. Governed by Eurysthenes and Procles , who were descended from Demaratus the Lacedamonian. Other Towns also were delivered up to him, and some he took by force, till at length he fare down before Lariffa, called the Egyptian, which attempting for some time to no purpose, his Superiours at Lacedamon were nothing fatisfied with his management of the War, fo that he received orders from the Ephori to leave Lariffa ; and remove the Army into Caria. He obeyed, and when he was come on his way as far as Ephalius, Dercyllidas (a man fo famous for his rare invention and cunning, that he got the firname of Sifyphus) being appointed his Successor, there met him, and discharged him of his employment. Returning home, he was accused by the Affociates for giving his Souldiers liberty to spoyl the friends and confede-

Bercyllidas fucceedeth him.

> rates of the State, and for that was banished. 55. Dercyllidas taking the Army into his hands, and not ignorant how he Juffin, like, 55. Dercyllidas taking the Army into his halles, and hot growth the mile, had to do with two Persian Lieutenants, Tissabernes and Pharmabazus, who mile feared and hated each other; less the should be overmatched with both, he re-Olymp 95. as, folved if he could to make peace with one of them. He had conceived some distaste against the later for an affront he put upon him, when he formerly Terved under Lylander in Alia: wherefore he made peace with Toffaphernes upon certain conditions, and lead his Army into Lolis, without any hure to the confederates in the way, which was under the Command of Pharnaba. where taking nine Ciries in eight dayes, and gerring into his hands all the Cities of Tross, he consulted by what means he might to quarter his issaphernes hough im-cached by hamabazus ontinued in conon the A-nade Admi-

benian is

is power.

Souldiers in Winter , as not to be burthenforn to the Affociates as Thimbro was, and yet prevent Pharmabhanis from troubling the Cities with the excurrofions of horse, of which he had good store. He sent then presently to Pharnable us to offer him either war, or peace, who making choice of a Truce, for that he fleed in feat of Phygin, which bordered upon Lots; and where he had his feat, he thereupon feed his forces into Bushma to Winter there; the other for leing unwilling He should to do, because the Bithynians were to Lampfacing, where he meet with three Linesdaminans lent from the State to fighine to him the Professation of his Command for another year, who allo by order from the Ephor, repulsed the Souldiers for the injuries offered by them to the affociates in the time of Thimbres and commended them for their great moderation last year, warning them for the time to come, to which the of the Officers aniwered (who had followed Cyrm) that the Souldiers were one and the fame, but that the change of Generals produced a change in their behaviour. The meffengers being departed out of Ajia, he fent again to Phaviabasis, offenilg film either peace, or yvar, as before, who making the same choice, he out off hand passed over the Hellespan, and by the hands of his Souldiers, amonght whom the work was divided, fortified the Afthrais of the Chirrons has of Thrace with a Wall, thereby to defend it from incurfions of the Thracians, who now had falln upon it, and whom to repell he was tent for. He to incouraged the minds of the Souldiers by hope of reward, that the Work being began in Spring was finished before Autumn, being thenceforth a great advantage to the infibitants. After this he returned into Afta, where vifting the Chiefs he found that the Exiles of Chim having detected upon Marna; there lufked, and lived upon finch book as they could make out of Ionia; wherefore he befleged the place, though Itrong, and well victualled, and after a fiege of eight moneths forcing them to yield, he committed the care of the Town to Draco a Pellenian, and returned unto 57: In the mean while Pharmabacus, after he had made Truce with him, Diodousibid, went up to the King, to whom he accused To sahermes, as not having re-Justin ibid. pelled the Lucidamonians out of Asia, but suffered them there to continue Paulan, in Atat his cost and damage, alleging how unworthy a thing it was to fight more ties & 1/0with money than Arms, and to restrain an Enemy more with rewards than trates in Even valour. He advited him to make ready a Fleet, and give the Command gora & ad selection to Philip. effected to Committee Actional, a man of great experience in things that concerned War, who fince the different of his Country sojourned with Evagora the King of Oppras. Areaxerass yielding, gave him 500 Talenes to provide thips; and Conon hoping by this means to do fome special service for his Country, undersook the charge, but the Fleer being nor yet ready, he sayled with sourcy Phabitian Vessels into Cilicia, there to fet all things in order. About the fame time the Ioniani fent to Lagedamon to declare to that State, that if Onia were invaded in which Tiffaphernes his principal fear was, there

The Peffian Empire.

al to Artaxo might be hope that he would leave them to their Laws and Liberty. This to Wrought with the Spartans, that the Ephors thereupon fent order to Dercyltidas to lead his forces into that Countrey, and to Pharaces their Adminal to fayl thicher with his Fleet.

38. Notwithstanding the secret acculations of Pharnabagus, yet still Xeaph es was Tigapheries trusted by the King, and so far as with the Chief power in Diodous us ehe War against the Graciant; infomuch that Pharnabazus, though much supra. against his will, was forced to come to him at such time as Doroylidas invaded Caria. He fifst carried him thicher, where taking what, order their affairs required, and re-inforcing their Garrifons, they returned into Jonia, and Deroplidas perceiving they had croffed the River Mander, after he had confulted with Pharaces the Admiral about the prefer vation of the Ionians at that time but naked of defence, he also passed the River after them. The Perfrom forces water in mumber 20000 foot, and 10000 horse; Dercyllidas his maketh an

Derevilidas

with them.

King invad-

whole Army amounted but to 7000, and though the Peloponnesians well enough behaved themselves, yet such as came from Prione, and our of the Ionian Cities and Islands had listed themselves under him, some of them throwing their Arms into the Corn (which grew plentifully by the River.) took them to their heels, and the rest sufficiently evidenced what they would do if they came to fight. Yet Tiffaphernes having not forgot how fuch Greeks as followed Cyrus had put them to it, and judging all their Countrymen to be of the same meral, would by no means hear of fighting, which Pharmabazus fore pressed him to; but sent to Dercyllidas, desiring to come to interview. After Hostages given and received on both sides, they met, and an accommodation was made on these terms: That the King should leave all the Greek Cities to their own liberty; that the Greekish Forces should all depart out of his dominions, with all Lucedamonian Governours from his Cities, and that a truce fould be for fo long a time, till both parties could hear from their Superiours, concerning their refolutions herein. Then marched away the Armies to their quarters, the Perfian to Tralles, and that of the Greeks to Lexcopbrys. 59. Notwithstanding this truce entred into by these Captains, yet the rig- Xenoph. Hilla ging of a new Fleet went forwards in Phanicia, and nothing do we hear con- lib. 3.

Cerning the confirmation of the Treaty by the King, It happing that one He-Platanh o rodas a Syraculan, living with a Sea-man in Phoenicia, and taking notice how but in Applie great diligence was used in preparing a Fleet, which he heard should be compleared to the number of 300 Veffels, he took the first opportunity of a ship and failed into Greece, giving notice that fuch a Navy was providing by the King, and Toffaphernes, though he knew not, as he faid, upon what defign. The Lacedaminians hereat startled, began to look about them, when Agelilaws one of their Kings, through the perswasion of Lysander, offered himself to undertake aff Expedition into Afia against the Persian, provided they would fend with him thirty of his choosing, by whose advice he might manage af-Agestians the foirs; give him 2000 men from home, and 6000 more of the associates. Lacedemonian which being granted him, together with provisions for half a year, he failed > this means to reflore the December ares in the Affan Ciries, which he having erected, the Ephori had again diffolved) unto Ephofia with such speed, that he landed his Forces before the Perfian Lieutenants knew to much as of his coming, and thereby took them at unawares. 60. At Ephofus he raised new Forces to the number of 4000, and in- xemph, inte with Lyfander (who had procured himself to be one of the 300, hoping by

creased his Army to 10000 Foot and 400 Horse, with which he took the in Applian field, a great company of rascally men, not inferiour in number to the other. Plutards of following the Camp out of greedinesse for prey. Tissaphernes sent to him to Amilio ??iii, know the cause of his coming into Asia, to whom he answered, that it was severe in the coming into Asia, to whom he answered, that it was severe in the coming into Asia, to whom he answered, that it was severe in the coming into Asia, to whom he answered, that it was severe in the coming into Asia, to whom he answered, that it was severe in the coming into Asia, to whom he answered, that it was severe in the coming into Asia, the comi to restore the Greek Cities to their liberty; to which the other replyed, desiting a cellation of Arms for follong a time, as he could lend to the King, hoping to obtain from him that which he required. Agefilma gave little credie to his bare word, thinking, as indeed it was, that he procracted onely the time; but fwearing most folemnly, that without any deceit he would do what in him lay to procure a Peace, he also upon this condition sware to hold the Truce; but Tiffaphernes having little regard of his oath, fent onely to the King for new forces to joyn with his old ones, which though A gelilaus fufficiently knew vet kept he his Faith inviolable in preservation of the Truce; and when he denounced war against him, except he would forthwith quit Asia, he give notice thereof joyfully to his Soldiers, and fent to the loniant, Lolians, and the Greeks living upon the Hellespone, to dispatch their supplies unto Ephefus. Contrary then to the empectation of Tissaphernes (who thought he would have made for Caria) he invaded Phrygia, where fetting upon the Cities at unawares, he got much boory, and without any loffe came to the confines of Dalchylium, where his Forlorn-hope meeting with a Party of Horse belonging to Pharnabazus, were worsted, losing twelve Men, and two Horses, till he with the Infantry coming in to their relief, the Barbariana retired with the loffe of one Man, and Agefilans spending the greatest part of Sect. 3. Summer in wasting Phrygra, marched back with his Army mightily inriched, & came back in Autumn unto Ephefus, where he took up his Winter quarters.

61. Whilft the Lacedamonians thus acted in Aha against Areaxerxes, Diodorus ad that they might ftrengthen their interest abroad, they sent to Nephereus the King of Agpr, which now for a good space had revolted from the Persian Empire, to procure him to joyn with them in the War, who fent them 100 Gallies, and socooo measures of Wheat for a supplie. Pharax then with a Mavie confifting of 120 Sail departing from Rhodes, failed to Caunus, where he fet upon Conon, who there had forty Ships lying at anchor; but Arraphernes and Pharmabaxes coming into the relief of the Ships and Place with great Forces, he retired back to Rhodes, the Inhabitants of which not long after expelled his Pleet, and revolting to the Perfians received Conon and his Navy. It hapned after this revolt, that those that brought the Corn from Egypt being gnorant of what had happened, thrust their Ships into the Haven, which Conon and the Rhodians seizing upon, thereby well furnished the City; Afterwards came innot Conon oo Gallies more: 10 from Cilicia, & therefront of Phanicia, of which the petry King of Sidon had the charge. And here the foldiers of Conon mutinied for want of pay, who therefore more earnestly called Justin lib. 6. for their Arrears, because their service was the stricter under so great a Captain.

62. Agefilans knowing that without Horse he could not well carry on the War, in Chimpiin places, ill the Winter-time took order about it, permit. Xenopo. ting such rich men in the City as would not fight themselves, to furnish him Amilia Prowith each of them an Horse and a Man in their stead. Then upon the ap- bus ut prins. proach of the Spring, drawing together all his Forces to Ephefus, he itrained and exercised them in the management of Arms, that City serving them as the shop of War, during these Exercises. When he had thus prepared their minds, and encouraged them by rewards, and otherwife, he gave our he would march Braight into the most fortified places of the Enemies Country, further to exercife them for the Fight, Tiffaphernes thinking this rumor to be spread on purpose to deceive him, again marched into Caria, whither he thought indeed he meant to go; but Agefilans, as he faid, invaded the Territories about Sara die, which wasting round about, on the fourth day his men stragling about for plunder, were set upon bwebe Enemies Horse, which slew many of them; He going in to their relief, understanding the Persians had no Foot there, and confidering how he had all things in a readinesse, resolved to make something of it, fo that falling on in good earnest, he got a considerable Victory near the

which he carried with him into Greece. 63. Tiffaphernes at the time of this engagement (if we may believe Xe. nophon, who accompanied Agefilms in this Expedition, rather than Diodos dorns or Pansanias) was at Sardin, and upon that account was accused by the Juliant subre. Persians to have for taken and betrayed them. About this time it happened that Amil. Probas Comm the Admiral of the Persian Fleet, having to no purpose for a long time in Corone. follicited the King by letters, for money to pay his men, refolved now himfelf to go to him, Pharnabazau egging him on that he might accuse Tiffa. phernes of treachery. Leaving then his Fleet to the care of two Athenians, he cume to Thapfacus in Syria, and passing down Emphrates unto Ba bilon, made application to Tithrauftes, to whom hee fignified that hee would speak with the King. But none being to be admitted to his presence. except he adored himshe transacted his businesse by letters and messengers, and prevailed to have Tiffaphernes adjudged an enemy, the Lacedamonians to be profecuted with War, and to chuse whom he pleased for the paying of moneys; and with great gifts returned he to the Sea, having commission to charge

River Pattolus, and plundering the enemies Camp, from what belonged to friend and foe, got booty worth above 70 talents, amongst which was Camels and having Pharnabazas for his affociate, according to his tiefire, to provide a Navie for the defence of the Seas against the next Summer. 64. These accusations of Tiffaphernes were so prosecuted by Parysatis who the Phanicians, Cyprians, and other maritime Inhabitants, with long ships, bore

thrauftes.

Conon the mans.

Athenian ob-

Plutarch, in

bore him morral harred in the behalf of her fon Crow, that Arraxerxes made SECT. 3. Tishranstes Captain, General of the War in his stead, enjoyning him to make xenooh. him away, and granting letters to all the Cities and Lieutenants to be obedi- Diodorns in ent to him. He gave him two letters at pirting, whereor the one was written to Plutanch is Liffaphernes, being a pretended Commission to him to have full and aboute Anaeric of Anaeric of the Commission of the C ent to him. He gave him two letters at parting, whereof the one was written to prins. A 64 . . .

power in the War: the other to Ariam Lieutenanc of Lariffa, commanding Ageliaa him to affift Tithranstes in the apprehending of him. He delivered the let Polyenus State ner as foon as he came to Colloffe in Phryeia, whither Arians procured Tiffa- gen. lib. 7. 1

thernes to come, as to advise together about the War, and as he was in the Bath having laid by his scimiter, caused his servants to take him, and sent him

10 Tithranstes, who carrying him as far as Celana cut off his head, which he conveyed to the King. He fent it to his Mother, who greatly rejoyced at the Tillabbernes put to death. fight, with her also the Gracian women who had lost their fons or husbands phrough his fraud; and the whole Nation in the death of their mortal Enemy. 7.65. Tithraustes now fent to Agesilaus to acquaint how the incendiary betwixt the King and the Gracians was deservedly punished, so that his Master thought it reasonable that he would withdraw his Forces out of Asia, and the xenous Greek Cities being left to their own laws, should pay their accustomed tri- Hellen 20 bute to him. He denyed to do any thing herein without confent of the Lacedamonian State, whereupon they agreed that Tithrauftes paying him thirty Plutarchia talents for the maintenance of his Army, he should depart into the parts subicct to Pharniabazus, till such time as he understood the will of his Superi- Paulag, in ours. Then led he towards Phrygia, when in the way he met with an order Lacon. come from Lacedamon, whereby not onely the power at Land, but over the Navy also was given unro him, over which he might make Admiral whomsoe. rer he pleased. He then to gratify the Cities and those who at home studied to pleasure him, made up a Navy of 120 ships, over which he set Pifander his wives brother, a man indeed greedy of honour, and of prompe boildnesses. but of little experience in fuch great concernments, :66 Dishrauften taking notice hereof, and how A tofiland did not intend to quit

After, but rather conceived great hopes of overthrowing the Kings refolved there was no way to be taken but to find his Countrymen fuch work at home, that they must necessarily recall him. To this purpose he fend one Timocrates a Rhodina inco Greece, with gold to the valor of 50 Talents, to the intent Artax, o die that he might therewith cortupt the leading and the principal mon of the foveral Ciries, and engage them into a War with the Habenian's against Laceda Paulanille which was accordingly broughe about. Agofilmm in the mean time entring Phrygin, which was subject to Pharmabaens, about Autumn, spoiled the Country, and by fair or foul means took many Cities. Thence marched he into Paphlagonia, which he withdrew from the obedience of the Perlian. and received 1000 Horse and 2000 Foot from Cosys the King, and after this be went to Dajvylium, where Pharmabassa his Palacewas, and there, it being a place plentious of provisions, he took up his Winter-quarters, 67. Whilft his Soldiers ftraggled abroad for booty in great contempt of the Barbarians, Pharnabassus light on a Party of Horse, and thereof slew 100.

Three or four dayes after Herippides (the principal of the 30 Counfellors who accompanied Agefilaui) having notice from Spithridates, that Pharnabazsu lay incamped in a large Village named Cave, 20 miles of, procured of Acehlane 4000 Foot and as many Horse-men as he could perswade to accompany bith, with which beginning his march as foon as it was dark, by break of day he fell in upon the Enemies Camp, killing thost of the Myfians who kept the watch before it. Then the Persians fled; Pharnabanns fearing to be besieged, so that he wandred from place to place like the Scythian Nomades, and Herippidas got much rich plunder, amongst which the costly stuff of Pharnabasus, but feeking out too ansterely all the concealed prey, he took from Spithridates and the Paphlagoniums all that they had gotten; with which diffrace being exceedingly affected, they went away by night to Arians lying at Sardis, who had formerly rebelled and waged War with Cyrus against the King. At this departure of Spithridates and Magabates his fon (who was most dear to him) Agestians was so troubled, as also at that of the Puphla- SECT. 3. gonian Forces, that nothing more vexed him of all things that fell out in this 68. Afterwards Agesilam and Pharnabazm met together to treat about a Plutarch in Peace by the procurement of Apollophanes of Cyzicus, who was guest unto Agestiao, them both. Pharnabazus professed that if he were not made General of the Anax. & War he would revolt from the King; but if he should be, he would carry Apotheg. Lacoit on against the other with all his might, and to his utmost ability. Age / with Xenoph lans on the other fide promifed he would speedily depart out of his Territo-Helles, sib, 4°. tories, and as long as any other remained to make War upon, would spare him and his estate. Upon the approaching of Spring, he led down his Forces into the Plains of Thebes, where pitching his Tents near the Temple of Diana

Phamabazus defeated.

The Persian Empire.

Astyrina, he levied all the Forces he could; for he intended an Expedition into the upper Countries, being confident to turn all in his passage from their obedience to the King, his fame being spread abroad far and near, having spent now two years in the War. But the gold sent into Greece the last year by Tithraustes, had by this time so wrought upon the humours of the several States there, that they conspired together in a great and dangerous War against the Lacedamonians, who thereupon fent to Agesilans, setting him a day by which he must needs be at home with his Army for the preservation of his Country. It troubled him much to leave Afia, for the conquest of Agefilaus cal which he was in so fair a way, yet he resolved to obey the call of his distressed through the Country, seeing (as he himself expressed in his answer to the Ephori)a General device of Tithen truly and juftly commandeth, when he obeyeth the Laws, and the Ephori or what soever Magistrates else are in the City. At his departure he is reported to have faid, that the King expelled him Afia by 30000 Archers, wittily intimating the same number of Daricks stamped with the effigies of an archer, whereby he had procured the conspiracy of the Gracian Cities against Lacedamon, 69. Having passed the Hellespont, and being come to Amphipolis, he received news of a Victory obtained by the Lacedamonians about Corinth, whereupon he dispatched Dercyllidas presently backinto Asia, by these tidings Renoph, ibid. to confirm the affociated Cities. In the mean time while he marched through  Platarch in Macedonia and Theffalie towards the Straights of Thermopyla, Conon the Agellao, Asbenian and Pharnabazus, Admirals of the Persian Fleet, lay about Doryma Xenos a place in the Cherson jus, with about 90 Gallies, who having notice that the Hellen, lib. 4. enemies Fleet were about Gnidus, prepared themselves for an engagement . Pe-Diodorus ad riarchus (or Periander) the Lacedamonian Admiral weying anchor failed from 96. Gnidus with 120 ships to Phyfens another place in the Cherfonfins, and thence corn. Neposia directed his course strait against the Kings Fleet, and at the first had the better conone.

thought it unfeemely and unworthy of the Spartan valour to run away, and therefore directed his ship to the front of the Enemy, where first killing many of his Enemies, at length he was flain. Then the followers of Conon pursuing the Lacedamonians to the continent, took so Vessels, and soo men, the most part raineth a Vi- swimming to shore and saving themselves; & the rest of the Gallies with safety recovered Gnidus. By this victory of Conon (who made use of the Kings Forces the Lacedemofor the recovery of the estate of his own country) Athens and all Greece which heretofore were under the Lacedamenian yoke, again recovered their liberty. Diodorus placeth it in the second year of the 96th Olympiad, when Diophanins was Archon at Athens; bur Lycias in the year following, being under the

of it, but the Persian Gassies coming in apace to the relief of their friends, the Lacedemonian confederates began to shift for themselves. The Admiral Justin 1:6.6.

government of Eubulides, and the eleventh of Artaxerxes. 70. Pharnabazus and Conon for the improvement of this Victory, 1a-Idom ut supra, boured with the Islands and Maritime Towns of Ionia, to revolt from the Plutarch in Lacedamonians, which they effected fome catting out the Garrisons, and comics. maintaining themselves in their antient liberty, others yielding unto Counn, onely Dercyllidas lying at Abydus at the time of the fight, retained that place, and Seffos over against it, still in hostility against the Perstans, though endeavoured alfo to be reduced. In the next Spring the two Persian Generals

SECT. 3. invaded the Maritime parts of Laconia, which after they had wasted as they might, and now were about to return, Conon perswaded the other to let him have the Navy, with which he faid he would fail to Athens, and there build up again the long walls, and the Pirans or Haven, than which he affirmed nothing could happen more difagreeable to the Lacedamonians. This he eafily obtained, and money also to rebuild the walls, for which sailing thither with 80 Gallies he took order; giving those to Talents which he had received of Pharnabazus unto the Athenians. The Lacedemonians having notice of this, being very fearful the Athe- Iden cum nian Stare should again recover it's antient power, sent away Antalcidas to Diodoro Teribazus another of the Perfian Lieutenants who governed Sardis, if poi- Olymp. 96.10, fible to draw him to their Party, and reconcile them to the King. After 3. this was known at Athens, they also fent Conon and others to him, and with them joyned several other States, as the Baotians, Corinthians, and Argives, who were weary of the power of the Spartans. Antalcides de-Analcidas fent clared how those that fent him were ready to imbrace a Peace upon such terms tans to Artax as the King pleased, for that they would no longer contend with him about the Greek Cities in Afia, thinking it sufficient, that the rest which were elsewhere situated might be lest to their own Laws and liberty: he also laboured earnestly to render Conon suspected to the King, alleging, that at the King's cost he onely promoted the affairs of his own Country, seeking with his Forces to obtain as many Cities as he could for the Athenians, to whom under-hand he went about to restore Ionia and Lolia also. This offer concerning the leaving of the Greek Cities to the King's disposal, so nearly concerned his affairs, that the other Ambassadors in no case admitting it, for private respects returned home, without any thing concluded of; and though Teribazasi durft not without commission joyn himself to the Lacedamonians, yet gave he privately monies to Antaclidas to enable them to build a Fleet, wherewithall to constrain their adversaries to submit to an accommodation, and laying hold of Conon committed him to cultody, till such time as going himself to the King he might know his pleasure concerning these things.

71. Some have reported how Conon was carried to the King, and by Ifocrat, in him put to death, but others that he made an escape, Whill Teribazus was yet Panegr. with the King, he fant Suvabae into Afa the left, to take care of the Seain Coaft, who she wing himself very bitter against the Lacedamonians for the evils which the Province had suffered as A solitary and formulations of the evils which the Provinces had suffered of Agesilans, and favourable upon that Olymp, 97,00 account to the Ashenians, the Spartans fent over Thymbro to make Wat up. 3. on him. He with 8000 men took Coreffus the high hill fome five miles difrant from Fphefus, whence he made excursions into the King's Dominions; but Struthas lying not far from him with a great power of Horie, befides Foot, at such time as with a Party he was ranging about for booty, fell upon him, killed him amongst many others, and putting the rest to flight, took many; the other securing themselves where they might best do it. The year after, the Xemph, at Lacedamenians sending Eedicus to the aid of the exiles of Rhodes with eight supra. thips, dispatched away with him one Diphridas, with order to passe into Aga, there to gather up the remnant of the Forces, with which, and as many more as he could raife, he was to protect those Cities which had received Thymbro, and to grapple with Struthan. He acted accordingly, and fo ordered his affairs, that he proved hard enough for Struthas, and amongst other commendable actions took priloner Tigranes his Son in Law, as he was going with his wife to Sardis, whom releasing for a great ransome, he seasonably made use of the money for the payment of his Soldiers.

Province had suffered as A solitary and formulation of the Diodons of

72. Whilst these things passed betwirt Artaxerxes and the Common- Diedons ada wealth of Sparsa, he was also imployed about the affaires of Cyprus, which he 2. Olymp. 97. frove to get into his hands. There was in that Illand one Evagoras of great Iforrates on birth (being descended from those who first built Salamine the principal City Europea. therein) who being lately expelled through a Sedition, returned with a little force of Auxiliaries, and expelling Abacmon the Tyrian, who then had the power over the City, and a great friend of the King of Persia, made peace with concludeth a

Antalcidas

Artaxerxes turneth his forces from himself King of Salamine, and within a short time growing very rich gathered SECT. 3 forces, and by the help of his fon Protagoras subdued almost the whole Island. But the Amathusians with the Solians and Citians Rood out against him, and by their Ambassadors follicited Artaxerxes for aid, accusing Evageras for the death of Agyres, who had been confederate with the King, and offering him their help for the possessing himself of the whole Island. He being jealous of the growth of Evagoras, and confidering how convenient this I fland might be, by reason of its situation, for the promoting of his affairs at Sea, by which especially Asia could be defended, resolved to assist them, and dismissing the Ambassadors to their content, gave order to the Cities upon the Sea-Coasts to build ships with all speed, he himself travelling into the upper Provinces for the railing of a great Land Army.

73. Till he had composed matters with the Gracians, no considerable thing could be attempt upon Cypras, and though they favoured the cause of Evageras in oppolition to him, yet their enmity one against another hindred that effect which their Union might have produced, to the great impairment of his affairs. The Ashenians sent ten ships to the aid of Evagoras; but it xenoph, ut fihapping that Telemias being fent by the Lacedamonians at that time to fuc- pra. ceed Ecdiens in the Fleet, and to defend their interest in Asia, met with Diodorus ad them, and intercepted them all, whereby it hapned that those who were Ene- anims. Omies to Areaxerxes overthrew those who went to mike War against him, lynp, 98.

After this these two Commonwealths contending fore with each other at Sea Plutarch, in to their mutual damage, at length Amaloidas was fent by the Lacedamonians Atlaneire. to the Government of the Fleet, because they knew him to be in great grace with Teribanus. He coming to Ephefus, left Nicolochus his Lieucenant, and according to his private instructions went with Teribazus to Artaxerares about a peace, towards whom he so behaved himself (to please him ca-Ring off the Spartan gravity, and not refuling to dance before him) that the King, who before could not endure the Sparians, as counting them the most impudent of all men, imbraced him with fingular respect and courtesie. 74. He concluded of a peace with him for the Lacedamonian State, in case xcepp. Hel-

the other Gracians would not confent to such overtures as the King made, and leadily. returned with Teribarus, who giving notice that all who would might ac- Diodona decept of the conditions which his mafter proposed, they dispatched their sePlataich, at veral Deputies to him. He shewing them the Kings Seals or angel the Variation. veral Deputies to him. He shewing them the Kings Seals, opened the Letters, wherein was contained, that Artaxernes the King accounted it meet that the Cities in Alia, and the Islands Clazomena (fince joyned to the Continent) and Cyprus, should be under his Dominion: as for the other Greek Cities, both great and small, that they should be left to their own liberty; except Lemnus, Imbrus, and Scyrus, which having been subject to the Athenians time out of mind, he thought it reasonable they should so continue. Those that should not receive this peace, he with the rest who would embrace it would prosecute with War to his utmost power both at Sea and Land. The Ambassadors went home, and made report of what was proposed to the several Commonwealths, who grudged it much that the Cities of Affa, for whose liberty Agestlans had taken to much pains, should be so unworthily again betrayed. But being neceffitated to submit, they accepted of the conditions; and the peace was fwom to at length by all Greece, in the second year of the 96th Olympiad, and A.M.3618. the 18th year of Ariaxerxes. A. M. 3618.

75. Areaxerxes being thus freed from this tedious controversie with the Diadonas 1, 16. Gratians, Set himself to a preparation for the Wats of Coprus, from which ad Olymp. 98.

as yet he had been diverted. Evagerar by this time, through the affiltance of arag. Chabrias, whom the Athenians had fent to his aid with 800 Petrafts, and ten Gallies, had brought under the whole Island, having got together also a most numerous Army, whilest the King was kept in play by the Gracians. For he entred into fociety with Acora Ring of Egypt, who furnished him with great flore of money, and Heckenbrus the Viceroy of Caris under-hand supplied him with some for the hiring of forein Souldiers; and the King the Gracians guint ciprar of Arabia with others, who bere no good will to Artakerkes, sent a great Allaxerxes Jooketh after Cyprus.

erxes.

Book II

CHAP. L.

SECT-2. power of men. He had in a readinesse go Gallies, whereof twenty lay at Tyre in Phanicia, which with other Cities he had got into his hands, and the rest anchored readily surnished before Cyprus. The King gathered together both his Land and Sea forces, the former confifting of 300000 men, and the later of 300 Gallies. Over his Land Army he appointed General Orontes his fon-in-law, and Toribazus Admiral of his Navy, who taking up their forces out of Phocaa and Cuma, marched down into Cilicia, whence passing over into Cyprus with great industry they began the War. 76. Evagoras having 6000 men of his own, many more Auxiliaries, and having hired a great force of ftrangers over and above. (money being very plentifull with him) first with his Pinnaces well Armed set upon the Enemies ships as they brought in provisions, whereof some he took, others he funk, or chaced away. Hereby it came to passe, that no Commodities being imported into the Island, a great dearth ensued in the Persian Camp; and hereby a mutiny of the Souldiers, especially of the mercenaries, who fell upon their Officers, and killed some of them. This put Glos the Admiral upon a resolution to say with the whole Fleet into Cilicia, whence he brought sufficient supply; which Evagoras seeing, and considering his Navy to be far inferiour to the Persian, he got ready other fixty ships, and procuring fifty more from Acoris (who readily furnished him with all things necessary for Gerteth a vi- the War) he made up his Fleet 200 fayl. Then exercised he his men Rony at Sea often to prepare them for a fight, and that to the terror of the Enemy who against Evago-beheld it, and at length as the Persian Fleet sayled by Citium he fell upon it; taking some Vessels, and sinking others, but the Admiral and other Commanders flanding close to their tackling, a sharp conflict ensued, in which though Evagoras at the first prevailed, yet Glos with all his power, and with great earnestnesse and valour grapling with him, he was at sength after great loffe put to flight, 77. The Persians after this victory mustered all their forces, both by Sea and Land at Citium, and presently both wayes laid siege to Salamine. Now Evagoras, though he had had the better of it formerly in some sallies out upon the beliegers, cooled in his courage after this defeat. Though the fiege was very straight and pressing, yet resolving to continue the War, he left his fon Pythagoras for the defence of the Citie, with full Authority, and departed by night with ten Gallies into Egypt, where he laboured hard with Acoris the King, to perswade him to carry on the War with him, and that with all his power. He granted him some money; but for that he was difcouraged by the late defeat, nothing according to his expectation, fo that re- ann. 4. turning, and finding the Citie very much straightned, and himself destitute of Olymp.98. fuccour, he was forced to fend about an accommodation: Teribazus offered his consent upon these terms, that quitting all the Cities except Salamine, he should for that pay a yearly Tribute to the King, and be at his command as a fervant to his Lord; which though hard, he consented to, except the last, thinking it a great diffrace to be at his back as a fervant, and more reafonable to be subject to him as one King to another. 78. Teribazau not admitting of this exception, Orontes his colleague, and His Captains difagree, and emulator accused him by secret Letters to the King, as well for other matpeace is made, ters, as that having an opportunity sufficient to take Salamine, he did not use it, but spent his time in treaties with the Enemy; he farther laid to his charge privatly entring into friendship with Lacedamon sending to consult the Oracle about warring against the King, and especially alluring the Officers by honours, gifts, and promifes. Artaxerxes believing these things, wrote back to Orontes to atreft Teribazm, and fend him prefently unto him, who accordingly fent, earneftly defired to be brought to his tryal, but being for the present committed to prison, and the King employed in the Cadassian War, his judgement was still delayed. In the mean time Orontes being now General with full power and authority in Cyprus, finding that Ewagoras with great courage still held out, and that his own Souldiers taking ill the imprisonment of Teribazm refused to obey him, sent to Evagoras to treat of peace, offering him the fame conditions he was formerly willing to admit of from SECT.3. Teripazus. He being thus delivered beyond hope, concluded a peace on these germs; to pay yearly Tribute for the Kingdom of Salamine, and as King, to be obedient to the King of Persia. And thus the Cyprian War ended ten societies is years, after the first preparation for it, and after it had been managed 2 years. Evigora, Artaxerxes after all this time, and the expence of 50 Talents, leaving Evagar as in effect, in the fame condition he was before.

79. Gam, the Perlian Admiral, after this War, having married the daugh. Diodorus ut ter of Teribazus, fearing, left because of his affinity, he should be suspected supa. also by the King, and fuffer upon that account, resolved for a prevention to fortifie himfelf against him by entring into league with his Enemies. This he did prefently with Acors of Egypt, and wrote to the Lacedamonians to ex-Gaus oue of fear confoicite them to break the peace, making large offers of what he could do for reth with the Lacedemonians

Oregce. They had of late as before cast in their heads how to make themfelves mafters of all Greece, and finding that they heard ill for the peace conagainst the King, cluded with Artaxerxes, in which the interests of their Countrey-men were betrayed, they fought for, upon a new advice, a fit opportunity to renew the War against the Persians, and therefore now not unwillingly accepted of this confederacy, with Gam, 80. At this time Artaxerxes made War upon the Cadufians, leading Plutarch, in against them an Army of 300000 foot, and 10000 horse. He cast himself Artax, cum attogreat fraights marching into a Countrey uneven, rainy, and bringing no Diedore ad Corn, but nowithing onely its inhabitants with Pears, Aples, and fuch like Olymp. 98. fruits; so that finding there no provision, and not able to come by it from elsewhere, the carriage beatts were killed for meat, an Asses head could scarce be bought for 60 drachms, the Kings fer meals were laid down, and very few Analysis in Jarkes remained; the rest being all eaten up. Then Teribazus under dis-cadulians to no grace faved the King and his whole Army; for there being two Kings of the hear hans, he himself went to one of them, and fent his son to the other,

each of them fignifying to him whom he went to, that his Colleague had fent about a peace to Areaxerace, having left him out, wherefore his advise was, that they should lend with him Ambassadors to treat, and conclude a pacifcation first, which, being both deceived, they did, and a League was entred juso by both apart; Then returned he homewards, and in the way, to give a good example to others, alighted from his horse, and with Quiver and Target upon him travelled on foot over the mountainous, and rough places, and coming at length to a place called the Kings Inne, compassed with pleasant Gardens and Groves, because of the extremity of cold, he gave leave to the Souldiers to the down the Cyaraffes and other Trees, which because they out of modefly refused the took an Axe, and himself cut down the most beautifull. But coming home, and upon sence of his great losse, both of men and horses, suspecifing he was contemned for his ill successe, he slew many of his principal Subjects, of whom he thought he had cause to be jealous. 81. The Cadulian War being finished, he caused Teribazus to come to his cryal, commanding the matter to three of his most eminent Judges, who upon confideration of what was alleged, pro and con, and of his former great merics, absolved him, to the satisfaction of the King, who then bestowing on him the greatest honours, expunged the name of Orontes his false accuser out of the Catalogue of his friends, and cast upon him the greatest ignominy. About the same time, following herein the example of Cambifes his Predecoffor, he canted certain Judges convicted of unjust Decrees to be flead alive, and their skins spread over the judgement seat, where the rest heard, and determined causes, that they might have a constant Memento before their

Not long after Gaos the Persian Admital, who, as before was faid, had en- Diedorns ad tred into fociety with the Lacedamonians, and the King of Egypt, whilest he Olymp.99. was managing his revolt, was flain by fome that cunningly laid in wait for 4711 2 him. One Taches undertook the carrying on of his delign, and fortifying Gass flain, himself with an Army, built a Cirie in an high Rock upon the Sea, called

Book II

SECT. 3. Lenca, where was a Chapel dedicated to Apollo; but he dying a little after, great controversie hapned about the place betwixt the Clazomenians and Cu-

means (whereof the former obtained it) and thereby those rebellions in Afia fell of themselves, and the Lacedamonians, thinking it best to intermedle no more with Persian matters, gave their minds wholly to establish their power in Greece, got into their hands several Cities by one means or other, and not obscurely sought after the Empire of all Greece, contrary to the form of the League, made by the means of the Persian King at the procurement of Amaloidas, amongft all the Gracians, as Diedorns telleth us. who I iid claim unto his Kingdom, to strengthen himself raised a great Atmy

82. Acoris the King of Egypt, who of late had entred into fociety with Iden ad Olym Gam, and before had given affiftance to Evagoras against Artaxerxes, as one 100, am, 4. of Strangers, and for that he gave very good pay, and fought otherwayes to deserve well of Military men, many Gracians gave their names and listed themselves in his service. But wanting still some famous and expert General, Acaris of Egypt he procured Chabrias the Ashenian, a man of great command and no leffe Arengenneth valour; though without the confent of the people. Artaxerxes made Phargainst Astax- nabazus (now of late his Son in Law) the General of his Forces, who furnished with money made great preparations for the War, and sent to Athens to complain of Chabrias, who as he said, by his service to the Agyptian, alienated the Kings affection from that State; and defired that they would fend Iphicrates to be a Captain in his Wars. The Athenians being desirous to have both the King and Pharnabazus their friend, presently recalled Chabrias, and gave orderto I phicrates to affift the Persians. 83. Pharnabazus spent several years in preparation for the War, of Idem adam, which Iphicrates being weary, told him he wondred, that he being so quick & 2. 0/pp. in speaking should be so slow in doing, to which he answered, that the rea- 101. fon was, that he himself was master of his words, but the King of his actions. The Gracians were again fallen into civil diffentions, the former Peace being not long continued through the ambitious practices of the Lacedement-. Artaxerxes against him. ans; which Areaverxes confidering, and how needful their help was to him in this Egyptian Expedition, he fent to them to mediate and take up their differences, which they all liked well and accepted, except the Thebans. At length after three or four years spent in preparation, the King's Forces were drawn down into Ace a Town of Syria, where being a general Muster, three Pharadaxus were found 200000 Barbarians, under the command of Pharnabazsu, and 20000 Greeks under the Enfigns of Iphicrates': the Navy amounted to the fent against number of 300 Gallies, befides a great number of Veffels of burthen. In the beginning then of Summer they marched for Agpr; the Fleet failing along the Coasts, and coming near the mouths of Nile, found the Agyptians furnished sufficiently for a War; warning enough having been given them by the delay of Pharnabazau, Who (as other Persian Generals) having not the full disposal of things in his power, was constrained to send to the King, to know his pleasure concerning particulars, whose answer not being quickly obtained at a great distance, procured much slownesse in all Expeditions. 84. Nellanebis the King of Egypt (for Acoris was now dead) fent to spie out the number of the Persian Army; but his chiefest hope was in the Rrength of the Country, which was mightily fortified against any invasion, by the seven mouths of Nile, whereof each strengthned with a Castel, and a wodden bridge to hinder the passige of any ships up the River. But especially he took care of Pelusium the readiest passage from Spria, stopping up such places as might be passed by water, and drowning such as gave accesse by Land. Pharnabazus his Officers finding Pelusum to ftrongly fortified, re-The . Agypti-folved there was no passing there, and to carry the Fleet up to the Mendesian mouth of the River, where landing 3000 men, Pharnabazan and Iphicrates fer upon the Caltle. The Egyptians brought in 3000 Hotse and Foot to the relief of it, and thereby enfued a most sharp encounter ; but being at length overpowered by the number of Persians which coming in continually to the fight, encompassed them; a great slaughter was made of them, and many SECT. a taken alive. The rest betaking themselves to the Port, Iphicrates his men brake in with them, took it, and razing it, carried the Defendants away prisoners.

85. Iphiorates now understood by these Prisoners, that the Garrison was called out of Memphis the strongest City in Egyps; whereupon he advited Pharnabazus with all speed to fail thither, before the Egyptians should have time to unite their Forces. Pharnabazus answered, he would first stav till all his Army arrived, by the which the taking of Memphis would be more easie; but the other replyed, that if he would but let him have all the Mercenaries onely in the Army, he would promife to reduce the City. Pharnabazus hereupon grew jealous of his valour, and fearing he might the reby, from his skill and courage bring Leppe into subjection, denyed him what he required; to which refusal he opposed this solemn protestation, that betwist Phar-if the Persians should let slip out of their hands this fair opportunity, this maharus and Expedition through their fault would prove successesse. Nothing being pro-Indicates fru- med hereby but harred and ill words, the Agyptian by the means of this delay re-inforced the Garrison of Memphis, and with all their Forces came defign.

to the Fort which the Persians had demolished; when dividing their men into several parties, they set upon the Enemy, and prevailed so much upon him. that making great flughters, the Persian Generals, having spent much time about the Place, and now the Nile swelling, and beginning to overflow all the grounds about them; left they should seem to strive with Nature it felf. resolved to retreat out of the Country: And this was the fruit of so long a preparation, and so much expence. 86. Being returned into Asia, the differences betwixt them brake our , afresh, insomuch that Iphicrates fearing lest he might be attached as Conon formerly had been, withdrew himself by night, and returned to Athens. Thither Pharnabazsus sent after him, to accuse him as guilty of the miscariage of the Expedition, to which the Athenians answered, that if they found him guilty, they would punish him; but within a while they gave him the command of their Fleet. This year Nicocles the Eunuch flew Evagoras the King of Salamine, and seized on the Kingdom, according to Diodorus, who in no case is to be believed, as to the Author of the Paricide; for though it be confirmed by one (a) that he was killed by an Eunuch; yet it appeareth from another, that his name was Thrasydans; seeing it is clear from Isocrates, cap, 10, that Nicocles (to whom he wrote one Oration; another concerning the Of- (b) Theopompus fice of a King, he stilled by his name; and made a Funeral one concerning apud Photium Evagoras) was the very fon of Evagoras, and succeeded him in the King- Biblioth, num. dom, and is not to be reckoned amongst Eunuchs. 87. The next year, Artaxerxes understanding how Greece was shaken with intestine broiles, which he still looked upon as by it's help to recover Olymp, 101, Lepps, sent to compose the differences amongst the several States. They ann. 1. all affented to his offers, except the Thebans, who having a design to be Ma-

Lacedamonians ill refenting, and suspecting their ambitious practices for the dominion of all Greece, invaded them as the publick Enemies. Here-

sters of all Baotia, would not enter with the rest into the League, which the upon ensued a great and bloody battel at Loustra, in which the Thebans had Xenoph the better, through the conduct of Epaminondas, who so abated the strength Hellen lib. 6. of the Spartans, that they fent Agelians their King into Egypt, and An- Plutarch in salcidas to Artaxernes, to defire a supply of money. But the King, either Artaxerxe. because they sought to his Rebels the Agyptians, or upon some other account, slighted the Message, and rejected Antalcidus, insomuch that returning home, when he found that he was laughed at by his Enemies, and fearing the 88. Yet still did the King endervour to reconcile the Gracians, for that Xenoph, as long as they exercised mutual feud, he could not have any considerable sure Heller, lib. 7.

By from them. This year on the former message Philiseas of Ab dass was fent olympion. to them, who procured both the Thebans and their associates, and the Lace- and 4.

feverity of the Ephori, he starved himself to death.

himfelf a-

erxes.

SECT. 3. demonians to meet at Delphos; but the controversie resting about Messene, and the Thebans refusing to consent that it should be under the Lacedamonians, the Treatie had again the same successe: which so offended Phillipm, that he left 2000 Soldiers he had hired to the Lacedamonians, and returned into Asia. The Thebans not long after having a design to bring all Greece into Subjection, and knowing their endeavours to be vain, except they made Arfaxer xes their friend, or at least induced him to stand neuter, resolved to send Ambassadors to him. Calling together then their associates, they pretended the thing to be necessary, because Enthyoles the Latedamonian was already there, and dispatched away Pelopidas from themselves, Antiochus from the Arcadians, Archidamus for the Eleans, and another for the Argives, which being known at Athens, they also fent Timagoras and Leon from their State.

80. Pelopidas found the most favour at the King's hands, pleading (and not Xenoph, ind. fallely) that the Thebans had onely affifted the Persians at Platan, and since that had never fought against that Kingdom; and that for this onely cause were they invaded by the Lacedamonians, because they refused to follow Agefil and against the King, having also prohibited him to factifize at Aulis, where Agamemnon facrifized when he passed into Asia and took Troy. The late Victory of the Thebans at Leustra, and the invalion of the Lacedamonian Territories, did not a little add to the esteem of Pelopidas, who to inhance the renown of his Country, fluck not also to aver, that the reason why the Argives and Arcadians had of late been overthrown by the Lacedamoniane; was, because the Thebans were not at the battel. He obtained of the King, that Messene being exempted from the jurisdiction of the Lacedamonians, should be left to it's own liberty, and that the Athenians should withdraw their thips, or elfe War was to be made upon them, which being read to the publick Ministers of the other Republicks, Leon the Athenian openly said, that the Athenians must find our another friend besides the King, who replyed, that if they knew any more equal thing, they should acquaint him there-

90. With Polopidas was joyned in Commission Ismenias the Theban, as In Artas. we have it from Plutarch. He being brought by Tithraustes a Colonel into & vide sila the King's presence, and commanded, according to the custom, to adore him, var. Hist. like. took off his Ring fecretly from his finger, and cast it down at his feet, and cap. 21. then stooping down to take it up, as he thereby satisfied the King, and obtained his request; so he thought he provided sufficiently for the credit of himself and Country. Timagoras the Athenian communicated by letter fome secrets to Areaxernes, for which he was rewarded with 1000 Daricks, a costly Supper, and 80 Cows to find him with milk for his health; with a colly Bed and furniture to it, and some Persians that knew how to make it, the Greeks being accounted ignorant in these things. But returning home with the rest of the Ambassadors he was put to death; either because he accepted of these gifts, as Plusarch believed; or for that he adored the King after the Persian manner, wherewith they counted their whole State to be re- pal, Mar, 16 flected on, or (what is most likely) because of this intercourse betwixt him c. 3, exter. and Arranerses they questioned his fidelity; his Colleague moreover im- exemp. 2. peaching him at their return for refuling his company, and imparting all the rolling print. fecret of their negotiation to Pelapidae.

or. After the return of the Ambassadors, the Thebans sent for the Depu- Idem ibid. ties of the several Cities, whom, when the letters from the King were read, they commanded, all that would be accounted his and their friends, to swear to the contents of them. The Deputies answered, their Commissions were to hear, and not to take any Oath, which if they would exact from the Cities, they must send to them. This they did, hoping that the particular States would not dare to refuse the society of the King and them; but the Messengers first coming to Corineth, and that City resulting to swear, the rest followed their example, and so this device of the Thebans came to nothing. Then fell the Gracians into great broyls again, making havock of the Terri-todies, and goods of one another, which Areavernes still looking upon as SECT. 3. against his design for the recovery of Egypt, sent once more and procured a Peace betwirt them, whereby the Laconick, or Paosian War (as it was Diodorns ad a Peace betwist them, whereby the Laconic, of Facility via (as it was Olymp. 103, called) ended, after it had endured about five years from the first beginning, ann, 3, in the 30th year of Areaxerxes.

93. This Peace yet effected nothing on his behalf, the interests of the feveral States being at this time to contrary, that they prefently after broke out Idem ad olyme. afresh into civil Wars; and what Forces could be spared out of Greece, be 104. ann. 3. ing hot employed for, but against him. For, three or four years after, the maritime parts of Afia revolted from him, and Taches now King of . Ecope made great provision for the War, both by Land and Sea ; and hiring many

A defection from Artax= cixes.

Soldiers out of feveral Republicks in Greece, drew alfo to his party the Lacedamonians, who had conceived diffleasure against Artaxerxes, because he made Meffene to be comprehended in the general Peace. At the fame time had he then to deal with the Agrptians, the Greek Cities in Afia, and the Lacedamonians; and besides them several of his Lieutenants in Asia revolted; amongs whom were Ariobarzanes of Phrygia (who had lately seized upon that Country after the death of Mithridates) Manfoliu of Caria, a powerful Prince, having many strong places, especially Halicarnassia, in his power : With whom joyned O ontes of Myfia, Autophradates of Lydia, and of the Ionian race, the Lycians, Pisidians, Pamphylians, Celicia and and besides these the Syrians, Phanicians, and almost all that bounded upon the Sea. The General command over all was given to Orontes. By this so general a desection, half of the Tributes were withdrawn from the King; and the other half sufficed not for warlike preparations.

03. But Orones having got the chief command, and therewith received a years pay for 20000 men, berrayed those that had entrusted him with so great a power. For promiting himfelf no small matters from the King, he first sent up to him those that brought him the money, and then betrayed many Towns, and a Bind of Mercentries to those who were sent from him for that purpose. At the same time things went in the same course in Cappadocia, accompanied with some memorable circumstances. Areabazmo the King's General invaded that Country with an numerous Army, and Datames the Governour thereof, who had revolted, meeting him with a great Party of Horse, and 20000 Foot, pitched his Tents against him. The Captain of Datames his Horse was his Pather in Law, who to ingratiate himself with the King, and to provide for his own safety, having first agreed With Areabazus, by night paffed over with all his Troops unto him. But Datames not at all discouraged hereby, exhorted his Mercenaries to constancy, and promising them a large donative, presently led them against the Revolters, whom he fell upon just as they were joyning with the Enemy, and with great violence made great flaughter of both, artabazus being ignorant of the matter, suspected that the Revolvers went about again to betray him, and return to Datamus, and therefore gave order to his Souldiers to fall upon the Horse approaching; whence Mithrobarzanes (for so was the Revolver called) being shur up in the midst, whilst one part laboured to repel the Traytor, and the other to be revenged upon him for his treachery, was reduced into great fraights, and out of extreme despair made great flaughter on both fides, till at length having lost 10000 men, the rest were put to flight by Datames, to whom some returned and asked pardon; others betook themselves to a place, whence being not able to stir they were killed, to the number of soo men.

94. Whilest these things were thus carried on, Rheomithres was fent ir to Egyps to Tachos for aid, from whom obtaining 500 Talents, and 50 Gallies, he returned to Lonca, a Citie in Afia, where sending for many of the Officers of the revolvers, he laid hands on them all, and fent them up to the King, by which Treachery he reconciled himself unto him. Tachos by this time had prepared all things for the War, having obtained out of Greece 200 Gallies, 10000 most valiant Souldiers, and out of Egyps it self raised 80000 foot-

Agefilam the King of Lacedamon he also produced to come to him, promi- xenoph en fing him the command of all his forces. Upon the report of his landing, Platare, all forts of presents were dispatched to him; but the Courtiers finding no Train, nor any thing of State about him, onely an old man, little of flature, not at all trimmed, but with coarse and old Clothes, sitting on the shore upon the graffe, they greatly despited him, and were selzed with wonder at his poornesse of spirit, when they beheld how amongst the presents, taking the Meal, Calves, and Geefe to himfelf, he gave the sweet Meats and Oyntments to be Taches King of divided amongst the slaves. And Taches himself gave him not the chief com-Egyst firength-mand according to his promise, deriding him for the smalnesse of his stature. neth himfelf. and faying, that the fable was fulfilled in him, the Mountains are in Travel. and a Monfe is brought forth; to which with anger and fcorn he answered that efterwards he should have cause to think him a Lyon.

Diod. & Plu-

95. With Tachos allo was Chabrins the Athenian , though not fent from the State as was Agelitam, but on his own account, who advited him wanting Treasure, to command his richest fort of subjects to furnish him with as much money as they could spare, and he would repay them out of his yearly Tributes, which course he following got great store of money, and yet injured no man. To him he committed his Fleet, to Ageflate the conduct of the 10000 mercenary Gracians, to Neltanebus his fon (or rather the fon of his brother, or fifter, being called his Nephew ;) referving to himfelf the comma id over all; and though A geflians advised him rather to manage the War by his Lieucenants, and flay in Egypt, he fayled into Phonicia, the Spartan following him, though against his dignity and disposition. Coming into Phanicia, he fent Nettanebus against the Cities in Spria, to whom came a meffage from the Viceroy of Egypt left there by Tacher, lightlying that he had re-volted, and now invited him to felze upon the Kingdom; to which he confencing, drew presently to his party, all the Officers by gifts, and the Soutdiers by large promites. Tuchts now being in fear of his own fervants, and Agefilms whom he derided, betook himfelf to Siden, and thence to detait. xes, by whom he was courteoully enterrained, though not declared General in the Egyptian War, (and to by the help of Agelilam tecovered his Kinedom) as Diodoris Writeth.

· Are Lide. Nettanebue King of E-

96. Another King belides the le two was made by the Egyptians of Men- Plutarch No. dellum, of whom 10000 arole, and for him made War upon Neltanebus. The noph, Coming case being thus, A coffiams took part with Nottanzbus, whom he thought more Nepos & Die to favour the Gracians, took the other prisoner, and confirmed him in the dorn at fund Kingdom, who importuning him to stay and winter with him, he refused, ha-Agefilaus hafling homewards, for that he knew the Lacedamonian State to be at this time ving ferved ingaged in a War, desticute of Treasure, and yer to keep strangers in constant him, in his pay for want of their own men. Nettanebus when he would not flay, difreturn dieth. miffed him with great gifts and honours, giving him 220. of 230 Talents for the maintenance of the Wat at home, with which taking hip she (ayled homewards, though in the midft of Winter; making hafte, left through his absence the State should do nothing the next Summer; but being carried by Tempest into a defart place, called the Haven of Menelaus, lying betwing Cyrene and Egypt, he there fell fick and died. His friends laying his Corps in Wax, for want of Honey, carried it to Lacedamon, where it was butied according to his worth, and dignity.

97. About the time of his death died also Artaxerxes the King of Perfia, Plujarch, in after he had reigned 43 years. He had 115 fons, of which three onely were Artaxerx, Julegitimate; Darius, Ariaspes, and Ochus, the rest being begotten of Concu- sin, lib. 10. bines, of which he kept 360, with which yet he could not be contented with

Artaxerxes dicth, having before his death made Darius King who plorting against out the addition of Atoffa his own daughter, his own mother to please him becoming a Bawd to his incessuous affections. When he was grown old, perceiving his fons to frive about the fucceifion, and especially Ochus (who although the youngest, hoped by the means of Acolla to procure the Kingdom of him) fearing left after his death he might do as his Uncle Cyrus had formerly done, contrary to the cultom of Persia, which admitted not of two Kings at the same time, he made Darius the eldest, now 50 years old King, whilest he lived, lest his death should involve the Empire in civil broils. It was the fashion for him that was made King, to ask, and receive something ar the hands of him that made him, according to which Darins asked Afpaira to Wife, which formerly having been Concubine to Cyrus, Areaxerxes took, and afterwards married. He out of indulgence to him first granted his request, for that the being a free woman, and no flave, might chuse whether the would have him, and hoping the would refuse; but the willingly accepting of the thing, and he then repenting of what he had rashly promifed, consecrated her as a Nunro Diana, that the might live for the remainder of her dayes a fingle life. Daries hereby incenfed, through the provocation of Tiribazus,

Is put to death.

(who bore Arraner ses malice for defrauding him of his daughter Amift is, whom he promited to him, but married her himfelf) entred with 50 of his brethren into a conspiracy against the life of his father, and the plot being revealed by an Eunuch, was put to death with his complices. Darius being removed out of the way, Orbus was more inflamed with a defire of reigning, to which he was more incented by Atoffa his fifter. But he feared two of his brothers ; Ariaspes legitimate, and the elder, and one Ar-

fames, who though base born, and the younger, yet was much esteemed for his wisdom, and especially beloved by his sather. Both of them he resolved Othus his wie- to destroy; the former by his cunning, and the later by down-right cruelty: ked practices for he hired fome who never ceased to tell Ariaspes, as a great secret, that his for the King. father was resolved to make him away by a cruel, and shamefull death, and fo often inculcating it unto him as speedily to be done, drove him to that fear and desperation that he poysoned himfolf. Arranger ses mourned for him, but knowing the kind of his death, and suspecting the cause, yet through extream age was unable to fearch into the matter and find it out onely he imbraced Arfarmer more affectionarly than everyand nor obliquely fignified that he onely could trult, and rely upon him. Ochres judging then that no delay was to be used, procured Hampages the fort of Teribanes (who fell in the treafon of Darin) to mirder him. Areaserses was already to spent with age that he seemed to want but the least furtherance to his death, so that word being brought him of the death of Arfalmes, he was not able to bear it, but died heart broken with forrow, afeer be had lived 94 years, in the 43th of his reign; in the third of the 104 Olympiad. A. M. 3644, about 260 before the birth of Christ. He was effected mild and loving towards his fubjects, which opinion was thightily confirmed by the cruelty and paricide of his fuccessor.

SECT. IV.

From the death of Arraxerxes Mnemon, and the beginning of Ochus, to the death of Darius Codomannus, containing the space of 12 years.

Chus fucceeded his father, after whom he was also named Areaxerxes, and whose name the Persians put upon his Successors for a memorial of his mild and prosperous Government. Some think him by the Per-Sians to have been called Ochofneros, or Athofueros; and that he is to be taken for that Achefuerus, of Ahafuerus the husband of Efther, mentioned in Scripture; who by the feventy, and Tofephus after them, is named Arin scripture; who by the leveley, and for the have been the man, but he facobus cape reigned onely feven years, whereas above twelve are given to Ahafuerus, jacous cap

Neither could Darins the fon of Hystaspes be he, if the Jews with others rightly accounted the book of Efther to have been the last in order of all the Carionical Scripture of the Old Testament, and for that Valui his wife is

Elber's hul-

volteth from

band.

SECT-3. Dut away Arolla, on whom he begat Xerxes. 'And although some plead hard for Xerxes, because his wife is called by Herodoms, Amestris, which they take in the Persian tongue to be onely Ham-Esther; yet tis apparent out of the same Author, that she was the daughter of Otanes a Persian Satrapa, by Religion an Heathen, and of a most cruel disposition, Besides, Abasineras in the feventh year of his reign was at Sulhan; but Xerxes in the feventh of his reign was absent in the War with Greece, and though the Greeks corrupted forein names , and might call Xer es him, whom the Perflang named A tachfafta, or Ariachas-ia, yet not one in his own language called Achofchverofch. Neither is in probable that Longimanus could be the man, who is both in facred, and prophane story called Artach-fasta and Artaxerxer; but no where Achasurus. The same may be said of Nothus, who both by Nehemiab and Greek writers is called Darius, and of Artaxerxes Mnemon; concerning whose wife Statira, such things are written as can neither agree with Valhti nor Efther. Now if that of Efther be the last Canonical book; and Nebemiah lived to the time of Darins Nothus, then is it probable, that Efther lived in the reign of his fon, or Grand fon, and cannot fo conveniently be affigned for a wife to any as to Ochus. 2. O. hus knowing of how great Authority his fathers name was to his Polyamus Sites fubjects, and how contemptible he should be after his death was known, pro- tagem, lib.q. cuted of the Eunuchs, Chamberlains and Colonels to conceal it for ten moneths, and in the mean time sending about the Royal Seal commanded in his fathers name, to proclaim Ochus King. When all owned, and obeyed him as King, he then confessed his fathers death, and commanded a general mourning, according to the cultom of Persia, and presently took away all Competition, filled (a) the Court with the bloud of his kindred, and relations, Competition, filled (a) the Court with the bloud of his kindred, and relations, (a) Julia, no regard being had, either to Sex or Age. Amongst the rest he put to death lib to. his (b) fifter Ocha, being also his mother-in-law, with cruel torments, and his (b) Valerine Uncle with his two fons and Nephews, he caused to be set in an empty place; Max, lib,9. and killed with Darts, who seemeth well to have been father to Sifigambis cap.2.

The Pernan Confire.

and killed with Darts, who teemeth well to have been faithful to be a mother to Darins the last Persian King) whose 80 brethren together with Lib. 10.408. their father Curtius reporteth to have been murdered by Ochus. 2. From Ochus revolted Artabazus, against whom were sent some of Diodornesd the Persian Sairapaes with 70000 men , and yet by the help of Chares the Olymp. 106. Athenian he overthrew them, and rewarded Chares with a great summe of ann. 1.64. Artabazus re- money, which he laid out in the paying of his Souldiers. Ochos knowing of this, expostulated seriously with the Athenians about it, who hearing that he intended with 300 ships to affift their Enemies (with whom they were now ingaged in the focial War) presently clap't up a peace with them. Artabazus being forfaken of the Athenians , betook himself to the Thebans, who ordered Pammenes with 500 men to passe over into Asia to assist him; by whose help Arrabazsu again overthrew the King's forces sent against him in two great and bloudy battels, which got no small credit to Pammenes, and his Bootians. Yet a few years after, when the Thebans were ingaged in the Idem ad Ohm. Phocian War, and reduced to extremity for want of money, they fent to 107, 4831. Areaxerxes Ochus, and obrained of him 300 Talents, which he did as it seemeth to put an obligation upon them to assist him in the War, which he renewed against the Egyptians. 4. Although Egypt had long before this revolted from the Perfian Empire, yet Ochin not at all affecting War kept himself quiet; for, having sent some Armies thither, by the treachery, or ignorance of their Captains, they miscarried, so that having several times badly sped, though despised on that account by the Egyptians, yet being a lover of his ease and quiet he submitted to the diffrace. But now at this time (about the eleventh year of his reign) the Phanicians and Cyprians taking heart, and rebelling also, he resolved to chastise them all with Arms, and that in his own person; and making great provision of all things for the War, raised 300000 foot, 30000 He invadeth horse, and 300 Gallies, besides Vessels of burthen. The first Tempest of the War fell upon Phanicia, which revolted upon this occasion. A famous Cific Phoenicia.

there was therein named Tripolis, confishing, according to it's name, of three SECT. 4. Cities distant a furlong from each other, and inhabited by Tyrians, Sidonians, and Arendians, in which the affembly General of the Phanicians met and refolyed of their most important affairs. Herein the Persian Satrapaes and Ambassadors, behaving themselves very uncivilty, and abusing the Sidenians, they thereupon refolved to rebel, and perfivading the other Phanicians to fide with them for the obtaining of their liberty, fent to Nellanebus King of Egypt to defire him to receive them into confederacy against Ochur. Then to begin their hosility they cut down the Paradise wherein the Kings of Perfla, when they came that way, used to divert themselves; burnt the hay which the Sarrapaes had gathered for use in War, and punished such Officers as by whom they had been abused.

y. Ochus having notice of this, longed to be revenged of all the Phanicians, but especially on them of Sidon; and gathering his Forces together at Babylon, fet out thence against them. In the mean time whilst he was on his way, the President of Syria and Mazeus Governour of Cilicia, with joynt Forces fer upon the Phanicians; but Tannes King of Sidon, having received out of Egypt a supply of 4000 Gracians, over which Menter the Rhodian was General, with them and his Citizens together, fell upon the Satrapari, worsted, and expelled them out of Phanicia. Whilst things were thus carried there; another War arose to the Persians out of Cyprus, wherein were nine Cities of good account, having the leffer Towns in their subjection, and each of them a King; but all Subjects to the Persian, all which now, imitating the Phanicians, revolted. Ochus receiving tidings hereof, wrote to Adrieus Prince of Caria (who being newly come to the Government, was by the tenure of his Principality a friend and affociate in war to the Ferfian Empire) to provide Forces both for Sea and Land against them, who accordingly with great expedition making ready 40 Gallies and 8000 Mercenaries, fent them into Cypyns, under the conduct of Phocion, the Athenian, and Epageras, who heretofore had held the Island as King. These two landing their men, fald close fiege to Salamine both by Land and Sea, and the Island having been quiet of late, and for that reason abounding with riches, great numbers flocked out of desire of plunder from Spria and Cilisia informach that the number of the beliegers was doubled. Hereupon all the other Cities submitted themselves; onely Protagoras held out still, and Evagoras thought by force to re-invest himself of that Kingdom, devolved upon him from his Anceftors: But at length Protagoras also submitting, obtained Salamine ftill; and Evagoras contented himself with a larger Dominion given him in Afia, which ill governing, he fled again into Cyprus, and there taken was put to death. 6. The King was on his march towards Phanicia, when Mentor the Rhodian understanding what strength he had, and how unable the Rebels were to make refiffance, fent one to him privacely, offering to betray Sidon into his hands, and to do him especial service in the conquest of Ægyps, being very well skilled in that Country and the River. Ochsu not onely promiled him indemnity, but a large feward, if he would perform what he promifed, and placing his greatest fessicity in the recovery of Agypt, sent to the chiefest of the Gracian States, to defire aid. The Athenians and Lacedamontant fignified their defire to retain amiry and a good correspondence with him, but at present could yield him no assistance; but the Thebans sent him roomen, the Argivet 3000, and the Greek in Afa willing to shew their readinesse, furnished him with 6000. Before their arrival the King was gor into Phanicia, and face down not far from Siden, which the Inhabitants had by this time strongly manned within , and fortified with a threefold large dirch, and high walls, besides a Fleet of 100 Gallies. For they exceeded by far all their neighbours in riches.

Mestor the Rhedian offerth to betray

7. But Tennes their King had affociated himself with Menter to betray the Ciry, whom leaving therein with command of a part there of for the better carrying on of the treachery, be himself with 500 Soldiers went out, pre-

Ochus invad-

SECT. 4. tending to go to the publick convention of the Phanicians, having with him Too of the prime Citizens as his Counselors. These he brought straight to Tennes King Ochus, who put them all to death as authors of the rebellion, and after them of Sidon joyn- 500 more, who came as Suppliants with Olives in their hands, after he had and yet put to understood from Tennes that the City should be surrendred to him without any conditions, thereby to strike a terror into the other Towns. After this, death by Tennes easily prevailed with the mercenary Agyptians to let him and the King into the Town, which being done, and Ochus having it in his power, judging him now to be of no use to him, he commanded him also to be flain. The Sidonians before the King approached had burne all their ships, Sidon taken & left any private person should convey himself away during the Siege. Now burnt by the feeing themselves betrayed, and their City full of the Enemy which swarmed on every fide, they fer fire on their houses, and therein burnt themselves with their wives and children, so that (accounting slaves) above 40000 are thought to have perished in the flames. The King fold the rubbish thereof for many talents, much gold and filver being found therein, because it had flourished with great riches. By this Tragedy of Sidon the other Cities being terrified, yiel> ded themselves unto the Persian. 8. The (a) Auxiliaries out of Greece being come to Ochus after the taking of Siden, he fet forward with his whole Army towards Egypt, (b) taking Jericho Olympa 101 a City of Tuden (as its probable) in his way, and drawing many Tems along ann, 3, with him in his Expedition. Coming (c) to the Lake Sirbonis, he loft part of (b) Soling his Army in the Whirl-pits and Bogs, through ignorance of the place, and at sufficiently length arrived at Pelasium the first frontier-town, which was held with a suite, Garrison of 1000 men. Now the King divided the Gracian Forces into (c) Dividen three bodies, and over each constituted a Captain of their own Nation, and ibid. joyned a Persian with him: the other Forces he kept in his own Command, being greatly intent about the main bufinesse. On the other side Nettanebus was not a whit discouraged, having in pay 20000 Gracians, and as many Africans, besides 60000 of his own Agyptians, and an innumerable Company of boars for the River. But by his conceirednesse and want of skil he miscarried, having formerly prospered whilst he used the conduct of the Gracian Captains, but now his Fortune changing upon his fole managing the War, for which he thought himfelf sufficiently able. After then he had fortified his Garrisons, with 30000 Egyptians, 5000 Greeks, and half of the Africans, he seized upon such places, as were most advantagious for passage into the Country. o. Things standing thus betwixt them, Nicoftrains the Captain of the Argives gerting some Ægypeians for Guides, passed with the Fleet through a ditch, and in a place something remote and out of sight landed his men, and pitched his tents; which being known by the Garrison, a party issued our. and fell upon them; but the Gracians, after a sharp contest, slew their Captain, and of them about 5000 nem. Nettanebus upon report made of this defeat was greatly discouraged, fearing all the rest of the Persian Army might be easily transported, and suspecting lest the Enemy should bend his utmost strength against Memphis the Metropolis, was especially concerned for it, and with that party which accompanied him returned thicher. In the mean time Lacrates the Theban, General and principal of all the Gracian Captains drained the Chanel by cutting a dirch, and paffing over his Soldiers raised a battery against Polasium, by which the walls being much broken the defendants raised fill Pallisadoes in the place, and the Gracians within stoutly defending the Fort, a great contest hapned for several dayes. But as soon as they heard of the Kings departure, they defired a Parley, and Lacrates interposing an Oath, that upon yielding of the place, they should depart with fuch things as they brought out of Greece, they presently yielded. . Then Artaxerxes fent Bagoas an Eunuch of great authority with him, with a party of Barbarians to take possession of Pelusium, who meeting the Gracians took from them many things contrary to the agreement. This they received in great disdain, and called to their gods as witnesses of the Oath, which to keep Lacrates fell upon the Barbarians, put them to flight with the loffe of SECT.4. fome, and defended his Country-men, for which being accused by Bagoas, the King defended what he had done, and punished the Authors of the

10. Pelusium being taken, the other Towns were easily reduced by this stratagem of Mentor the Rhodian, the third Captain of the Gracians. These places being held by Garrisons confishing of two forts of Nations, Gracians and Agpeians, he caused this rumour to be spread abroad, that Areaxerxes had resolved to deal mildly with all those who should deliver up any Towns, but fuch as should withstand him, he would profecute with as great severity as the Sidonias; and he gave in chrige to the Sentinels to let as many Citizens go out as would. By this means this report was presently spread all over Egypt, and thereupon mutinies followed betwirt the Strangers and Natives in every Garrison, each endeavouring first to betray their trust, and gain credit of the Conquerours by their speedy treachery. Accordingly when Mentor and Bagoas laid fiege to Bubaftis, the Agyptians fecretly fent to the latter to yield to him the Town upon fecurity of a free dismission. The Gracians suspecting the matter, persued the Messenger, and getting from him the whole truth, in a great great rage fell upon the Agyptians, whereof some they flew, others they wounded, and drove the rest into a corner of the Town, They fignified this to Bagoas, and defired him with all speed to come and take possession of the Town, and in the mean time a messenger was sent to Menfor from the Gracians, who advised them as soon as Bagoas should enter the Town to fall upon the Barbarians. As foontherefore as part of his Soldiers with him was entred, they shut the gates, and killing all the Soldiers, took Bagoas himself prisoner. 11. Bagoas (a) feeing his onely hope to be in Mentor, earnestly besought (a) Diodorus him to be the means of his deliverance, promiting him to do nothing for the ut supra. future without his approbation, who procuring his release, and having the Town delivered up into his own hands, as he got the credit of the enterprise, so ingaged he Bagoas to him, who entred by Oath into friendship and endearednesse, which he also kept to the last, and by which union they both became afterwards the most powerful of all the King's Officers. After the furrender of Bubaftis, the other Cities made their peace, but Nellaneins lying at Memphis, and seeing what progresse the Enemy made in his conquest, Nettanebus fli- would not endanger his personal safety for a Kingdom, but packing up all his treasures got him away into Ethiopia. Then became Artaxerxes Master of all Agypt, and demolishing the walls of the greater Towns, spoyled the Temples, and got much treasure. He carried away the Writings of the Priests, which afterwards Regons restored to them for a great sum of money, he (b) decided Apis and all their gods, and for that the Agyptians had for his dulnesse (c) called him an Asse, he facrifized # pis being taken by violence, (b) Salo. Seto an Asse, making his flesh also be dressed up for mear. Then rewarded he Sacr, lib. 2. the Gracians with great munificence, according to their particular merits, and (c) Alian. making Phærendates Satrapa of Ægypt, he returned laden with glory and var. Hist liba. spoyl unto Babylon, taking (d) in his way a great number of Jens captive, of c. 8. whom some he placed at Babylon, and others in Hyrcania upon the Caf-Suid in Ocho.

> 12. Ochus rewarded Montor the Rhodian with 100 talents of filver, and Diodorus ad much costly housholdstuff, and making him go vernour of the Coasts of Afia, Olymp. 107. gave him full power to make war upon his Rebels. He used his power mode-am. 4. rately towards Artabazus and Memnon, who formerly had revolted, and now were fled to Philip King of Macedonia: those he reconciled to the King, and fent for them both with their Families: for Artabasus had by the Sifter of Mentor and Memnon eleven Sons and ten Daughters, by which number Mentor being much affected, not onely procured him his pardon, but preferred by degrees all the youths to honourable command in the Army. After recenibid. this promise of pardon he allured Hermias the Eunuch Governour of Atarnus polyanus lib. 6. into his hands, whom casting into prison, he took his Ring and therewith signed strabe 124.13. letters, eth out of Aeypt.

of any Castles or Towns should deliver them up into the hands of the bearers.

which was accordingly done, and then fent he Hermias up to the King, who caused him to be hanged. Aristotle the Philosopher and Xenocrates the Chal-cedonian, (whom he had fent for to him) made their escape out of such places as the Persians had got into their hands, Afterwards Mentor either by force

SECT. 4. letters, wherein was commanded in his name, that such as had command or policy, reduced all such Captains as had revolted.

away within a while,

DOOK I'L

13. Philip the fon of Amyness at this time reigning in Macedonia, grew very potent, and besieged Perinthus, a Town in Thrace, situate upon the Pro- Olympioo. ponis, with 30000 men, and very strong provision for War; so that he straight- ann. ly pressed the inhabitants, giving them no rest through his continual attempts. Philip King of This Artaxerxes Ochus taking notice of, and being very jealous of his fud-Macedonia op- den growth, commanded the Satrapaes of the Maritime Coasts of Alia to relieve the Perinthians as effectually as might be, which they so performed as he missed of his design; and this afterwards was objected as a sufficient cause.

amongst others, for the invasion of Asia. 14. In the reign of Ochus, as fome think, hapned those things which are * faid to have been done in Tudaa, during the reign of Artaxerxes, and to * Josephus Ashave given an occasion of imposing a Tribute upon that Countrey. After the tiquit, lib, 11, death of Eliashib the Priest, his fon John succeeded him in his Office accord- cap. 7. Affairs of Tu- ing to his bitth-right, who had a brother named Tofhua. This Tofhua being in great favour with Bagofes, the Kings General, had a promise from him that time of Ochus. he should have the Priesthood, by which he was so heartned as to strive with John in the Temple, and so far provoked him as he slew him there. Bagofes hearing this, endeavoured to enter the Temple, and when he was forbidden asked if they counted him more impure than the Carkess that lay within, and entring by force, took thence occasion to punish the Tems seven years for the death of Folhua. For two Lambs being dayly offered in the constant facrifices, he imposed upon every one a Tribute of fifty drachms, which amounted to the yearly rate of fixty Attick Talents. But if these things hapned in the time of this Artaxernes, and he be taken for Ahasuerus, then must this murther have been committed towards the beginning of his reign, and this Tribute of seven years been exacted before Mordecai the Few came in fayour, which was after the fall of Haman, in the twelfth year of Aha-

> 15. During the reign of Ochus, in his ninth year, died Manfolus the petty Diodorus ad King of Caria, more famous after his death than whileft living to whom his Olymp. 106, j wife Artemisia succeeding, because he lest no Children, burned with such ann.4. affection towards him, that reducing his bones and affect into pouder the strate like. drunk it, defiring to become a quick and breathing monument of her huf- Gellius lib. 10. band. She proposed great rewards to such Orators as would speak elo- cap. 18. quently in his commendation in which did several notable men of that time. For the preservation of his memory she raised such a monument as deserved to be reckoned amongst the seven wonders of the World, and in the work whereof the most exquisite artificers that then could be found were employed. Scopas on the East part, Bryanes on the North, Timotheus on the Plining lib. 36. South, and Leochares on the West, who notwithstanding Artemisia died of caps. melancholy before the work was compleated, yet proceeded to the finishing of it, intending it as a monument, not onely of Manfolm (upon which account the * Romans called their most exquisite pieces of Architecture Man- * Pausanin folea) but also of the excellency of their Art; to transmit their own names as Arcadicis. well as his posterity.

Manfolus his monument.

(nerus.

16. Bagoas had rifen to that power with Ochus, that he ruled all things Diodorns ad at his pleasure, the King doing nothing without his consent. Yet either Olympatri. mission of the King, or willing to have a greater power, owing Ochus also some displeasure for killing Alian, Van the Egyptian God Apis (he belonging to that Countrey) poyloned him by Hist. lib.6. the means of a Phylician, after he had reigned 23 years. Being dead, he cast cap. 8. him to the Cats to be devoured, another being buried in the Royal Sepulchre,

Bagoas killeth in his stead, and that he might expresse his cruel disposition, of his Thigh-Ochus, and fet- bones he caused sword hilts to be made. In his stead he made King his youngest fon Arfes, killing all his other fons, that the new King being destituce of kindred & friends, might yield the more obedience to himfelf. In reality he now reigned, uturping all, except the meer Title; but Arfes beginning to look to himself, when he had ground to suspect that he intended to call him to an account for his wickednesse, he made him away also with all his Children in the third year after he had fer him up, Darius Codomanilus.

Together

with his Kingdom

espouseth a quarrel with the King of

capacity to defend them.

17. All the Children of Arles perishing with him, and the Royal family thereby being desolare, Bagoas made choice of one (a) Codomannus his (a) Diodorus. friend, and placed him in the Throne, whom some Authors would have not Strabo lib. 15. at all to be descended of the Royal line, being a Carrier of Letters, but o- & Plutarch, in there make him the fon of Arfames (brother to Ochus) by Sifigambis his fi- Alexand, alisi, fter, according to the cuftom of the Persian marriages. Whilest a private Diedorits, Acman in the Cadustan War he shewed himself valiant, killing an Enemy, who rianus, curtius, challenged any one of Ochus his Army to a fingle Combat, and thereby for

19. The disadvantage of the Persians was the rising of the Kingdom of Macedonia, to that high pirch of greatnesse to which it had been of late advanced by the abilities of Philip the present King, who though he might have cured himself to be declared General of all Greece for the Persian War ; for the present procuring great rewards, honour, and the Government of Armenia, after Arfes his death came to be remembred by the people, which made Justin, lib, 10. choice also of him for their King, and that nothing of Royal Majesty might be wanting to him gave him the name of Darius. Not long after his preferment

Bagoss repented him of what he had done, and being much versed in King killing, provided a potion to fend him after Ochus and Arfes, which he having notice of, called him to him, and in a pleasant humour offered it to himself to drink, and thereto compelled him, fatisfying the people sufficiently in that he thus requited him, who fought the same way to entrap custius lib.6.

By this Darius was sent into Samaria, as a Satrapa, Sanballet, a Cuthaan Josephus Antiby birth, and so of the same Original the Samaritans themselves were. He quit lib. 11. thinking it good policy to procure Amity with the Jews, his Neighbours, mar- 601.7. ried his daughter Nicaso to Manasser, the brother of Jaddus the High-18. Darius with the Empire of Perfia was necessitated to espouse a quarrel with the greatest Monarch then known in the World except himself, and with such a people in combination with him, as easily excelled all others in Military skill and valour. The quarrels which hapned betwire the Persians and Gracians had been many, and as many bickerings and contests in the field had enfued thereupon, wherein as the Greeks both at home and abroad had constantly had successe agreeable to their dexterity, so each foil of the Persans gave as great a stroak to their credit, insomuch as they were sleighted by the other, especially after the retreat of those that affitted Cyrm, who in despight of all Arraxerxes could do, marched through the midst of his Territories as Conquerours, and having seen the great riches of those Countreys through which they passed, carried home a longing desire after them, and an indignation that such things should be enjoyed by those who seemed not in pretended a cause where none was, yet was there some occasion of offence given him, though but counted a necessary allay to his rising fortune so terrible to the Persian Empire: For when with great preparations he had befreged Vida Arrianum Periathus a Citie of Thrace, Ochus gave order to his Lieutenants to affift the lib. 1. pag. 41. befieged, which was fo powerfully done, as his defign miscarried. Yet he having brought all Greece to his beck, and established his interest sufficiently in Europe, resolved upon Asia, and affembling the estargs at Corimb, pro-

which he made mighty preparations, imposing a certain number of Souldiers uponevery Citie. The next Spring he sent over as before him into Affathree Captains, Parmenio, Amyntas, and Attalus, under pretence of freeing the Granicus.

SECT.4.

Greek Cities there, which happed the same year that Arses died . and he lived himself not long after, being habbed by one Panfanim, as he was Colemnizing the nucrials of his daughter Cleoparra, with Alexander King of Epirus. Hereupon Durius, who before fludied how to rurn the War into Macedonia, thought himself secure, despissing the youth of Alexander his son and Successor, who exceeded not the age of 20 years. 20. But Alexander being a young man of a great and reffleffe spirit, and of wildom & valour far above his ago, overcame all difficulties both in Grevoe and Alia, which his Enemies had raifed (getting himself to be chosen in a little time General of the one, as his father had been, and in the other subpressing becimes the sedition of the Army of Analys, by taking of him out of the way) and most vehemontly burnt with a defire of the Conquest of the Persian Empire; from an endeavour after which he might by no means be diversed. Having either by fair, or foul means feeled his matters in Europe, Diodorus at he passed over into Asia two years after his fathers death, and landed at Trois Olympans. with a Fleet of fixty long thips. He first cast a spear out upon the shore, and ann.3. with a Fleet of fixty long linps. Fire three care a pear out upon the more, and Juffin, lib. it. leaped out in a frisking manner, as taking possession of the Continent. Then Arriamathis, presently he made a visit to the Tombs of Achilles and Ajax, to whom he made a parentation, and mustered the Army he had brought over with him. Concerning the number of Forces, those that were there present themselves have not agreed in their relation, but according to the greatest probability, there were of foot 13000 Macedonians, of the Associates 7000, and 5000

vadeth Afia.

Macedonia in- Mercenaries, befides of Odry fe, Triballi, and Illyrians 5000. and 1000 Archers, with fuch as fought with Darts. Of horse there were 1800 Macedonians, 1800 The flutonians, and of other Gracians 600, besides a Guard of 000 Thracians and Paunians_

21. Darius after he had heard how Alexander was declared General of Diodorns at Greece, and was much spoken of for his valour, shook off his former security Olympatis. and buckled himself to preparation for resistance. He got together a considerable Navy, and raifed great Forces, for command of which he made choice of most expert Captains, and amongst the rest of Memnon the Rhodian, a man very excellent in Military matters, whom he fent into Phrygia with a band of toop Mercenaries to teduce Cycless to his obedience. He passed over the Hill Ide, and on a fudden fer upon the Citie, and had well-nigh taken it; but the Defendants making strong resistance, he plundred the Tertitories adjacent, and then retreated with much booty. In the mean while Parmenio, one of the three Captains fent into Afia by Philip, and who flood close to the interest of Alexanders took by storm Stryhinm, a Town of Phrygia, and fold the inhabitants. From thence he went to Pitanes to attempt the fame upon it, but Mennow coming upon him Bruck fuch a terrour into his men that he was forced to raise his siege. After this, Callas with a band of Macedonians and Mercenaties ingaged with the Persians in a battel at

Treas, but being overmatched in numbers, he was worked, and berook himlelf to Rhetenm. These things fell out before the passage of Alexander into 22. After (a) Alexander was landed, the Persian Captains met to con- (a) Diedmi fult about carrying on the War, whom Memnon advised by no means to ha- ad olymnin. zard a battel with him; but to lay Waste the Countrey before him, thereby to ana.3. hinder his march any farther for want of necessaries, and then to passe all their Forces over into Mucedonia, and so to transfer the sear of the War into Enrepe. This wholeforn Counfel was rejected as below the Persian contage and a refolution taken to ingage, so that gathering their forces together they marched into Phrygia towards the Hellespont, and pitched their Tents upon the River Granicus (which runnerh through the plains of Adrastes) intending it as a defence to them. (b) Alexander in his way thither passed by Lampfacus, (b) Valu. the inhabitants of which either having already revolted to the Persian, or else Maximus la.

fulpected of such an intent he resolved utterly to destroy. As he was thus exist exempt, minded Anaximmes an Historian of that place, well known formerly to his paula, bit. father, and also to him, presented himself to him, to whom he swore in so ma- like.

Boox II.

ny words, that he would not grant what he was about to ask, which the other SECT. 4. readily apprehending, defired of him that he would destroy Lampfacus, fo that with his sharpnesse of wit being circumvented, he was constrained to spire it against his will. 22. Alexander having with great trouble and danger passed the River

Granion, then (a) ingaged with the Persians in a great and bloody battel, (a) Diodorus wherein much valour was shewn on both fides. Spithrobates, a Perfian Sa-ibid,

The battel of trapa of Iomia, and Son in Law to Darine, a man of a great courage, with a frong body of Horse fell upon the Macedonians, whom no one being able to fultain, Alexander himself grapled with him , a fierce combat ensued, he wounding the King, who yet at length flew him. But Refaces his brother coming in upon Atexander, gave him such a blow on the head as broke his helmet and lightly wounded him, and a fecond had killed him outright but that Cliem, Sirnamed Niger, a Macedoniun, putting spurs to his Horse, in good time cut off the hand of the Barbarian, A great conflict then enfued betwixt the principal Persians and Macedonians, and many of the former loft their lives upon the place; amongst which of most special note were Atyxes and Pharhaces, brother to the wife of Darins, and Minbrobarzianes Captain of the Cappadoeights. These being flain, those that opposed Alexander began to flye, and afterwards all the reft; of the 100000 foot which the Perfians brought into the field about 10000 being flain, and of the 20000 Horse, 2000. Of A'ex-Adder his Army one (b) reports hine Foot-men, and 126 Horse-men to have (b) Justin et fallen, but (6) another onely 34 in all, amongst which were nine Foot-men. Togo.

The King by confession of all deserved most commendation for his valour, and (c) Plutarch, ex next to him the The falian Hoffe-men. (d) Arfites the Persian fled into (d) Aritans. Phrygia, and there killed himself, because through his advice, he seemed to lib. s. have been author of this overthrow. Sa. After he had refreshed his Army, Alexander marched through Lydia, Diodorne us having 5 dis delivered up to him, and came to Ephefus, where he dissolved prins. the Oligarchical form of Government, and let up a Democratical one in its toom, commanding the same to be done in all Greek Cities, which he ordered to be left to their own Laws. The Perfians which had escaped at Granicus were come to Mileton with Memben the Rhodian, against which City he went and belieged it both by Land and Sea, and by his Engines making great breaches in the walls, the Inhabitants yielded themselves to his mercy, to Whom he gave both life and freedom, but fuch Barbarians as he took he either flow or scattered them up and down in the quality of slaves. A little after he diffolved his Flest, confifting of 160 Ships or more, onely referving a certain number for the conveying of Engines and other instruments for a slege, amongli which were twenty Auxiliary Veffels belonging to Athens. 25. Memnon, after the taking of Milette, with the most considerable Perfian Officers, and a multitude of Mercenaties, betook themselves to Haliparnaffiu, the greatest and most elegant City in Caria, which he took upon him to defend for the King, to whom he fent as Hoftages his Wife and Chil-Alexander Per dren, and thereupon command was given to all the Maritime parts of Ala. that liberty to obey him as their Captain General in the War. Alexander in the mean all one Ci-, time fent his Engines thither by water, together with provision for his Army, and marched himself by Land thitherwards with his whole Force, fetting at fiberry in his way all the Greek Cities, which he left to their own Laws, and freed from Tribute, professing that he undertook this Expedition for the freedom of the Greeks. In his way he was met by Ada the Queen of Caria, who after the death of her Husband Idriem, was deposed by her Brother Pexodarm. She delivered up Alinda, the strongest City in the Country wherein fine dwelt, into his hands, and imploring his help for the recovery of the Kingdom, adopted him for her fon. He despised it not, and lest her the Government of Caria, over which he declared her Queen, by which courtefie the Cities being overcome, font him Crowns of gold, and delivered up thomselves into his power.

26. Orongebates a Perfian . Son in Law to Pexedarm , after his death

Persians, after the taking of Milesm, joyned themselves. Alexander now Arrianus

SECT. 4. kept possession of Halicarnasu, with whom Memnon the Rhodian and other Diodorus &

254

belieged it, and with all his might endeavouted the taking of it by affault; ut supra, but fuch was the pertinaciousnesse of the defendants, that they held him out, and making a fallie had given him a defeat, if the old Soldiers buckling their He taketh & Arms to them had not come in in good time, and repulsed them with great flaughter: after which the Soldiers forfook the City, and so he took it, and razeth Halilevelled it with the ground. The Castle he fortified with a wall, and a nocarnassus. rable dirch, in which for the defence of Caria he left 2000 forein Foot, and 200 Horse, under the command of Prolomy; and restored to his adoptive Mother Ada, the Principality of the Country. From thence he proceeded towards Lycia and Pamphylia, that reducing the Sea-Coasts into his power he might render the Enemies Navy unferviceable to him, which he in a good measure performed, and came in the midst of Winter into Mylias a Region

The treason of Alexander Lynceftes.

hands. Afterwards he went into Phaselis, where he stormed a Castle built by the Pisidians, to infest the Country. 27. Whilst (a) he here remained, he understood of a plot against his life, (b) r. by Alexander Aeropus, called also Luncestes (from Lyncus a Town of Epirus, as it's probable) who was promised by Darine the Kingdom of Macedonia, and 1000 talents of Gold besides, if he could any way procure his death. His Mother had by letters advised him to take heed of him, and the thing being confessed by Assines a Persian, whom Darius under a shew of a Message to the Governour of Phrygia, had sent to deal with him in this marter, he committed him to custody, not thinking it safe to put him to death, lest thereupon some trouble should follow, in Macedonia. From Phaselus he marched to Perga on the shore of the Pamphylian Sea, concerning which many ancient Historians reported, that it by an extraordinary providence gave way to him, and herein Fosephus hath rather been too credulous, whereas (b) at (b) Strabs a low water the place used to be dry, and gave way to passengers; only Alex- lib. 14. ander happing to come thicher in Winter-feafon, and truffing all to the goodnesse of his Fortune, would march through before the water was fallen off, so that his men waded all the day in water up to the navel. (c) Subduing (c) Arium all in his passage, at length he came to the Lake of Ascania in Phrygia, and ibid. thence in five Encampings to Celana, the Castle of which being held by the Satrapa of Phrygia with 1000 Carians, and 100 mercenary Gracians, after of Phrygia, where he entred into League with the Ambassadors sent to him from Phaselis, and the lower Lycia, who surrendred all the Cities into his nus Satrapa of Phrygia, went forward for Gordium, having wrote to Parmenio to meet him there with his Forces, who accordingly came; and there are curtius lib. 3. rived also a supplie of 1650 men out of Greece. This Gordium a City in Arrianus line. Phrygia, had been the regal City of Medas the Son of Gordius King of this & 3. Country (concerning whom notable Stories are related) and herein was a Alexand. Temple of Jupiter, wherein Alexander heard that there was a yoak belonging Julia its to Gordius, the bands of which who oever could untie, the Oracles promifed curius 1.361. him the Empire of all Afia. When he had taken the Town he came into the Temple, and asked for the yoak, which being brought to him, when he could He cutteth in not find the ends of the thongs which were hid amongst the knots, lest his and thereby either eluded or fulfilled the Oracle.

60 dayes truce (in which they had in vain expected relief from Darius) was

28. In Colana he left a Garrison of 1500 Soldiers, and declaring Antigo.

vielded unto him.

d thereby either eluded or fulfilled the Oracle.

29. Darius this while sent a great sum of money to Memnon, whom he Olymp, 111. had declared General of all his Forces, wherewith he raising many men all over ann, 4. wherehe came, and rigging a Navie of 300 ships, betook himself seriously to his work. He presently reduced Chius, and failing to Lesbus easily took Antiffa, Methymnus , Phyrrhus, and Ereffus ; but Lefbus and Mitylene more strongly fortified, with great losse of men. His name being blazed abroad by these actions, most of the Islands Cyclades sent their Ambassadors Arrianus 1. 1. about frustrate endeavour should be ominous, he cut them in pieces, with his sword, Cilicia.

a great fear feized upon the Inhabitants thereof, and many of the Gracians who envied the Fortune of Alexander, began to take courage, and conceive new hopes, amongst which were the Lacedamonians, who alwaies had despifed both his alliance and that with his Father. Thus profperoufly fucceeded Monnos Davius Davius his affairs under the management of Memnon; but Providence having otherwise determined concerning his estate, Memnon died shortly after, and with him the King's successe was even extinct. He was in good hope that the War would have been translated out of Asia into Europe, by necessitating Alexander to return; but understanding of his death, he consulted with his Friends whether he should manage the War by his Lieutenants, or go himself in person, and give the Macedonians battel.

about a Peace, and a rumour being spread that he intended to fall upon Eubara

30. The Perlians perswaded him to march in the head of the Army, which Diodoms ibid. thereby would fight with more alactity, but Charidenus (or Eudenus) an Custus lis, 3. Athenian, a man much admired for valour and prudence (who by the command of Alexander being banishe + his Country, was come to the Persian Court) advised him not rashly to commit the fortune of his Empire to the hazard of his own life, but keeping the chief power in his own hands to fend fome expert Lieutenant to the War. He told him that 100000 men would be sufficient for this enterprize; a third part of them being Gracians, with which he doubted not to engage to perfect what already was well begun by Memnon. The King at first gave ear to what he faid; but the Persians obflinately opposed it, and so interpreted his words as if he affected the chief command, for that end, that he might betray the Empire to the Macedonians. Hereat he grew angry, and in his passion upbraided the Persians with cowardife, which so far incensed the King, before this exasperated against him, that his anger overtopping his reason, he cast a belt about him after the Persian manner, and commanded him to be put to death, who foreseing his ruine, cried out as he was led away, that shortly he would repent it, and pay sufficiently for so unjust proceedings. After the cooling of his passion he repented too late of his rashnesse, and considering the valour of the Lacedamonians, bethought himself what man of worth he might find fit to succeed Memnon; but finding none to whom he might commit so great a trust, was necefficated to expose himself to danger for the preservation of his Kingdom. Then raifed he Forces in all places, wich he commanded should meet at Babylon, where accordingly were found 400000 Foot, and above 100000 Horse, and with this number (taking his Mother, Wife, one Son of fix years of age, and two Daughters marriageable along with him) hee marched towards

31. Alexander in the mean while placed Sairapaes over Paphlagonia and Arrianus & Cappadoria, which voluntarily yielded themselves, and hastned towards the curius ut Straights of Cilicia called Pyla, which being quitted by those that were there supra, placed to maintain them, he easily passed, and came to Tarjus, which Arfames the Persian also forsook, and wasting Cilicia to straighten the Macedomian Army of provisions, fled amain to the King. Here he fell sick of a disease, (b) Arisobulus, which (b) one wrote he got by too much toil; (c) others affign no particular (c) Diodorus. cause at all; but according to the general tradition, (d) he contracted it by (d) Justin (11) cause at all; but according to the general tradition, (a) ne contracted it by cashing himself all hot and sweary into the River Cydnus, whence such a cold Philarch, feized upon his Nerves that he fell speechlesse, and so small hopes there were Arriants & of recovery, that little probability was conceived of protracting the danger. Val. Maximus Onely one Physician named Philip an Acarnanian, who used a speedy and lib. 3. cap. 8. desperate kind of course in his practice, undertook the cure. But by letters extern exemp. from Parmenio he was lately advised to beware of him, as being corrupted by Darius for a great sum of money to make him away. Yet he counting it safer to commit himself to the doubtful fidelity of the man than perish by a certain difease, put himself into his hinds, and taking the potion, gave him the letters of Parmenio to read, fixing his eyes upon him as he drank, whom as he faw nothing troubled at the matter, he took more courage, and recovered the fourth day after.

Dains his

lexander.

His offers

Lieutenants revolt to A-

32. Darius having notice of the ficknesse of Alexander hasted towards Ameus Cui-SECT.4. Euphraies, thinking to prevent him, and feize upon Cilicia. But he fending time ibid,

The Perlian Empire.

Parmen o before to possesse himself of the Pyla, or Straights that part Cilicia and Syria, followed from Tarfus, and came to Anchiale built by Sardanavalus; and thence to Solus, where he placed a Garrison, and fined the inhabitants 200 Talents of filver for their affection to the Persians. Hence he marched against the Cilicians, inhabiting the Mountains, which having brought under, he returned, and understanding how Ptolomy and Afander his Lieutenants had overthrown Orontobaces the Persian, who held the Castle of Halicarnassus, whereby the parts adjacent were reduced to obedience; upon this good news he facrifized to Æsculapius, and restored the Democratical Government to the Solians. Then giving order to Philoras to lead about the horse to the River Pyramus, he marched with the foot by the Sea-Coasts, and came thither, whence he passed over to the Citie Mailos, where he had notice that Darius lay at Sochus, a place distant two dayes march from the Straights. From Mallos he passed to the Citie Issus, which being forfaken by the Perfians, Parmenio had feized on, and cleared the passage thither, where he consulted whether he had better passe forwards, or there expect his supplies out of Macedonia. Parmenio persivaded him that no place could be more convenient for him to fight in than that straight one about Issus, because both their Armies would then be equal in effect, such narrow places being uncapable to receive a multitude. After three dayes he passed the Straights and came to Myriander, where much rain falling held the Macedonians in their Tents. 33. Darius in the mean while by the perswasion of some Gracians about him, had made choice of the plains of Syria, most capable to receive his multitudes, and opportune for the horse to charge in; and for some time here he continued; but Alexander delaying his march, he was perswaded by his Courtiers that he dared not to adventure any further, or look him in the face, and because Winter approached he would lose no time, and therefore sending away his money and stuff of most value, with such as were not fit for War, unto Damascus, he hasted into Cilicia, where he supposed Alexander to have possessed himself of the difficult passages, as not daring to try battel in open field. Supposing that he pretended sicknesse, and hid himself in the straights, he passed over the Mountain, and went to Isus, most imprudently passing by, and leaving him at his back. Taking this place, and therein such of the Enemy as being fick and weak were there left, he cut off their hands, and then fearing their Arms sent them away to tell their King what they had seen; for he thought now the Enemy to have left Iffus, and fled for fear of him, and for that reason hasted over the Hill Pinarus, thinking to fall upon him in the Rear. Alexander knowing for certain that he was passed by, took thence occasion to encourage his Souldiers, who now could not be overmatched by multitudes, and fending a party of horse to view the Braights, returned thicher by night, and repossessed himself of them. Then refreshing his when fearing he should be taken alive he leaped out, and mounting an horse ready for him, he cast away his Royal apparel, and shifted for himself, after which his horse was put to the rout and ran away. The Infantry discouraged here-herewith made no confiderable opposition, the great multitudes being unferviceable in so straight and precipitous a place, and being put to the rout to hindred the flight, and trode one another down, that more damage accrued hence than from the meer strength of the Enemy. Of the Persian horse Arrianus Writeth 10000 to have been flain, and of the foot 90000, with whom others consent as to the number of the horse, but as to the soor there is little agreement, some accounting more, and others lesse: 40000 are repor-

35. Of Alexander's men 504. Curtius faith were wounded; 32 footmen were flain, and of horf-men 150. which fome reckon leffe by 20. though another increaseth them to 300. Alexander following the Chace was forced to passe with his phalange over the Enemies dead bodies, and with 1000 horse did great execution, but was not able to reach Darius, who rode upon a Mare that had a Foal left at home, and therefore ran with more speed, he being accustomed to have some kept for such necessities. His Tents were eafily taken, and therein his Mother, Wife, Son, and two daughters; but of money not above 30000 Talents; the rest being sent before hand to Damascus. The women hearing that Alexander was returned with the Robe of Darius, made great lamentation, which he understanding, sent Leonarus to them to put them out of fear as to his death; to promife them the maintenance of their former dignity, and a Visit from him to be made the next morning. As foon as it was light, he went to them with Hephassion his greatest favourite, both whom when the Mother of Darius saw, and knew not which was the King, the made reverence to Hephastion, as seeming to her from the worth of his Clorhes to be the greater person, which when she understood to have been amiffe, was troubled at it, and asked his pardon; to which he answered, smiling: Be not troubled Mother, for he alfo is Alexander. This bat- A.M. 3672. tel of Issu was fought in the moneth Mamatterion, Nicostratus (or Nico-Osymput. tel of Issu was tought in the moneth Mamacterion, interpretates for 1810-2014, the crases) being Archon at Athens, in the fourth year of the 111 Olympiad, the David. fourth of the reign of Darins, and the fourth of Alexander. A.M. 3672. 36. Alexander, after this victory, marched for Syria, and sent Parmento before him to Damaleus to feize upon Darius his Treasure, which by Cophe-Curtius lib.3. nes the Keeper thereof was betrayed into his hands, and for that was rewarded with death by one of his Complices, who fent his head to Darint. Of Coyn here was found 2600 Talents, befides 500 pound weight of Bullion, and a World of other riches. Of men and women 30000 were also taken, with 7000 beafts that carried burthens. Then was Parmenio fent to seize upon the Perfian Fleet, and others to take in the Cities of Syria, which upon the report of the successe of the battel at I flus was easily done, the Governours of Darius yielding themselves with their Treasures. As Alexander Justia, lib. 11. travelled into Syria, many petty Kings met him adorned with their Diadems, Curtius lib.4. whereof some he received into friendship, and others he deprived of their principalities, as they had deserved of him. When he came to the Citie Marashon, he received Letters from Darins, wherein he defired the ranfom of his Wife, Mother, and Children, with some other conditions of peace; but fuch as rather became a Conquerour, than one that had now been thrice shamefully beaten, not youchsafing, in his direction, to Alexander the Title of King. He disdained his offers, justified his War from the invasion of Greece by the former Persian Kings, and the treachery of Darins himself, who hired one to murder him, as Philip his father had formerly been by some set on by them. He promised him his relations without Ransom, if he would come himfelf as a Suppliant for them, and fafe conduct, he both knowing, as he faid, to overcome, and shew favour to the Conquered. And the next time he wrote he bad him remember that he did it not onely to a King, but to his own 37. Alexander marched to Byblus, which yielded to him upon composi- Arraams lib 2.

tion, and thence to Sidon, the inhabitants of which being fo hardly used for Curtius lib. merly by Ochus, in harred of the Perfians fending for him. The King of Si. Julin. lib. 11. don was one Strato, who being the fon of Geroftrams the King of Araim the men for the rest of the night, he fet a strong watch upon the Rock, and in the morning went down into the path, and fet his Army in order for a battel. fcorned by The battel 34. This being done, the Armies joyned ere long, and Alexander seeing Alexander.

where Darins was, made towards him, which when Oxyathres the brother of of Iffus. Darius saw, to prevent him, he placed a Company of most valiant hors-men before the Chariot, which cut off many of Alexander his men, who pressed forwards. But the Macedonians giving way to none in valour, with great violence broke in amongst them, and then a mighty slaughter followed, and a great heap of Carkases lay before Darius his Chariot. Many of the most noble Captains amongst the Persians fell, some of the Macedonians, and Alexander himself received a wound in his Thigh. Daring his Chariot horses being wounded with spears began to fling, & threatned the overturning of him,

SECT. 4. Island Governed it in his absence (he joyning his ships, as the rest of the Phienician Kings, to the fleet of Darius) & meeting Alexander as he came into Diodorus ad Phanicia, put a Golden Crown on his head, and gave up Aradus, and Mara- Olymp, 111. thus, a great and wealthy Town, standing upon the Continent over against it, and 4. with Mariamne, and all that belonged unto them, into his hands. But now because he had done this rather for that the will of the people was such, than out of his own inclination, Alexander deprived him of his Kingdom, and permitted his beloved Hephaltion to beltow it upon any of his friends. He chose to confer it upon a Sidonian by whom he was entertained; but he refused it, for that it was unlawfull for any but one of the Royal Rock to posfesse it. He wondring at the greatnesse of his spirit joyned with so much honesty, bid him choose any one of the Royal Race on whom to bestow it, who accordingly made choice of Abdalmon (or Abdalomnius) a poor Gardiner who wrought for his living, but of unblameable life, and defcended of the Royal family. Alexander admitting of him, faid, the habit of his body could not withstand the noblenesse of his stock, but defired to know with what patience he had endured fuch poverty, to whom he answered, That he wished he could as well bear a Kingdom, and that those his hands had farisfied his defire : whileft he had nothing, nothing was wanting to him. The King being much taken with his carriage, not onely gave him the houf-hold stuff of Strato, but most of the boory got from the Persians, subjected the Countrey adjacent unto his power, and afterwards also the Citie of Tyre, according to Diodorus. 28. Now was all Syria in the hands of the Macedonians, and whole Phase Curtius libs. nicia also except Tyre, which Citie was seated in an Island about half a mile distant from the Continent. As he marched thitherwards, the Tyrians sent Justia, lib, 11, him a C'own of Gold of great value, in a Congratulatory way, and a large quantity of provisions; which he received as from friends, and friendly figni- piodorus ad fied to the Messengers his intention to go into their Citie, to pay some vows Olymp. 112, he had made to Hercules. They told him there was a Temple of Hercules ann.i. without the Citie, in the place called Old Tyre, wherein his devotion would Plutareh in be most suitably performed, and so dissiwaded him from entrance, that he was inraged thereat, and threatned ruin to the Citie, telling them, that though Arrianus bis. they were confident in the strength of the place, and despited his Land-Army, yet in short time he would make them find they were in the Continent. And in confidence that their Town, not onely fenced with high and firong Walls, but also with the Sea, was impregnable, they resolved to stand our against him, being incouraged also by the Carthaginian Ambassadors, who after their yearly custom (in token of observance to their Mother City) were come to celebrate the facted Anniversary, and promifed them certain, and speedy supply by Sea, which for the most part at that time was commanded by their Fleets.

39. Alexander yet having not his Navy at hand, and foreseeing that a long fiege would be a great hindrance to his defigns, fent to them about an agreement; but contrary to the Law of Nations, they flew the Messengers, and threw them into the Sea, with which affront being much moved, he refolved to befiege them. Ere he could do this, such a quantity of earth or other matter was to be cast into the Sea, as to soyn the Island to the main land, which for the depth of the water, & the force of the Current, was a task almost insuperable; but there being great store of stones and suboish at hand in Old

Alexander his * Tyre, he caused it to be utterly demolished, and by the hands of many thou-great attempt fands of his own men, and the recipie of the neighbouring places, set upon the * Palaty #1. work. The Tyrians (whose King Azelmicus being absent with Darius his for the Conquering of Admiral, had left them to the Government of his fon) hindred it all wayes Tyre. possible, and when it was near concluded, a violent wind spoiled a great part of it, but to repair it he caused great Trees to be cut down in the Mountains, which rogether with the boughs being call in, and earth being heaped upon them, refifted the violence of the waves, and at length by the great number of hands, and incredible industry, the Island became but a Peninsula.

But for all this, the /yrians having the command of the Sea, their City feemed yet to be impregnable, whereupon Alexander had thoughts of guthering together a Pleet; but in the mean time came in the Kings of Aradus and Byblus, who had withdrawn themselves with their Fleet from Autophradates the Persian Admiral, and with them the Sidonian Gallies. Besides these Vessels belonging to Phænicia (which were 80 in number) at the same time came ten from Rhodes, from Solos and Mallos three, and from Lycia ten. befides one great Gally from Macedonia. All these he pardoned, as having been necessitated to joyn with the Persians. And Azelmicus the King of Tyre now left Autophradates and came home; Arrianus writing that he was taken in the City.

40. From the Mountain Libanus was wood brought for the making of Engines, Towers, and Ships, in which work whilst Alexander his men were imployed, some of the wild Arabians fell upon them, slew thirty, and took fearcely fo many. He upon notice hereof left the charge of the Siege to Perdecas, and Craterus, and speedily with a ready Band of men went into Arabia, where when they came to the mountainous parts of the Hill called Antilibanus, they left their Horses and marched on foot. When it grew night, and the Enemy approached, though his men were before, yet would he not leave his School-mafter Lysimachus being weary and spent, but fill drawing him on was parted from the Army, and forced with a few about him to paffe the night in a dark and cold place. But feeing many fires to be kindled afar off by the Enemy, he being nimble of body ran to one of them, and killing two Bitbarians that there fate, brought away a fire-flick burning to his Companions, who therewith kindled a great fire, and thereby struck such a terror into the Arabians, as all that night they passed in quietnesse. Then partly by soice and partly by agreement he reduced the Country into obedience, and in cleven dayes time returned to Sidon, where he found arrived out of Peloponne fus 4000 Greekish Mercenaries, under the conduct of Alexander the Son of Polemocrates.

41. Having then got together a Navy of 1 90 or 200 ships, he set sail from Sidon and came to Tyre, the Inhabitants whereof refused to fight by Sea, but yet let down none of their courage, though 30 Messenges were come from Caribage to let them know, that that State being hindred by a domestick War, could not afford them any fuccour. They fent their wives and children thither to be out of the danger, being thereby the more willing to undergo any themfelves, which they little regarded, making from refiftance, but at length the City was taken; one faith by treachery, another by a stratageme, but more by plain force; Alexander himself alone first going down from the wooden Tower he had reared, by a bridge laid upon the wall. The Inhabitants, though the Enemy had entred, called one upon another, and fortifying the narrow passages stood out still, till the number of 7000 (the most of those that fought) were flain. The Conquerour condemned the women and children that were found unto bondage, the young men to the number of 3000

he caused to be hanged all along the shore, or crucified, as another telleth us,

(which was accounted a fervile kind of death) because the Tyrian flives had formerly conspired against their Masters, and slain them all with their whole families, leaving no free people alive, except one Strato and his Son, to whom and his posterity they committed the Kingdom. Fifteen thousand the Sidomans faved upon the account of kindred (they reckoning both Tyre and Sidan to have been built by Agenor) from whom the City was again re-peopled, and to fuch as had fled to the Temple of Hercules, Alexander granted indemnity, amongst which the King and his family were, with some Carthaginians which were come for the honour of Hercules to the Metropolis, This befel Tyre in the moneth Hecatombaon, when Annicetus (otherwise called A. M. 3673. Nicerans and Niceras) was Archmat Athens, in the first year of the 112th Ol.112. at. 1. Olympiad: the fifth of Davins, and the fifth of Arins, and the Olympiad, the fifth of Darini, and the fifth of Alexander, A. M. 3673. 42. During this Siege, the Officers of Darius which escaped from the bar- Alexand, 5. tel at Isas, with all those that followed them, and the youth of the Cappadocians, and Paphlagonians, attempted to recover Lydia; but Antigonus who there commanded for Alexander overthrew them thrice in several places. At the same time also Aristimenes, who was fent with some ships by Darius to recover the Coast of Asia, lying upon the Hellespoker, was wholly defeated by a Fleet of Macedonians which Alexander had sent for out of Greece. 43. Whilft Alexander lay before Tyre, another Anibassage came to him from Darius, who now offered him 10000 talents as a ranfom for his relations, and all Afia betwixt the Hellespont and the River Halys in Dower with his Daughter: which conditions that he might incline him to receive, he fets before him the difficulties of paffing into the Eastern Countries, and laid the Davius sendeth losse of the last battel to the straightnesse of the place: he sought to terrifie to Alexander, which he refuleth.

Tyre taken.

new proposals him by threatning to incompasse him in the plain Countries, and bad him confider how impossible it was to passe the Rivers of Euphrates, Tigris, Araxes, and the rest, with things of the like nature. The proposals being brought before a felect Committee of Alexander's friends, Parmento who was now old, and full of riches and honour, faid, that if he were Alexander, he would accept of them, to which the King answered, that so would he, if he were Parmenio. But he returned answer to Darins, that he offered him nothing but his own, and what victory and his own valour had posses him of; that he was to give conditions and not to receive any, and that having passed the Sea it felf, he disdained to think of resistance in transporting his Army over Rivers. As for his Daughter, he faid he would marry her, though without his confent, and if he would rafte of his humanity, he should come and refer himself to him. Darius having received this answer, prepared himself anew for the War.

44. Tyre being taken, Alexander invaded Judea, refolving to bring all Eufebin chart.

Palestine into subjection. At this time Jaddue was the High-Priest there, Enfebin chart. whose Brother Manasses married Nicaso the Daughter of Sanballat, who had plin lib u. been fent from Darins to govern Samaria, being both Sons to John, called in cap. 25. Nehemiah, Jonathan and Johanan , who was Son to Teholada. Manaffes Josephus At thus marching himself, the people was displeased at it, and thereupon Tadams tiquit, lib. 11, defired him to put away his wife; not only the People but the Law fo requiring cap, 8, it. Hereupon he repaired to his Father in Law, and told him, that his wife was dear unto him; but he must either part with her or his Priest-hood, who answered, that he would so bring it about, that he should not onely be Priest,

A Temple built by Sanballat on mount Geri. zim.

but an High-Priest also, being minded to build for him upon Mount Gerizim near to Samaria a Temple like to that of Jerufalem, which thing he would obtain to be confirmed by Darius. Many betook themselves to Manages, being allured with the newnesse of the thing, and the liberality of Sanballat; but Alexander at that time paffing the Hellefoon, the confultation thereupon was diffurbed. After Darins was beaten and retired back into Perfin, Sanballat revolted into Alexander, and poing over to him with 8000 men, though now very old, defired of him leave to build his new defigned Temple, perswading him it would be for his interest, that thereby the Jews being divided amongs themselves, might be the lesse able to relist him. Alexander yielding to his request, he returned, and falling with great industry upon the work, he died not long after. 45. This was at fuch time as Alexander lay before Tyre, during which the Jove refu- from the several Cities, and amongst the rest the messengers came to Jerusafing to break lem. Faddens or Jaddus the High-Priest answered, That he had entred by Oath into fociety with Dariks, and whilft he lived he might not by any means Alexander in- break his Faith; with which answer Alexander being moved, after the tavadeth Judea, king of Type (not of Gaza as Josephus thinketh, for then he must have returned backwards) hee invaded Judaa. The High-Priest and People then looked for nothing but ruine, but he imploring the affiffance of God, was warned in a dream to go out and meet him, adorned with his Pontifical Vellments, with the Levites and People, as in a folemn Procession. Alexan-

Addusthe High-Priest of Siege, he sent round about to demand an Oath of Alleglance, and affiftance

POOR II.

But his wrath der meeting this long train, lighted from his Horse, and adored the Priest, at SECT. 4. which thing all the rest being amazed, Parmenio asked him the reason thereof, to whom he answered, that he worshipped not the Priest, but the God whom he served, for that whill he was yet in Greece, and consulted about his Expedition into Afia, fuch an one appeared to him, advised him to it, and promised him successe. Then going up to the City he ascended to the Temple, and facrifized according to the directions of the Prieft, who shewed him the Prophecy of Daniel, wherein was foretold, that a Gracian should obtain the Empire of the Persians. He accounting himself the man rejoyced thereat. and the next day offered to the People whatfoever they would ask of him. who requested they might live after their own Laws and Customs, that on every feventh year in which they fowed not, they might pay no tribute, and that fuch of their Country-men as inhabited Rabylon and Media, might also be lest to their own Laws, all which he readily granted them. He offered them also, if they would follow him, the freedom of the exercise of their Religion, whereupon many gave their names to the Expedition; and then leading his Forces to the neighbouring Cities, he was friendly received by them.

> Sicirna, (feated at the foot of the Hill Gerizim, and inhabited by the Runagates of the Jewish Nation) to honour their Temple with his presence, and to remit to them also the tribute of every seventh year, they sowing not therein : for that they were Hebrews, though not Jews, as descended of Jofeph and his two Sons Ephraim and Manaffeh, all which he referred to his return. By this time his Officers had recovered feveral places that had revol- turing lib. 4. ted, as Callus Paphlagonia, Antigonus Lycaonia, and Balacrus Miletus, after he had overthrown Idarnes the Captain of Darius. Cilicia he had committed to the care of Softrates, the Country about Tyre to Philotas the fon of Parmenio, who had delivered his charge of Cebestia to Andromachin, that he might follow the Expedition. All the Towns of Palestine he had got now into his hinds, except Gaza, which Ratio the Eunuch resolved to hold out against him. This was a City distant from the Sea about two miles and an half,

46. The Samaritans met him in the way, defiring him to vifit their City of difficult accesse by reason of the depth of sand about it, the Sea near unto He beliegerh it being very muddy, being large, feated upon an high Rock, and compafied with a strong wall. Hither, having commanded Hephastion to go before with the Fleer, he came, and sate down before it with all his Forces. 47. Having viewed the fituation of the City, he resolved that light kind of Diodorus, earth to be fit for digging of mines, which he commanded presently to be at- Josephus, tempted, and feeing that no wooden turrets could be erected by the walls be Arrianus, ut cause of the loosenesse of the sand, he made a great heap of earth and stones prins, to be laid, which equalled the height of the walls, on which he planted his Engines for batterie. By the advice of Aristander his Prophet, he contained himself for a time without the reach of the Arrows, but the Arabians whom Batis the Governour (called Baberneses by Josephu) hid hired, issuing forth set fire to the Engines, and beat away the Macedonians from the Mount, he ran in with the Targetiers to the rescue, and kept his men from running, but he himself received a wound on his shoulder. Afterwards those Engines being come by water with which he had taken Tyre, he caused the whole City to be furrounded with mounts two furlongs broad, and 250 foot high, whereby conflicting both with Engines above ground and below, at length after two moneths it was taken, the wall being broken by a Mine, at which breich the Macedonians entred. Alexander himself led in his men, and when his former wound was not yet quite cured, received a bruise on his thigh with a flone. The defendants flirred not from their places, but fighting to the laft, were all flain to the number of 10000. The women and children the Conquerour made Slaves, and furnishing the City with a new Colony g'- Diodonis ad thered out of the places adjacent, used it as a Garrison in the War.

48. From Gaza he fent Amynta the Son of Andremo with ten Gallies into Olymp. 112. Macedonia, to make a Leavie of the floutest young men, and bring them custius lib. 4.

for Egypt.

SECT. 4. over, because the War though prosperous, wasted his old stock of Soldiers. and he could not so well trust foreiners as his own subjects. Then marched He marcheth he strait for Egypt, and the seventh day after his removal from Gaza arrived at that place, afterwards called Alexanders-Camp, and came to Pelulium. Here met him great multitudes of Egyptians, who being weary of the infolence and avarice of the Persians, expected his coming, and gladly received him. Placing a Garrison in Pelasium, and commanding that the ships should favl up the River to Memphis, he having the Nile on his right hand, came, through the defart to Heliopolis, and thence croffing the River, unto Memphis, which when he approached, Mazaces the Persian Governour met him. and delivered into his hands 800 Talents, with all the royal houshold-stuff. Here he facrifized to all the Egyptian Gods, and celebrated Games, and then fivled down the River to the Sea; and when he came to Canopus fayled about the Lake Marcotis, betwixt which and the Egyptian-Sea, he chose out a place whereon to build a Citie, which he would have called after himself Alexandria. 49. In this place towards the Sea and Haven stood there once a Village Strabolib, 17. named Rhacotis. When the figure of the new Citie was to be delineated, for want of Chalk, they marked out the ground with Meal, which prefently was Plutarch in feized upon by an innumerable company of Fouls of all forts, that from the Alexandra Sea and Lake came flocking thither, and devoured it all. Hereat the King was discouraged, but his Prophets told him, that it signified the Citie should be exceeding populous and wealthy, and nourish all forts of men. He himself designed in what place the Forum should be, and where the Temples that were to be Confecated to the Egyptian and Gracian Gods, and herein used the skill of that noble Architect Dinocrates (called also Stafferates) who was imployed by the Ephelians, in restoring of their Temple formerly confumed with fire. This (afterwards Famous) Citie was founded by Alexander in the fifth year of his reign, and the first of 112th Olympiad, the 417th of Nabonasar, from which year the moneth Thoth, as also the fifth of Darius, the supputation of the years of Alexander is begun by Ptolomy the Mathematician, and a Native of this Citie, A.M.3673. 329 years before the Era of

50. Leaving the care of his new defigned Citie to fit Overseers, he took lidem. a journey toward the Oracle of Tupiter Hammon, fituate in the vast fandy desarts of Libya, because he had heard that Persens and Herenies had for- Arrians line. merly gone thither; or to know his fortune, or that he might at least have occasion to boast of his knowledge of it. In the midst of the way he encountred Ambassadours sent to him from the Cyrenaans, who brought a Crown Olymp 112, with other great gifts, amongst which were 300 excellent horses trained up ann. and taught for the War; which receiving in good part, he entred into confederacy with them. Two great dangers especially to be met with in this iourney, viz. want of water in fo dry a place, and of being overwhelmed as another wrote, by a more direct one towards Memphis.

Temple of

Jupiter Ham-

by heaps of fand, which the South-wind threw upon 50000 of Camby fes his army, he escaped wonderfully by abundance of rain which is said to have falls. Goeth to the whereby the way was made more firm and paffable; and two Crows are reported to have been his Guides, and in the night-time when they could not be seen, by their croaking to have given notice which way they tended. When he arrived at the Temple, the Priest, either hired to it, or mistaking the Greek language as it is thought , faluted him by the name of Tupiter's fon-Hereupon he took the name upon him, and to his Mother Olympias as well as others wrote with that Title. She facetiously checked him for flandering and terrour hereof he hoped to do wonders with the Barbarians, & because Ham- cap,4 mon was painted with the upper parts like a Ram, and the nether like to a man, he also would appear to be horned, for which reason amongst the Arabians he obtained the name of Dulcarnaijn. When he received an answer satisfactory, as he pretended, he returned into Egypt the same way he came, or,

51. Being

51. Being come to Memphis, he received many Embassies from Greece, SECT. 4. whence also came a new supply of Forces, viz. 400 Greekilh Mercenaries from Antipater, and 500 horse out of Thessaly. The neighbouring Cities Arrianus.curhe exhausted for the peopling of his new one, which he ordained should be tius. Julia. the Metropolis of Egypt. Amongst other forts of people the Jews also, Josephus de whose fidelity he approved, were inrolled inhabitants, having equal privilege with Graciane, and obtaining the name not onely of Alexandrians, but of Antiquit. Macedonians also: and to the Souldiers of Sanballas the Cushaan, who fol-tib. 11. cap. 8.

lowed him into Egypt, caused he Lands to be affigued in Thebais, which Province he committed to their defence. He greatly defired to see not onely the remoter parts of Egypt, but Athiopia also : but the War depending yet with Daring, hindred him, and therefore disposing of Egypt, he removed in the Spring thence to Tyre in Phanicia. Over Egypt he left Efchylm the cuties. Rhodian, and Pencestes the Macedonian, with 4000 Souldiers; and the care of the River Nile he committed to Polemon with 30 Gallies. As for the Civil Government, he left it to Dolaspes the Egyptian, to rule according to the an-52. Ere his departure, he understood of the death of Andromachus the Governour of Syria, whom the Samaritans burnt alive. With all expedition then he removed to revenge his death, but being on his way, the murderers were delivered up to him, whom he punished according to their deferts, and all diligence. Some have reckoned 1000000 foor, and 400000 horse, bedes 200 Chariots, and 15 Indian Elephants; whereas Alexander his Forces amounted but to 40000 foot, and 7000 horse. In the moneth Hecatom-baon Alexander came to Thapfacus, where he found two bridges on the River Euphrates; but such as reached not quite over to the further side. Ma-

was fent thither to hinder his passage, with order also if he could not do over all his Forces, and so proceeding through Mejopotamia, having Euphrates and the Armenian Mountains on his left hand, made for Babylon, not the nearest way, but that which was more convenient for provision and moderation of hear. As he went forwards, he was given to understand by some Scouts which he took, that the King had pitch't his Camp on the further fide of the River Tigris, with intentions to hinder his passage, but coming thither, he neither found him , nor any opposition at all. This River was so swift (being upon that account by the Persians called the Arrow) that by the violent force of its ftream it drave many weighty stones before it, and those that lay in the bottom were made to .ound, and well pollished by continual rolling, that no man was able to fight on fo flippery a footing, fo that the Maserdanian foot-men to wade the River, were forced to enterlace their Arms, thereby making one weighty body to reful the fury of the ffream; fo deep the Chanel was on the further fide, that to keep their Bowes from being wer, as also their Arrows and Darrs, they were inforced to lift them above their heads, so that Darius might here have easily resisted the Macedonians, and given a check to the fortune of the Conquerour, had not the fate of the dying Perfian Empire beforted his mind, and deprived him of all common

Alexander pal-this, to spoyl, and destroy all things in his way; but upon his approach he hel Eubrases, made haste away, and Alexander then making up the bridges, transported placed Memnon in his room. Taking the Citie Samaria, he gave it to the Enfebrus. Macedonians to inhabit, but the Countrey about it to the Jews, for their fidelity to him, with immunity from Tribute. Coming to Tyre, he celebrated Josephus com-Games, as he had done at Memphia, and facrifized again to Hercules; and tra Apionin nominating feveral Governours over the places already Conquered, took his lib.2. journey towards Euphrates.

53. Darius having understood of his defign, to find him out whither loever Arrianus, Chihe should go, gave out orders for all his Forces to meet at Babylon, whereof time, &c. some consisted of such Nations as rather seemed to fill up the names of men than to make refultance. This Army being almost greater by the half than that which perished at Issu, many wanted Arms, which were sought for with bringing her in danger with June , by making her an Whore to Jupiter. By the Gelling likes, prudence.

And Tigris.

mius.

54. Having (though with great danger) passed the River without any losse fave of a little of the Baggage, he led on through Affria, having on the right hand the River Tigris, and on the left the Gordian Mountains. On the fourth day after his paffage Mazam fent a party of 1000 horse upon him, which was easily repelled by the Paonian Captain Ariston, who slew their Captain, and bringing his head to Alexander, demanded a Cup of Gold as his fee, according to the custom of their Countrey, to whom he replied, smiling, That an empty one was due, but he would give him one full of good liquor. Two dayes he here continued, giving orders for a march the next morning; but it hapned that in the first watch the Moon was Eclypsed, and seemed of a bloudy

An Eclypse of colour, whereat (as all other common people long time after) the Macedothe Moon dif- nians, not knowing the cause, were marvelously affrighted. They apprehended it as a certain token or presage of their overthrow and destruction, and began to murmur, that for the ambition of one man that disdained to own Philip as his father, and would be called the fon of Jupiter, they should all perish, being forced to make War, not onely against Worlds of Enemies, but against Rivers, Mountains, and the Heavens themselves. He knowing it to be dangerous to lead his Army to fight whilest it was possessed with matter of terrour, called the Egyptian Astrologers, to assure them that this Eclypse was rather a certain presage of good successe and he made it out onely by this reason, that the Gracians were under the Aspect of the Sun, and the Persians of the Moon; and therefore the Moon failing and being thus darkned, the Persian glory was to be Eclypsed. Aristander the Soothfayer affirmed the fame, promifed Alexander good successe, and affirmed a battel was to be fought in that fame moneth, for the facrifices portended victory. Hereby the Souldiers were fetled, and their courage redoubled, according to the great influence of superstition upon the common fort of people.

55. Thinking it wildom to make use of the present disposition of their minds he marched thence, and proceeded, till he heard that Daring was not much above twenty miles diffant from him, upon notice whereof he refled there his Army for four dayes. Here were interrupted Letters written by Darine to the Gracians, to perswade them to kill, or betray him, which by the advice of Parmenio he suppressed, and removing thence it hapned that Statira, the Wife and Sifter of Daring, through the rediousnesse of the journey, and grief, fell into untimely travel, and died, at which disaster Alexander shed tears, and spared no cost in solemnizing her Funerals, grieving that he was thus deprived of fo fair an occasion of shewing mercy. One of her Chamberlanes, by name lireos, an Eunuch, slipped away, and carried the news of her death unto Darius. He fell of beating his head, and deplored the fortune of the Persians, which not onely suffered the Queen to be taken Captive, but dying in that condition to want the Ornament of a Royal Funeral. Being satisfied that there was no want of any fuch Ceremonies, or of tears from his Enemy to bedew her Hearfe, he fell into a jealous conceit that nothing but Vide Pin in unchaste affections had drawn them from Alexander, and lamented his Wife's vita Alexander condition, who had been subjected to the luftfull power of the Conquerour. But being with much ado perswaded of his continency, with hands lifted up to Heaven, he prayed that he might be able to reffore the fortune of the Perfians to his posterity as he found it, that so he might be able to require Alexder for his noble carriage towards his relations: But if the fatal time was come, and it so seemed good to Nemesis, and the vicissitude of worldly things, that the Persian Empire should receive its period; that none but Alexander alone might fit in Throne of Cyrus.

Statira the wife of Darius dicth.

56. He dispatched away to him then a new Embassy of ten of his principal friends, and offered him for his Mother, and two Daughters Ranfom 30000 Talents, and in portion with his Daughter Statyra all Afia, be- Julin, Calif. twixt the Hellespont and the River Euphraies. He answered that sometimes Diodogram has endeavoured to corrupt his friends, and otherwhiles his Soldiers to destroy him and that therefore have been soldiers. him, and that therefore he was to be profecuted not as a just and fair enemy, but as a pernicious murderer: that what he had already gotten, though now offered to him, was the reward of War, by which the bounds of both their Kingdoms should be limited, and that they should both abide by what the fortune of the next day should assign them. Darius had before this time come to Arbela a City belonging to Babylon, where leaving the greatest part of his baggage, he went to the River Lycus, over which laying a Bridge, he paffed over his Army in eight dayes, and proceeding ten miles pitcht his Camp upon the River Bumelus, near to a Village called Gaugamela, which in the Perfian Language fignified the house of a Camel; for that Darius the Son of H)- Stabo lib. 16. fraspio gave this place to the maintenance of a certain Camel which had been tired in carrying his provisions through the Defarts of Scythia. This was a Champain Country round about, and fuch grounds as were high he caused to be levelled, to be convenient for the fighting of his Horse, and that he might have

The Persian Empire.

57. Understanding from his Ambassadors returning, that he must expect nothing but a battel, he fent Mazam to defend a passage which he never yet dared so much as to hazard, the rest of the Army he caused to march above a A Pannnick mile farther in battel-aray, and there to expect the Enemy. Alexander forfear feizeth

a free prospect round about him.

on the Macedo tifying his Camp which he left with an ordinary guard, went forwards towards the Enemy, and in his march a pannick fear feized on his Army, by reason of the Lightning of the Heavens in the Summer feation, which they took as proceeding from some attempt of Darins; with some pains he undeceived them, and thought good to fortifie himself in the same place that night. Yet in the night he departed thence about the fecond watch, as thinking to fall on the Enemy by break of the day. Upon his approach Mazam with his Horse forfook an Hill which he had feized on, and returned to Darins, which place Alexander by the advice of Parmenio chose himself, as safer than the Plain, and from which one might take a full view of the Persian Army. Before the Fight his friends came to him and complained of the Soldiers, because in Plutarch in their conferences they had agreed to take all the profit of the plunder to them- Apophthegm. felves, without bringing any thing to his treasurie; whereat he smiled, and faid, they told him good news concerning the discourses of such as were refolved to overcome, and not to flie. Many then of the Soldiers reforted to him, and bad him be of good cheer, and not be afraid of the multitude of the Ehemies, which would not endure their very shouting for the battel. 31 58. The two Armies lying in the view of each other, in the eleventh night Idem is after the Eclyps of the Moon, Darius kept all his men in arms, multring his Alexand. Forces by torch-light, which mide all the Plain betwirt Niphates and the Continus. Gordjean mountains to be of a flame. Alexander in the mean time while Diodous, this Macedoniane took their reft . was busie in his Sacrifice with Aristander.

rethem, that he month not steal Victory; which Darius was afraid of, and therefore contained his men in Arms all the night, which not a little injured his raffairs the day following. All the night Alexander passed without sleep, being careful for the main chance; but about the morning watch fell fo fall affeep, that it being full day he could hardly be awaked, and to his friends demanding the cause thereof he replyed, that now he was eased by Darins of all his care, reeing he had gathered all his Forces into one place, and therefore in one day he hoped to put amend to his daily labours and danger. His whole force confifted of about 7000 Horse, and 40000 Foot, over which his chiefest Captains were Parmenio, with Philosas and Nicanor his Sons, wing, and in both caused the battel to bee made something bending-

Parmenio and others would have had him fallen upon the Perfians in the dead of the night, thereby to strike more terror into them; but he answered whereof this commanded the Foot Regiment of the Argyraspides, or Silthere-Shields ; Ganns, who commanded the Elimious; Perdiccas Captain of the Oresta and Lyncesta; Meleager; Polysperchon; Hophaston Captain of his Life-guard; Monidas; Philip the Son of Balaocus; Craterin; Erirome the Mirilanaan; Philippus that had the Theffalian Troups, and Clause the black who lead the Kings Regiment. He himself commanded the right departed.

266

Darius flieth.

SECT. 4. wife, left they should bee incompassed with the multitudes of the Per-59. Darins having marshalled his men according to their several Nations.

took the command of the wing opposit to Alexander, and lead on against him. After a found to the charge on both fides, and a great shout, the Armies met, The battel of and in the first place the scythed Chariots being driven with great fary upon the Macedonians, fruck them with great confernation, for that Mazans Gangamela.

the General of the Horse following the Chariots close, made the charge the more terrible. But the Macedonian phalange, according to the King's order, beating their Targets with their Spears, made such a noise, that the Horses skared therewith, bore backwards, and tetreated for the most part; and though fome went still forwards, yet the Macedonians parting afunder, made a lane and let them passe through, yet with the losse of many whom the Scythes had caught. After the Arrows and Darts were spent, the Armies came to handstrokes, wherein the Horse was first ingaged. Davius in the left wing was floutly defended by his followers, who fighting under his eye, laboured all they could with their multirudes to oppresse the Macedonians. [And Mazens in the left wing charging with great valour, at the first onset did great execution. Then sent he a Party of 2000 Caducians, and 1000 of the choicest Scythian Horse, to fall upon the Enemies Camp, where a great tumult following, some of the captive women took their opportunity, and betook themselves to their friends, but Sify gambis Mother to Darins refused to stir, and kept her felf quiet in the same place, not thinking it fit to trust her felf to the doubtful fortune of an escape, or shew any ingrateful disre-

60. In the mean while, part of the Horse that fought about Darins, with their multitudes pressed fore upon the Macodonians, and forced them back. whereby the second time the Victory seemed to incline towards the Persians. Alexander feeing how he was concernd to relieve his men, broke out with his own Regiment upon Darius himself, and with a Dart slew his Chariotdriver. The Courtiers hereupon crying out, those that were further off supposed the King himself to have been sain, and therewithall betook themsclves to their heels, which the next seeing fled also for company. The ranks also about Darins began to be broken, till at length all one side was bared, and then he accounted it also time to fly, and therewithall such a dust was raised, Alexander with his Troops giving the chase, that it could not be discovered which way he sted, using great celerity therein, and for that purpose mounted a Mare that had larely soaled, as he had done before at the bartel at Iffus. While these things were thus carried in the left wing, Mazens in the right fore pressed upon his adversaries, which Parmenio with the Theffa-

lian Horse and other for a time sustained; but being put sore to it, be sent spect to Alexander: the Southians plundred most of the baggage and to Alexander for speedy relief. But he could not be found; so that he was forced to use his utmost skil in making the Thessalians endure the brunt; and at length put the Barbarians to flight, after they were disheartned with the report of their Princes fortune. 61. Darius with a few in his company came to the River Lyons, which having passed, when some advised him to break down the Bridge, lest the Enemy should make use thereof in the pursute, knowing that if the should do fo, he must leave many thousands of his men as a prey to him, he answered, that he had rather afford way to the purfuers, than take it from those that fled. Here Alexander immediately purfued him, but not being able to reach him, he returned, and fought a more sharp encounter than ever with some Parshians, Indians, and many of the valuances of the Persians, wherein though he had the better, yet he loft Sixty of his followers, and Hephafton with Conus and Mondas were wounded. Of the Burbarians (a) one maketh (4) Diodora above 90000 to have been flain, of the Mineedonians 100, and many wounded. Another (b) countern of the former 200000 to have been flain, (b) Anissu. Main.

CHAP. I.

Boor II

not broken; Yet of Alexander's men but 100 at most, with 1000 horses, SECT.4. partly killed outright, and partly broken in the chase. A (c) third reckoneth 40000 Persians, and lesse than 200 Macedonians to have been lost. (c) curting. This battel was fought at Gaugamela a Village fituate upon the River Bum-Ins, which being but an obscure place, the Macedonians to innoble their Victory, gave out that it was at Arbela, a Town of good note, some fifteen miles distant, beyond the River Lyon. Alexander obtained the Victory on A. M. 3674. the fifth day of the moneth Boedromion, in the fixth year of his reign, as also Olymp. 112, an. the fixth of Darius; Ariftophanes (not Ariftophones his Successor; as some 4. V. C. 423. mistook) bein Archon at Athens, in the second year of the 112th Olympiad, Alexand, 8,

62. Darius fled from the River Lycus to Arbela, where he arrived about midnight, and then concluding that Alexander would march to Babylon and Sufa, refolved to flie into the utmost borders of his Kingdom, there to renew the War; and accordingly withdrew himself into Media, beyond the Mountaines of Armenia. About midnight Alexander fet forwards for Arbela, hoping to take him there with all his treasure; but arriving there the next day, he found not him, but met with much treasure, with his Bow and Target. Now seemed the Empire of the Persians to all men to be dissolved, and Alexander dethereupon Alexander was declared King of Asia, and for joy thereof facrificlared King zed with great magnificence to his Gods, and bestowed riches, houses, and of Alia, Countries upon his friends. Foreseeing that the air thereabouts, by reason of the corruption of the dead bodies might be infectious, he removed with all speed from Arbela towards Babylon, being in his way met with Maxans the Governour, who gave it up into his hands, and Bagophanes the Keeper of the Castle and the King's treasures, lest he should be exceeded by Mazaus, caused the way to be strowed with flowers and garlands; silver Altars heaped with Frankincense and other odours being placed on both sides. The Townsmen came also to meet him, whom he commanded to follow his rears and fo entred the City and Palace in a Chariot, with his armed men about him.

Thirty dayes he spent in * looking over Darius his housholdstuff, all which * Justin lib. tt. time his Army glutted themselves with the contentments of the Town. Here Carting. the Chaldeans shewed him the motions of the Stars, and the appointed viciffi-Diodoins. tudes of times : and Califtbenes the Philosopher sent into Greece unto Ariforte (whose coufin german his Mother was) the Coelestial observations of (a) 1903 years. He consulted these men about his affairs; and at their desire (a) Porphysical caused such Temples to be rebuilt, as Xerxes had out of anger destroyed, after april Simplicihis overthrow in Greece. And especial care was taken for that of Belus in the um de calo, 1.2 midst of the Ciry, the ruines of which were so great, that the labour of

(b) 10000 men for two moneths was required for the clearing of the ground, (b) Strabo lib. He commanded all his Soldiers to lay their hands to the work, amongst which 16. P.1g. 738. the Jews onely refused to do it, who thereupon received great incommodity, till fuch time as they were discharged of this task by the King, as (c) Hecataus (c) Apud the Abderise wrote in his Book concerning the Fews, who also at that time Ii- Foseph, cour, wed with Alexander. 63. He committed the charge of the Castle of Babylon to Again of

Pydna, with a Garrison of 700 Macedonians, and 300 Mercenaries, appointing Mazans the Satrapa of the Country. To Apollodorus of Amphipolis, and Meneres of Pella, he affigned the Government of the Militia of the Satrapies of Babylon, and the other Countries as far as Cilicia; leaving them 2000 Foot, and 1000 talents of filver, to hire as many Solders as they could; and to Mithrinas who betrayed the Castle of Sardis unto him, he granted Armenia. Of the money which he found at Babylon, to every Macedonian Horse-man he gave seven Minæ (each Attick Mina containing an 100 Drachmes, and about 3 1. 2 f. 6 d. Sterling) to every stranger five; to every Macedonian Foot-man two, and to every ftranger two moneths pays for a reward. Then fer he forwards from Babylon, and in his way mer with a supply of 500 Horse, and 6000 Foot, sent out of Macedonia, with 600 Horse out of Thrace, and 3500 Foot; and out of Peloponnesus 4000 Foot; and a greater number taken, with all the Elophants, and luch Chariots as were and 380. (or according to Diodorus little leffe than 1000) horse. These were SECT. 4. also accompanied with 50 of the Noblemen's sons of Macedonia, for the Guard to the Kings person. 64. Drawing near to Sufa, he met with the fon of the Satrapa thereof. fent unto him with a Messenger that brought Letters from Philoxenus, whom presently after the battel at Gaugamela he had sent thither. The Letters imported that the Susians had yielded their Citie to him, and that all the King's Treasure was safe for him, which Abulites the Sarrapa sent his son also to fignifie, either for that he fought to obtain favour, or as some thought, being underhand ordered by Darius to do fo; that Alexander being bu-

Mm 2

Cometh to Sufa.

He is oppo-

fed at the Perfia by

Straights of Ariobarzanes.

He cometh

to Perfeplis.

fied with fuch booty, he might have time to confult the better for his own affairs. On the twentieth day after his departure from Babylon he arrived at Sufa, where he took possession of betwixt fourty and fifty thousand (as is to be gathered from all Authors) Talents of Silver, befides Gold and Rich Furniture. Many things he there found, which Xerxes had brought out of Greece, and amongst the rest the brazen Statues of Harmodius and Aristogiton, which he sent back unto Athens. He left the Mother and Children of Darius at Sufa, with Masters to teach them the Greek tongue, and then committing the Citie to the care of Archelms, the Castle to Xenophilus, the Treasury to Callicrates, and the Satrapy of the Countrey of Sufa to Abulites, in four encampings he came to the River Pasitigris, being resolved to invade Persia. 65. Near to the Countrey of Sufa lieth that of the Uxians, running out Diodorus, into the Borders of Perfia, and leaving a straight passage betwix it self and Carlins. the Susian Dominions. The inhabitants of the low-land Countrey became of them he forced to submit; and whereas they demanded money of him Arrianus, which they used to receive from the Kings of Persia for their passage, he im- Polyanus posed a Tribute of 100 Horses, 500 Cattel, and 30000 Sheep yearly to be lib.4. paid, they living like Shepheards, and using no money. After this he committed the baggage, with the Theffalian Horse, the Mercenaries and Associates, with the rest of the Army that used heavy Armour, to Parmenio, to lead that way into Persia, that was passable with Carriages, and he himself taking the Macedonian foot with the horse of the associates, and others, with all speed marched a nearer one through the hilly Countrey. Being arrived at the Pyla, or Straights of Persia, he found Ariobarzanes, a Persian Satrapa. feized thereof, by whom he was repelled also with some disgrace and losse, being forced to retreat four miles from the Straights; but at length being led by a Shepheard, another difficult way, he came upon his Enemies on a fudden, and put them to flight. But Ariobarzanes in the midft of near fourty horse, and 5000 foot, with great slaughters on both sides broke through the Army of the Macedonians, which on both fides had befet him, and made for Persepolis the chief Citie of that Countrey, but being shut out nemies, and with great valour renewing the battel, perished with all his followers.

66. Having private notice from Tiridates the Eunuch, Keeper of the Treasure at Persepolis, that they there had an intention to rifle it upon hearing of his coming, he took the horse, and all the night marched thitherwards. Being a quarter of a mile from the Town, about 800 Grecians merhim in manner of fuppliants, whom the former Perfian Kings had reduced into bondage, and as a token of flavery cut off their Feet, Hands, Ears, or Noses; and having marked them with some Barbarian Letters, kept them as laughing stocks for derision. They besought Alexander, that as he had done by Greece, so he would also deliver them from the cruelty of their Enemies. He offered then fend them back, but they rather chose to receive some grounds to live on, than returning home to carry greater disgrace than comfort to their relations. To each of them then he gave 3000 Drachms, and 10 Garments, with Cattel, Sheep, and Corn, for the stocking of their grounds. The next day he called a meeting of his Officers, whom by those that kept it for the Conquerour, he turned again upon his E-without much ado subject to Alexander; but the other with some slaughter

Burneth in a Palace of Perfepolis.

> them to behold him feated in the Palace, and Throne of Xernes. Cometh to which he plundered.

he told how there was no Citie more inveterate against the Gracians than SECT. 4. that, which had been the Seat of the Persian Kings, and that therefore by the destruction of it they were to make a Parentation to their Ancestors, The Town, all besides the Palace, he allowed the Souldiers to plunder, who made a great flaughter of Captives, and got unestimable riches in that place, which heretofore of all they had been most secure. Entring the Castle, he received the Treasure which there had been heaped up from the time of Cyraufeth to be rus the Great, containing a great quantity of Gold and Silver. Diodorus faith, he took thence 120 Talents, Gold being reckoned at the reckoning of filver, part of which he employed in the present service of the War, and the rest fent to Sufa to be kept.

67. Leaving a Garrison in Persepolis, and a great part of the Army with the baggage there, with 1000 horse, and a party of foot, he made an invasion into Perfia. Much rain fell, and grievous Tempests ensued, but he persevered in his purpose, and also when they came to such places as were sull of Snow and Ice, and though the inhabitants fled from their Cottages to He harrazeth the Mountains, and killed his stragglers, yet he brought them to submit, the Countrey and laying waste the Territories of Persia, subdued also the Mardi, a Warlike Nation, differing much from the customs of the other Persians; and on the 30th day returned to Perfepolis. Then did he distribute gifts to his friends, making no spare of Treasure, and there he wintred four moneths, rather enervating than refreshing his Army with the delicacies of the place. For the celebration of his victories he offered magnificent facrifices, and feafted his friends Princely; and to the feaft admitted Courtifans. Amongst the rest was Thais the Athenian, the Mistresse of Ptolomy the son of Lagus. She gave out that the King would atchieve a most gallant Enterprize, if in a frollick he would with them fet on fire the Palace, and thereby in one moment overthrow the glory of the Persians by the hands of women. This finding acceptance amongst the younger fort, now in the midst of their Cups, one amongst them defired that they might now revenge the injuries offered to the Temples of the Greeks with burning fire-brands, which was feconded by others; but yet they faid, that so great an affair did onely belong to Alexander. He being moved hereat, was led out by Thais in a dance with the Minstels, and the receiving a fire-brand from him, first set it to the Palace, after which all the rest followed, and so that structure was reduced into ashes. Thus was the fury of Xerxes against Athens revenged by a Woman, and Native of that Citie, in the fame way, though accompanied with derifion. But Alexander afterward repented too late, alleging that he should more grievously have punished the Persians, by forcing

68. From Persepolis he removed to Pasargade, a Citie founded by Cyrus the Great, and the antient Seat of the Persian Kings, which being delivered up to him by Gobases the Governour, he therein found 6000 Talents. Here he saw the Sepulchre of Cyrus in a Garden, into which he commanded Aristobulus (who wrote the story) to enter, who there found a pag. 730. golden Bed, a Table, and Cups, with a golden Basket, and great Hore of Apparel, and Robes adorned with Pearl. On this place Cyrus overthrew A. frages the Mede in his last battel, and thereby obtaining the Soverainty of Afia, in memorial of it built this Citie, and a Palace, which being by Cartins named Persagada, or Pasagada, fignifieth the Army of the Persians. Then Gad, turma, Alexander either by force, or fair means, became Master of all the other Ci- Stephanns ties of Persia, about the time of the rising of the seven Stars, from which the antients used to begin their Summer. He placed over this Countrey Phra-faortes a Sairapa, and then, being minded to pursue Darsus, set forwards for Media, where he heard he was; but being within three dayes journey of Arrianus, Echatane, thefe met him Bisthanes the son of Ochus, who reigned before Darius. He affured him that the King was gone thence five dayes before, having taken with him 7000, or 8000 Talents, and being accompanied with an Army of 6000 foot, and 3000 horse.

69. Darins

g uncla.

2:0

69. Darius staid at Echatane some time to receive such of his Soldiers as had escaped the battel; and for the furnishing of them with Arms. He raised Whose Towars forces in the Neighbouring Nations, and fent to the Satrapa of Baltria, and del street the higher Countreys, to retain them in obedience. And he determined, that if Alexander should stay about Babylon, or Sufe, to continue in Media in expectation of some better change of fortune; but if he should pursue him, then to betake himfelf into Parthia, or as far as Battria, and lay all the Countrey waste as far as he passed, to cut off the provisions of the purfuer. He fent therefore the women with all his Furniture and Carriages to the Cafpian Straights, and staid himself, with such forces as he had raised, at Echanane, till such time as Alexander was within leffe then two hundred miles of him. Then thought he of Battria; but fearing to be overtaken by Alex- Conting like.

Book II.

CHAP. I.

And upon Alexander's

ander (against whose celerity no distance seemed to be sufficient) he changed his purpose, and though he fled, yet prepared he himself rather for a fight than flight. His Army confifted now (according to Currius) of 20000 foot (whereof 4000 were Gracians, Commanded by Pairon, (a man for his constant fidelivy to Darius, never enough to be commended) and 3300 Ballrian horse, under the Command of Beffus the Satrapa of the Countrey. 70. Alexander being come to Echatane, fent back towards the Sea the Theffalian horse, and other affociates, bestowing on them, besides their full pay, 2000 Talents. To Parmenio he gave in charge to bring all the Treasure out of Perfia into Echaiane to be committed to the truft of Harpalus, whom Acry to lo purfucth him

thers bind

Darius.

he left with a Garrison of 6000 Macedonians, besides some horse, and of the affociates; and then afterwards he ordered him to march through the Countrey of the Cadufians into Hyrcania. Clim he commanded to go with his own Regiment into Parthia whither he himself intended to come. but now with a felect party with incredible speed pursued Darius, and in eleven Encampings came to Rhaga. Here feeing no hope ever to reach him , who before this had passed the Caspian Straights) he staid five dayes, and then marched for Parthia, and on the first day pitch't his Camp by the Straights, and on the next having entred them, news was brought to him concerning the Captivity of Darius. 71. For Bellus the Satrapa of Battria, and Nabarzanes a Colonel of horse, though his own servants, rebelled against him, and drawing their men to their party, caused him to be bound, with an intention if Alexander should overtake them, to curry favour with him by the delivery of fuch a prisoner into refler and ohis hands; but if they should escape, then to kill him, seize upon his Kingdom, and renew the War. They feized on his money and fluff, and raking into their fociety Brazus, or Barzaentes, the Satrapa of the Arachois and Drangi, lead him away Captive in a Chariot, bound in Golden Fetters, as bescemed so great a King, but yer, lest he should be known, they covered over the Chariot with base skins, and unknown men drove it, his keepers following aloof off, lest he should be discovered to any that asked of him, The Perfians having none now to follow, joyned themselves to the Baltrians, and with the rest owned Beffus for their General. But Artabazus with his Sons and Soldiers, as also the Greeks (whose Captain was Patron) separated themselves from them, and taking another way towards the Mountains out of the high road, departed, and went into Parthiene. 72. Upon notice of this conspiracy Alexander concluded that more haste was to be used, and therefore taking along with him a party fit for such expedition, he left the rest of the Army to Craterus to come after with more leifure, and travelling all that night, and the next day till noon, gave his men a little time to rest, and then again setting forward, came the next morning to that place where Bagistenes the Rabylonian (who brought him notice of the condition of Darius) had departed. Then again marching fast that night, and the day following, untill noon, he came unto the place where Beffus laid hands on Darius, as * one telleth us; but, as * another, where they that con- *1 curius. ducted him had rested the day before. Here he met with Melon, Darins his * Arrigun interpreter, who being fick, and not able to follow, now counterfeited himself a fugitive, and fully acquainted Alexander with the King's condition. He hereby vvas further quickened up to use all expedition, but his men spent with continual travel must needs have rest, and therefore he made 500 Horse-men to dismount, and the Officers of Foot, and others most valiant amongst them to take their Horses, being arrived as before, that so they might be both Horse and Foot-men as need should require. 73. Whilft he was thus busied, Orsillos and Misbracenes, two Persians who detested the Paricide of Bessey, came back from him, and acquainted Alexander that he was 500 furlongs off, but that they could lead him a nearer way, whereby he might foon overtake him. With this conduct he began his iourny that night, and being come 300 furlongs encountred Brocubelus (or Antibelus) the Governour once of Syria under Darius, who told him that Beffin was but 200 furlongs off, that as he thought he made for Hyrcania, and marched out of order as fearing no danger, and therefore might eafily be surprise fed. He then continued his industry to overtake him, but he and his complices had notice of his approaching, and coming to Darius, bad him mount on Horse-back, and withdraw himself by flight from the Enemy. He refufing to do this, Salibar zanes and Barzaenies threw darts upon him, and leaving him mortally wounded, wounded also the Horses that drew him, lest they should follow far, and killed two Slaves which accompanied him, having none now to follow him but a Dog which he had brought up. Having done Alian, Hill, this, the murderers with 600 fled with full speed, and that they might not asim, 1, 6,c, 25.

venture altogether, Narbarzanes went towards Hyrcania, and Belliu with a few Horse-men in his company kept on the way for Battria. The rest of their men stragled, as they were led, either by hope or fear: 500 Horse-men imbodied themselves, nor knowing, whether to hie, or to receive and fight the pursuing Enemies. But Alexander having notice of the fear and anxiety of the Enemy, fent Nicanor with part of the Horse on before, to restrain their slight, he with the rest following after, and when they were come up, so little courage appeared in the Persians, that though they relisted, yet 2000 were presently flain, and the rest stragled about like sheep, Alexander giving command then to his Soldiers to abstain from saughters. Now appeared an incredible thing, more prisoners than they that took them, whilst the conquered were so stupif that they neither confidered their own multitude, nor the small number of their Enemies. In the mean while the beafts that drew Darins having none to drive them, wandred out of the way for half a mile, and being wearied both by their wounds and heat, flood still in a certain Valley. Not far off was a certain Spring, to which Polystratus a Macedonian being directed, came almost spent with thirst, and whilst he was drinking water in his helmer, he espied the Horses fainting away, by reason of the darts sticking in their sides, and drawing near to confider of the matter, found Daring in the Chariot forely wounded, but yet breathing. He defired some water of him to drink, which though none of the best, yet he faid was the best that ever he drunk, He defired him to carry his thanks to Alexander for his great humanity and courtefie towards his relations. As for himself, he defired rather a seemly than noble burial, but bad him put Alexander in mind how dangerous it would be to all Princes to fuffer his death to go unpunished. He withed him the Empire of the whole World, and gave his hand to Polystrains as though to be presented to A'exander; after which wishing him a reward, for his kindnesse, from the gods, he expired.

Darine difcovered by Pelyfratus.

Dieth.

This was the end of the Life, Reign, and Empire of Dariss, a man who if we look at warlike matters, was fit for nothing leffe, but in other things did nothing unbeseeming Royal Majesty. And neither could he; for as soon as he began to reign, was he vexed by the Macedonians. Whilfthe lived, one crosse presently succeeded after another: neither could be enjoy any rest from the beginning of his reign. For within a while after, he received that overthrow at the River Granious; then loft he Lalia, Ionia, and both the Phrygiaes: the Lydians also and Carians (all but the Hallicarnaffians) and not

CHAP. II.

samus called

SECT. 4. long after Halicarnaffus it felf, and then all the Maritime Coast as far as Cilicia. After this he received a great overthrow at Iffus, in which his Mother, Wife, and Children were taken : Phanicia and Agypt fell off from him. At Arbela (or Gangamela) lofing a mighty Army confifting of all fores of people, he difgracefully was forced to flie, then driven from his Kingdom, wandring up and down, and wanting due accommodations, at last he was betrayed by his own fervants, and at the same time both a King and Captive, was ignominiously bound in fetters, and perished by the treachery of those, from whom he should have expected safety, as Arrianus writeth. This hapned in the year that Aristophonies was Archon at Athens, in the month Hecatombaon, when he had lived about fifty years, in the feventh year of his reign, and the 203d of this Empire, in the third year of the 112 th Olympiad, A. M. 3675, 328 years before the ordinary Era of Christ.

Contemporaries with the Persian Empire.

CHAP. II.

The affairs of the Gracians amongs them. felves during this Empire.

SECT. I.

Of such things as hapned from the beginning thereof until the Expedition of Xerxes.

Polycrates.

272

1. N the time of Cyrus the Great, and afterwards, lived Polycrates, the famous Tyrantof Samus, who from a small beginning arrived and the extraordinary power, as no petty Prince of the Greekilh Nation Was ever accounted equal to him for worldly felicity.

The word Tyrant whence derived, and whom it fignifieth,

2. The word Tyrannus (which we English Tyrant) Suidas thinketh to have Tugang. been derived from the Tyrrheni, a people of Isaly, because they were cruel and given to robbery. Others thought it was derived of the City Tyre, by means of it's riches and glory. Most anciently the word was of no ill fignification, but was used in a good sense, there being no discrimination betwixt King and it. as * Servin observeth. For, though Homer (who never mentioneth * Anied. 1.1. Tyre) either knew it not, or would not use it, yet the Poets who follow him, call those Kings that lived before the Trojan times by the appellation of Tiranni. Afterwards through the diffolute and cruel demeanout of fome Princes, and the antipathie of the Greeks towards Monarchy (after they had generally erected Oligarchical or Democratical Governments) it came to be taken in a bad fense. Herein it is especially given to those, who, being once private persons, enslaved their Citizens by invading, without any just title, the supreme power; as to Polycrates, Pifftraius, Dionylins, and Agaibiccles. It's also applied to the Children who succeeded their Fathers in the usurparion. And it is also given sometimes to those who governed by the defire and consent of the People, as Gelon of Stracuse, betokening, as to this particular, a petry Prince or Regulus. For it is seldom or never in antient Authors, when it is taken in an ill sense, found applied to any but the usurping Lords of Cities (not any notable Kingdom) and fuch Cities as had before been governed in the way of a Commonwealth. And what is faid of those Governours called Tyranni, must be extended to their Government, in the Greek language called Tyrannis, which we english Tyranny, though not in SECT. any ill fense, wherein the Athenians used it not when they would have Solon to take the Tyrannis or Government upon him, though the word was hirth. This is hinted to take off any thoughts of the ignorant, as if the word reflected upon Monarchy, the best of Governments when all shall bee

3. Samus is an Island in the Mediterranean Sea, lying over against lonia. not far severed from it, containing in circuite scarce 100 miles, so called from the heighth of it by the Antients in their Language. On the West it looks towars the Island learia, but on the East the continent of Afia, being near to Ephesus, and the promontory of Mycale, from which it is distant and afterward but five miles. The most antient Inhabitants were Carians differing much from the Greeks both in language and manners. But when the fons of Codrus led out Colonies from Autica, Androclus one of them here feeled one; by Vid. Heraclid, which the City of the same name with the Island was built; having a very large and commodious Haven. It was prefently much beautified with frequency of Inhabitants, riches, and multitudes of buildings, and being very famous for the Temple of Juno, which was especially worshipped in this place. it was reckoned amongst the twelve Ionian Cities, being partaker of the great Council of Panionium, and counted not inferiour to Miletins, Ephefus, or Chius, the most eminent amongst them. From Herbdotus it should appear Lib. ; to have at first been governed by Kings, the Inhabitants as he faith, in the reign of Amphicrates, thaking War upon Egina which was hurtful to both fides : and this was the cause that in the Age following the Aginetans did as much by the Samian exiles which had retired into Crete. But in what Age Amphierates lived he doth not mention; yet this is apparent from his words, that the Samians because Islanders remained untouched by the King of Lydia and Perfra, when the other Ionian Cities in the continent were forced by them

a. But when Cyrus flourished in Asia, and Pififtrates at Athens, Poly- Herodotus lib. crates the Son of Laces one of their own Citizens offered violence to their 3, cap. 39.

Polycrates his liberty. When first he seized on the Soveraignty, he made his two Brothers Pantagnotus and Syloson pareners with him, but afterwards he flew the one, and ejected the yonger, and so having all the power in his own hands, he contracted amicy with Amalia, who at that time reigned in Agypt. In a short time his affairs so prospered, that he became famous through Ionia and all Greece, for wherefoever he made War he prospered, with his too Biremes or Gallies with two ranks of Oars on a fide, and 1000 Archers, invading all his neighbours without any difference, for that he held it for a rule, that he gratified his friend more by restoring what he had taken from him, than if he had taken nothing away. He subdued many Islands and many Towns in the continent. The Lesbians coming to help their friends of Miletus with all their force, he overthrew, and took to many, as ferved him to draw a dirch round about the walls of Samus. His affairs being thus prosperous, were not unknown to Amasis, but being every day more prosperous than other, at length Amasis suspected that his friend and allie for this prosperous Fortune would have some disastrous end, and therefore he wrote to him, and defired him that to make some certain change therein, he would pick out that which was most dear to him, and in the losse whereof he would be most troubled. and make that away, fo that he should never more enjoy it. He accordingly took ship and cast into the Sea his signet, which was an Emrald set in a gold ring; but it so hapned, that a Fisher taking a very large fish, presented it to him as onely worthy of it, and in the belly of it his servants, when they cut it up, found the figner. Amasis hearing this, took such assurance that an unfortunate end must follow such prodigious successe, that lest hee should bee troubled with the miscariage of a friend and allie, hee renounced his

9. When Cambyfes was railing his forces for his Expedition into Agyst, Polycrates fent to him underhand, to defire him to fend for fome supplies. Nn

BOOK II.

SECT.I. who doing fo, he picked out such as he thought were most prone to rebellion. and with them manned out two Triremes, defiring of him that he would not fend them back. Yet they after the War withdrew themselves from Cambyles, and yvent to Lacedamon to defire aid of that State against the Tyranc. which was granted them, either for that the Lacedamonians were engaged to the Samians (as these pretended) because they had received supplies from them in the Messenian War, or as the Spartans alleged, not out of any kindnesse, but malice to the Samians, because they had in the Age foregoing intercepted certain presents sent by them to Crassus, and to them from Amafis. The Corinthians were also drawn in having a particular quarrel of their oven; the occasion was also given at the same time, the Samians having raken from the Corinthians certain Boyes which they were carrying from Periander their Tyrant to Alyantes King of Sardis to be made Eunuchs. 6. The Lacedamonians coming with a great Fleet to Samus, befieged the City, but endeavouring the storming of it were repulsed with some losse, and having in vain spent forty dayes in the Siege (so valiantly was it defended by Polycrates) they then returned home into Peloponnefus. A flory went, that Polycrates stamped some Lead, and covering it over with Gold, with it purchased the departure of the Lacedamonians; but this was the first Expedition which the Dores made against Asia. Afterwards at such time as Cambyfes fell fick, that fell upon Polycrates which Amasis had forewarned him of. At this time one Orates a Persian was Governour of Sardis, Ionia, Lydia, and the Sea-coaffs, in the place of Harpagus, who either for that he was upbraided that he got not Samus, fo near to his Province, into the King's hand, or for that Polycrates slighted and gave no answer to a messenger, which he sent to him (both which are reported) fought earnestly to work his destruction. Knowing he had an ambition to become Master of Ionia and the Islands . he fent to him to tell him that he heard how excellent things he cast in his head. but that he wanted money to accomplish them, wherefore he having now heard for certain that Cambyfes determined to kill him, offered to him, that if he would receive him he should have half of the King's money which he had in his possession, whereby he might get the Soveraignty of all Greece. And if he doubted of his faithfulneffe, he defired him to fend one of his most trustv fervants to whom he would give fatisfaction. 7. Polycrates with great joy received the message, being greedy after money, and to make the thing fure, fent Maandrigs his Secretary over to Oraces, who knowing him a cunning and circumspect man, filled feveral chefts with stones, and covering them at the top with gold, thereby deceived him. Polycrates was yet diffwaded by all his friends from going over himself, for that the Oracles were against it, and his Daughter dreamed that she saw him up aloft in the air, where he was washed by Fupiter, and annointed by the Sun; but he was angry with her for her importunity, and notwithstanding all difswasions went over to Orates, taking with him amongst others, Democedes the Son of Calliphon of Crotone in Italy, the most famous Physician then in his Country. He went over into Magnesia as far as the River Maander. and then Oraces laying hold of him, nailed him to a croffe. Of those that accompanied him, the Samians he dismissed, telling them that they must account it for a great favour fo to be used by him, but all the Strangers and Slaves he took to himself, and reduced them into the State of servitude. This end had Polycrates, with whom none of the Syracufian Tytants, or any other of Greece for magnificence were to be compared. Him succeeded one Ma-

Endeth mife rably. Meandrius.

274

andrius his Vicegerent or Procurator, of whom Herodotus telleth many stories, and who by the help of Otanes the Persian Satrapa, being removed, by the approbation of Darius the Son of Hystapes, Sylofon the Brother of Poly-Sylofon. ALICES.

crates succeeded. Samus paying very dearly for it, what by the War and the ensuing severity of Sylofon. When Sylofon died, Aaces his Son succeeded him, by the favour of the Persians; but was not long after thrust from his Tyranny, when Ariftagoras the Milesian drew all Ionia into rebellion against the Persians; which hapned about the eighteenth year of Darius. 8. In

8. In the second year of Darins, and the first of the 65th Olympiad, the SECT. 1. inhabitants of Places in Booties, who never well accorded with their Neighbours the Thebans, being now irritated with their continual injuries, that Eminius de rebours the Thebans, being now irritated with their continual injuries, that bus florestis for the future they might free themselves from such grievances, sent, and of-Gracia. fered themselves to the Lacedamonians (who then were of greatest Authority in Greece) as Allies and Dependents. But they perceiving themselves to be at too great a distance from them to give any succours when need required, advised them to have recourse to the Athenians as nearer to them, A League be- and of sufficient ability to relieve them. They accordingly did so, and contwint the Plas tracted a straight league of Alliance with Athens, which became a great eye-fore to the Thebans, and all their party a long time after.

9. In the third year of the 65 Olympiad, and the 8th of the reign of Darim, fell out great stirs at Athens, which never ceased till they produced a change in the Government. Pififratus the famous Tyrant at his death left three fons, Hippias, Hipparchus, & Theffalus, and the principality (as it should feem from * Heraclides) to them all; though Hippias, as the eldeft, hid Su- * De Politia pream Jurisdiction, He had hitherto for the space of thirty years enjoyed his Athen. fathers Kingdom, being loving and affectionate rowards his brethren, and Alian Var.

moderate towards his subjects: Hipparchus was accounted a wife man, and Hist. lib.8. lover of learning, being fomething given to be amorous, and Theffalus bold, and head-strong. It hapned that Hipparchus fell in love with one Harmo- Thucydides dins, a young man of the Citie, and forely follicited him to unlawfull dal- lib.6. liance, who therewith acquainted one Aristogiton, a man of a middle rank amongst the Citizens, and who most passionately loved him. He fearing he should be deprived of this his dear one, consulted with himself how he might destroy, both Hipparchus and the Tyranny. Hipparchus still going on to sollicite Harmodius, but in vain, at length resolved to be revenged on him, and executed it on his fifter, which being on a certain folemnity to carry up

10. Harmodius taking this in very evil part, and Aristogiton much worse, prepared all things necessary for their conspiracy; but expected the great feast called Panathenea, on which day onely the Cirizens might be in Armour without suspicion, for discharging the solemnity. They provided not many men before hand, for the more close carrying of the businesse, and because they hoped all the rest would without any hesitation be ready to come in to them. When the day came, they and their party being ready with their Poniards, espied a man talking with Hippias; Whereupon they thought they were discovered, and therefore resolved to do that, wherein especially they were concerned, if they could, and so rushing in violently upon Hipparchus, they flew him in the place. Aristogitan defended himself for some time from flain by Harthe Guard; but the multitude flocking in, he was taken, after he had received many wounds, and his friend Harmodius flain outright. Hippias having no-the basket that was to be dedicated to Minerva, he put her by as unworthy of the office; though some of late have thought that he ravished

The behavithe Goverment of Atheas.

Hipparchus

modius' and Aristogiton.

Stirs at A-trouble. 11. Hitherto he and his brethren had not been distrustfull of their own our of the Pi- fafety, and therefore had used no great Guards about them; not rendring fiftuide, in their power very burthenfom to the people, but acting according to the rules of vertue and prudence. They exacted onely the 20th part of the publick revenue, exceedingly beautified the Citie, waged War, and left the Citizens to their former Laws; onely some one of them was alwayes Magistrate, and other men held of them yearly Offices, Pififtratus the fon of Hippias, and Nephew to the founder of this Kingdom, as it appeareth from Thucydides, having sometimes had the power in his hands. But Hippias after this, fearing himself, exercised his power very severely against the Athenians, putting many of them to death, and to establish himself by forein alliance he gave Nn z tice of what had passed, came cunningly upon the Citizens that were Armed for the folemnity, and by his Guard picking out such as had Daggers about them, or whom he suspected, thereby prevented at this time all further

276

SECT.1. his daughter in marriage to Hippoclus, the fon of Antides the Tyrant of Lampfacus, knowing them to be in great grace with Darins King of Perfia. To find out the complices of these two young men, he tortured, amongst others, a woman named Leans the Paramour of Aristogiton, but she was so constant as to endure all, and biting off her tongue, spit it in the face of the Tormentors, lest therewith she should discover any one; in memory of which the Athenians afterwards Consecrated in the Castle a Lionesse without a tongue, as also Erected Statues to the memory of Harmodius and Aristo. giton, as the liberators of their Countrey. These Statues were taken away by Xernes into Asia, and long after fent back by Alexander, or Antiochus, or Seleucus, as is severally delivered by Historians. They also Decreed that their names should never be given to any slaves.

12. Though these two did not actually procute the freedom of Athens, but perished in the attempt, yet it was attributed to them, because that in the 4th year after, some imitating their example expelled Hippias, & effectually prored it. At this time the Alemaonida (or those of the family of Alemaon, Herodotus who was great Grand-son to Nestor, and being cast out of Messenia by the libs. Heraclide, came and lived at Athens) being driven into exile by the Pife. Capp. 62, 64, stratida (or Pisistratus his sons) having sometimes endeavoured in vain the recovery of their Countreys liberty, fill lay in wait for a more convenient opportunity to accomplish it. Being full of money, they hired the Amphyltiones to let them build a new Temple at Delphos, which was very magnificent, and corrupted the Pythia (or the woman that received and delivered the Oracles, standing in a Tripos, or three footed stool) as often as any of Sparta came thither, Rill to propose to them to set Athens at liberty. This being constantly done, the Lacedamonians accounted it a piece of their religion to do it, and fent Anchimolius, a man of prime Rank amongst them, with an Army to expell the Pifistratide, though their friends, and such as had deferved no otherwise than well of them. They being aware of this, had contracted friendship and alliance with the The salians, and now procured from them a supply of 1000 horse, which by a common decree they sent under the Command of Cixen their King; which falling in upon the Camp of the Spartans, flew amongst many others Anchimolius the General, and beat the other to their ships, in which they returned home. 13. Afterwards the Lacedamonians sent another Army by Land, under flight, and having killed above fourty of them, the rest shifted away, and be- &c. took themselves as they could into Thessaly. Cleomenes then coming up to the Citie besieged the Tyrants, being shut up within the Polasgick-wall, but being unprovided for a fiege, and they furnished sufficiently with provisions, after a few dayes he was about to depart homeward, had not one thing falln out. As the Children of the Pifistratida were privatly to be conveyed out of The Pifffra- the Countrey, they were intercepted, which overturned the affairs of their tida banished. Parents, and forced them to Covenant with the Athenians, for their Ranfom, within five dayes to depart out of Attica, which accordingly was done, Hippias going straight to Sigans, & thence to Lampfacus, from which place he went to Darius, and in the 20th year after returned with his Army, and died Thuesdidet W. (as some say) in the battel at Marathon. Sigeni was a Town situate upon the supple. Hellespont, which Pisistratus took by force out of the hands of the Mitylenaans, and made Hegelistrains his base son, by a woman of Argos, Tyrant there. Hippias was offered from Amyntas the King of Macedonia, either Anthemus, or Iolcos, a Citie in Macedonia; but he refused borh, and be-

> 14. The state of Athens great before, grew greater after this grand muta-Herodolius tion, in which two men contended for the chief Authority : Clifthenes one of cap.66, the Alemaonida (the Nephew by his Mother of Clysthenes, the Tyrant of Sieyon) and Isagoras the son of Tisander. Clysthenes being too weak for the took himself to Darius, whose Army he afterwards conducted into Attica.

DOOK II.

cirthenes

Tribes.

Abenes.

chilbenes re-

Laws.

floreth Solon's Solon.

names of the

the Conduct of Cleomenes the fon of Anaxandridas, who invading the Athe- Herodolus ut nian Territories was encountred by the Theffalian horse, which he put to prins cap. 64.

277 other's faction, that he might engratiate himself with the people, whereas, SECT. 1. changeth the they were before divided but into four Tribes, encreased them unto ren, and whereas formerly they were named from the four fons of Ion, viz. Teleon, · Agicor, Argadans, and Hopletes, now he changed these for other Heroes, which were, z. Hippothoon the fon of Neptune, 2. Antiochus of Hercules , 3. Ajax of Telamon , 4. Leon the Athenian, who according to the Paulan, in Al. Oracle devoted his Daughters for the publick fafety, 5. E. e. prhens, who vicit. flew Immaradus the Son of Eumolpus, 6. Egaus, 7. Oeneus the base Son of Pandion, 8. Acamas the Son of Theseus, 9. Cecrops, and TO Pandion. 15. Isagoras envying Clysthenes that respect, which hereby he obtained, procured Cleamenes the King of Sparsa (with whom he had contracted friendthip during the War with Hippias) to come once more against Athens. He fent a Messenger first, and presently procured him to be banished, and yet betwist Isago- came thither with an Army, and belides many of the family of Alemeon formerly cast out with Clysthenes, now also expelled 700 families proper for War, under pretence of their being contaminated with them in the bulineffe of the death of Cylon. Then endeavoured he to diffolve the Senate, and commit their power to those of Isagoras his faction; but both Senate and people refisting, Isagoras and he with their men seized on the Castle wherein they were befieged two dayes; On the third the Lacedamonians with Ifago. as had leave to depart, but the rest were cast into prison, and put to death. Then was Clysthenes with the 700 families recalled, who restored the Democratical Government to the Citie, as it was founded by the Laws of

16. To Clysthenes is also ascribed the introducing of the Ostracism into the Athenian State, being generally granted to have been brought in a little Alian, Var.

after the banishment of the Pifistracida. For, considering the calamities Hift. lib. 13. after the baniliment of the cypyranae. For, conducting the carantees delta, which had hapned in their time, the Athenians for the time to come would call buddows lib. II. have all of equal power and authority. By the Oftracifm therefore they for Phitagonia The Officialism, ced absence from the Citie for ten years upon the most powerfull amongst vita Arifled, them for Glory, Nobility, or Eloquence, left they should grow too great; & Periclis. without any ignominy, or difference; they being neither deprived of Goods, Lands, or any thing, fave their presence at home for that time. The form of it was this. Each of the Citizens wrote the name of that man in an Oyster shell (whence it had the name of Oftracism) who seemed to him to be the most powerfull for the overturning of the Democracy, and then brought the shell in as a suffrage into the place defigned, and so he that was found to have most written with his name, was for ten years ordered to leave the Citie. But two conditions were required that this judgement should stand in force: That no fewer then 6000 should be at the meeting, and the giving of suffrages; and that those that gave them should be no younger than fixty years old. The first that was banished by this Law, was (as Alian tells us) Clysthenes the Author of it, though (according to another) Hipparchus, Harpocvation, id and Charmus Kinsman to Pisstratus : In after times Ariftides , because "Ιππορχος. of that great Title Just given to him, and Themistocles for his Military both by word and deed from the Athenians , raised forces throughout Pelo-cap.4. &c.

17. But Cleomenes the Lacedamonian King perceiving himself damnified Herodotus lib. 5.

ponnessu, intending (though diffembling the matter) to be revenged upon them, and fet up Isagoras as Tyrant over them. He invaded one part, and procured the Baotians on one fide, and the inhabitants of Chalcis on the climmer to no other, to fall in upon other places. The Athenians thus diffressed on all purpose inva- fides, yet first went against the Peloponnessans lying in Eleusine, and when deth the Ather the Armies were about to joyn, the Corinthians, first bethinking themselves of the injustice of their cause, withdrew themselves; and so did Demaratus the fon of Ariston King of Sparsa, and the Collegue of Cleomenes, having never differred from him formerly. Then the rest of the affociates seeing that the Kings agreed not betwixt themselves, and the Corinthians were gone, drew care to

Beotians, of whom killing many, they took prisoners 700, and then pas-fing over into Eubæa the same day, chastized the Inhabitants of Chalcis in like manner. Thus, four times the Dores out of Peloponneliss came into Actions twice in a hostile manner, and twice to the help of the Athenians. First when they brought a Colony into Megare, which was in the time of Codrus, the second and third times to expel the Pifistratida, and now the fourth, when

SECT 1. off also in like manner: The Athenians then to be revenged, fell upon the

TOOK II'

The Ifland Azina

Cleomenes with the Peloponnesians invaded Eleusine. 18. The Thebans, and the rest of the Bactians, seeing themselves too weak for the Athenians, defired help of the Inhabitants of Agina, an Island fituated in that part of the Sea, which severed Attica from Argolia, being five miles distant from the former, some eight in circuit, and the Country of Eacu, (whence the Lacida) having a City of it's own name. The Liginetans bearing an old grudge to those of Athens, and puffed up with a conceit of tweir wealth, easily imbraced their society, and when the Athenians were buffe with the other, paffed over in their long ships into Assica, and walted the Coasts thereof. The Lacedamonians at this time understanding how they had been deluded by the Alemeonida their corrupting the women that gave out the Oracles, and thereby their losse both of their old friends, and all thanks also as to the Athenians; hearing further by the Oracles which Cleamenes had brought out of the Citadel of Athens, that that State should much distresse them, and especially seeing how weak it was under Tyrants, but now how it increased in strength after the recovery of it's liberty, called back Hippias, resolving to restore him. He was ready at their call, but then it hapned that Soficles the Corinthian Ambassador and others of their confederates utterly disallowed of this practice, and therefore seeing there was no hope of recovering his former condition, he returned into Afia, and there laboured with all his might to possesse Artaphernes the Satrapa of Lydia against the Athenians, that they might be conquered by Darim his Brother. They sent to Artaphernes, to desire him not to give credence to their exiles; but, as when two or three years before, when they fent to enter into fociety with the Persians, he told them they must give Earth and Water, as symbols of subjection (which the Ambassadors doing, were much blamed at their return) fo now he told them, if they would be fafe, they must receive Hippias. They refused the Condition, and chose rather to be professed Enemies to the Persian, and thence presently after joyned with Aristagoras, who withdrew the Ionians from their obedience, which provoked Darius afterwards A. M. 360, to invade them, procured the Expedition of Xerxes, and the quarrel of V. C. 110. that Empire with Greece. But these things concerning Athens and Hippias, Olymp. 69.441. hapned in the first year of the 60th Olympiad, the 18th of the reign of Darius, Dani 18. A. M. 3501.

19. After the Ionian War was over, and the Gracians in Asia were forced Horodolus once more to undergo the yoke, Darins in the 27th year of his reign, and Lib. 6.44 kt. the third after his victory, fent into Greece to demand Earth and Water as tokens of subjection. The Athenians and Lacedamonians threw the Messengers into a well, and bad them thence fetch Earth and Water to carry to their Master, but the Inhabitants of Ægina and other Islanders, for fear of the tans by giving Persians, promised obedience. The Athenians presently took offence thereat, as water to Da judging that the Eginerans did it out of a grudge to them, that they might fight vim, incense under the conduct of the Persians against Athens, and therefore they sent the Grecians to Sparta to complain of them as Traitors to Greece. Cleamenes was fent against them. from that State, and came to £gina, with an intention to apprehend the principal authors of the revolt; but one Crim there openly opposed him, threatning him, in case he laid violent handson any, for that he knew he did it without any publick decree of the Lacedamonians, who else would have fent the Stirs at Spanta other King with him. This he faid at the instance of Demaratus the other betwist clea-mous and De-King of Sparta, who disagreeing with Cleamenes ever fince the invasion of Artica, now also grievoully accused him in his absence. Hereupon Cleomemaratus the nes returned home, cast out Demaratui, upon pretence of his illegiti-Kings,

20. The Father of Demaratus was Ariston, of the posterity of Procles, a man as worthy as any of his Ancestors; who having no children by two cap. 61, &c. wives (for which cause he divorced them) to satisfie the desires of the people (which greatly defired fome iffue male from him) married a third, which already was the wife of his friend Agenti, covenanting with him for her, (The being the most beautiful woman next after Helena) which by the Laws The birth of of Lyourges he might do. Being married, ithapned just after seven moneths, when he was according to the custome fitting amongst the Eplori, his houfhold-fervant came and fignified to him that he had a Son born, with the fuddainnesse of which thing being disturbed, he rashly swore that it was not his, coming to much within the Time. The Ephori then neglected it, and he afterwards repenting of his rathnesse, brought up the Child as his own, and because he was so defired by the publick withes of the People, gave him the name of Demaraus. After his death Demaraus succeeded, a man of great worth, and who obtained a crown in the Olympick Games, which never hapned before to the Kings of Sparta. But that speech of his Father was now obje-Sted against him, by his Colleggue and Emulator Cleamenes the Son of Anaxandridas, who accused now also for their regreating formerly out of Attica, which occasioned all the difference betwixt them; and all this was aggravated by Leurychides, who fought for his place, and had a private quarrel with him about a wife, of which he had hindred him by taking her to himfelf 31, Great contention hence arising; the Spartans resolved to send to Del-

mation from his Office, and put Leusychides his kinfman in his place.

phos, and enquire of the Oracle whether Demaratus was the Son of Arikon, which being done, Cleomenes procured a friend he had at Delphos to corrupt Donnatus de- Pythia, forthit being drawn by bribery the gaye the answer against Demarapolid, and 1111. Hereby Cleamenes procured him to be removed from the Kingdom, and Languides pur Leutychides his kinfman to faceged him; yet though thus handled, he ceafed not to love his Country, and continuing at home, diffained not to bear inferiour Offices, till further affronted by Leutychides, who to infult over and deride him, at such a time as overseeing the exercises of the Boyes, he sent and demanded of him how he liked of that Office after the Kingdom. He answered, that he had tried both, but the other not, and that that question should be the original either of great mischief or happinesse to the Lacedamonians, and then getting him home with his head covered he facrifized to Tupiter, and fending for his Mother conjured her to tell him the truth concerning his Father. Being affured from her of his Legitimation, he went out of the City, under pretence of going to Delphos; but took the way to Elis, and thence to the Island Zacynihus, and so to Darius King of Persia, the Zacynthians having refused to give him up to his Country-men who pursued him. He was received with great honour by the Perstans, who bestowed Lands upon him, to maintain him in a Princely equipage; and there his posterity is Lacouris, reported to have endured a long season.

22. Not long after Cleomenes received his just reward, his own hands be-cleanines his ill end.

come home, having not had before this time a very fetfed head, he now fell into a Phrenfie, as he met any one in the City, puthing their faces with his Scepter. His friends then bound him with wooden fertiles, in which condition, partly by intreaties, and partly by threats, he got a Sword of his Keeper, wherewith beginning at the case of his leg, he cut up his flesh upwards to the thighs, and, when he ripped up his belly, died, leaving no iffue behind him, but a pattern of Justice to all Greece, which being amused at his end, most attributed it to the corruption of Pythia, and that injustice done to Demara.

ing his executioners; for his treachery against Demaratus being come to light, and fearing to be called to an account for it, he first fled into Thessalie, and thence returning into Arcadia firred up the Inhabitants against the Spartans, and attempted to swear them to be true to him whithersoever he should lead them. The Lacedamonians hearing of this, and fearing what he might do to them, recalled and restored him to his former dignity; but when he was

CHAP. II.

280

Lentychides

ratus.

punished for

SECT .1. 1863, the Athenians to his invasion of Elensine, and his destroying the Temple of their gods; but the Argives concluded this judgement to have fallen upon him, because he had basely killed such of their Country-men as escaped from a battel fought with him, after he had got them out of the Temple of Argus, and had burnt the grove which he had taken. This passage betwire the Lacedamonians and Argives, is to be described though in the same order Herodotus hath done it, it having hapned long before the death of Cleomenes, and as In Laconica,

Paufantas faith, in the beginning of his reign. 23. Consulting the Oracle at Delphos, it was answered, that he should take Argos, and hereupon he raised at Army and invaded the Territories of that State. The Argives in their own defence made half to meet him, but he fetting upon them asthey were at dinner, put many of them to the Sword, and besieged the rest in the grove at Argus, whither they sled. Then learning their names from such sugitives as were with him, he called them man by man out of the Wood to redeem themselves (which at the Lacedamonian rate was for two minæ a man) and so so of them coming out of the grove (in which place they could no see beforehand what was done to their Companions) he pur to the Sword. At length one of them climbing up on a tree discovered the matter, after which no man would come out; but then he fer fire to the grove and burnt it and them together. After this, asking to whom of their gods the grove belonged to, it was answered to Argus, and so he found and acknowledged himself deceived by the Oracle. Returning to Sparta, he was accused as having been corrupted, for that he might have taken Argos if he would ; but the major part were satisfied with his excuse and acquirted him. As for Argos it was rendred by this overthrow so desolate of men, that the Slaves governed all things, till such time as the sons of the slain grew up and recovered their Patrimony; after which the Slaves conquered Tyrinthes, and held it, till perswaded by Cleander a certain Wizard, they returned, and

24. Cleomenes being dead, the Eginesans sent and complained of Lentychides for the injury he had done to them, in causing together with Cleomenes ten of their principal men to be kept as Hostages at Athens. He was given up to them, but fearing to carry a King of Sparta away prisoner, though for the present the State had given him up, they took him onely to Athens to procure them the liberry of their Hoftages. But the Athenians put them off, as refuling to deliver them without the authority of two Kings, feeing the injury of both of them committed them to their custody, and the journy being to no made War upon their Masters, which continued long, till such time as the Argives with difficulty remained Conquerours.

fered to Dema- purpose Lourychides was dismissed and so returned; but yet he also paid for the injury offered to Demaratus. * For , Menander leading an Army into , Hondelle The stalle, of which as of the War he had full and ample power, he was cor- Lib. 6.40,7h. rupted with money, and betrayed the interest of his Country, after which being discovered, as he held the money in both his hands sitting in his tent, he was apprehended and carried to Sparta, where being called to account, he fled to Tegea, and there died in exile, his house being razed as a traytor to

25. But the Aginetans, of old, Enemies to those of Athens, were now Identify 19. much more incenfed against them for detaining their Hostages, and set themfelves to fludie a revenge. At that time there was at Sunium (the utmost promontory of Auica) a Gallie which (according to the custome observed every year fince the time of Thefens) was then going to Delphos, abord of which were the principal men of Athens : on this they seized, and taking the men prisoners, bound, them all. The Athenians hereat inraged, laboured with all might on the other hand to revenge this, and agreed with one Nicomachus to have the City betraied to them; yet for that they could not get their Fleet together foon enough, they came a day too late, and missed of that enterprise. But through the counsel of Themistocles, having rigged a Fleet of 70 Gallies (20 of which the Corinthians fold them at an inconfiderable rate, because by the Law they could not give them) they set upon

War betwirt the Reginerans, and overthrew them in a Sea-fight. They betook themselves SECT. 1. the Athenians for aid to the Argives their old friends, but having offended them not long and significants, before, they received a publick denial, yet underhand a supply of 1000 Vo-Junteers, most of whom fell in Ægina by the hands of the Aillenians, against whom yet the Æginetans afterwards, reinforcing their power at Sea, in another battel became Victors. But what the iffue of this War farther was, is not declared by Herodom, who yet elsewhere affirmeth, that it gave occasion to the safety of all Greece, by putting the Athenians upon the care of Sea matters, whereby when Xerxes came, they became the bulwark thereof. Probable it is, that this War which was begun before the battel of Marathon, was not composed till the time that Xerxes was about to invade Greece, when we read that all the Gracians (and these two States amongst the rest) resolved to lay afide all private quarrels amongst themselves , the Eginetans being observed by * another to have had the Dominion of the Sea 20 years, untill * Euseb. in the paffage of Xerxes, which thenceforth they were forced to yield to the Chronico.

26. Whilest the Athenians were busie in the War ag tinst Egina, Davius fent his Forces into Greece against them, and the Erevians (inhabitants of the Island Euboca) which though they took the Citie of the later, and made them Captives, yet were they overthrown by the former in the battel at Ma-Thebattel of rathon. After the fight 2000 Sparians came to Athens (being hindred hithereo by their superstition, which forbad them from a Law of Lyeurgus not to stir out till the full Moon) whence they proceeded to Marathon to see the number of the flain , and then commending the valour of the Athenians returned home. Of these were slain in this fight Callimachus one of the Polemarchs, Cynagirus commended by many Writers, who when the Perfians Julialib.2. fled, and berook themselves to their ships, held one of them with with his hands till they were cut off, and then with his teeth, till at length he was flain; and Hippias the late Tyrant (who now hoping to recover, after twenty years banishment, his old power, became the conducter of the Persian Forces) though neither Herodoiss nor Thucydides make mention of his death, yet is reported by later Authors here to have been flain. Themisfocles now a young man behaved himself gallantly in the battel; but the successe is aferibed to the valour, and conduct of Militades, to whom, when Arifides Plutarch in one of the Captains had affigned his day's Government, the rest when it Arishide. came on their turns did the same, after that by the same help he had carried it in the Councel for a battel. Yet did he not fight till his own day came, and then ingaging, overthrew the Enemy in that memorable 27. His father was Cimon, who in the Tyranny of Pififtranus departed Herod, lib.6.

from Athens, and thrice obtained the Garland in the Olympick Games; yet being reconciled to Pisistratus afterwards returned, but after his death was flain by his faction. His eldelt son, who was called after his Grand-father His Pedigreo Stefagoras, was brought up with their half Uncle Militades in the Chersonefus, over which he was Prince. His other fon was this Miliades, so called after this his Uncle, which dying without Children, Stefagoras succeeded him, but not long after was killed by one that counterfeited himself a fugitive, and died also without issue. Then did the Pifffraide send Miliades. to succeed his brother in the Principality of the Chersonesus, and there he ruled when Darius undertook the expedition into Soythia, and he it was that gave the Ionians counsel to break the bridge, and leave him there wandring with his Army. Being ferled, he married Hegesipyla the daughter of Olorus King of Thrace; but the Scythians provoked by Darius, and making an excursion as far as the Chersonesus, he daring not to withstand them fled, and after their retreat was restored by the Thracians. After some years Darins being angry with him, fent a Fleet of Phanterans to subdue the Cherfoneus; whereupon he fled with five Gillies from Cardia, and came to Athens; but as he fled the Phanicians intercepted one of them, and therein his fon Metiochus, who being presented to Darius, received from him house, lands, and

Miltiades

SECT.1. a Persian wife. Being returned home, he was accused for possessing the Tyranny of the Cherfone fus, but was acquirted, and * having perswaded the A- * Pausan like. thenians to throw Darins his Messengers into the pit, was afterwards declared by the people one of their Captains, and thence had occasion to obtain this famous victory at Maraibon. 28. Miltiades flourishing in great glory, and grace with the people, ob- Herod like tained of them 70 Gallies well manned, not making known his intention, cap. 132.00. but professing that he would much thereby benefit the State. He sayled to the Island Paros (one of the Cyclades in the Agean-Sea, and famous for the best Marble) the inhabitants of which having affisted the Persians at Mara-His fruitlesse thon, he belieged, demanding 100 Talents of them. They would not hear of parting with money, but made provision for resistance, whereupon he harrazed their Tetritories, and more closely befieged them, and attempted the Pares. Citie for twenty dayes, but leaping off from a Wall, he hurt his Thigh, and was forced to return home. There, when he was arrived, he was accused by Xanthippus (the son of Ariphron, and father to Pericles, his Emulator) of Treason, as having voluntarily miscarried in the Enterprise about Parus. He could not be present himself to answer, his Thigh now corrupting, which held him in his bed, but Stefagorns, or Tifagoras, his brother (according to Cor. Nepos) or rather, other of his friends did it for him, bidding the people remember the battel at Marathon, and the taking of Lemnus, which he, having expelled the Pelasgians, had subdued under the Athenian power. The people spared his life, but fined him fifty Talents, which fum this expedition had cost them. One tells us it was not out of any regard to his Crime fo much as having lately been under the Tyranny of Pififtrains, they feared now the power vita Militalia.

of their own Citizens, and him especially, who having been much practised in Magistracy and power, and enclined naturally to a love of it, could scarce as they thought bear the condition of a private life; fo that though being called a Tyrant, he obtained that power not by his own feeking, but was ever found to Ostracism. He dieth in prison.

29. After this, Mittages after in print of the correction that account lib., cop. not have delivered, his fine being yet upon the foore; upon which account lib., cop. the Asbenians would not fuffer his body to be buried, till fuch time as his for ext.example. Cimon offered himself to bonds in the room thereof. As his father before vita cinonic him, to he was unable to pay the fine, and by the Laws of Athens could not Plutarch, in be released untill he had done it. He had then to wife his fifter by the fa- Cimone, ther's fide (as we are to take it) named Elpinice, * it being lawfull for the "Vidt Jaun Athenians to marry such. One Callian there was in the Citie. a rich man Rusgipum Athenians to marry such. One Callian there was in the Citie, a rich man, Varilett, libit. though of a vulgar cast, who had gained much by the Mines; he being in love case, of Br.

29. After this, Miltiades died in prison of the corruption of his Thigh, as Valer. Mix.

be just, moderate, and humble; yet having a great name for Military matters, and thereby great interest, they chose rather to condemn him though innocent, than continually be in fear, though they might have thought on the

with her, offered Cimon, if he would part with her to him, to discharge the cleri notated fine. Cimon fleighted the offer, but the avowed that the would not fuffer Cors, Naples. any of Miltiades his Children to die in prison, and that to prevent such a His fon Cimon, thing, the would marry Callias, if he would perform his offer. Hereby Cimon was perswaded, married her to him, and the fine being discharged, was set at liberty, which he prefently improved for his own advancement. These things fell out not long after the battel at Marathon. 30. Three years the Gracians had rest, as from without, so within them-

Xerxes invadeth Greece.

felves, till the coming of Xerxes; onely the War betwixt the Athenians and Æginetans still depended, untill common danger drew them to a composure. As the Athenians had given most occasion to the invasion of Greece, fo they Vide Plate bore the greatest burthen thereof, and by the means of Themistocles, one of chum in with their Citizens, procured the overthrow and flight of Xerwes, in that by his Arifidit. Stratagems the Peloponnessans were brought to fight, and not suffered to depart to their several homes, which would have brought certain destruction to them all. Affistant to Themistocles was another of his Countrey-men, named Arifides, who though banished by the Oftracism through his procurement,

The acts of

Themistocles

immediatly

of Xeixes.

for that as they disagreed in temper, so in their way of policy, and Goverment (Themistocles being quick, bold, crafty, and easily changeable, according to the juncture of affairs; but Arifides constant and grave, onely intent upon Justice, and who neither in jest nor earnest would give way to lying, fcurrility, or deceit) yet now with others was recalled by his means for the fafety of the Countrey, and voluntarily laid aside all private quarrels which came into competition with the publick fafety. The firname of Just which first got this man love, afterward procured him envy, Themsfooles whispering this into the ears of the multitude, that whilest he took upon him to censure all things, he had prepared for himself a Throne, in the ruine of the Courts of Judicature, and defended with a sufficient Guard. The multitude putfed up with their successe at Marathon, and designing great things in their heads, could ill bear any that excelled them in fame and glory, and therefore flocking into the Citie they banished him by the Offracism, cloaking their envy at his glorie with a specious pretence of fear of Ty-

31. When they were come together to give their suffrages, a Countrey- Idemibid. man ignorant of Letters, is reported to have given a shell to Aristides (not knowing him, but to be of the common fort) and defired him to write therein for him the name of Aristides, at which he wondring, and asking him if ever he had received any injury at his hands, he said no, but that he was troubled to hear him all over go by the name of Just. A istides hearing this, answered nothing, but wrote his own name, and gave it to the man, and when he departed out of the Citie, with hands lifted up to heaven prayed (contrary through The faly and Bootis towards Action, the Athenians repealing their

to what Achilles did when he found himfelf ill used by Agamemnon) that Iliad. a. the estate of Athens might never happen to be such as to give them occasion to think of Aristides. But in the third year after, when Xerxes now marched

Decrees, recalled all that were banished, especially for fear of Aristides, less joyning with the Enemy, he might by his Authority draw many of their Citizens to revolt. They were militaken concerning the mans disposition, for before the Decree for his return was made, he had not been wanting to provoke the Gracians as much as he could to defend their liberty; then joyned with Themisfocles, though one most averse to him, and for the publick good advanced him to the highest degree of Dignity. He joyned in endeavours with him for procuring the Gracians to fight, and understanding that Pfyttalia a little Island before Salamina was possessed of the Enemy, he pasfed over thither with a party of fuch as voluntarily followed him, and put all of them to the sword, except some of the chiefest, to whom he gave quarter. He disposed Soldiers so throughout the Island, that on which quarter foever any of either party should light, he might seize upon them, and so preferve his friends, and provide that none of the Enemy should escape : upon which account a Trophy was erected in Pfyitalia. And when Themistocles to try him after the victory, faid, that one brave act was done, viz. the overthrow of Xerxes, but that another remained, which was, by breaking the bridge to take Afia in Europe, he earnestly defired him to reject all such advice, and rather to confider how foon they might expell the Mede out of Greece, lest being thut in with fuch great Forces, and all opportunity of flight being taken awiy, he might by necessity be egged on to revenge. 32. After the overthrow and flight of Xerxes, Themistocles faving the Horo boarders, 3. greatest authority in the fleet, went therewith against such Islanders as had cap. 111. taken part with the Persians, demanding money of them. He urged them plier the flight tilications, opposed two others as strong as the former, viz. Poverty and Impoffibility, whereupon they were close besieged, but it being to no purpose, the Fleet returned to Salamine, Themistocles without the privity of the rest, going to other Islands, from whom by his threats he exacted much money.

After they had at Salamine divided the spoil, and consecrated part thereof to with two powerfull divinities Perfuasion and Necessity, so which the Inhabitants of Andros (one of the Cyclades) trusting in the strength of their ForDOOK II

walls, which the Lacedamo

ians grudge.

SECT-1. their gods, they went to the Ifthmus, there to reward him who should be 1dem cap, 122. thought to have best in the War deserved of Greece. When the Captains se- &c. & verally came to deliver their minds in writing at the Altar of Neptune, each Plutarch, in one ascribed to himself the first place in merit, but to Themistocles assigned the second, which amounted to as much, as if by a filent consession they had acknowledged his merit to be principal. And though hy the envy of the Captains his glory was depressed, yet was he accounted the most prudent man of all Greece, and being invited down to Lacedamon, by the judgement of that severe State, as the praise of valour was given to their own Eurybiades, His glorie. so that of prudence and dexterity unto him. They gave him a crown of Olives, and the best Chariot they had, as a reward, and what before was not done to any mortal man by them, at his departure, to do him honour, they fent 300 Horse to conduct him to the borders of their Dominions. After this, the Gracians overthrew Mardonius, whom Xerxes had left behind him, at the battel of Platan, and the same day the Persian Fleet at Mycale a Promontory of Ionia, which they hereby restored to liberty, Xanthippus being Archon at Athens; in the second year of the 75th Olympiad, and the seventh of the Reign of Xerxes. During which passages abroad, little hapned at home but in relation to them; the fumme of which elsewhere hath been related.

33. As for learned men which flourished during this period; some of the Learned Men, seven Wise Men of Greece lived in the time of Cyrus, and about the beginning of the Persian Empire. These seven were, Pittacus of Mitylene, Confule Dige. who was born about the 32th Olympiad; Bias of Priene, Chilon of Lacedamon, and Cleobulus of Lindus, all who flourished about the 47th Olympiad, with Thales of Miletus, who being born about the first year of the 35 th Olympiad, foretold an Eclypse of the Sun, which hapned about the third year of the 48th, in the reign of Alyanes, and Afrages, and about the beginning of the 58 th having helped Crafus over the River Halys, by drayning it with a ditch, then died. The fixth was Solon of Athens, who died the same year with Thales, and the feventh Periander of Corinth.

34. Besides these there was Xenophanes the Colophonian, who being born in the 40th Olympiad, came into Sicilie when Hieron and Epicharmus flourished, about the 70th Olympiad, Epicharmus lived 97 years as Lucian writeth, and invented the Comedy eight years before the beginning of the Persian Empire. Phocylides flourished at the same time, to whom a Poem yet extant concerning Laws is ascribed, though Scaliger thinks it made by some Hellenistick Jew. Besides these, Anacreon the Teian Poet, who as * Pliny writeth, was choaked with the stone of a raisin. Simonides a Poet of the Island Ceos, where he was born in the City Iulis. Having lived some time at Athens with Hipparchus the Son of Pififtratus, he went into Sicilie unto Hiero, by whom being asked what God was, he demanded a daies time to consider of it, and after that another; still professing that the more he studied the point, the more he was to feek in it. Some fay he found out the Art of Memory, and that being very coverous, he first exposed the Muses to sale. In the second year of the 58th Olympiad, and eight before the Persian Empire, died Anaximander the natural Philosopher of Miletus. Anaximenes his Scholar flourished about that time. Theagenes of Rhegium the most antient Chronographer. Democedes of Crotone a Phylician, being taken Captive with Polycrates by Oetes the Perfian, was carried as a flave to Darins, with whom he lived in great esteem, after he had cured his foot and the breast of his wife Atoffa. 35. There flourished also in Darius his time, Cadmus of Miletus an Historiographer, there having been another of this name and place, according to Suidas, who in four Books wrote the History of Miletus and all Ionia : and Strabo nameth Cadmus, Phercydes and Hecataus as those who first of all Greeks wrote Profe. Hecasens flourished at this time, and gave light to Herodotus, Phrynichus the Athenian, a tragical Poet, who first caused a woman to be personated, and invented the verse with four feet. Heraclius the Ephesian, a contemner of Heathenish Idols, who out of fear wrote his SECT.2. Book of Nature in such an obscure manner, that thence he got the name of Scourussor Dark. Zeno of Elea, or Velia, in Italy, Scholar to Parmevides, who conspiring against Nearchus the Tyrant, endured torments to death, rather than he would discover his complices. Pythagoras the son of Mnesarchus the Samian, but born at Sidon in Phanicia, about the 53 Olympiad. Diogenes. Being twelve years old he learnt of Thales and Phocylides, from the later tak- Jambilious, ing the transmigration of Souls. Travelling into Egypt and to Babylon, he Julia lib. 20. drunk in the learning of both places. About the 68th O'ympiad he went in-Plin. l. 2. c. 8. to finly, where he lived first at Crotone, and then at Metapontus. Here he taught and conflicted the Italian School or Sect, as Thales had done the Iomick. Whereas others suffered themselves to be called Sophoi, he would be called out of modelty Philosophus. In the 67th Olympiad he found out the nature and course of the Planet Venus. In the fourth year of the 7cth he died at Metaponius, where he was so admired, that his house was made a Temple, and that part of Jialy called Magna Gracia. Amongst his Scholars was Mile the famous Wrestler; and women through him became famous for learning, their Epistles being yet extant.

the Perlian Empire.

SECT. II.

Of such things as fell out amongst the Græcians, from their Victories at Platza and Mycale, until the beginning of the Peloponnesian war, containing the space of 48 years.

I. THe Perfians being overthrown in Greece both at Sea and Land, and Thucyd. I. I. fo driven utterly out of Europe; and those that fled into Afia in ships being 110 defeated at Mycale, Leutychides the Spartan who there commanded in chief, returned home with his affociates of Peloponnesis. The Athenians with the Ionians, and those that inhabited upon the Hellespore, besieged Session, which the Persians had seized on, all Winter, and reduced it; after which they also all departed home. 2. The Athenians having brought home their wives and children, after the Idem ibid.

overthrow of Mardonius, had the popular Government restored by Aristides, Plutarch & and fer themselves to rebuild the walls of their City in a greater compasse, Corn. Nepos in and stronger than had been formerly, being thereto especially induced through the perswasson of Themistocles. The Lacedemonians above all others were hereat exceedingly troubled, as confidering that having obtained to great glory by the two Victories at Marathon and Salamina, the Athenians would contend with them for the Principality, and upon that account they wished The Albertians them as weak as might be. They diffwaded them therefore from going on with their work, alleging that it was dangerous for Greece to have any fortified place without the Peloponness, which the Barbarians might seize on, and possesse. They said they would send answer by Ambassadors of their own, and Themistocles took the businesse upon him. He first went alone, and ordered that the rest should follow, but not rill the wall was brought to a reafonable height; that in the mean time both bond and free should ply the work; and paring no place, whether holy or prophane, private or publick, take all such stuff for building as they might soonest light on. When he came at Spares, he demanded no audience, but fought to protract the time, pretending he expected his Collegues. The Lacedamonians complaining that neverthelesse the work went on, and that he went about to deceive them, the other Ambaffidors arrived, of whom after he knew that the fortifications were almost finished, he laboured to perswade the Ephori (who now had the chief power in that State) that the things were falle, which they were made to believe, defired them to fend persons considerable whom they might trust to make inspection, and keep him as an Hostage till their return.

3. They

SECT. 2.

with them Themistocles his Collegues, to whom he gave in charge that the Lacedamonians should not be dismissed till his return. After their departure, he demanded audience of the Magistrates and Senate, and then freely and openly professed, that the Athenians by his advice, & agreeable to the common-Law of Nations, had fenced their publick and private gods with a wall, that ded by Themis they might more easily defend them; and neither could that be to the dam-mage of Greece, of which Athens was the bulwark against the Barbarians, for here the King's Navy had twice suffered Shipwrack. He told them, they did ill to regard more their private ambition, than what was profitable for all Greece; and, to conclude, if they expected the return of their Ambassadors, they must dismisse him, or else never expect to see them return; which accordingly they were forced to do with much private regret, though ashamed to own the cause. He advised his Country-men further to finish the work of the Pirans of Port of Athens, which they had begun a long time before, whill he was Archon; for he perswaded them first to apply themselves to Seamatters, as the way to obtain Dominion, and commended to them that place as most convenient for their design, having three natural Havens. The wall he caused to be made so thick as two Carriages loaded with stones might passe by each other; but brought the height of it but to half of that which he had deligned. And with so great a defire was he caried out for the inlargement of the Dominion of that State, that observing the Lacedamonian Navy to be drawn up at Gytheum, and so, easie to be set on fire, he much desi- Plutarch in red to have it done, and told the people he had a thing of great moment in Themillocle his head, but fuch as was not to be divulged. The People appointed Ari- Val. Max. 1.6

3. They fent accordingly three of their principal men to Athens, and

4. A little after these things, Pausanias the Lacedamonian, famous for the Victory at Placea, was fent with a Fleet of twenty Peloponnefian Gallies, Thucyd, lib. 1. and thirty of Anica, against Cyprus, where he took many Towns, and Byzantium afterwards, held by the Persians. He was very imperious towards the Diedons Lin. affociates, infomuch as he carried himself more like a Tyrant than a General, ad Olymp. 75. and being forely complained of to his Superiours, he was by them recalled to ann. 4. give an account of it. He gaped after the Kingdom of Greece, and to that end entred into conspiracy with Xerxes, whose Daughter he asked to wife, and being accused of much favour shewed towards the Persians, yet for that nothing could be proved, he was dismissed, having the government of the Fleet onely taken from him. Yet returned he to the Hellespont, under pretence of holdeth intel-the War to continue his intelligence with Xerxes; but being expelled from it; but he making a report that Themistocles advised a thing, than which nothing was more profitable, and more unjust, he was commanded to defift.

fides to confer with him, and if he approved it, refolved he might profecute cic. Offic. 13

Paufanius Byzantium by the Athenian Soldiers, he returned not to Sparea, but flaied at Tross, and for that was again complained of, as holding clandefline confultations with the Perfians, and not having any just and warrantable cause there to remain. Hereupon he was called home by the Ephori the second time, and cast into prison, but appearing again to his tryal, he was the second time 5. The Lacedamonians fent Dorcis with others to succeed Paufanias in Thuchdid, & the Fleet; but the affociates would take no notice of him; for Ariftides the Diodous at

Tust, Captain of the Athenians, so moderately behaved himself, and wrought plutate & croffe to the actions of Panfanias, that all the Cities of Affa hating the others corn. Namis pride, joyned themselves to him . to that he became the means of transfer- Arifide, ting the chief Command at Sea, which (together with that at Land also) had hitherto been enjoyed by the Lacedamonians, unto his own Country-men, the Spartans, at this time not being unwilling, or oppoling it in the leaft, fo

The Athenians ashamed were they of the carriage of their own Citizens. The Athenians by the means being thus advanced by the affociates for their moderation, under pretence of revenging the States upon Xerxes, obtained also liberty to lay a Taxe upon of Artids chief power them all, how much money one, and how many ships another should find. to themselves. Officers they appointed to receive the Tributes, the sum of all which amounted to 460 Talents: Delos was appointed for the Treasury, and the place SECT. 2. to meet in, to deliberate of the Affairs of all the free States. This affeste (as Plutarch writeth) was made by Arifides at the defire of the Gracians. who relied upon his integrity; and his moderation so much appeared herein, that afterwards the Athenians inflaved the States, and drawing the Tributes to their private use, first doubled, and then tribled the sum. For now, whereas the whole Tax imposed by him amounted but to 460 Talents, Pericles added almost a third part (as Plusarch reckoneth) and increased it to 600. and after his death it was brought to 1300 Talents.

6. The Athenians having settled the Tribute, under the conduct of Cimon Thucyd. the fon of Militades, took from the Persians Eiene, a Town of Thrace, fituate upon the River Strymon, which they deprived of its liberty. Then expelled they the Dolopians out of Soyrus (an Illand in the Egean Sea) and therein planted a Colony of their own; then waged they War with the Caryflians in Enbas, for denying them obedience (which was composed) and befleged the Navians that had revolted from them, whom they forced to fubmit. This being the first of all Greek Cities, which, contrary to the League, was subjected to bondage, after it others were as occasion served, which was taken by the Athenians, either for that they fent not the full Tribute, or ships, or would not serve in the War when affairs required it. The Ather nians also severely exacted what had been appointed, and compelled such as refused, having forgotten their former mildnesse, now in power, and carrying it very imperiously towards their afforiates whom they could order as they pleased. And this was also effected by the Greeks themselves : for, to shun the labour of it, most of them chose rather to send money than ships; whereby the Athenians, who had Vessels enough, and alwayes in readinesse, increased their strength, and upon occasion found them unfit for refistance.

The Naxians inflaved.

7. In the mean time Pansanias, who had been called home to Sparta, 1dem. gave not over his conspiracy against his Countrey, though he changed his af- Plutareh is fociates. For he now fought to draw the Helotes, or publick flaves, into re- Themillack & bellion with the allurement of liberty, and hereof being detected by one Ariflide.Com.

Argilms (whom he had unchaftly loved, and now being fent with Letters to fails. Ariabanus, suspected he carried a Warrant for his own death, and so opening Diodorus ut them, discovered both his plot against himself and the State) he took sanctua- supra. ry in the Temple of Minerva, and there the door being made up (to which Plutarch, & end his own Morher is faid to have brought the first flore) was brought the first flore) was brought to flore flore. end his own Mother is faid to have brought the first stone) was stirved to Thursd, V. al. death. After his death the Spartans sent to Athens to accuse Themistoles of Max, lib. 5. the same Crime, who being before this banished by the Ostracifm, lived can 3, externe at Argos in great esteem, and was much envied by the Lacedamonians for exemple. having done many things in his Countreys behalf, which they looked upon as tending to their prejudice. 'Tis said that certain Letters were found in Paufanias his Coffers, intimiting a correspondence betwirt them for promoring the affairs of the Parsan King, which though he affented not unto, yet discovered not the thing, hoping Pausanias would either be deterred from

The ends of his design, or the thing would come out some other way. But the Spartans Paufanias and Inemifiecles laying it heavily to his charge, and his own Citizens envying his gloty, though he fought to purge himfelf by Letters, yet was he condemned, and the people perswaded to send some to lay hold of him, and bring him up. He perceiving this, fled to Coreyra, and thence to Admenus King of the Moloffians, with whom, not being able to continue in fafety, he went to Areaster xes Longimanue, by whom he was honourably received, and bountiful-

Greece, which by this time had many expert Captains (amongst whom of most especial note was Cimon) he poyloned himself. 8. (4) Four years after the banishment of Themistocles died Aristides, (4) Corn. Never note moderation and abstinguous begain appeared the business of the Plutarch, in whose moderation and abstinency herein appeared that having born such Aristide.

ly entertained (having three Cities given him, one for bread, another for wine, and a third for victuals, to which others add two more for Clothes and Linnen) and died at length at Magnelia a natural death, though some wrote, that seeing he was not able to perform his promise to the King of Conquering

Offices, yet he died to poor, that he scarcely left wherewith to be buried; Thursd lib. yet so gratefull was the State towards his memory, that his Children were provided for at the publick charge. Eight years after the battel of Platan, Cimon being fent out by the Athenians, obtained in one day two notable victories at Sea and Land, over the Perlians at Eurymedon, a River in Pamphylia.

which brought him and the State no little credit. After this they fell out with the Thaffaus, who by their Colonies had taken possession of the rich

Mines of Silver and Gold, which were in that part of Thrace, lying upon Macedonia, betwixt the two Rivers Strymon and Ny ffin. For these Mines the Atherians envied them, and raifed fuch a contention, that they withdrew themselves from the association; whereupon they presently commenced War against them, and overthrew them in a Sea-fight, and afterwards befieged to invade Attica, thereby to divert the Athenians from them; and, having promifed, they were ready to perform it; but that they were hindred by an Earth-quake, which forely afflicted them, and whereupon the publick flaves

(called Helotes) of the posterity of the Messenians, took their opportunity, Diodonis ad and rebelling, seized upon Ithome in the Territories of Messenia, being acted Olymp. 77.

9. The Spartans much diffressed by this rebellion, having lost 2000 men and made an Alliance with the Argives their Adversaries, in which they also comprehended the Theffalians. And they that were belieged in Ithame, at length in the tenth year, being forced to yield, and banished Peloponnessus by the Spareans, the Athenians kindly received them with their Wives and Children, and gave them Naupallus to inhabit, which they had lately taken of the Spartans; for the inhabitants of Megara, Neighbours to the former,

Nijaa upon the Sea, therein placed a Garrison of their own. And this from the Locrians, called 'Ozola. A little after this, another great acces- " Vide Strib. fion was made to the Arength of the Athenians, and that with the detriment 16,9,94,417.

The Thalians envied by the Athenians for the Mines.

288

them by Land. The Thasians befreged, sent to the Spartans, defiring them The Lacedemonians diftreffed.

by that impression, which Pausanias not long before had made upon ann. 4. by the Earth-quake, besides a great losse in their buildings, after three years the Thalians were no longer able to hold out, and yielded to fuch hard conditions as the Athenians laid upon them. The Lacedemonians proceeding but flowly in their War, fent to the Athenians for aid, which was fent them.

but through finister suspicions they sent it back again', and this was taken 'as an affront by the Athenians, who were very much moved at it. This was ning of malice the beginning of that mutual malice and enthicy which thenceforth paffed betwire these two States, and proved the rise of abundance of mischief. For,

Athenians and the Athenians, presently after the return of their men, forsook the League, Lacedemonians, which they had entred into with the Spartans against the common Enemy, being falln upon with War by the Corinthians, betook themfelves to them for aid, though heretofore they had been the Allies of Sparta. This opportunity the Athenians imbraced, and thereby got Megara into their hands, The beginwith Paga, a Mart-Town adjoyning to it; and fortifying Megara as far as ning of the hatred bewas also the beginning of that inveterate hatred betwixt Corinth and twixt Corinth and Athens.

Athens.

ans and Ar-

The Mycene-

ned another in Peloponnesius, betwirt the Argives and the inhabitants of Olymp. 78. Mycena, upon this occasion. The Mycena ans standing high upon the an- ann.s. tient Eminency of their Citie, would not be subject to the Argives, as the other Cities of Argolis were, but would live according to their own Laws and Customs, having nothing to do with the Commonwealth of Argos. Moreover, they contended with them about the Temple and Rites of Tuno, chalgives fall our lenged to themselves the Right of Administring the Nemaan Games, and where is during the War with Xerxes, the Argives had made an order not to help the Lacedamonians at Thermopyla, except they would yield them part of the Command, the Mycenams alone joyned themselves to them. These things mide the Argives jealous that their power increasing with the return of their antient spirit, they would contend with them for Empire it self, and therefore of a long time they defired to destroy their Citie. Now see- SECT. 2. ing they had a good opportunity, whilest the Spartans being busied at home could affoard them no relief, they raifed a great Army out of their own, and the Neighbouring Cities, and therewith fetting upon them, overthrew them, and laid close fiege to Mycene. They stoutly resisted for some time, but being exhausted by the War, and the Lacedamonians (being bufied with the Helores, and lately distressed by the Earth-quake) not being the Perlian Empire.

10. During the War berwixt the Lacedamonians and their flaves, hap- piedonis ad

froyed,

streene debetwixt the renewed.

able to relieve them, the Defendants being most spent, the Citie was taken and levelled with the ground, the inhabitants being made flaves, and the tenth part of them confectated to the god of Argos. So, this Citie happy in more antient times, a Nurse of famous men, and renowned for worthy exploits, was brought to destruction, and continued desolate to the time wherein our Author lived. 11. The difference raised betwixt the Athenians and Corinthians, about Thueyd, lib. 1. Megara, proceeded so far, as the former invaded Peloponnesias, and joyning battel with the Corinthians and Epidaurians, were worked; but engaging the Diodorus ad fecond time at the Island Cecryphalea, obtained a victory. Not long after, Ulymp. 80. the War betwixt the Athenians and the inhabitants of Agina was again and 3. 6.3. renewed, wherein the former obtained a great victory at Sea, and took fevenry Veffels from the Islanders, and then besieged the Citic, to the relief of which 300 men were fent out of Peloponnesus. Now the Corin-The difference thians judging it a fit scason to be doing something, for that they were both Mindians and occupied in the War of Agina and Egypt alfo, (where their Forces were affifting Inarus the fon of Pfamminichus against Artaxerxes) invaded the Territories of Megara. But things hapned otherwise than they expected, about Megara for the Athenians left not the fiege at Agina, but fent our of the Citie of Athens fuch as were both above and under age for the War, to the aid of Megara, which at length carried away the victory, and forced the Corinthians to return home with great loffe. At this time the Athenians began to build their long Walls from the Citie to the port.

damonians being Patrons to the later, sent to their aid 11500 men, which Army forced the Phocians and brought them to terms, but being about to return home, it dared neither do it by the Crissan Sea (or Gulf of Phocis) nor through the Isthmus, for fear of the Athenians, and fostaid in Baotia for an twixt the Photong the Phose opportunity: especially being defired by some principal men of Arbens, who hating the popular Government, hoped by the help of this Army to diffolve it, and hinder the building of the long Walls, which made much for the interest of the people. But the Athenians hearing of this stop came out of the Citie to a man against them, having with them 1000 Argives, and a great number of other Allies, so that the whole amounted to 14000. who when the Thessalian horse joyned with them gave outtel to the Lacedamonians near Tanagra, a great and famous Citie of Baotia, not far from Thebes. The The falian horse revolting to the Lacedamonians, they obtained the victory, and then presently marching into Megaris, wasted it, and so returned home through the Istifimus. Yet the Athenians resolving not to give way

1 2. After this arose a War betwixt the Phocians and the Dores. The Lace-they perfected their long Walls; Ægina was yielded to them, the Walls of 81. ann. 1. which they pulled down, took away their shipping, and imposed Tribute upon them for the future. And Tolmides their Captain coasting Peloponnessus with a Fleet, burnt the Lacedamonian Arcenal at Gythium, took Chalcis, a Town of the Corimbians, and landing his men, overthrew the Sicye-13. But in Egypt the Athenians had bad successe, Inarm being taken and Touryd, lib.t. Crucified, and few of their men after fix years returning home: fifty Gallies also being sent to their relief were most of them taken and sunk by the Phato Fortune, 72 dayes after this defeat marched again into Baoria to revenge themselves, which by the overthrow of the inhabitants they reduced together with Phocis; rased the Walls about Tanagra, and compelled the Opnutians Idem ad ann. 4.

of Locris to give them 100 Hostages of their richest men. At this time on ad Olymp.

nicianse

SECT. 2.

SECT.2. Phanicians. Other Expeditions they made also with like successe, save that they overtherw the Sicyonians again in battel; which made them after The Athenians three years willing to make truce with the Peloponne sians for five years, by the forced by bad advice of Cimon, whom being banished by the Offracism they had recalled, incresse to make a Truce during which time they warred in (b) Cyprus under conduct of Cimon, and (b) Diodent make a Truce in Agypt in the service of Amyricus the King, with good successe. (c) Af- ad Olyan, 31. ter this followed the Holy War, asthey called it, the Spartans taking the Tem- am, 3. ple at Delphos from the Phocians, and giving it up to the Delphians, from (c) Thursd. 4 whom the Athenians again took it and reflored it to the Phocians. After- (d) Idem. wards the (d) Bassians revolted from the Athenians, who thereupon in great Do masad indignation under conduct of Tolmides invaded them, took Charon a and Olym, 12 other Towns, in which putting a Gatrison, and returning homewards light and it. upon the Enemy, who killed and took them all, and amongst others Tolmides was flain, who had made this bold attempt, contrary to the advice of Pericles the Son of Xanthippus, who now had begun to grow eminent. Hereat the Enheatevolts. Athenians exceedingly dashed, to redeem their prisoners parted with all Bania, and not long after all Eubaa revolted from them, their credit being now on the decaying hand. To the recovery of this Island Pericles was fent, who scarce being landed, news came that Megara had also revolted, and that the Pe'oponnesians were about to invade Attica. 14. This confirmined him to return, and the Peloponne fians accordingly Thursd. lib. 1 invaded Atica under the command of Plistonax the fon of Parsanias the Olymp. $3, 40, Lacedamonian King. They wasted all as far as Fleusine; but Pericles there 3, & 400, 4,2 oppoling them, corrupted Clean Iridas Counsellour to Plistonax with gold, whereby they were deterred, and returned home, where Cleandridas was rewarded with death, and Pliftonax with banishment. Pericles having so eafily dispatched his affairs here, returned into Enboa, which he wholly reduced, pulled down the walls of Chalcis, and banished onely the Inhabitants ducech Euhaa, of Hestiaa, which he peopled with a Colony of his own Citizens. This various fortune inclined both fides to an accommodation, and procured a League fortune incline to be made for thirty years betwixt the Athenians and Lacedemonians, with their allies on both fides, whereby Nifea, Achaia, Page, and Trazene, were set free by the Athenians, and it was made lawful for any City that had not been affociate with either part, to joyn it felf to which it best liked; which Article afterwards was urged by them of Coregra to Athens, whereby they demonstrated that they ought not to deny them the liberty of asso-

15. Six years after, a War arose berwixt the Inhabitants of Miletus and Diodous at those of Samus, about Priene a Town in Ionia, under the Mountain Mycale. Olyansa at The Milesian affairs going down the wind they sent to Athen, where they grievously accused the other, with whom joyned also many of the Samians themselves, who not being imployed in the Government, defired to have it changed. The Athenians being perswaded by them, manned out forty ships against Samus, by which power Pericles restored the Popular Government, exacted 80 Talents, and taking for Hostages 50 Boys, and as many Men, which they kept in custody at Lemnus, put a Garrison of their own into Samus Stirs in Samus, it felf. But some of the Citizens who had withdrawn themselves into the Perieles victo- continent, entered into a conspiracy with the greatest in the Town, and affociating to them Piffuthnes the Governour of Sardis for the Persians, with 700 Auxiliaries passed over by night into the Island, and setting upon the People on a fodain (of which they overthrew the major part, and having their Hoftiges delivered to them by stealth out of Lemris, delivered up the Athenian Garrison with the Officers into the hands of P sathnes) and brake out into open rebellion, and drawing in the Byzantians to their party, made

War upon Miletus. 16. The Athenians, having notice of this, presently dispatched away 60 Gallies against Samu, with 44 of which Pericles and his nine Colleagues failing for Mileum, inguged withthe Sam an Fleet confifting of 70 Veffels (whereof twenty were laden with Soldiers) at the Island Tragia, and obtained the victory, and afterwards with the other part of the Fleet, and a new supply of 40 ships, failing to Samus, overthrew the Inhabitants, and closely besieged them both by Sea and Land. Perioles, whilft things were thus ordering, heard that the Phanicians were coming to the relief of the besieged. to meet whom he took away with him 60 Gallies, and bent his course towards Caria, after whose departure the Samians perceiving the Guards thinner than usual, broke out of the Haven, put to flight the ships that by nearest, overthrew the next, and so recovering the mastery of the adjoyning Sei, for 14 dayes exported and imported what they pleased. But Pericles being returned with 60 other ships from Autoa (commanded by excellent Captains) besides 20 others from Chins and Lefbns, they were belieged closer than ever, and The City being spent with the War, in the ninth moneth of the siege yielded up the

vielded to

um affrighted at this successe, returned also to it's former obedience. 17. Shortly after this, fell out those motions which occasioned the Corin- A. M. 3566. thian, and fo by confequence laid the foundation of the Pelaponnesian War, Ulymp. 85. 17. about the second year of the 85th Olympiad, and the 25th of the reign of 2. V. C. 314. Artaxerxes Longimanus.

City. The conditions were hard enough, viz. To demolifh their Walls, give Hoftages, deliver up their hips, and pay the charge of the War. Byzanti-

Artax. Longini. The Inhabitants of the Island Coreyra, who were a Colony of the Corin- Thucyd, at furinthians, some 85 years after their plantation in that Island (formerly called pra Phaacin, fituate on the Illyrian shore, and being very populous) sent our a Co-Diodorus ad lony which built a City called Epidamnus, and afterwards Dyrrach cim, but Olyap. 85. an. 2.

not without the leave of Corinto the Metropolis, which at their request had assigned a Cirizen of their own (Phalius of the posterity of Hercules) according to the Law and custome, to be Prince of the Colony; and out of the number of their own Citizens and other Dores made up the number. This new Colony seated in a very convenient place, in a short time flourished exceedingly, and abounding with plenty of all things, as usually it hapneth, fell out of luxurie unto civil diffentions about the Government, and hereat occasion being taken by their next neighbours the Taulantians (who made War upon them) suffered no little dammage. At length the People incendennin, a Co. fed against the great ones expelled them the City, who thereupon betaking themselves to the Taulantians, procured them to distresse Epidamnus both by land and sea, by which the people being straightned sent to the Corcyreans their Founders, and Patrons, humbly to befeech them that by their authority they would make an accommodation betwire them and their exiles, and bring the Tanlantians to cease their Hoslility. The Corcyraans, whether disapproving the cause, or minding something else, rejected their petition, who then by direction from the Oracle at Delphos, betook themselves to the Corinthians, Founders of them both, and gave up their Colony into their hands. They were glad of this occasion, and prefently promised them all affishance, being angry with the Corcyraans, who upon their good fortune were grown infolent, and paid not the respect to them which was due from a Colonie to the Metropolis; for they were so rich and strong, that giving way to no City of Greece in the former respect, they had also 120 Gallies readily furnished, which drew envy upon them from the Corinthians, infomuch that now by the help of their Friends they resolved to chastise them, and sent a Party of Soldiers to defend Epidaminis, together with new planters to be imbodied into the Colony.

18. The Coregrams took this heavily that they should intermedle with the Procure a fal- affairs of their Colony, and being follicited by such exiles as had fled to them, mixthe Cor. fent a Fleet to Epidamnus, commanding it to receive the exiles without delay. Means and and cast out the new Planters with the Corinthian Garrison. But the Epithe Corinthians damnians refusing to do it, and the Corinthians making great provisions for the War , they fent their Ambassadors to Corinth with some Spartans and Sicyonians to bear witnesse of the matter, and offered to put it to a reference before equal Judges: But the Corinthians neglecting their message, as resolved for War, they also made preparation for it. They still continuing the siege

Corcyreans.

Stirs at Epi-

rious there.

modation.

CHAP. II.

This with other things

exasperate

them and fixes against victorious.

herein.

292

SECT .2. before Epidamnus, the Corinthians fent a Fleet of 75 Gallies, armed with 2000 fighting men thither, but leaving 40 for the carrying on of the fiege, Thursd with 80 more they ingaged with them in a Sea-fight near the Promontory of Diodorne ad The corryseans Allium, and got the Victory. The fame day Epidamnus was yielded to Olymp. 85,000, that party they had left at the fiege, and so hereby getting the dominion of the 3, 4. Set far and vvide, and grovving proud upon their good fortune, they invaded the Territories of the allies of their Enemies, to succour vyhom the Corinthians manned out another Fleet, and landed an Army at Allium. They pitched also there their Tents against them, but Winter dravving on, they both departed vvirhout any act of Hostility; the Corinthians all that year and the year following, out of harred to the other, using all their endeavours for rigging a nevv Fleer, and procuring plenty of rovvers out of Peloponnesus and

19. The Corcyraans before this time not joyned in alliance with any Thursd. other State, novy begin to look about them hovythey might strengthen them- Diodorus ad felves. They fent to Athens, defiring to enter into fociety with that State, Olymp. 86,44,1, and to have affiltance from it; and the Corinthians having notice hereof, fent their Ambastadors to oppose them. The Corcyraans vvere first heard, making a large discourse, and then the Corinibians larger than they. The matter They enter vvas brought twice before the People, which at length refolved that a defeninto fociety with Athens.

five League should be made with them of Coreyra, that the one should affift the other in case they were assaulted by an Enemy : but to make any invasion. affiltunce vvas denied, left they should break the Leagues formerly made with other States. The Athenians resolved on this course, for that they save plainly they must have War with the Peloponnesians, and therefore defired to The design of have the Coreyraans who were very powerful at Sea, on their side; and they thought it would be for their interest to have the Corinthians and their associates spend their flock upon those of Corcyra, which Island they also looked the Athenians upon as very commodious for passage either into Sicilie or Italy. Ten Triremes therefore vvere decreed to affift the Corcyraans, in case they were in any danger, and three Captains sent, one of which was Lacedamonius the son of Cimon, whom Pericles envying for his fathers fake, procured that no more affiltance should be sent, that so the businesse might miscarry under him; but Philade is afterwards out of plain flymehe fent another Squadron of ships wich came. Peride. too late. These Generals had in charge by all means to decline the fight with the Corinthians, except they fet upon the Corcyreans, whom then they were to protect to the utmoft. 20. This Squadron of ten ships joyning with the Corcyreans made up their Fleet 120 fail, with which they gave battel to the Corinthians (vvho hid 90 of their oven, and 60 from their allies) betwirt the Island Corcyra and the continent of Epirus. This fight (described most accurately by Thucydides) was the most valiantly fought, and with the greatest number of ships, of any that to those times had happened betwixt the Gracians themselves. The Athenians mindful of the charge received from their Superiours, at the first rather fought to deter, than to fight with the Enemy, fuccouring the Corcyreans in some places; but they being fully worsted and put to flight in that wing wherein they flood, they then with all their might fell upon the Corinthians, and spoiled their Victory in that part, and rendred it ambiguous as to The Corinthians both fides. On the same day both parties rallied for a fresh ingreement, and they were founding to the charge, when unexpectedly the Corinthians efficed twenty Athenian thips which Pericles had now fent to affift with the other ten, at which fight being utterly discouraged (as fearing more might follow them) they fell off aguin, to the admiration of the Corcy aans, who knew nothing of the coming of these ships. Great saughter was made on both sides;

the Corinthians loft thirty thips, and Corcyraans seventy, besides 1000 of their men taken prisoners, whom as the Corcreams carried homewards, they took Anastorium (a Town fituate upon the Biv of Ambracia) in their wiv, and therein left some Planters of their own. This battel was fought in the 29th year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, the tenth of the 86th Olympiad, overthrown in a Seafight.

and five years almost before the beginning of the Peloponne fian War, Lyfi- SECT. 2. machus being Archon at Athens.

21. Eight hundred of the Prisoners which had been formerly slaves they fold, and the rest (many of them being of the chiefest Rank of the Corcyraans) they kindly entertained. Thus was Corcyra as it were made victorious, and the Athenian ships dismissed, which proved the first cause of the Corinibians making War upon the Athenians, Others followed, which not onely inraged them, but the other Peloponnesians against the Athenians. Pothe Pelopoanedan, a Town fituate in the Ishmus of Pallene (formerly called Plegra, and Strabolib.7. the Athenians, afterwards Cassandrea from Cassander King of Macedonia) was a Colony pag. 330. B. of the Corinthians, but affociated with the Athenians. The Inhabitants there- Toucyd, Diod. which was next Pallene, to give hostages, and to cast out the Magistrate which every year the Corinthians used to send them, and receive no more from them afterwards. This the Athenians did, for that they perceived the Corinthians to be much exasperated against them, and seared that joyning with Perdicess King of Macedonia, with whom they were at odds, and upon whose Kingdom Posidea bordered, they would sollicite the place to revolt, and by its example would entice the rest of the Towns thereabout from their alliance. But Perdiccas being first aware hereof (against whom the Athenians had Armed his brother Philip and Derdas) in great wrath fent to Lacedamon to flir them up with the other Peloponnesian States to make War upon them, and invited the Potideans to revolt, with other Towns in Thrace.

22. The Athenians being not ignorant of all this, to prevent the revolt of the Towns, fent order to the Captains of the thirty Gallies lately fent into those parts, first to see the execution of their Commands laid upon Poridea, and take all possible care that the other places should not give ear to any sinister advice. They of Potidaa fent to Athens, desiring earnestly that nothing of extremity might be put upon them; but yet they dispatched also Ambassadors (together with some from the Corinthians their founders) to Sparta, to defire aid thence, that they might provide for the worft, Having no good answer from Athens, but affrighted with the coming of the Fleet; and on the other hand being promifed by the Lacedemonians, that in case the Athenians fell upon them, they would straight invade Attica, they took the advice of Perdiceas, and revolted with the Chalcidenfians and Bottiaans. The Athenian Fleet having notice hereof departed from Thrace, where they had arrived, and fayling to Macedonia, joyn their power with Philip and Derdas against Perdiccas. The Corinthians to help their friends at Potidea, Sent 1600 men, partly of their own, and partly hired out of Peloponnefus, of heavy Armour; and 400 besides light Armed, who sourty dayes after the revolt of the Town came into Thrace, under conduct of Arikam, the fon of Adi-

23. The Athenians hearing of this aid, to give greater strength to their Thucyd, lib. 1. affairs in Thrace, fent to their former Forces 2000 Armed men, with a Fleet Diodorus ad of fourty Gallies, under the Command of Callians, the fon of Calliades, with Olymp. 87. whom were joyned in Commission four others. Being arrived in Macedonia, they found their friends who had joyned with Philip to have taken Therma, and now intent upon the fiege of Pydna, and joyned themselves to them; but feeing how their affairs would be endangered by the Conjunction of Perdiccas with the Corinthian Forces and Potidaa, they made up a peace with the King, and attempting Berrhan in their way, made haste towards Potidan, and pitched their Tents at Gigonum, whither another Athenian Fleet of feventy Gallies also came, Perdicoas the Macedonian King again revolted to the Potideans, and joyned himself with the Corinthian Army, betwixt which, and that of the Athenians enfued a fight, wherein the Athenians were worsted The Albenians in that Wing wherewith they fought with the Corinibians; but got the better against Perdiccas, which Aristeus the Corinthian General seeing, after he returned from the purfute, broke through, and fled into Potidaa. Of the Athegetting the octter (

SECT. 2 ' nians were flain 150. amongst whom Callias the General, but of the contrary part few lesse than 300. The Athenians after this victory drew a line against the Town, and a supply of 1600 fresh men being sent from Ashens under the Command of Phormio, closely befieged it both by Sea and Land. These Closely befiege Potidea. Were the mutual causes of the heart-burnings of the Corinthians and Pelopon-

ne sians against the Athenians, & of the Athenians against them, about Corcyra, and Posidaa, both of them Colonies of the Cornebian, of which the Athenians defended the former against its founders, whilest they endeavoured to chastise it, and they again inticed the later, with other Towns which were Tributaries to Athens, to renounce their allegiance to that State.

24. Posidaa being thus blocked up, the Corinthians were highly con- Thursd. cerned, both for the Town it felf, and such of their own Citizens as were therein; and resolving that it was no time now to be idle, sent to their asfociates of Peloponnesses to meet them at Lacedamon, where they grievously The States of inveighed against the Athenians. Liberty being given to every man to thenians at Lacedemon.

294

speak, several others also sharply accused them, but especially the Deputies of Megara, for many injuries, and chiefly for that, contrary to the agreement made with them, they had interdicted them the Ports and Market of Athens. The Corinihians cunningly suffered the rest to speak first, that by them the Lacedamonians might be incensed against the Athenians, but then, after all. more fully and earnestly laid open their faults, aggravated the injuries received from them, pressed the great danger which threatned Peloponnesia from their power, checked the Lacedamonians for their too much remifnesse in vindicating the cause of their distressed friends and allies, and plainly declared, that if now they would not do it, they must strengthen themselves with other confederates. 25. It hapned at this time that there were at Lated amon some Ambassadors fent from Athens upon other businesse, who understanding how things went, defired alfo to be heard, and this being obtained, fought to allay the flomich of the Peloponnesians by calm and prudent reasons. They defired not to be understood, as though they came to plead the cause of their State which they neither could acknowledge as guilty, nor own them as their Judges: but defired, and advised them not rashly to resolve upon any violent course.

nor give credit to all that was objected, untill such time as they could throughly understand the case; for that things being once confounded could not eafily again be composed. They mentioned the commodities of peace, and fwer in their

the evils that come by War; charged these calumnies upon the envy of their accusers, who could not behold the power of Athens without prejudice. though it was obtained no otherwise than as the reward of vertue, as the asfociates themselves could not but witnesse, who knew well enough how the Athenians merited at Marathon of all Greece, as afterwards at Salamine and they averred, that they had used their power so moderatly, as none had any reason to complain. That they had increased their strength they denied not, which to endeavour was agreeable to the Law of nature, as also that the weaker should obey the more potent; so that it was without injury, though not without force, which was absolutely necessary for the maintenance of any command, and was practifed not onely by themselves, but the Lacedamonians also, and would ever so be in the like cases. Again, they laid before them the uncertainty of the event of War, and concluded with a religious protestation. concerning their innocency, and defire of peace.

Archidamus. King of Lacedemon his prudent difcourfe.

Their Am-

behalf.

26. The Lacedamonians having heard both parties, debated the businesse amongst themselves. They were generally inclined to make War presently upon the Ashenians as the Authors of many injuries, which Archidamus, one of their Kings, and a very prudent, and moderate man observing, by a grave speech dehorted them, not from undertaking a War for the safety of their Allies, but rushing into it; for that the strength of Athens, and of their own State (as he faid) being compared, there was need of a fufficient time to make provision for it, in which not onely the affiftance of the Gracians, but of the Barbarians also was requifire. He shewed that the Athenians could not be fubdued fubdued by the wasting of At ica, having all provitions in a readinesse, and SECT.2. that it was no policy for them being unprovided to deal with such an Enemy: but that rather the thing was to be deferred till things could be in a readinelle, in which time the Athenians might perhaps be in a better mind, and give fatisfaction without constraint; and this could not turn to the disgrace of the Lacedemonians, in that they followed the example of their Ancestors: Lastly, that by how much they took Arms with more advice, they should by so much conclude with more happinesse and celerity. But Schenelaides one of

we Pernan Empire.

Which is croffed by Sth. 1. ! udes. and War is decreed.

The Licela-

12: 11.145 CH-

the Ephor, and who spake last, differenting from the judgement of Archidamus very flarply persivaded the people to take up Arms against the Albenians, as violators of the former Leagues, and War was decreed accordingly, not fo much at the inftance of their confederates, as out of fear of the growing power of Athens. This was done in the 14th year after the ending of the Eubain War, and the Truce made for 30 years. 27. The Lacedamonians acquainted the Deputies with what was refolved; but withill told them they would fignifie it to all their affociates , that if so be the War should be decreed by the common consent, it might be carried on with their joynt force: then departed they to their feveral homes to know the minds of their Superiours, and the Athenian Ambashdors returned. After their departure, the Laced emonians, before the matter should any further proceed, fent to Delphos to enquire of the Oracle concerning the event of the War, whence receiving such answer as they wished, they post about it, again fent for their Allies, and propounded the businesse to them, who unanimously decreed the War, which was exceedingly pressed by the Corithians, who, before this meeting, for fear of the loffe of Posidan had fent about it. It being not expedient to begin the War unprovided, all were defired to repair home, and make all provisions possible (in which was almost spent a year) and in the mean time Ambassadors were sent to Athens to make demands, of which, if any were denied, a more specious pretence might be ob-

28. In the first Embassie they demanded the expiation of a piacular offence, in which Perioles was involved by his Mothers kindred. For, know-They fend fri- ing him to be a man of great Counsel and courage, by all means they endearolling media voured upon this account to have him, banished; but the other objected to gsto dibeas, the Lacedamonians, that they had drawn out of the Temple of Neptune some of their Heilots, and flain them, and starved Paufanias to death in that of Pallas Chalciaca, where he took fanctuary. After this the Spartans fent to require them to abstain from Posides, to fet at liberty Egins, and especially they pressed them to let the Inhabitants of Megara have the liberty of their Port and Market, without which they must expect nothing but War: but to none of these demands was there given any satisfying answer, the Megarians being accused for appropriating to their own use the ground which belonged to the goddesse of Eleusine, and receiving such fugitive slaves as fled from Athens. In the third message Ramphins and his Collegues added but this to the other demands, that the Lacedamonians were defirous of peace, and would grant it, in case the Athenians would suffer all the Gracians to be free, and live according to their own Laws. These things thus often the Sparians demanded, to amuse the other party till they themselves could be provided, and to catch at a specious pretence for a quar-

29. The Athenians upon the last message called the Assembly of the Thursd. lib.t. people to deliberate about the matter, that they might fend a clear and Diodonia ex positive answer once for all. Many speaking pro and con, at length Pe- Epharo ad Oricles the most excellent of all the Athenians of that age, both for doing tymp.87. and speaking, with his eloquence (wherewith he was faid by the Poets and 2. to Thunder and Lighten) easily drew the multitude to his mind. After he had inveighed against the Lacedemonians as swollen with envy, he excused themselves, and incouraged the people from their ability to undertake the War. He advised that this answer should be returned: That the

SECT .2. decree against them of Megara should be rescinded, in case the Lacedamonianswould give such freedom of their City to the Athenians and other of the affociates: that they would fet all Cities under their jurisdiction at liberty, The Athenians which were free before, when the League should be entred into; provided the by the advice Spartans would do the same, and suffer such as were under them to live according to their own cuftoms, and not to be tyed to those of Laconia: and laftly, that tive answer they were content to be judged concerning the things in controversie, accoronce for all by ding to the leagues; neither would they first make War, but effectually de-way of denial. fend themselves. He added, that this was both just and honourable, and if they undertook the War chearfully, they should find their Enemies lesse condetable: that out of the greatest extremities the greatest honour was wont to accrue both to their State in general, and to each Citizen in particular, which he made good by instancing in the Median War, at which time the City was far leffe confiderable than at the prefent, and whence it arrived to that pitch of greatnesse: he told them it was fit they should imitate their Ancestors, and leave not the Empire received from them diminished unto posterity.

30. Why Pericles should be so earnest for the War (a) several reasons (a) Vide Place have been alleged, and this (b) amongst the rest, that he was not able to make tarch in Poids, account for the publick money he had received to build a Port 1 in the Castle Val. Max. 1, 1 to the honour of Minerva. He confumed abundance of treasure in this 6.1. executed work, and none looking after him, diverted the publick money taken up un- Diodonis at der that pretence to other uses. Whilst he considered hereof, and fat forrow- fund. ful at home, Alcibiades a Boy and his Sifters Son (whom after his Brother in Laws death he brought up in his own house, and who afterwards became very eminent) came and asked him why he was fo fad, to whom he answered, because he knew not how to give an account of his Office, at which the Boy replied, Study therefore rather how thou mayst not need to give an account of

Alcib ades when a child, is. This most prudent man destitute of advice from himself, used this of a child, and for this reason perswaded the people to the War, that being inhis advice to his Uncle P tangled therein they might have no leifure to call him to account for the difburiment of the money. What ever his motives were, the People (c) decreed (c) Thank is vicles. what he proposed, and answered the Lacedamonians particularly according to what he faid, and in general, that they would do nothing they had enjoyned them, but were ready to acquir themselves of those matters laid against them, before equal and indifferent Judges; and with this answer the Ambassadors returned to Lacedamon, whence no more came. These were the quarrels which foreran the War, being begun about the affairs of Epidamnus and Corcyra. Notwithstanding this disagreement, yet they continued commerce with each other, went to and fro without any publick Officer, or Herauld; but yet not without jealoufy of one another. For these things that hapned mide confusion in the Leagues, and ministred matter for War. 31. Several Learned Men flourished in this space, as (a) Afchylus the (a) Annymus Trag redian, (b) Icem a famous Physician of Tarentum in Italy, (c) Anax- ad 01, 76.414 agoras the Clazomenian Philosopher, who was defended by his Scholar Peris. (b) Step, is cles, when accused of Athesism; (d) Panniasis a samous Poet; Perioles him- (c) Planticis self, the Son of Xanshipsus, accounted by (e) Cicero the first Athenian Periole. Orator. Besides these, (f) Charondas and Zalencus both Scholars of Py- (d) Anonym is thagoras, whereof the former gave Lawsto the Thurians, and the other to Olympas. A. a. the Locrians; Meliffus, Protagoras the Atheift, and Empedocles, (g) all (c) lis Ballo the Locrians; Melissia, Protagoras the Athelit, and Empeaceles, (2) all Disdons, who flourished about the 84th Olympiad. Herodosus of Halicarnassus, who (2) Diog.Lath. being sent to Thurium in Italy with some new Planters to restore the Colony and Ananymous there, lived to the beginning of the Peloponnesian War which he mentioneth, and in the 42d year of his age, about the third of the 84th Olympiad, re- (b) Vollath cited his Book at (b) Athens in the Affembly of the Panathanaa, by the friph Gradin emulation of which Thacydides then young was much moved; fo that after- (i) Eufth. wards this stirred him up to write. (i) Euripides the Tragordian, the Scholar (i) Scholas of Anaxagoras, (k) Sophocles, who was chosen General of the Athenian stident Augs.

Forces, and (l) Phrynicus the Comcedian, and (m) Pindar a Theban the (m) Iden. Prince of Lyrick Poets, who died aged 85 years, in the second of the 86 th

The Pelopou-

whim War

with the furprifing of Plabeginneth

ist by the

Which the Towns-men

prefently re-

Thibans.

Olympiad.

Olympiad. (n) Menton an Atheman in the year before the beginning of the SECT. 3. Peloponnesian War (according to the account of Thucydides) Apfendes entring into his Office of Archon, began his Cycle of the Moon, containing (a) Cappellus nineteen years. In this space, though not precisely, the Lunations do recur; Cenforius c. 18. fo that if the Quadrature of the Moon fall out as at this day this year; the Alim, war hift, fame thall return the fame day of the ninereenth year succeeding. Fither he, lib, 10, 6, 7, & fo that if the Quaarature of the Moon ran out as at this day this year, the lib, 10, c, 7, & fame thall return the fame day of the nineteenth year succeeding. Either be- lib, 13, c, 12, cause it was written in letters of Gold, or for the precious use of it, it obtained to be called, as still it is, the Golden Number. It is found by adding an unit to the year of our Lord, and dividing the whole by 19. The remainder shall be the Cycle of the Moon; or if nothing remain, the Cycle is out;

SECT. III.

From the beginning of the Peloponnesian war to the ending thereof, containing the space of 27 years.

1. TN the fifteenth year after the recovery of Eubwa by the Athenians, and Thucyd, lib. 2. the truce concluded for thirty years; the fixth moneth after the battel ad ann. 1. fought at Pottdea; in the 48th year of the Priesthood of Chrysis the Priest Diodoius ad of Arges; Anefas being the principal Ephorus at Sparing, Pythodorus Ar. Olymn 87 and t. chan ar Athens, in the fifth war of the Cath Olymnard, the other than the Kroppy. chon at Athens; in the first year of the 87th Olympiad, the 33th of the Reign Hellonic, lib. 2. of Areaxerxes Longimanus, of the World the 3574, began the Peloponiefian War, henceforth there being no commerce with one another without an Officer at Arms, and Hostility exercised without intermission. 2. In the second moneth of Pythodorus his Government, and the beginning of the Spring, 300 Thebans feized upon Platea, by the treachery of some in the Town, being affociate to the Athenians; for they perceiving a War to be drawing on, and knowing that Town to be alwaies in peace adverse to them, thought good to make fure of it betimes. The Inhabitants thinking more to have got in, than indeed did, at the first yielded it, but then again apprehending the truth, resolved to rescue their liberty, and fet by night upon the Thebans, whom they knew to be weary, ignorant of the Town, and would be much troubled with the dirt, by reason of abundance of rain which fell that night. The device prospered, and they slew almost half the number, taking the rest prisonres, which were 180, and amongst them Eurymachus the Author of this Expedition. It hapned that from Thebes another Party came too late to the help of their fellows if need should be, who seeing what was done, considered whether they should not set upon such Plataans as were abroad in the Country, and waste it round about, thereby to redeem their friends. The Plateans (as the Thebans faid) fent to them, being afraid of this, and offered them to release the prisoners if they would forhear to spoil their grounds; but in case they did, threatned to put them to death; whereupon the Thebans withdrew; and yet for all this the Placans put their friends to death. The Platans on the other hand alleged, that they never made any promise to dismisse them; but in case they should agree in treaty. But they fent to Athens to give them notice there of this attempt made upon their Town.

3. The message being carried before the Thebans were put to death, the Athenians fent word to Placea, that they would do nothing against them till they heard further from them; after they had first seized upon such Bastia ans as were in their Dominions. Then after the truth was known, they fent an Army which victualled the place, and taking out the uselesse multitude of both Sexes, put a Garrison therein. Thus the League being plainly broken on both fides, both parties prepared themselves for the War, both sent away Ambaffadors to the Persian, and other Barbarians, and set themselves to obtain new alliances. Now were old Prophecies and Sayings in all mens mouths, which they interpreted according to their affection. Most were enclined to-SECT .2. wards the Lacedamonians, who professed themselves the vindicators of the liberty of Greece, and hating the Athenians, either for that they defired to shake off their yoak, or feared to undergo it. On the Lacedamonian side The Lacede. were all the Peloponnesians except the Argives and Achaens, who were monians and friends to both, all but the Inhabitants of Pellene amongst the latter, who at Athenians heads of the two Parties.

the beginning fided with the Lacedamonians, and afterwards the rest also joyned themselves to them. Without Peloponnesus the Megarians, Phocians, Locrians, Bootians, Ambraciots, Leucadians, Anactorians. The What Greeks stood with the Corinibians , Megarians , Sicyonians , Pellenians , Eleans , Ambraciots , Lacedamonians, and Leucadians, furnished them with ships; the Baotians, Phocians, and Locrians, fent out Horse-men, and the rest of the States supplied them with

4. With the Athenians Rood the Chians, Lesbians, Plataans, Messeni-And who with ans inhabiting Naupallus, most of the Acarnanians, the Coregrans, Zacynthians, and the rest of the tributary Cities all over, the Carians inhabiting the Sea-coafts, the Dorians their neighbours, Ionia upon the Hellespont, feveral Towns of Thrace, and other places not few, the Islands lying betwixt Peleponnesus and Crese towards the Sun-rising, and all the Cyclades except Melus and Thera. The Chians, Lesbians, and Corcyraans, afforded thipping, the reft, men and money, as Thucydides writeth, who in this Catalogue passeth by Enbas and Samus, though they abounded with shipping, and fided with the Athenians. Presently after the action about Platan, the Lacedemonians fent abroad to their affociates to meet at the Ifthmus, which they did accordingly, two third parts out of each of the Cities. Here Ar-

Archidamas in Army as the eldeft of them had never feen, fent to Athens to fee if that City vadeth Autea, would now remit any of it's former rigor; but the meffenger being fent back without hearing, he marched for Attica, the Bactians at the same time having invaded the Territories of the Plateans. 5. Ere Archidamus invaded Attica, Pericles his friend, who by the Athenians with nine others was appointed General, foresceing that if he should spare his Villages, either upon the account of their particular friendthip, or by order from the Spartan State, to render him suspected, it would create him abundance of envy and ill will, to avoid all fuspition, called the People together, and gave the faid Villages to the Commonwealth, and advised them to gather all their things our of the Villages, and contain themselves within the City, to take care of their shipping, and not to neglect their confederates, from whom they might be supplied with money, which tochidamus the Spartan King and Captain General, having first gravely advised them not to trust too much to their own strength, though they made up such an

The Provision gether with good counsel and advice is the sinnews of War. He told them of the Albert that they had 600 Talents of Tribute yearly coming in, befides other revenues; that they had in the Castle left 6000 Talents of Silver ready covned, besides in bullion and place 500 Talents more, and money in the Temples, befides forty pound of pure Gold about the statue of Pallas, which it was lawful to use in extremity, making it up again afterwards. They had ready 19000 Foot-men, and 1200 Horse, besides others that used bows on Horseback, and 6000 Archers on foot: of Gallies fit for fail 200, and he added other things to make them couragiously begin the War. They obeyed him in fetching their goods into the City, and shutting up themselves there, though much to their prejudice and trouble; but such authority had he with the people, hiving first, to ingrariate himself, inlarged the authority and liberty of the multitude, whereby afterwards in effect he suled alone. They fer themfelves also with all their might to the rigging of their Fleet, and gathering together the forces of their Confederates.

6. The Peloponnesian Army entred Attica by Oenoe a Castle of the Athenians, upon the frontiers of Baotia, and there Archidamus staid, providing all things for the storm. Being somewhat long in his preparations, his adversaries thence found matter where with to accuse him, as one who affected ghe Athenians, and on purpose before at the Ishmus, and now also protracted the time till they should have removed all their goods out of Attica. He indeed thought they might be inclined to a composure for the faving of their goods, and therefore did delay his march, but finding no message sent, and not being able to take the Castle, he removed about 80 dayes after the Thebans entred Plataa, in the height of Summer, Corn being now ripe, and invaded Auica, which he wasted as far as Acharna, the strongest Garrison of all the Countrey, and but feven or eight miles distant from Athens. When they in the Citie understood this, having not suspected he would have peirced fo far, and afflicted for the losse they sustained, they began to be much moved, (especially they of Acharna, who seemed to themselves a considerable part in the State) and tumultuoufly gathering together, now began to rail at Pericles, for that he being General did not lead them out against the Enemy. He would not call the affembly nor any Company together, for fear they should refolve rafhly upon any thing; but was very carefull of the defence of the Citie, and fent out a party of horse, of which some were I hessalian Auxiliaries, to restrain the excursions of the Enemy into the parts adjacent, which was beaten back with fome loffe. At length the Peloponne fians feeing the Athenians would not come out to fight, removed from Acharna, and wasting other places, departed through Baous into Peloponnesus, and went severally to their own homes.

the Pernan Empire,

7. Whilest they were yet in Attica, the Athenians, to divert them, sent out a Fleet of 100 Gallies, on which were aboard 1000 Soldiers of heavy Armour, and 400 Archers, with which the Corcyreans joyned 50 Veffels The Atheniane more, and other affociates contributed their numbers. Coaffing the Pelanon-fend a Fleet ne fian shoar, besides other harm done, they landed in Laconia, and had into Peloponne- taken Methone, then unwalled, and meanly manned, but that Brafidas the forto divert Spartan with 100 men brake through, and getting into the Town, defended it their enemies, fo, as they were glad to retreat to their ships. Then went they to Elis, where they feized on Phia, and staying there two dayes, harrased the Country, and overthrew such as were sent to restrain them: but their ships being forely toffed with a Tempest, and hardly recovering the Haven of Phia, and understanding also that greater forces were coming against them, they departed thence, and grievously distressed such places as they came to. At the same time also another Fleet was sent from Athens to infest the Locrians, and defend Eubaa, which did much harm upon the Coasts of Locris, took Thronium, took Hostages with them, and overthrew the Locrians that came out to Agina, and plant a Colony of their own in the Ifland.

An Eclypse of

the Sun on the third of August.

They eject the refift them. In the same Summer the Athenians cast our the Inhabitants of Inhabitants of Egina, for that they imputed to them the especial cause of the War, and judged that Island convenient for them to place a Colony therein of their own. The Lacedamonians out of requital for the kindnelle received from them during the Earth-quake, and War with their flaves, and out of hatred to the Athenians, gave them Thyrea and its Territories to inhabit (which separate Laconia from the Countrey of Argos, reaching as far as the Sea;) but fuch of them as this place for its ftraightnesse could not receive, were dispersed up and down Greece it felf.

8. This same Summer, at the change of the Moon, hapned such an Eclypse of the Sun (at which time faith Thucydides, it is judged that it can onely happen) that at Mid-day the Stars were feen, which according to the Julian account hapned on the third day of August, as the Astronomical Tables demonfrate. About the same time the Athenian Fleet of 100 Gallies having in Acarnania taken several Towns, came to Cephallenia, an Island lying over against Acarnania and Loucas, which being inhabited in four Towns, they reduced without one stroak, and so returned home. In the beginning of Autumn, the Athenians with a vast Army invaded Megaris, which wasting in an Hostile manner they returned, and so they did once a year, till they got Nifan into their hinds. At this time also they placed a Garrison in Atalante, an Island belonging to the Locrians of Open, which hitherto no body had peopled, lest it should prove an Harbour for Robbers that from Locris might

Qq2

S The manner of burying those who died in the Wars.

SECT.3. prey upon Enbea. In Winter, according to their custom, they folemnifed the Funeral for those that first died in the War on this manner. First, their bones for three dayes were laid out to be seen in a Tent, where it was lawfull for their friends to come, and do fuch duties as was usual to the dead. Then when they were carried out, each Tribe came, and putting the bones of their fellows into Cypreffe Coffins, carried them away on Chariots, and one Cheft was carried empty for fuch as had not been found; the women of their kindred making lamentation as for them. Then were they buried in a publick Sepulchre, in the most famous Suburb of the Citie, called Ceramicus, where all flain in War were constantly buried, except they that fell at Marathon, who for their greater honour were buried in the place of the fight. After they were buried, fome one Eminent for prudence and eloquence made a Funeral Oration in commendations of them, which at this time was most excellently performed by Pericles. The scope of his speech was to shew they deserved immortal glory for shedding their bloud in their Countreys behalf, and to excite the living to feek after fuch renown. With this Winter ended the first year of the Peloponnesian War, whose History for its influence into the whole is the more confiderable.

9. In the Spring the Peloponnesians again under conduct of Archidamus Thueydlib.2. their former General invaded sinica, at which time fell also upon it, a ad ann, a. most fearfull plague, as it is described by Thacydides, who was fick of it, as feldom hapned; during the rage of which they plundred and wasted the Countrey all over. Pericles returning to his former Counsel, hindred the Citizens who were very defirous to iffue out and fight, and provided an hundred

Attica the fecond time invaded, when it was feized plague,

Thips, with which and fifty of the affociates of Chius and Lesbus, armed with 4000 foot and 300 horse, he departed to Peloponnesus, the Coasts of which with a fearfull he fore wasted, and forced the Army to return home to defend it, which they were willing to do also because of the plague, after they had been in Autea fourty dayes. After the return of Pericles, his Army was fent under the Command of Agnon and Cleopompus, against Chalcis and Potidea, at the later of which it was seized by the pestilence, and greatly dimished, and Agreen with 1500, which remained of 4000, returned home. But the people being fore afflicted by the plague and War together, were angry now against Pericles, as him that moved them to take up Arms, who calling them together sharply reproved them; and they confessed what he said to be true, and that he had advised them upon good grounds, but being inraged at their private discommodities, they fined him 80 Talents; and banished him the Citie, Diodonis, and yet presently after, according to the inconstant nature of the multitude, recalled, and created him General with full power.

10. In the same Summer a Navy from Peloponnesus of an hundred Gallies fell upon Zazynthus, an Island addicted to the Athenians, which wasting, and being not able to do any more, they returned home. The Peloponnesians alio in the end of Summer fent Ambaffadors to the Perfian King to defire aid, who were also commanded to go to Sitalces King of Thrace, to defire a League of confederacy with him; but they were taken near the Hellespont by some Athenians, through the affistance of Sadocus the Kings son, and free of Athens, and being brought thither, in revenge for some Athenians, Merchants, and others, flain in Peloponne fus, they were put to death. In Winter tiventy Gallies were sent fr om Athens to Naupalius to secure the Straights lying betwixt Peloponnessus and Atolia, and other fix to Caria and Lycia, to gather money, under Command of Melefander, who in a fight was there fluin with part of his forces. Potidaa now also being in despair of any supply from Peloponnessus, and fore afflicted with famine (which raged so far as the Athenians, they are man's flesh) yielded to the Athenians. Of the besieged such as were Males had liberty to depart with one Garment apiece, Females with two, and a little provision. The Citie being thus emptied was replenished with a Colony from Athens, to which state this siege stood in 2000 Talents. And so the second year of the War ended with this Win-1 1. In

II. In the next Spring Archidamus the Lacedamonian King marched SECT.3. against Places, and belieged it. The Placeans sent to him to desire he would forbear to use any extremity against them; but he returned them very harsh tdem lib. 1. Arbidannus be- conditions, requiring them to forfake the Athenians, to give up their Citie, ad and 34 figgeth Plates, and all they had, for the time of War, and in the mean time to go and dwell hegen which holderh somewhere else, promising that as soon as the War should be over, they should have all entirely restored to them. They desired a Truce, till such time as they could fend to the Athenians, their affociates, and know their mind, who being utterly against it, they then sent Archidamus word, that they were refolved to undergo what foever the chance of War should lay upon them, for that they neither could, nor would revolt from the Athenians. He then fell of washing their grounds, and with all his might attempted the Citie, which was as valiantly and powerfully defended by the Inhabitants, No way taking, at length the Spartans attempted it by fire, which confumed most part of the Town, leaving but a few houses for the Placeans to live in-Yet still the matter succeeded not, and at length despairing to take the place by force, they raised a Wall round about it, which they senced with a double Dirch to thur them in, and leaving sufficient Guards, departed home. Before this the Towns-men had fent out to Athens all their uselesse Company.

the Pernan Empire.

This same year the Athenians sought with various successe in Thrace and 12. In the later end of this Summer, and the 6th Moneth of the year died Idem in Perio Pericles, of the Epidemical disease, or the Plague, as Plutarch reporteth, o.e.

though not by its sudden force as others, but in a way of Consumption, which, Philds dieth, if so, was extraordinary. As he drew on towards his end, some of the principal men of Ashens that were left alive of his antient friends, as they fate by him, not thinking that he understood any thing, discoursed much of his great and many victories and Trophies which he had erected, placing therein the main of his commendation. He understanding the discourse, interrupted them, faying, that he wondred they should especially take notice of those things, which fortune made common to him with others, and make no mention of that which was most worthy and remarkable, for No man, faith be, His commen upon mine account hath put on a black Garment. A man he was to be had in constant admiration, not onely for his equity and mildnesse, which he showed in so many businesses of concernment, and such enmities as were exercifed against him; but also for his greatnesse of spirit, that this he especially charged upon himself, not to include his anger in so great power, or his malice; neither to be implicable towards his greatest advertary; and this feemeth to be the reason that he enjoyed the sirname of Olympius without envy, because he was of so sweet a disposition, & in the greatest power preserved his life unblemished. The great misse the Athenians had of him made them foon perceive what man he was, whose power whilest alive they ill bore, as dailing their eyes; when dead, and they had experience of others, they confessed that no man could in that height of place have carried himself more moderatly, or in that modesty more gravely, and that height of power which used to be branded with the name of Tyranny, appeared in him to have been the wholfom preservative of the Commonwealth; such depravednesse of manners, and excesse of wickednesse falling upon all things after his death, which he weakning and keeping under as long as he lived, procured that it exceeded not the ftrength of the remedy.

13. The Summer following being the fourth year of the Peloponnessan Thucyd, lib. 3. War-rifing, the Peloponnesians and their confederates made the third inva-inino. fion of Attica, when Corn was now ripe, under the Conduct of the same Archidamus, which they wasted up and down as long as their provisions lasted. In the mean time all the Island Leibne (except Methymna) retenhird time wolted from the Ashenians, having had a great defire to do it before the padeth At-War, but that the Lacedamonians would not receive them. A Fleet of fourty thips were then presently dispatched from Athens, and War was denounced to the Inhabitants of Mitylens, except they delivered up their ships,

SECT. 3. and pulled down the walls; which being denied, War was made upon them, their Gallies put to flight, and the Haven blocked up. Hereupon they defir-The Athenians el a Treaty, and obtained truce to fend an Ambassage to Athens about a beliege Mity- Peace; but in the mean while they fent underhand Ambassadors to Lacedamon, to defire a straight League and alliance, with present aid. The Ambassadors being ordered by the Spartans to stay at Olympia at the time of the solemnity of the 88th Olympiad pleaded there their cause, and in the name of their City were received into the League, and affiftance our of hand was promifed to them. Another Expedition was then resolved on into Anica, but the Spartans being ready, at the Ist bmus, whereas their affociates loitered, and the Athenians then with a Fleet of 30 ships preid upon Peloponnesus, they being advertized of the loffethey festined in Laconia, returned home,

14. Yet the Peloponne fians in performance of their promife made to the Mitylensani, dispatched away a Fleet of 40 Gallies, which found another from Athens to oppole it, confifting of 100; for the Athenians now abounded in shipping, having ready furnished 250 Gallies, on which they expended much, fo as to defray their expences, they now first of all were affested, exacting yet from their confederates the usual Tributes, which they paid with much repining. At the same time the Mitylengans and the rest of the Lefbians made War upon the Methymneans, who persisted in their obedience to the Ashenians. These understanding of it, sent at the latter end of Summer a band of men into the Island, which drew a line round about Mitylene, upon which Guards being fer, the Inhabitants were straightly besieged. In Winter the Inhibitants of Plana being greatly distressed for want of victuals, and despairing of any aid from Athens , resolved to break through the Enemies Fortifications, though exceeding difficult to be passed, and save themselves by flight. Many for the difficulty of the thing changed their minds, but 300 flood firmin their resolution, and taking advantage of an exceeding dark and rempetluous night, 212 with remarkable courage and conflancy brake through, and (the reft being repulsed into the City) came safe unto Ashen. Towards the end of Winter Saleshus was sent from Lacedamen to Mitylene, to encourage the belieged to hold out, by promife of help; and another Expedition to be made by the confederates into Anica. And so the fourth year of the Peloponnesian War ended.

Attica invaded the fifth Mitylenians yield.

15. In the beginning of the fifth year, the Peloponnessans sent 40 ships to Lesbus to the relief of the Misyleneans, under the conduct of Alcidan, and they themselves with an Army, over which Cleomenes (Uncle and Guardian to Pausanias their young King yet under age) was Captain, invaded Anica the fifth time, which they most grievously distressed; but hearing nothing from Lesbus that they liked, and being in fourcity of victuals, they returned the fooner into Peloponnessus. The Mitylenaans being forely distressed in the same nature, whether the Magistrate would or not, yielded themselves to the mercy of the Athenians, which the Peloponnessan Fleet understanding before they arrived at Leibus, Went over to the Coast of Asia, and there having cast many things in their heads, without any thing of note performed, returned, through the perswasion of their General, into Peloponnesus, being from Lesbus in vain pursued by Paches the Athenian Captain. He returning from the pursure, setled things in Lesbus according to his own mind, sent Salashus the Lacedamonian messenger (whom he took in the Town) with the authors of the revolt, and some whom the Towns-men sent to intercede for them, unto Athens, staying there himself for further orders. Salathus was presently put to death, and the people being called together to consult about the Mityleneans, resolved, at the instigation of Cleon, a man of bitter feverity, that all those of ripe age should be put to death, as well as they that were sent to Athens, and all the women and children should be made bondflaves; and this decree was without delay fent to Paches to be put into A severe sen- execution. But considering of this rash and cruel sentence; they repented of tence against what they had done, and the next day met to advise further of it, when again Cleon a man in great grace with them, pressed vehemently the former decree. But Diodoim one of a milder spirit opposed him, and having endeavoured the SECT. 3. day before to no purpose to do it, now by very few voices carried it from Reversed.

16. Then was theredispatched a swift Galley, with order if possible to get before that which carried the former Decree, and command Paches to abilting from putting it in execution. Yet the former arrived at Mitylene first. having fer forth a whole day before it; but whilft Paches was confidering of the sharpnesse of the Decree, and how to perform it, the latter arrived, and so the lives of the multitude were faved, being so near to destruction, as scarce any thing nearer. But to punish the revolt, above 1000 of those whom Paches had fent to Athens as authors of it, the People commanded to be put to death, Mitylene was deprived of it's walls and thips, all Lesbus except the Methymneanshad hard conditions imposed upon them. The fields were taken from all the owners, of which the tenth part being dedicated to the gods, the remainder was distributed to the Citizens of Athens, the tillage thereof being left under a vast rent to the Lesbians : and all such Towns as were now subject to the Mitylenaans, the Athenians reduced under their Dominions. The same Summer they seized upon Minous, an Island lying beforethe shore of Megaris, and the Port of Nife, and fortifying ir, made the Coasts more fafe and convenient to all intents. In the mean time those that were left in Placea were forced by meer famine to yield themselves and City to the judgement of the Lacedamonians, who fent five men to hear their Orators, and the Thebans their Enemies. These men adjudged them all to death, which accordingly was executed upon them to the number of 200, with whom were flain 25 Athenians found in the Town, and the women adjudged to flavery. The City for fome time was given to fome exiles to inhabit: then, fearce a year being past, was by the Thebans utterly dethroyed, an Inne onely being built out of the ruines of the Temple of June, and the Temple it felf inlarged, all the grounds being feized on by the Thebans. This was the fortune of the Playans (who thought they might have had some favour shewed them for the merits of their Ancestors in the Median War) after they had continued 93 years in the fosiery with Athens, and no more is to bee heard of them till Platea was rebuilt by Alexander the Great.

Plates at length yielded and de-Aroyed.

A lamentable fedition at Coregra.

17. During these things, a most tamentable sedition happed at Coreyra, part of the Citizens being for Popular Government, and the rest for that of a few or the most potent; the former trusting to the aid of the Athenians, as conformable to their policy and the other to the Peloponne fians. Twice within the City did they fight, and both the Athenians and Peloponnesians fent their Fleets to the affiffance of their Friends; but the A benians being fronger at Sea, and fending 60 Gallies more to the help of the former N= vy, the Peloponne sian withdrew themselves, having onely lightly skirmished with the Enemy in the fight of Cororra, before the latter Fleet arrived. Then those for the Popular Government, strengthned by the affistance of the Athenians, cruelly raged against their adversaries, no mercy being shewn to fuch as took Sanctuary, or hung upon the Altars, neither from Parents to their own Children, infomuch that the City was almost shaken to pieces and made defolate, and a grievous Sedition indeed came afterwards proverbially to be termed a Corcyraan. And it was not onely fatal to Corcyra, but to all Greece befides, being drawn into example by other States which afterwards broke out into factions.

Stirs in Sicilie

18. At the same time the Greek Cities in Sicilie fell into diffentions, some of which the being of the Dorick, and others of the Ionick faction, the head of the formar Syracufe, and of the latter Leontium, which two made War upon each make advan- other. The Leantines craved aid of the Athenians, for that they were not onely of the Ionian Rock, but conjoyned with them in an ancient League of confederacy. The Athenians willingly took the opportunity to get some footing in Sicilie, to hinder thereby the exportation of Corn thence into Peloponness, and especially to make way for their power and dominion there.

Book II.

SECT.3. At the end of Summer they fent thither twenty Gallies. In Winter these thips affilted with ten more from Rhegium in Italy, invaded the Lolian Islands near to Sicilie, and wasted such as refused to yield. At the same Season the Plague began again at Athens, which took away a great number of Soldiers, but much greater of the common people: Earthquakes also hapned in several places. And with this Winter the fifth year of the Peloponne sian War

The fixth Summer of the War.

304

ended. 19. In the beginning of the next Summer, the Peloponnesians came the fixth time to the Isthmus, with intent to invade Attica, under the conduct of Agis the Spartan King; but being affrighted with the frequent Earthquakes, they returned. In the mean while the War in Sicily variously proceeded. Laches the Athenian Captain taking some Towns. The Athenians sent out one Fleet to infest Peloponnesus, and another the Island Melus, which stubbornly withstood their commands, both which did nothing of very great concernment. The Spartans planted the Colony of Heraclea, in the platform of old Trachinia a City in Thessalie, being for the convenience of it's fituation upon the Sea, and the Haven, very fit for carrying on the War against the Athenians. These received a great losse from the Liolians, but in Winter thrice overthrew the Ambraciots, who were forfaken by their friends the Peloponnessans, which made them now imbrace a Peace with their adversaries the Acarnanians and Amphilochians (who called in the Athenians against them) and entred into a league and society for ten years with them. The war proceeding all this while in Sicily, a greater Fleet was sent under conduct of Eurymedon

Atna breaketh out into flames.

tana, 50 years after it had the last time so done. Thus the fixt year of the Peloponnesian War ended. 20. In the beginning of the next, the Peloponnefians under the command This id. 6.

and Sophocles, to oppose the Syracusians, towards the end of Winter, at which time the Hill Aina belched out great store of fire into the Territories of Ca-of Agus the Son of Archidamus the Spartan King, again invaded Atuca. The Athenians having furnished 40 ships for Sicilie, gave order to the Captains, in their way to have an eye to the Corcyreans, who were much infested by their own exiles, and were in fear of 60 Peloponnesian Gallies fent thither : and to fixth time in- Demosthenes was given the command of some ships wherewith he should infest Pelopennesu. As all the ships sailed by Laconia, Demosthenes a man of a prompt and earnest disposition, advised the other Captains to fortifie Pylm, which is a ragged Promontory joyned to the main by a little neck of Land. Before it lies a small barren Island of lesse than two miles compasse, and within that a Creek which is a good harbour for hips, the force of weather being born off by the head-land and Isle. The Promontory having anciently belonged to the Messenians, and now desolate, he pressed fore that they might feize upon, and make their own, being very convenient for the wasting of Laconia; but the other Captains differted from him, hasting for Corcyra, when in the mean time such a tempest arose as forced them to take into the Pylus fortified Harbour. Then did he again urge his former advice, and though he nothing y Demelbenes more profited with the Captains, yet the Soldiers defirous to make some

3 Attita the vaded.

he Athenian. Hay there, and seeing the commodiousnesse of the Haven, fell upon fortifying the place, and with wonderful diligence and pains perfected the wall in fix dayes. Then was Demosthenes left there to keep it with five ships, and the rest directed their course for Corcyra.

21. The news of these doings at Pylm drew the Peloponne sians in all hast thicher out of Attica, fifteen dayes after their arrival, and they brought their whole Force both by Land and Sea to recover this piece of ground, which they well foresaw how bad a neighbour it might prove in time. In the Island named Sphatteria, they placed a number of men all Spartans, which were to keep it by their turns, and stopped up the Haven on both sides, that there

Draweth the forely laid at might be no entrance in for the Athenian thips : then furiously did they afthe Peloponac- fault Pylus both by Land and Sea, but it was as valiantly defended by Demofians are wor- fibenes; So that with several new onsers the storm was continued till the next day, and then the Peloponnesians drew off to recruit themselves, and provide provide for a new onfer. In the mean time came in fourty Athenian thips (to which Demost henes had before-hand fent to acquaint them with his condition) and with them some belonging to their Allies, which first offered fight to the Peloponnesians in the open Sea; but that being refused, fet upon rhem in the Haven, brake, and funk many of their Vessels, took some and forced the rest to run themselves on ground, about which afterwards ensued a great contention, whilest the Athenians would become masters of them, and the Spartans out of shame, and grief for their friends in the Island, laboured with more earnestnesse to get them off, which they effected by some, and the rest fell as prize to the Enemy, who now closely besieged the Sparians that were left in the Island.

22. Pylas being now secure, but the Spartans in the Island as good as lost. the Magistrates were sent for from Lacedamon into the Camp (as the cufrom was in great dangers) who perceiving that there was no other way to motions defire rescue their Cirizens, than by composition with the Enemies, took Truce for a time with the Captains, till they might fend to Athens about a peace. The conditions of the Truce were, that the Peloponnesians (hould deliver up to the other all their ships, as well such as were upon the Coast of Laconia as there, to be restored to them if the peace should not succed, and that they should attempt nothing upon the Fort , nor the Athenians against their Camp. That a certain quantity of villuals should be daily carried into the Island, but no thips should passe into it secretly; that the Truce should end at the return of the Ambassadors, and if in the mean time it should be broken in any one point, it should be esteemed utterly void in all. The Ambassadors coming to Athens put the people in mind of that moderation all men ought to shew in

And fend to Albers about a peace, which Cleon croffeth.

CHAP, II.

prosperity, with what credit they might now, at their request, make a peace. But Cleon a man very vehement, and much in request, with-stood it, so that in flead of a peace on equal terms, and recompence for harm received, the Athenians demanded certain Cities, which had been by the Spartans long before this War taken from them, and refused to continue the Treaty, except the Spartans in the Isle were delivered up to them as prisoners. The Ambasfadors returned without successe, and the Truce being ended, both sides betook themselves to their Weapons again about Pylia. 23. The Peloponnesians demanding their fixty ships which they had given up, and now at the end of the Truce were to be restored to them in as good a condition, were put off, under pretence that they had broken the Truce. The Island was also asresh besieged, and the Spartans valiantly standing out, things went on but flowly, so that Cleon himself, who much vaunted what he could do, was by the people, who now began to relent of their not imbracing a peace, forced, whether he would or not, to command a new supply of men thither. He, and Demosthenes (whom he chose for his Collegue) first offered conditions to the Spartans, and then upon their refusal forced them, after the losse of 128. to yield themselves to mercy. The number of those that yielded were 292. (whereof 120 of the Nobility of Sparta) which were carried to Athens, and being closely imprisoned, it was resolved, that when the Peloponnesians next invaded Attica, they should all be flain; and then was a Garrison of Messenians (the old Inhabitants, and bitter Enemies to the Spartans) fent into Pylus. The Lacedamonians forely discouraged by these Events, and fearing worse things, sent to Athens again about the liberty of the prisoners, and delivery of Pylus, but the Ambassadors were often rejected, and nothing done, the Athenians being still more puffed up by their good successe. This Summer they overthrew the Corinthians in the Isthmus.

The Spartans

in the Island

yield to mer-

Sobatteria

A Fleet being also sent for Sicily, affisted the Corcyreans in their way against of Corego end- their Exiles (who having got footing in the Mountains, annoyed them) and by their help they now utterly subdued them, and using them with unwonted cruelty, the sedicion here had an end. Anachorium a Town of Corinth, upon the Bay of Ambrasta, they also took. In Winter Artaphernes a Persian being fent from his Prince to Lacedamon, was intercepted in Thrace, and brought to Athens, where his Letters being opened and read, they contained

306

SECT.3. no fecret, and he was fent back with Ambassadors to Ephesus to the King of Persia, Artaxerxes Longimanus, concerning whom they there had intelligence that he was dead, and so the Ambaliadors returned home. The Inhabitants of Chins being suspected by the Athenians, were commanded to demolish their new Wall; with these things the seventh year of the War

A partial Eclypic of the Sun on the 2 Ift of March.

24. In the beginning of the eighth year hapned a partial Eclypse of the Sun, which the Aftronomical Tables shew to have falln out on the 21st day of March after the Julian account, before noon, half of the Diameter or above being obscured, the fourth year of the 88 Olympiad now drawing to an end; and an Earth-quake hapned on the first of the Moneth Munichion, which some make to fall in with the same day. The Athenians this year fell upon the Island Cythera, lying near to Laconia, and inhabited by a Spartan Colony, which they took, and putting therein a Garrison for a time, thence made excursions into Laconia. Afterwards they took thence a great part of the Colony, and took, and burnt Thyrea, standing upon the Confines of Laconia and Argolis, given by the Spartans to the Eginetans, whom now they took away, and plundring the Town fet it on fire. Carrying their prisoners to Athens, the A ginerans were condemned to death, and the Cytheraans being dispersed throughout the Islands, such as they lest in Cythera were An Universal subjected to a great Tribute. But in Sicily, at this time, an Universal peace was made, and imbraced by all the Cities, through the earnest perswasion of Hermocrates a Syrucusian; so that the Athenian Forces were driven to quit the Island, for which at their return two of the Generals were unjustly banished, and the third underwent a great fine. 25. The Exiles of Mitylene with others of Lesbus, and some Mercenaries, feizing upon Rhetium in Afia, took Antandrus; but felling the former again to the Inhabitants, they were drawn out of the later to fight, by Ariftides, and Demodocus (or Symmachus, as Diodorus calleth him) who overthrew them, and took the Town from them. These two were Captains of the Fleet, which gathered Tribute from the Islands; their Collegue Lamachus being gone into Ponius against the Heracleans, who being in League with the Persian King denied Tribute. His ships, by the vehemency of water which ran down the River, were shattered, and he lost the greatest part both of them, and his Forces; so that he could not move thence, either by Sea, or Land; whereupon the Heracleans thinking it a more honorable part to do good than to take revenge, furnished him with provisions, and sent him away with a Convoy, esteeming that the wasting of their grounds would be well recompensed if they should make friends of their Enemies. With this Convoy he passed through the Countrey of the 7 hracians in Asia, and so came to

Stirs about

Megara.

Chalcedon.

25. At this time the Inhabitants of Megara were much distressed, what by the several inrodes of the Athenians, and their own Exiles whom they had cast out, and now preyed upon them from the Villages. Wearied with these continual disturbances, they thought of recalling the Exiles; but the Magistrares understanding that, and presently apprehending what danger might arise to themselves from those of whose banishment they had been the cause, conspired with Hippocrates and Demosthenes, the two Athenian Captains, to betray the Town to them. The Gates were opened, and the Athenians had been Masters of the place, but that some of the Conspirators changed their minds, and obstructed the businesse, which the other seeing seized upon part of the long Walls, and calling up a croffe work against the Town, fet themfelves with all their might to compafie about the Nifaa, or Port, hoping, if they could get it, the more easily to obtain the Town. And the Garrison in it being prefently discouraged by the stopping of victuals, which they were wont dayly to receive out of the Town, vielded; the Spartans to mercy, and the rest upon condition of liberry to Ransom themselves. Then the Athenians provided for fetting upon the Town : but were hindred by the coming of Brasidas the Spartan, who hovering about Corinth, upon notice how things passed here, hasted, thinking to prevent the taking of Nifaa, and after he SECT. 3. had heard of its furrender, yet used all expedition, hoping to save the Town, and to recover it. But when he came the Megarians were divided in their affections, yet both parties feared to let him in, for that they thought it best to referve themselves for that party that should have the better, and Govern themselves according to Occurrences, and therefore he was forced to depart at this time without having done one thing or other;

26. Not long after, the Beotsans came, and joyned themselves to Brasidas, and thereupon followed an Engagement with the Athenians, which ended with equal successe to both sides. That party of the Town which favoured the Exiles, being incouraged with the presence of their friends, sent for Brasidas, and other Peloponnesian Officers into the Town, to consult with them, who confirming them in their resolutions then departed home: The Achenians also following, such as sided with them for fear betook themselves to flight. Then were the Exiles recalled, having first taken an Oath to forget all things past, and not consult their own passion, but the good of their Countrey; but having got the power into their hands, and having the Guards to their Oath, of the Citie at their disposal, they caused 100 of those they suspected to be apprehended, and being condemned by a forced judgement of the people, they put them to death. Then taking all the Government to themselves, it the frame of their Government, being much defirous of Democracy as it was established at Ashens; and to this purpose held correspondence with them there, plotting to betray feveral places into their hands; but the matter being discovered succeeded nor, but onely to the losse of the Athenians, who were overthrown in battel. In the mean while the Lacedemonians being in-

27. At the same time, several amongst the Beolians attempted to change

continued in an Oligarchical way a long time.

Several amongst the Paotiais attempting to bring in Democracy are

The Exiles

re-admitted

CHAP. II.

disappointed. Brafidas the Sparta i fent

give trouble

to the Athe-

Mitals.

vited by Perdiccas King of Macedonia, and some of the Inhabitants of Chalcis (who promifed them some pay for their men) resolved to send some Forces into Macedonia and Thrace, to divert the power, and defign of the Athenians, who now began to be ill thought of by many in those parts, and feared by reason of their growing strength. They made choice of Brainto Thrace to sides for their General, a mun of approved valour, and remarkable integrity. They did a thing at this time, which is noted with cruelty and injustice. Being fomething down the wind in their Fortune, they suspected the power and number of their flaves the Helotes, left in this their weaknesse they should artempt something against them, and took occasion at this expedition, by offering all fuch of them liberty as would chearfully imbrace the fervice, to obferve who amongst them were most active, and when they expected to be manumifed, instead thereof they made away (though how is not known) about 2000 of them, and fent 700 away with Brasidas, together with 2000 Mercenaries hired out of Peloponnelus.

28. Brasidas after his arrival, by fair means reduced Acanthus and Stagirus (both Colonies of the Andrians) from the Athenians, and then in Winter set upon Amphipolis a famous Colony of theirs, situate upon the River Strymon, which almost compassing it gave an occasion to the later name of it, being before called Nine-wayes. In a dark night he feized on the bridge, and all but the Citie it felf, and 'tis thought had taken it also had he led his Soldiers on, but such as had conspired with him to betray it being overmatched, and stirring not, he onely wasted the grounds about it, and attempted nothing further for the present. The Inhabitants who affected the Athenians, being Theydides the more in number, fent to Thucydides the fon of Olorus, and the Writer of the Historian, the History of the Peloponnesian War, then the Athenian General, lying in Tha-

Albeman Ge- fus, an Island inhabited by a Colony of the Parians, half a dayes sayl distant from Amphipolis, who with seven ships hasted thither to prevent the delivery of it, or however to fave Eione. But Brasidas being aware hereof, to obtain Amphipolis before his coming offered them most large conditions; that all should there remain, and live in the same State as formerly, as well Athenians as others; or if they liked better to remove, it should be free for them so to do, which they accepted of, hearing nothing from Thucydides, who ver came to Eine that very night, and saved it, whereas Brasidas else had taken it the next morning. Yet he took three other Towns near to Amphipolis, and left them to be Garrisoned by Perdiccas. 29. The Athenians were much moved for the loffe of Amphipolis, which had been of great use to them in affoarding them Wood for shipping, as well as money, and befides this, how a free passage seemed to be open to the Lacedamonians to invade their confederates, who thereupon might be induced to revolt by Brasidas, who being a very moderate, and just man of himself, gave out that his design was to set Greece at liberty. And even so it fell out, for the Cities hearing what had hapned, and great commendations of Brasidas, fent to him to haften his march towards them, with promife to revolt, thinking they might fafely enough do it, for that they falfly perswaded themselves, that the power of the Athenians was not fo great as they found it afterwards, when it was too late to repent them of their rash and inconsiderate resolution, into which they were hurried by an earnest defire of liberty. The Athemians having intelligence of this, used all diligence to fend Soldiers into all of them, as the shortnesse of the time, and the Winter season would bear. Brasidas sent to Lacedamon for a new supply of men, but little heed was given to his message, partly because the great ones there envied his glory, and especially because the people being well wearied now with the War, defired to have their men that were taken in the Island, and to make peace. Yet he having made provision for the building of ships upon the River Stry-

Rr2

Brafidas envied by his own Countrey mon, went on with the War, drew all the Towns on the Mountain Athor, except two, to submit, and then by surprise taking Torone, a Town of Chalcis, and tributary to the Athenians, he stormed the Castle the third day after. The remainder of the Winter he spent in fortifying the places taken already, and providing for taking of others which he defigned. And thus the 8th year of the War ended.

30. In the beginning of Spring the Lacedamonians for the reasons above mentioned were defirous to come to a composition, and they hoped that now the Athenians, something discouraged by what Brasidas had done in Thrace, might not be averse to it. And indeed they were inclining to a ceffation of Arms, that they might flop his proceedings till such time as they could recruit themselves, intending to Govern themselves in reference to the length of the Truce as their affairs should comport, and so a Truce was concluded for a year, the Articles of which imported these things especially.

year.

A Truce for a That what both sides possessed at this time they should enjoy; that free accessed andregresse should be given to Ambassadors and Heralds, and their Confederates, to treat about a peace : that Runagates (hould not be received : that all controversies should be decided by Law, and not by force : and something was added concerning the use of the Sea; In this Truce the Confederates on both sides being comprised. During this Cessation several Treaties were held about a League, but fomething hapned which disturbed forely the minds of the Athenians. For Scione a Town of the Peninsula of Pellene of its own accord revolted to Brasidas, and was followed by Menda. Brasidas ignorant of the Truce, after the revolt of the former, laboured fore with the later, and Potidea, to reduce them also; but then news came to him of the Cessation, and much contention there was about the places; for that the Athenians faid that Scione revolted two dayes after the Truce was sworn to, and concluded. Being not able to recover them by words, they fent an Army to effect it by deeds, and Menda they recovered, whilest Brasidas was absent, affisting Perdiccas the King of Macedonia in his War with Archibans, where fuch diffatisfaction passed betwixt the King and him, that thenceforth Perdiccas began to joyn himself to the Athenians. Who compassed Scione about with a Wall, which having finished in the later end of Summer, a sufficient Guard being left, the rest of the Army was brought home. The Winter following all was quiet betwixt the two States by vertue of the Truce; but the Mantineans and Tegestans fought a battel with equal successe, both parties erecting their trophies. The Spring drawing on, Brasidas attempted by night to surprise Posidan, but missed of his purpose. And with this Winter the ninth year of the War ended, in which the Temple of Juno at Argos was burnt through the negligence of Chrysis the Woman-Priest, which flying for it.

another was placed in her room, after the had during this War continued Athens burnt. eight years and and half therein.

21. The Truce being expired on the day of the Pythian Games, the Thucyd, lib. 5. seventh of the moneth I hargelion, Cleon having himself perswaded the Athensans to undertake the Expedition, was sent inro I brace with a Fleet of thirty ships, abord of which were 1200 Foot, and 300 Horse, besides clos fent into Confederates. Hearing that Torone was but manned with a mean Garrison. he departed from the fiege of Sciene, and fet upon it with fuch earneffnesse, quickly puffed both by Land and Sea, that in the fame day he took it, and though he attempted Stagirus in vain, yet he effectually did it upon Galopfus, a Colony of the Thaftans, after which he staid at Eione expecting some Auxiliaries out of Macedonia, and Thrace. Here he grew very fecure, being exceedingly puffed up with his late successe, and that at Pylus, which he arrogantly imputed to his own wisdom ; but his men disdained to lye idle, and pretended to be wearie of his Government, as thinking him unfit to command. Herewith he moved from Eione in a secure posture, thinking of nothing lesse than fighting, which was taken notice of by Brasidas, who having fewer men than he, and lesse experienced, thought it not wisdom to trie a battel with him, nor at once to let him have a fight with all his Forces; but pouring them violently upon him by degrees, thereby to confound and overthrow his Army. He had a discovery of Brasidas his intents, and began to retreat, but then he fell upon him out of Amphipolis in the manner aforesaid, and without much adoe put his men to the rout. Clean himself flying was flain outright, and Brasidas before this was mortally wounded and carried to Amphipolis, where he ther with Bra- died, after he had heard how his men had got the Victory, being honoured by the Tours-men, as an Heroe, by Sacrifice, anniverfarie Solemnities, and naming a Colony after him, which they did to ingratiate themseves with Sparta, because of the fear they flood in of the Athenians. Of the Athenians were flain 600; but of the Conquerours but seven; such disadvantage was there in the battel.

CHAP. II.

32. In the beginning of Winter Ramphias with others in commission with him , was fent from Lacedamon with new Forces, and came as far as Pieria an hill of The salie; but there the The salians opposed his passage, and news of Brasidas his death arriving, other causes also moving him (whereof this was nor the least, that the Spartans before his coming from home were inclined to a peace,) he returned into Lacedamon. And after the action at Amphipolis, and his return, came to be known, both fides for weighty and urgent reafons were much more enclined to it, Cleon and Brasidas being both flain, whereof the one was a man of a turbulent spirit, and the other a great foldier, who fought after glory in Military matters. The Athenians having Athenians and received two great blows, at Delium first (when the change of the Govern-Lundemovians ment was to be made in Bostia) and now at Amphipolis, had learne not to delire peace, trust too much to the smiles of their fortune : therefore they who before would hear of no conditions, as certain of Victory, now were much abated in their confidence, and repented they had not imbraced peace, when it was offered them upon such honourable terms, after the action at Pylou, for that they feared their confederates would be incouraged by this change of their fortune to change their affections. On the other fide the Lacedamonians who thought they should have ended the War, and brought the Athenians to terms by an invasion of Airica, now found they were much mistaken; the defeat in the Island they had ever before their eyes, and felt the excursions from Pylus and Cythera; they feared their flaves, left they should rife against them; and another danger preffed them fore; for the State of Argos which had ancient enmity with them, was now after a truce of thirty years well-nigh expired, and likely to take the benefit of their present troubles, by joyning

CHAP. II.

cluded.

SECT .3. With those who alone found them work enough, being so powerful at Sea. Above all, the liberty of the prisoners at Athens, whereof most of them were of the greatest quality, provoked them to a pursure after peace.

33. The businesse was much helped on by Plistonax the Spartan King, and Nicial the Atherian, the former being weary of those calumnies which were raised against him upon any miscarriage in the War, and the other much enamoured of Peace, by the obtaining of which he thought he should be famous to succeeding Ages. Several treaties all the Winter were on foot about it, and towards the Spring the Lacedemonians to make the Athenians the more readily imbrace it, gave out, that they would with the whole force of all their Which is con- confederates invade auica, and fortifiea Castel therein. After much stickling about it, a peace was concluded for fifty years, upon these terms especially: that a restitution of places and prisoners should be made on both sides, except Nicas, which the Athenians might still keep from the Megarians, and Platea, which the Thebans refused to restore to it's Inhabitants. The two States swore to the performance of it, and all their allies and confederates (except the Bastians, Corinibians, and Megarians, who liked it not) andit was concluded at Sparta, upon the 26th day of Artemisius Pleistolas being Ephorm, at Athens, upon the 24th of Elaphebolion, Alcam being Archon, in the beginning of the Spring, presently after the Bacchanalia, ten years and a few dayes being past fince the first invasion of Assica, and the beginning of the War.

34. The Lacedemonians were by lot to make restitution first; which they presently did of persons, but as to places, Amphipolic was the cause that they could not perform it; for neither the Inhabitants, nor the rest of the afsociates would suffer it, though the Sparians drew out their Garrison, and did all that in them lay to reffore it, they being unwilling to come again under the dominion of their old Lords, and counting it unreasonable for the Spartans to defire it. The deputies of the differting Cities were at Lacedamon, and being defired to fign the League, flatly refused, except some things were changed in it. Which the Spartans hearing dismissed them, and very prudently applied themselves to the Athenians, making an offensive and defenfive League with them, thereby to retain them from joyning with the Argives and Peloponnesians, which confederacy it behaved them above all things

Several Cities diffent,

Argos.

City.

for to hinder. After this straight League, the prisoners taken in the Island were fer at liberty, the eleventh year of the War now rifing, and the peace was observed according to agreement; but all the late confederates of Sparta took this exceedingly ill, and let out all their hatred, formerly conceived aguinst the Athenians their professed Enemies, upon their unjust friends. The Corintbians especially took it in great disdain, who had been the greatest incentives to the War, out of envie to the State of Athens, and as their Deputies departed from Lacedamon they took Argos in their way, where to the principal Citizens they inveighed grievoully against this League, saying, it was puties of the ready made with defign to enflave Peloponnesson, whose vindicators they the Argives must needs be, and that it was incumbent upon them to decree, that all free Ciries which would, might enter into an alliance with them for their plication to mutual safety, which if they would so do, they were sure that many, out of hatred to the Spartans, would give their names to it.

35. After their departure the thing was first referred to the Magistrates, and then to the People, who chose twelve men, to whom they gave power to make a Leigue with any City or State, except the Spartans, and Athenians, with whom nothing was to be concluded, without the advice and confent of the whole body of the People. This they did, because they foresaw a War to be made with Sparta after the end of the Truce, and hoped by this Inoie of Per meins to become mafter of Peloponnessu; for as the Lacedamonians were now contemned for their bid fucesse (and the rather more for that all had selves to that such vast conceits of their courage, that they thought they would have submitted to no conditions, but have cut out all by the Sword) fo they who had been of nelther parry in this War, but allied to both, had bettered their condition, and now flourished exceedingly. The Mantineans first, who living in Ar- SECT. 3. cadia. flood in fear of the Spartans whose confederacy they had shaken off, entred into an alliance with them, and after them the rest of the Peloponnesians, who thought they might understand more of the matter than themselves did, and had high thoughts of this great and rich City, conceiving it able to do much, because that of so long it had done nothing. They were grievously incenfed against the Spartans, and this offended them especially, that in the straight League betwirt them and Athens it was provided, that by mutual consent they might add new conditions, or alter the old at their own pleasures. This proviso they looked upon as made to enflave Peloponnesiu, by the affiftance of Athens, for that if anything was to be changed, it were but just that it should be done by consent of all the Confederates who were concerned in it. 36. The Lacedamonians knowing well how much they were concernd in these courses, sent Ambassadors to stop the matter at Corinth, whence they well perceived the mischief to have proceeded. They exposulated with them for what had been done, and laid perjurie to their charge, in case they left their fociety and betook themselves to Argos, and blamed them for not admentages vindis mitting the League with Athens, because it was formerly agreed, that what the major part should conclude, it should oblige all ; except some divine impediment interposed. The Corintbians replied in the Assembly of the Agents of those Cities which refused the League, that in general the Lacedamonians themselves had not fully performed the conditions of the League, who had not taken order that the places forced from them should be restored, and that for their part they could not defert their confederates in Thrace whom they perswaded to rebel against Athens, and taken into protection, and to whom they were obliged by oath taken more than once, which to them appeared to be a sufficient divine impediment why they could not enter into a League with Athens. And as for their conjunction with Argos, after they had advited with their friends, they should do what was right and fitting. After their departure, in the next affembly they entred into a League with the Argives, and so did the Eleans with the Corinthian Colonies, and those of Chalcis in Thrace. 27. All the Summer of the eleventh year, the Athenians and Peloponnefians had commerce with one another, though great confultations were on foor, and, the affociates bickered with one another, and both parties wanted not diffatisfaction. For, the Lacedamonians restored not Amphipolis, neither procured the affociates in Thrace, the Baotsans, nor Corinthians, to fign the Leigue, though they inguged joyntly to cause them to do it, and that if within a certain time they did it not, both were to hold them as Enemies. The Athenians feeing that they performed not these things, suspected they dealt Matistati deceitfully with them, and for this cause resused to surrender Pylm, repennoise the ted they had dismissed the prisoners, and with held other places till the Spartans had first performed the Covenants. They excused themselves, for that they had done as much as in them lay, having fet at liberty their prisoners, drawn out their Forces from Thrace, and omitted nothing in their power, in which the reflicution of Amphipolis was not: and as for what concerned the Basians and Corinthians, they would do what they required. They earnestly defired that Pylus might be reftored, or, at least, that the Heloss and Meffenians might be taken thence, which after much adoe was granted, and these men were conveied into the Island Cephalenia.

38. In Winter the Deputies of the Confederates came to Lacedamon, and laboured in vain to diffolve the League betwirt that State and Athens. But now other Ephori having entered into their Office, who had nothing to do in making the straight alliance, and were also much averse unto it, they dealt secretly with the Bastians and Corinthians, to perswade the former to joyn themselves to Argos, and then all to enter into a League with Sparta, which they were fure would purchase this willingly, with a breach betwist them and Athens, for that then the War would be more easie out of Peloponness;

felves at Co-

zi 115.

The defigns

their hands, that therewithall making exchange with the Athenians for Pylm, they might with lesse difficulty make War against them. As the Ambassadors were in their way, two of the principal men of Argos met them, and were very earnest with the Beestians to imbrace their fociety, which, when they came home, they laid open to the Baotarcha, and Ambassors followed from Argor to perswade them to it, who were kindly entertained and dismissed with hope that some Ambassadors should follow them to conclude upche frustrated on the bulineffe. In the mean time the Agents from Corinth, Megara, and Thrace, agreed with the Ractarcha, that they should bind themselves by Oath to affift him who should want it, and not to begin, or finish any War without the joynt confent of all, and upon these terms, that the Treaty should be figned. But ere this could be done, the Bactarcha were to refer the matter to the four Councils of Baotia wherein lay the supreme power, which not being made acquainted by them what advice the Ephori and others of Sparta had given, for fear they should give that State offence by joyning with Corinth which had revolted, they judged the contrary, and so by the means of the Bastarcha, who took it for granted that the Councils would act according to their advice, the matter proceeded no farther now, and afterwards was neglected by them. 39. This Winter also many Treaties were held betwixt the Athenians and Lacedemonians, about the reflicution of the places; and the Spartans hoped, that it Panalius was but reflored to the other, they should recover Py-Im. But fuch Towns as their old Allies had gotten by their means in the late War, could not be restored without their consent, and therefore Ambassadors were sent earnestly to request the Baotians to deliver up Panattus with the Athenian prisoners. They stourly refused to do it, except they would enter into as peculiar and straight a League with them, as they had done with the Athenians. Now this could not be legally done, because in the League with Athens it was provided, that neither should make either League, or War, without mutual confent. Yet being possessed with an inflamed defire of recovering Pylm, and the more for that they something now were moved by the Ephori, and others that defired a breach with Athens, they truck up a League with them. Then did the Bassians utterly demolish Panattus instead of giving it up, and so the eleventh year of the Panallus difmantled.

40. In the Spring the Argives hearing nothing of the Bactian Ambassa-War ended. dors promifed to be fent but great talk of the demolishing of Panalius, and the League betwire them, and the Spartans, whom they thought to have drawn them in with the confent of the Athenians, were much perplexed, thinking they now should be run upon by all though they formerly promifed themselves the Dominion of Peloponnessu by forsaking the alliance of Lacedamon. They therefore sent presently thither, and struck up another League with them for fifty years. In the mean while three were fent from Sparta to receive from the Baorians the A. henian prisoners and Panaltus, who yielded both perfons and place, but this utterly demolished, pretending for their excuse, that otherwife offended.

by an antient League it was to be held by neither of them in particular, but The Athenians be common to both. The Athenians received their men, but were much moved that Panactus was demolished (though the Ambassadors put it off by relling them they needed not now then to fear any thing from it) being fenfible of a double injury received, both as to the Town, and the League made without their knowledge, and then they called to mind other breaches of the peace, and were jealous that they were circumvented by the Spartans. An occasion was hence taken by such amongst them as bare no good will to the peace, to feek all manner of wayes to defroy it. Amongst these was Alcibiades the fon of Clinius by the fifter of Pericles, who though a young man, yer eminent for his Nobility, Riches, and Favour with the people, bare a fecret grudge against the Lacedemonians, for that despising his youth, and having no regard to the antient friendship betwixt them and his family (which his Grand-father having diffolved, he fought to reftore by kindnesse shewed to the prisoners taken in the Island) made use of Nicias and Laches in the conclusion of the League before him, which he thought was much to the prejudice of his honour.

Are incenfed

CHAP. II.

BOOK II.

41. He cried out, that their design was first to suppresse Argos, and then by Alabiades, to do as much for Athens, and at this time there being no good agreement betwixt the Argives and Spartans, he fent to them privately, exhorting them. as they tendered their own fafety, to enter into a League with Athen. They who were now not confulting how to become mafters of others, but how to fave themselves, were well pleased with his message, and though they had Ambaffadors now refident at Lacedamon about the League with that State, vet did they fend away others to Athens, together with the Eleans and Mantineans, to make one offensive and defensive with them there. The Lacedemonians hereat were at a fland, feeing well, that fuch a Combination tended to their hurt. To keep in with the Athenians the Ephori thought that more was done already than flood with their honour or profit; others held it the wifest course, seeing they had done so much, not to stick at a little more, but rather by giving full fatisfaction, to retain the friendship of that State, which was more to be valued than all the rest of Greece. This resolution prevailing, such were sent away to Athens as had most affection to peace. who faid in the Senate, that they came with full Commission to conclude all, excused the League entred into with the Bastians, as having been done onely to pleasure them in the regaining of Panattus, and affured them of the readinesse of their State to give all satisfaction, being much grieved that things went otherwise than according to their pleasure. Alcibiades taking notice that they faid in the Sonate, that they came with full Commission to conclude, feared that thereby the people might be drawn to a peace, & inter-Who hindreth posed by a notable stratagem. He perswaded the Ambassadors of his friend-

the peace by ftratagem,

Thip towards their Citie, and advised them to take heed that their absolute power to conclude might not be known to the Commonalty, left the multitude should thereupon grow peremptory, and yield to nothing, except they could draw them to unreasonable conditions. 42. The Ambassadors believed him, and ordered their speech to the people according to his directions. Hereupon he took the advantage which their double dealing afforded, and openly inveighed against them as men of no fincerity, come for no other purpose than to draw the people from strengthning themselves with friends, intending to withdraw the Argives, and their adherents, to their own alliance, as already they had done the Beerians, rhough contrary to their Oath. Then he commended the cause of the Argives, Eleans, and Mantineans, to the people, which was much moved, having had he-Mician labour- before they came to the question, nothing was done that diy. At the next fore no good opinion of the Lacedamonians; but an Earth-quake intervening meeting Nicias perswaded them to let him first go to Lacedamon to know their minds concerning the League with the Bastians, whether or no they would renounce it, and their friendship with Amphipolis, and restore Pana-Etus in such a condition as it ought. But Xenares the Ephorus, and his party, was fo firong, that none of thefe things could be procured; onely the peace with Athens was again fworn to, to gratifie Nicias, who was fensible how he should be blamed at his return, being accounted also the cause of the League. After his return the Athenians made a League with the Argives, Eleans, and Mantineans for 100 years, at large described by Thucydides, but tending to the mutual affiftance of each other. Hereby nothing in terms was done derogatory to the League with Sparta, and the Corinthians, though the Allies of Argos, yet refused to be comprised in it (as in the former betwixt the Argives, Eleans, and Mantineans) alleging that the former Convention was sufficient, which did not oblige them joyntly to make War upon any one, though to defend one another. This they faid, for that they feemed to find reason to forsike these Consederates, and to apply their minds afresh to the Lacedamonians. Sſ

SECT. 3. The Lacede. manians kept from the Qlympick exercifes.

43. This Summer the 90th Olympiad was celebrated, from the folemnity of which the Lacedamonians were kept by the Eleans, being forbidden the Temple, and offering facrifice, for which a Guard was fet, because they had not paid a Fine of 2000 Minæ imposed upon them by them, according to the Olympian Law, for purting some men into the Castle Phorycus, and the Town of Leprea, during the Olympian Truce. They fent their Ambassadors to excuse the matter, but nothing was done, so that they sacrifized at home, which bred very ill bloud betwixt them. After this folemnity the Argives and their Confederates fent to Corinth, to perswade them there to imbrace their party; but the Ambassadors of Sparta being there, and it being much debated, an Earth-quake hapned, and fo they returned without any successe. In Winter hapned a fight betwixt the Heracleots of Trachine (placed there by the Spartans to their losse) and part of the Thessalians with others, wherein they were worsted, and many of them slain : amongst whom Xenares the Lacedamonian General. With these things the 12th year of the War ended. 44. The next Summer Alcibiades with some forces out of Attica, and the affistance of Argos, marched into Peloponnessus, which passing over he marcheth into came to Patra, where he dealt with the Inhabitants about building a Wall Peloposacfus, thence unto the Sea, intending also of himself to build another as far as Rhium in Achaia; but the matter was hindred by the Corinthians, Sicyowes, and others, who would have been endamaged thereby. The Argives made War upon Epidaurus upon light occasion, thinking, that if that Town was but subdued, they should be more fafe from the Cormbians on that side. and the Athenians would have a readier way to fend them aid from Agina. Whilest they were busie about a peace, Ephamidas the Corinhian threw this in their dish, that what they made words of, that they contradicted by their deeds, and upon that account they drew back their Army. But no conclusion coming of the Treaty, they invaded the Territories of Epidaurus again, and wasted the third part thereof. The Lacedamonians were twice abroad with their Armies this Summer , but were recalled by their superstitious Ceremonies. The Athenians also fent the At gives 1000 men under Conduct of Alcib ades; but they having drawn away their forces, and having no imployment for them, they returned home. In Winter the Lacedemonians conveyed 300 Garrison Soldiers into Epidaurus, which passing through the Borders of the Athenians, the Argives exposulated with them for suffering it. contrary to the League, and complained that they restored not the Helotes and Meffenians unto Pylus, whence they had taken them upon the defire of the Spartans. This accordingly was done at the instance of Alcibiades. All others were quiet this Winter, except the Argives and Epidaurians, who skirmished sometimes, and towards Spring the former hearing Epidanrus to be naked, came suddenly with their scaling Ladders, and endeavoured the taking of it, but in vain. Together with this Winter the 13th year of the War ended. 45. The Summer following, the Spartans feeing in how bad a case their friends the Epidaurians were, and that the rest of Peloponnesus had either already revolted, or was ill affected to them, fearing that if they delayed, all things would go worse, they armed themselves, and slaves, with their Confederates, under the conduct of Agis their King. It hapned that the Argives were compassed round about by their Enemies; but when they were about to fall on, two of their Captains stepped out, and perswaded Agis to abstain from fight, faying, that the Argives were willing to do all just things., and mike peace with the Lacedemonians. This they spake of their own heads, without the consent or knowledge of the multitude, and Agis, without acquainting any more of the Captains or Confederates, consented to a Truce for four moneths, and therewith drew off his Army. The Lucedamonians and Confederates obeyed him for the rigour of the Law, but grievoully blamed him for letting flip, or rather wilfully lofing to great an opportunity, having the Enemy at fuch an advantage, and having fuch a numerous and well-furnished Army as had not been seen of the Generalis to that day; there being met SECT. 3 together besides the Spartans, the Arcadians, Bootians, Corinthians, Sicyonians, Pellenians, Phliasians, and Migarians, and the choice of all these States, who feemed not onely able to fight with the Argives, and their affociates, but with any other in combination with them. The Argives also not confidering what danger they had escaped, were fore inraged against their Officers, who had as they thought let the other escape out of their hands, infomuch that they had stoned one of them had he not taken Sanstuary, and they fold his goods, Not long after a Party of 1000 Foot, and 300 Horse coming from Athens to their aid, the People, by the perswasion of Alcibiades, renounced the Truce made with Agis, and the Confederares gathering rogether went and besieged Orchomenus, wherein the Spartans had put the Hostages received from the Arcadians, and which was without much to doe delivered up to them.

Agis the Spartaa King invadeth the Argives.

Is callly put off, and defervedly blamed.

46. The Lacedamonians being grievously inraged against Agis, especially Severely fen- after the news came about Orchomenus, beyond all precedent decreed his house should be demolished, and fined him 100000 Drachmes, which he deprecating, and promifing to redeem his credit by fome notable exploit, they yet made a new Law, that there should be ten men affishing to him, without whose consent he should not as much as lead the Army from the City. News prefently was brought that Teges was befieged, whereupon he took the field, and came to a fet battel with the Argives and their confederates, wherein though his right wing was over-borne through the negligence of the Polemar-According to chi (who did not foon enough communicate the orders received from him) credit.

his promise he yet he put to flight the Enemy in the other, and then coming to the help of it, obtained the Victory. This was that noble fight, as Thucydides extolleth it, betwixt the most eminent and powerful States of Greece, than which there was none more eminent that happied amongst the Gracians themselves. Yet the number of the flain was not great. Of the Argives and their allies about 1 100, of the Confederates of Sparta not many, and of the Lacedamonians themselves 300 were reported to have fallen. The day after, the Epidamnians, whilft Argos was naked, fell in upon their grounds, and killed many of those that came out of the City against them. Whilst the Lacedamonians were busic in their Carnean Solemnicies, the Eleans and Athenians affifting the Mantineans, went and drew a line about Epidaurus, upon which they left a sufficient Guard, and departed. 47. In the beginning of Winter the Lacedamonians after their folemnity

Yet the Lace-was over, again took the field, but thinking now the Argives might be fant to Areas humbled, sent to feel their minds about a Peace. At this time such as defired about a peace, a change of the Government at Argos became powerful, and hoped if they could conclude with the Spartans, to take it out of the hands of the multi-Which is pro- tude, and bring it to a temper agreeable to the conflicturions of that State. ound by By the artifices of those men, the argues were occupant to the stands who aftineans, Eleans, and Athenians, and joyn themselves in a League with the should be held with the Athenians, except they would draw out all their Forces from Peloponnesia (The freedom of Epidaurus being especially looked at herein by the Spartans as much concerning them) and that no Treaty or War was to be entred upon without mutual confent. They then took care for feveral other things, and fent to Perdiccas King of Macedonia, to enter into a League with him, but de did not throughly affent to it, though he bore respectro Argos, whence he accounted himself descended : but they renewed the League with them of Chalcis, and obliged others unto them. The Argives fent also to the Athenians, to require them to draw off their Guards from Epidanrus: but they hereupon fent Demosthenes thirher to get all the Fortification into their own hands, after which they furrendred it to the Towns-men, and renewed their ancient League with them. The Mantineans at first refused to joyn with the Argives in the League with Athens, but after confidering that they could not subsist without them, subscribed, and their exiles harboured, by the help of the Athenians, who fent some Forces SECT. 3.

On Oligarchy fet up a Siegon and Argos.

SECT.3. gave up those places they had in their hands. After this, 1000 men from Lacedemon, and as many from Argos, were fent to Sicyon, where by the endeavours of the Lacedamonians, the Supreme Power was transferred out of the hands of the People to a few men, which was after effected at Argos alfo, an Oligarchy being introduced, agreeable to the Government of Sparta, With this Winter the tourteenth year of the War ended. 48. The Summer following, the People of Argos bearing heavily the change of the Government, took their opportunity when the Lacedamonians were bufy in the naked exercises of their youth, and killing some of their adversa-Democracy, and expelling others, reflored the Popular Government, renounced the League with Sparta, and renewed that with Athens. Then they fell on building of their long walls from the City to the Sea, thinking, that if they should be blocked up by Land, to have entercourse with the Athenians by Sea. In Winter the Lacedamonians knowing that they were busied (men, women, flaves and all) in this work, with their affociates (all but the Corinthians, The Lacede- who stirred not) came against Argos, hoping to take the City by means of those within that were of their Party; but being frustrated of their expectativain artempt ons, they demolished the wall, and taking Hysias a Castle of Argolis, put to to take digos, the fword all the males of free condition, and fo returned. After this, the Argives wasted the Territories of the Phliasians, for harbouring their exiles. This same Winter the Athenians renounced the League with Perdiccas, accusing him of conspiracy with the Argives and Laconians, of non-performance of the League betwixt them, and laying the blame upon him that the Expedition miscarried which they had made, under the conduct of Nicias against the Chalcidians and Amphipolis in Thrace. With these things the Winter ended, and together with it the fifteenth year of the War. 49. The year following, Alcibiades with twenty ships failing to Argos, took thence 300 men suspected of Laconism, who were carried into the Islands subject to the Athenians, and there committed to custody. After this the Athenians with a strong force invaded the Island Me-Im, the Inhabitants of which being a Colony of the Lacedamonians, denied them obedience. They first fent Commissioners to the Town to treat with the Melians, where there was much canvaffing the case; but in conclusion they continuing in their resolution not to yield, Fortifications were made against the City, and strong guards left upon them. Almost at the same time, the Argives making excursions into the Phliasian Territories, by the lying in wait of the Phliafians, and their own exiles, 10ft 80 of their men. The Athenians that lay in Polus now also wasted Laconia, notwithstanding which, the Lacedamonians would not take so much notice as to account the League They will no broken, and thereupon to take arms; but onely caused it to be proclaimed by a Cryer, that whofoever of their Subjects would, might prey upon the Achenians: the Corinthians onely about some controversie made War upon them, all Peloponnesius besides being quiet. The Melians made two sallies against the besiegers, with good successe; but a fresh Army being sent from take notice that the Lergue is broken with Athens.

The Argines recover the the League with Sparta.

Melus raken.

was repeopled by a Colony of 500 Athenians. 50. This same Winter the Athenians, with greater preparations than ever, Thursd. 1.6. resolved seriously to look after Sicilie. Their pretence was to give affistance The Athenians to their friends and allies there, but the true and onely cause was the defire of propagating their Empire, by the bringing under of all that whole Island. A good occasion was now given them by the Egestans, who upon account of former alliance, came and sued to them for aid against the Selinuntians their Enemies, upheld by them of Syracuse, offering them money for carrying on the War; whereupon they thought fit first to send Ambassadors to be informed concerning the money boafted of, and the state of the War. The Lacedamonians this Winter made excursions into Argolis, and carried away much booty. The Argives caused Ornea to be demolished, where

Athens fee upon, and by the help of some treachery took it this Winter, upon terms of yielding to mercy. All the males of ripe age that could be taken were put to the Sword, the women and children made flaves, and the Town ne lian War ended. 51. In the beginning of Spring the Ambassadors sent from Athens return-Decree aid to ed out of Sicily, bringing from the Egestans 60 talents of Bullion, with a feelbass, un moneths pay for 60 thips, as was required. They affirming (though fally) der the com. as well as the Egeltans, that they had much money in their Temples and pubmand of Ni- lick Treasury; the People thereupon much elevated decreed aid to be sent to ias, Alcib ades, them. under the conduct of Nicias, Alcibiades, and Lamschus, to whom to Methone a Town bordering upon Macedonia, thence to infest the Territories of Perdiccas. The Chalcidians hereupon follicited the Lacedamonians to fend aid to the King, but they thinking it not policy to break quite with Athens, refused. Thus the Winter with the fixteenth year of the Peloponand Lamachus, they gave in charge, that, if it might be, they should restore the Leontines, and do those things which they saw to be most advantagious to the Commonwealth, according to the comportment of affairs. Nicias laboured with all his might to divert the People from such a suddain resolution, proposing all the difficulties and dangers of the War, and thought to have excused himself by magnifying the power that was required to fuch an undertaking; but his mouth was stopped by a Decre, which gave him as much as he could exact. For 100 Gallies were ordered for the Expedition, besides others of their Confederates, which amounted to above 30, over and above Veffets of burthen, and others necessary for the transportation of 6100 men, whereof 5100 bore heavy Armour. All things were prepared, with the greatest care and industry imaginable; the Soldiers were compleatly funished with Arms, clothes, and all things necessary; and a drachme a day affigned for their wages.

The Herm.e broken at Athens.

52. Before the departure of the Fleet, all the Herma throughout the City (these were the images of Mercury set up at every man's gate) in one night were mangled and abused, which was taken as an ill omen, and the People was jealous that it was done by some that were Enemies to the Popular Government. Great inquisition was made in vain to find out the Authors, but the suspicion light upon Alcibiades one of the Generals, through the practice of his emulators, who made use of his lofty deportment, which ill Milbades ful fuited with their kind of policy. He offered himself to the tryal, being fear-

trica, is yet by his Encmics fent ful to be condemned absent; but his Enemies put it off for the present, and got definus to be him to be fent away, intending to make use of that which he feared, that being condemned unheard, he might be the sooner oppressed, because now by his own authority and interest, he had drawn many to give their names to the Expedition, and therefore they could not eafily carry any thing against him, because of his popularity. As the Fleet saild toward Sicilie, the Generals sent some before to discover further in what condition the Egestans were, who bringing tidings clean contrary to what both they, the Egestans themselves, and the Ambassadors sent to them had afferted, the Generals were all divided in their opinions what to do, but Alcibiades hot and youthful, was for their proceeding, to which Lamachus at length affenting, his desire was obtained. They then landed and feized upon Catana, attempted Camarina in vain, when Alcibiades received orders to come and plead his cause at Athens about the Herma, his Enemies having obtained it should be so. In truth he was condemned beforehand, but to colour the matter, he was fent for to plead, and that must be withbonds laid upon him. He was aware of the danger, and departed straight to Lacedamon, with intention to teach the Athenians what person they had compelled by unjust Judgment to for-

Then again recalled.

The syracule out proof already in the City. 53. The Syracusians, though not fully perswaded of the design of the Athenians against them at first, (and thereupon not so well provided as they might have been) yet made all possible provision for resistance. The two Generals, after the departure of Alcibiades, by a stratagem drew them out of fake his Country, and betake himself to their Enemies. After this was known, fenrence of death was published against him of his Partners, many (whether justly or no Thucydides much questions) being put to death with-ans stand on their Guard.

look after Si-

cilic.

SECT 3. the Citie, and in the mean time brought their Forces near unto ir, and worfled them when they fallied out, but without any great loffe full fined on either part, and then drew off to their Winter quarters at Catana and Naxus. The Syracufians incorraged by Hermocrates one of their new Generals (a wife man, who had forwarned them of the delign of the Athenians) fent to Sparta and Corunth for aid; firengthened their Fortifications, made excursions to Catana, where they walted the grounds, plundred, and burnt part of the Athenian Camp which was empty. Both fides laboured to draw the Camarinaans to their fide, but in vain; yet many Cities, especially in the in-land, imbraced the fociety of the Athenians, who fent also this Winter to the Carthaginians to procure their amity; the Ciries upon the Tyrrhenian shore they also drew in, and all Swily was now divided in othere two factions. The Cormbians

Dona Phenes

and Euryme-

don joyned in Commission

with Nicias.

readily refolved to fend aid to the Syracufians, and fent fome of their own with their Ambatladors to Sparta to procure as much for them from that The Counthi- State. The Squrram made difficulty at first to do it, for fear of giving the an and Spn- Athenans offence; but hearing from Aleibiades what their defigus were gon fend them (who was come thither upon the publick faith) at his perfuations refolved also upon fending Forces under the Command of Gyhppus: they also imbraced his Counted concerning renewing the War, and fortifying Deselea a Caffle in Attica. At the fame time, the Athenian Generals fent to Athens for money and horf-men, which was readily decreed to be fent. Herewith the 17th year of the War was ended.

54. The next year the Argives and Lacedamonians preyed mutually upon one another in Peloponn fin. In Sicily the Athenians with their whole force, and new tupply of horie, fayled to Syracuse, about which they seized upon many places, and feveral skirmifnes enfued about the fortifications, wherein the Athenians had the better. Then was the Athenian Fleet conveyed into the Haven of Syracufe, whence great contention enfued, and Lamachin one of the Generals affilting his friends was flain. The Syracufians endeavouring the recovery of Epipola were repelled by Nicias, who thence drew a double work against the Town, and freugthened himself by the accelle of Confederates, and flore of provision. The belieged receiving no affiltance from Peloponnessus parlied with Nicias; but the matter succeeding not, they made choice of new Captains, whilest Gylippus was not now far off , but delipited by Nicias for the small number of his men. In Greece the Spartans diffressed the Argives, who were assisted by the Athenians with thirty thips. These made excursions into the Territories of Epidanru, fo that the League which had fo long continued betwixt them and Sparta, though in a doubtfull condition, was now openly broken, and the War refumed; and that more by their fault than any blame of the Lacedamonians, if Thucydides

55. Gylippus arriving at Syracufe diffurbed the work of Nicins about the Thursday Wall, and changed the constancy of his good fortune, who yet was not difcouraged thereby, but proceeded in his utmost endeavours for the service of those that fent him, making preparation for Sea-matters, wherein the Athenians feemed to excell all others: hereupon enfued feveral skirmishes with virious fortune, and the remaining of Summer was spent on both sides, in increating their forces and procuring aid. Nicias writing to Athens for supplies, new Levics were made, and Demosthenes, and Eurymedon joyned in Commission with him, whereof the later was fent in mid-winter with ren Gallies, and a great fumme of money into Sicily, and the other flaid till Spring to get ready what was remaining: twenty thips they also ordered to attend the motions of the Peloponnefians. These things being known, the Spartage and Corinthians calling mon their Confederates provided for the invition of At ica, accordingly as Alcibiades had advised. With these things the 18th year of the War ended.

56. In the beginning of the Spring the Peloponnessians under the Command of Agis the Spartan King, invaded Attica, where they fortified Occalea, a place some twelve miles distant from Ashens, and as much from the Borders of Baotia. The Athenians fent thirty thips to walte Peloponne fits, and fixty (with five of Chius) into Sicily under Demosthenes his command, Out of Peloponnesus were sent to the aid of the Syracusians, from Sparta 500 men from Corineh 500. Sycion 200. & out of Raous 300, to which the Corne thian Gallies lying at Naupactus were ordered to be a Convoy. At Syracule the affairs of the Athenians, through the skill and valour of Gylippus and Hermocrates, went down the wind, who being also much distressed at home by the excursions out of Decelea, yet kept up their spirits to the admiration of all men. After Demosthenes had arrived in Silicy, and heard of the miscarriages of their Fleet at Sea, he blamed Nicia, that he had not as foon as he came applied all his endeavour to Syracuse the head of the War, and caused him to agree to fet upon Epipola, a difficult and craggy place, where falling on in the dark night, they could not differn betwixt friend and foe, all speaking The Athenians in the same dialect, and thereby great flaughter being, made of them, partly by themselves and the Enemy, the Athenians received a great defeat. The defeated at Syracufe.

Generals hereupon confulting together, were not of the fame opinion; Demosthenes now was for departing away speedily out of the Island, seeing all things hapned crosse therein, though he had been the cause of the fight on the other fide Nuras, who had laboured with all his might against the War, now preffed earnestly that it was for the honour and interest of their Countrey to Hay and carry on the fiege, and though Eurymedon was of the fame opinion with Demosthenes, yet could not Nicias be removed from his, so that their departure was deferred till they understood that Gylippus was come with new funplies out of Pelopomefus and Silicy. This resolution he stuck to fo much. for that he knew the multitude rather to look at successe than the reason of things, and was unwilling to hazard his life and reputation in the hands of those who would be ready to condemn before they heard him, as they had done Sophocles and Pehiodorus the former Generals, pretending they had taken money for making peace, when indeed there was not any possibility of making War. 57. But upon the report of Gylippus his coming, Nicias was content, and order was given for the Army to dislodge with the greatest secrecie; when in the mean time fell out an Eclypse of the Moon. By this, which was accounted an ill Omen, was Nicias again fo terrified, that out of a superstitious conceit he would not have the Camp break up till 27 dayes were palt. The Syracustans much rejoyced hereat, and resolved to hinder their slight, or force them to transfer themselves to some other place. They first beat up their Camp, and the next day provoked them to fight, both at Land and Sea, and in the mouth of the Haven ingaged in a great and bloudy battel, wherein Eurymedon one of the Athenian Generals was flain, and though the Squadron of Gylippus was worsted, which made the Athenians Erect a Trophy, yet had they Againgt Sea, the world of it, all confidered. They made them too late repent that they had fo ambitiously and unjustly undertaken a War with a Citie as great as Athens it felf, and one of the same kind of Government, Enemy to Oligarchy. But the Syracusians were more and more animated conceiving now great hopes of obtaining much glory and favour amongst the Gracians, of whom some they might free from flavery, and others from the fear of it for the time to come, by chastising their Tyrants, as they were accounted. As a way hereto they refolved to block up the mouth of the Haven, that the Athenian Fleet should not passe out thence by stealth.

57. The Athenians seeing themselves in this straight, concluded it the best for them to make a new, and a more narrow Camp near to their ships, and attempt another battel at Sea, in which, if they had the better, then to remove to Catana, but if not, to burn their Vessels and depart by Land to fome convenient place. This was attempted with all care and expedicion; but the Syracusians opposed them, and in the straight of the Haven was such a dispute, as scarce ever before had hapned, which was beheld by the land armies with passion suitable to the condition of their friends: Notwithstanding the Syvacufians lost almost as many Vessels, yet the other were so weakned, and

SECT. 3.

320

Great joy in Greece.

CHAP, LAG

out of fear, of alliance made betwirt Darius Nothus King of Perfia, and the State of SECT. 2. Sparta, by virtue of which the King allowed money for paiment of their Soldiers. The Athenians recovered Lesbus, and Clazomena, the Milesians and Chians (principal in the revolt) were destroyed by them, but again they had the worst of it in a Sea-fight near unto Rhodes, which the Peloponne sians then by fair means drew to their fociety, exacting of the Inhabitants 23 talents in the name of tribute, which fuccesse, because of the strength of this City, made them confidently despise the money, and alliance of 62. For, Tiffaphernes and they were at some difference about the form of the League, which they complained was not rightly drawn, for therein they were tied to give up to the Persian the Islands, Thessalie, Locri, and Beentia. which heretofore had been under the power of that Empire : which feemed unworthy for the Lacedamonians to do, who pretended themselves the vindicators of the liberty of Greece, against the incroachments of the Athenians; Herewith Tiffaphernes was grievously netled, and departed in discontent from Cnidus, where eleven Spartans had met him to require that the instruments should be corrected. At this time also it happed that Alcibiades was envied for his glory, and suspected by the Peloponnesians, and ha-He flicth from ted by Agis the Spartan King, for that he had corrupted his wife, infomuch the Spartans that order was reported to have been fent to Astrochus the General, to kill him, but he withdrew himself to Tiffaphernes. He laid open to him the full

State of the Peloponnesians, perswaded him to diminish the pay that his Master allowed them, by changing a Drachme into three Oboli a day, part of which also he should ever keep unpaid, to keep the Seamen at his devotion. He further fuggested crastly counsel to him : especially that they should not suffer the Athenians to be suppressed by the Lacedamonians, but to keep those two He foggefteth States ever in an even ballance, and let them weaken one another by their mumaky counted tual enmitties; yet to favour a little more the Athenians, because they would to Tiffaphernes, be content with part of the soveraignty of the Seas, and would go no further, whereas the Spartans would not rest here, but contend for the sole Dominion, and to bring all the Gracians from under the Perlian yoak. These things he pressed upon him as great mysteries of State for his Master's service, and as fuch he imbraced them ; wherefore the promise he had made of joyning the Phanician Elect with that gallant one of the Peloponnesians was not performed, and the power of this weakened by the with-holding of the Soldiers pay. 63. Alcibiades had a great defire to return into his own Country, which He defireth would not be to any purpose except it were preserved, and therefore he comto return to municated these things to Tiffaphernes. He wrote to some of the chief of his Country. the Athenians then lying at Samus concerning his defire, and told them wherein he was dealing with him; and yet he fignified that he had no mind to return, as long as the Popular Government (under which he was banished) should continue. The Athenians that lay at Samus liked the matter well, and generally inclined to change the Government, for that they were made to believe that Tissaphernes by the procurement of Alcibiades would be their friend, and they should have money from him for the payment of their Army. But Phrymicus the General standing in fear of Alcibiades, by reason Physicus Nandeth in he had spoken too freely against him, opposed it with all his might, and when he could do nothing by words, very boldly acquainted Astyochus the Laceda-far of him, he could do nothing by words, very bottony acquainted - 177, Alciliades in his and laboureth monian General with the matter. He who now had not Alciliades in his odestroy him, power, was no whit eager for his destruction, and being withall corrupted by Tissaphernes to betray his trust, went and acquainted him and Alcibiades with what he had received. Hereupon Alcibiades wrote to the Athenians in Samus, and acquainted them with the treachery of Phrynicus, required them to put him to death as a Traitor to his Country, who hereupon was exceedingly troubled, and boyled with anger against Aftyochus; yet in so desperate a case adding one rath act unto another; he wrote again to him, upbraided him with unthankfulnesse, and fignified that he would betray Samus with all the Athe-

the Sea-men to discouraged, that though the Generals would have attempted to break out another time, yet they refuled any more to go aboard; fo that they concluded of going away by Land the next night. If this had been done it might have falln out well for the Army, but by the cunning device of Her-mocrates they were circumvented, and perswaded to stay till the third day 59. Their departure was most full of out cries, forrow, and misery, set out to the life by Thucydides, so that none can read it without compassion. Gylippus seized upon their 130 ships lest in the Haven, then pursued them, and fet upon them behind, before, and en all fides, so that distressed for all neces-They fly. faries, they took another way than that which lead to Catana, otherwise than they had intended, and they were divided into two bodies, whereof that with Demofthenes foon yielded upon promife of their lives. Nicim required better terms, and refused to submit; but at lengthwas forced to it, craving favour for himfelf and men, at the hands of Gylippus and the Spartans; 18000 in one day were flain, 700 taken and condemned to Mines, were after fold. The two Generals were (contrary to the utmost endeavour of Gylippus, who would fain have had the honour of carrying them to Sparta) put to death, or as Diodorus faith, killed themselves in prison. This was the end of the Sicilian War, fo indifcreetly overtaken by the Athenians, who when they had those already that gave them enough to do, would needs make to them-(a) Alian Var. felves more Enemies, and fo by labouring to grafp, loft, all. Meton (a) the Aftronomer (mentioned before) was so certainly perswaded of the danger of this expedition, that when he was enrolled amongst those that were to undertake it, to prevent his going, he counterfeired himself mad, to confirm the cap. 12. (b) Vide Simp- belief of which he set site on his own house. But (b) Hippocrates the Jos in Chron, ad Coan (Prince of Physicians) is said to have set out his own son at his own ann, M. 3590. charge, as Physician to the Athenian Army.

60. The Athenians were loath to give credit to the first report of the Thursdillate losse of their Army and Fleet, because of the greatnesse of it, but then knowing it to be so indeed, were much incensed against those that perswaded them to undertake the War, and for that they feared the Sicilians would now come upon them whilest they were destitute of all things, the Citie was filled with great conflernation. Yet within awhile, they took courage, and making all provision for defence, gave Commission to some few of the most antient and experienced amongst them, to consult and provide fit matter for the multitude to decree. In Winter following all Greece was elevated upon this their bad successe. They who were neuters before, now offered themselves to joyn in suppressing those of whom formerly they flood in feat : the Confederates of Lacedamon more vigoroully provided against them, and all those that had been subject to them were earnest to shake off the yoak. The Lacedamonians having such encouragement, set themselves very seriously to the War. Agis their King went into Theffaly to raise money, and a Fleet of 100 Gallies was prepared amongst the Confederates. Pharnabazus one of the Sairapaes of Persia, and Lieutenant of those parts of Asia about the Hellespont, and Tisaphernes another of the Satrapaes, lent to Sparta, and offered them affiftance. These designs were carried as secretly as could be, that the Athenians might get no knowledge of them, who laboured also at the same time about the Rigging of a new Fleet. With these preparations the 19th year of the War ended. 61. The next year the Athenians were at the beginning somewhat encouraged by fome successe at Sea, and thereby the Lacedamonians so far discouraged again, that they thought seriously of concluding the War, till otherwise perswaded by Alcibiades, who undertook an expedition into Ionia to withdraw it from the obedience of Athens, and did very much effect it.

Alcibiades his The Athenians herear abashed, and fearing all their Associates would revolt, attings against took out 1000 Talents, which as yet had been untouched, as forbidden by the Law, and laid them out in this case of extremity in provisions, and especially in preparing a new Fleet. Then by Alcibiades his means was a League his own Countrey.

man Army there unto the Lacedamonians, which he could do, because the Town was unwalled, and would do, for a fmuch as it was lawful in fo eminent SECT.3.

a danger, as he was in, to provide for his own fecurity. 64. Astrochus without raking this opportunity to serve his Country, made this known alfo to Aleibiades, which Phrymens understanding, and knowing that Alcibiades would write hereof to the Army, that he might prevent him, he told the Soldiers that the Enemy intended to fet upon Samus by Sea and Land, now that the City wanted walls, whereupon he commanded them, having absolute authority, to raise a work about it, and keep diligent watch. This was done accordingly, and then though Alcibiades his letters presently after arrived, yet no credit was given to the accusation, as proceeding from his bitter Enemy, but more confidence reposed in him. Alcibiades then applied himself to Tisaphernes to reconcile him to the Athenians, but he being unwilling to lofe all his credit, was cool in the businesse. But whils he dealt with him, the Soldiers in Samus having fent to Athens to deal with the People about the change of Government, Pijander chief of the messengers laboured to convince them of the absolute necessity thereof, for that otherwise they could not be freed from imminent destruction. The People being circumvented yielded to it, & gave him with ten other Commissioners power to treat, and conclude what loever they found necessary for the State, with Tissaphernes and Alcibiades: but the former of these standing in feat of utterly losing the Peloponnessans, and having this alwaies in his mind to keep the two States in an equal ballance, would not give any encouragement, or open his mind fully to Alcibiades, who fearing to lose his credit and power with him, which treat with Al- he had so hoasted of to the Athenians; that he might put them by, demanded eibiades, and such hard Conditions as he knew they could not grant, and so the Commission oners returned with great stomack and disdain, to have been so ill used by

Commissionbut in vain.

65. And Tiffaphernes to prosecute that design of setting the Gracians upon each other, and keeping them in equal power; fearing that if he detained any longer the pay from the Peloponnefians, that they would be too much weakened by the Athenians, who now of late had had the better of it in some engagements, and thereby the Kings Provinces should be exposed to danger, he went this Winter into Caria, where he renewed the League on better

Tissappernes re- terms for the Peloponnesians, paid the arrears due to the Army, and promiwar with the fed to dispatch away the Phanician Fleet. This new alliance was made in Pelopomessant, the thirteenth year of Darius, (Alexipidas being Ephorus at Sparta) upon the River Maander, attested by the names of Tiffaphernes, Hieramenes, and the Children of Phanaces. Towards the end of Winter Oropus a Town fituate upon the confines of Attica and Baotia, revolted to the Baotians, being formerly in the jurisdiction of Athens. Herenpon the Baotsans conceived hopes to alienate all Eubea from the Athenians, especially for that the Eretrians who were principal in that Island, inclined to a revolt, and fent away to the Peloponnessians to defire they would come into Enbas. But their care for Chim which was diffressed by the Athenians suffered them not to comply with their defire; for they fet out a Fleet to relieve that Island, but the Athenians being mafters of the Sea, it durft not venture further than Mile-11113; and therefore the Athenian ships returned unto Samus. Thus ended the 20th year of the War.

66. In the beginning of Spring Dercylidas was fent from Sparta by Land to the Hellespont, with no great force, where with ease he brought off Abydus (a Colony of the Milefians) from their obedience to Athens, and after that Lampfaciu, but attempted the same upon Sestu to no purpose. The Athenians and Chians had a battel at Sea upon equal terms : but Strombichides the Athenian hearing what was done in the Hellespont hasted thither, recovered Lampfacus, was repelled by the Inhabitants of Abydus, and then went to Seffus in Europe, where he placed a strong Carrifon for the security of those parts. In the mean time Pifander and his Colleagues being returned from Alcibiades to Samus, in conjunction with those therein, resolved without him to change the Government. They first did it in most of the Ci- SBCT. 3. ties which were subject to Athens, and found it almost effected there, after that Androcles, a man who was most earnest in the defence of Democracy, with

The Govern-fome others, were fecretly murdered by fome Conspirators, who laboured ment changed thereby to gain the good will of Alcibiades and Tessaphernes. These designto Oligarchy ed to have the State governed by 5000 men of the most able with bodies and in Athers, and estates to serve it, and the People durst not contradict them, such factions and iealousies had rifen, that no man was secure of his neighbour. But Pisander fubicat to it. and his Colleagues arriving, obtained of the multitude, that ten men might be impowred, to conclude and fet down in writing fuch things as feemed to them requifite for a settlement, which on a certain day were to be referred to the People.

67. When the day came, these ten men first required, that it might be lawful for any one to speak his opinion without danger of incurring any penalty by the Laws. Then they proposed, that no Magistracy should be undertaken and The Model. exercifed after the usual manner, nor any receive salary for the exercising thereof : that five Prefidents should be chosen, who should pick out 100 men. and each of these chuse three more, that all might make up the number of 400. That these 400 men should be invested with the Supreme power and authori-

power.

Four hundred ty; should decree and ordain what seemed good unto them; and might call men have the together the five thousand when they thought it convenient. These propofitions, though of fo great consequence, for the change they were likely to produce, were yet admitted of, not as much as one man gainfaying them, fuch a change there was made in the minds of the People, which now fince the banishing of the Tyrants had onely been governed by it's Laws and conflitutions, and not onely not subject to the authority of others, but reigning over many, devested it felf of fo great foveraignty and power. But these 400 men thus authorifed, were conducted in a folemn manner to the Senatehouse, with daggers under their coats, and compassed about with armed men. where the old Senate having their Salaries paid were dismissed. They chose the Prytanes or Presidents out of their own body, and then began to exercise They fend to their authority; but not without blood, bonds, and bunnifhment. They peace, who flighteth them.

Assabout 2 fent to Agis the Lacedamonian King, then lying at Decelea, to treat of Peace, but he not having any opinion of their power as long to continue, but thinking the People would shortly resume it, rejected their Ambassie, and fending for more Forces out of Peloponnesses, came to Athens, hoping that in these commotions he might affright the City into a surrender. But he found the contrary; for all agreeing in this to refift him as the common Enemy, they flood notably in their defence, and fallied our upon him; fo that having no hopes, he difmified his new forces, and with the other returned to Decelea.

68. After his return, the 400 fent other Ambassadors to him about a peace, skood address who referred them to Sparta, whither they went, but what successe they had, doth not appear from Thucydides. They knew the common Soldiers at Samus (though Pifander and his Companions had Rickled fo for it) to be Enemies to Oligarchy, and therefore to take them off, they fent to acquaint them that the power was not in them onely, but in the 5000 also, and laboured to fatisfie them in this point, that this was equivalent to Democracie, feeing that during that Government, when all things were done by the body of the Peo-The Army at ple, a greater number did not use to meet. But they at Samus being impa-

Samus intaged tient of any but Popular Government, after the departure of Pifander and his Colleagues, had restored it there, and sent to dehens to signifie so much, not knowing what had hapned there, which was very unwelcome news to the 400. who call some of the messengers into prison. But Chareas, hiding himself for some time, escaped, and carried back a report how things stood, amplifying much the oppression and insolence of these Governours; whereat the Soldiers were grievously enraged, and threatened death, not onely to the authors of the Ollgarchy, but to all that had been partakers of it; and at such a season when the Enemy expected such advantages, they had committed something, tending

SECT .3. tending to the ruin of their Countrey, had they not been restrained by the interpolition of more stayed and prudent men. Thrasphilus and Thraspllus, who had been most earnest for restoring the popular Government, that they might do it in a fafe and honorable way, caufed all the Soldiers, especially fuch as they knew to favour Oligarchy, to take an Oath unanimoufly to act for the reflicution of the power of the people; to fight refolutely against the Peloponnesians; to take for Enemies the 400 men at Athens, and to admit of no entercourse with them by any Officer at Arms; which Oath also they cau-

Takesan Oath of

Recalleth

Alcibiades.

fed to be taken by all the Samians that were at age, whose conjunction they against them, thought necessary for carrying on the design. 69. Then did the Soldiers chuse them new Officers, of whom were Thra-Sphulus and Thrasplus, and encouraged one another to the Enterprize, both from the juffnesse of their undertaking (for that the Army had not revolted from the Citie, but the Citie from it) as also from their strength, far superiour (especially in respect of the Fleet) to that of the 400. adding also, that Alcibiades upon promife of fecurity, and reflicution, would be affifting to them, and that they might hope well concerning Tiffaphernes, and the King of Perfia. In the mean while the Peloponnesians fore mutined against Tif-Saphernes and Asyochus, that they had not their pay, and were not lead out to fight with the Albenians, whilest they were so at odds amongst themselves, which forced the later to draw both Sea and Land-forces to Mycale for an ingagement, but the Athenians refusing to fight, for that they were inferiour to them in number of thips, when more came from the Hellespont prefented themselves; but then the Peloponnesians conceiving themselves too weak for the encounter, refused to ingage. Thrasphulm in the mean while perswaded the Army to recall Alcibiades. Audience being given him, after he had complained of the injuffice of his Enemies , he discoursed much of the state of Affairs as they then stood; Magnified above measure his power with Tiffaphernes (which he did, both to discourage them at Asheus, and to render the Sairapa the more odious to the Peloponnesians) who he faid would affift them to the felling of the bedhe lay on. Hereupon the Soldiers mightily elevated with hopes, presently created him one of their Generals, with full power, thinking of nothing but the punishment of the 400. and refolving without any regard of the Enemy at hand to fayl directly for the 70. Alcibiades withstood their resolution, saying, that nothing was rashly to be committed, and feeing that they had put the power into his hands, he must go to Tiffaphernes. This he did, not onely to transact what he prerended, but also to boat of his new power, to let the Persian know he could either pleafure him, or incommodate his affairs, and so this crafty man procured, that he both made him fear the Athenians, and the Athenians fland in awe of him, whilest hereby he made up his own interest. That also which he intended concerning Tissaphernes, and the Peloponnesians, came to passe; for distrusting him before, they were now very bitter against him, since he hindred the fight at Mileum, and defrauded them of their pay, and Aftyochus their own General they had killed in a mutiny, had he not taken fanctuary. Prefently upon this came Mindarm, fent from Sparta to succeed him, who then departed home with an Agent from Tiffaphernes, whom he fent to excuse himfelf to that State, and answer such objections as were made against him, The Amballa- Alcibiades returned from Tiffaphernes to Samus, where mer him the Ambassadors of the 400 men (who upon hearing how things went here, had all this dors of the 400 come to Samus.

while out of fear flaid at Delm.) The Soldiers would not hear them, and voted they should be put to death; but he caused them to have leave to deliver their meffage, which they did with all the advantage they could, in excuse of those that fent them, accusing of falshood what had been reported by Chareas; but fill the Army was diffatisfied, and cried out to fayl to the Pirans. Alcibiades now timely interpoled himself; for, had the Army then departed for Athens, all Ionia, and the Hellefpon had been presently loft; but he put a flop to their hear, and checked those that were so fierce against the Ambas-

Altib ades gi- fadors. He himfelf bad them return this answer, that the 5000 might retain SECT. 3. reth them 2 their power, but the 400 were commanded to defift, and restore the Senate colle answer. of 500 whom they outed; that they should do well at Ashens to take care of the Commonwealth, and not to give place to the Enemy: for whileft the City was fafe, he hoped to make up the breaches; but if either it should be loft, or the Army at Samus miscarry, there would want those who should be reconciled to each other.

the Eccinan Empire.

71. With this answer he dismissed the Messengers in safety, as he did also with much kindnesse Ambassadors sent from Argos to offer affistance against the 400. Tiffaphernes now upon what defign is uncertain, went to Afpendus where the Phanician Fleet lay, pretending he would purge himself to the Lacedamonians, and give order to Tamus his Officer to pay the, Arrears due to the Army. But neither did he remove the Fleet from Afpendus, according to agreement, pretending frivolous things, nor did Tanus accordingly pay the monies: which raifed many conjectures and much discourse. This y-

The Councils dides thinketh his defign to have been to hold the Gracians in suspense, and of Tiffaphenes fuffer them to weaken one another, for that if he had joyned himself to eiin the dark. ther party, by the help of his Fleet he might in a short time, and without difficulty have finished the War, and given the victory to which side he pleased. Alcibiades went to him with 13 ships, promiting either to induce him to joyn his Fleet with the Athenians, or to procure that he should not assist them of Peloponne sis; it being likely enough that he knew his intention of not moving to the one part or the other; but this headid, especially by his entercourse, and familiarity with him, to increase the indignation and choler of the Peloponnefians, and thereby to constrain him to joyn himself with the Athenians. But the return and report of the Ambassadors sent from the 400 men raised great perturbations in the minds of men at Athens, whilest those, who either out of fome ambitious defign (all men being greedy of power over others) or for the publick good, defired the Supreme Authority might be in the 5000. had affected to the the advantage of the other factions. The other were as busine as concerned, especially Phrynichus, because so obnoxious to Alcibiades, Pisavier, and others. They fent to Lacedemon to make peace with that State upon any terms, and Fortified that part of the Piram, which commandeth the mouth of the haven, which made the other party, which affected Democracie, very jealous; Theramenes crying out that they intended to betray the Citie to the Enemy, who now with 42 Gallies hovered about the Coasts. 72. Neither were these mere Calumnies; for these 400 men for the most part defired to retain the Dominion over both Citizens and Allies; but if not that, yer to continue Masters of the Fleet and Fortifications, and if this could not be obtained, then to call in the Enemy, to redeem their lives, and part of the Citie, with the ships and works; being resolved never to give way to the popular Government, from which they could expect nothing but sudden destruction. To this purpose they made the Wall upon the Piram with several Gares to let in the Enemy if need were. But Phrynichus returning from Sparca whither he was fent Ambassadour (though to no purpose) was stabbed in the Forum by a conspiracy, after which Theramenes and his party grew more bold, and by the help of the Soldiers feized upon some of the Chief of the 400. whence enfued a very great tumult, all being ready to fall one upon another, and certain mischief had followed, but that the antient men somewhat repressed the younger, and Thucydides the Phar salian, then fojourning in the Citie, laboured earnestly to perswade them, crying out, that they should not themselves destroy their Countrey, now that the Enemy was ready to affail it, and with much ado he kept them from offering violence to one another. Theramenes also checked the Soldiers in the Haven; but he giving way to it, the new Fortifications there were demolished. The next day the 400 met, though in great fear, and fent some of their number to appeale the Soldiers, faying, that they would chuse 5000 men, who from amongst themselves should chuse the number of 400 by turns to rule the State, defiring they would not undo the Citie by compelling it to yield to and Lacede.

The Traiterous defigns of the 400.

Tumults at

moniaus.

SECT. 3. the Enemy. Herewith the minds of the Soldiers were fomewhat quieted, and with much ado they agreed that a general Assembly should be had at a certain day for an agreement : but when the day came, and the Affembly was scarce gathered rogether, news came that the 42 ships, under Command of Hegefandrides the Sparian, held their course directly from the Coast of Megara, to the Island Salamine. 73. The Soldiers now concluded of the certainty of what Theramenes had told them, and that these ships intending for the Piram, it was good that the Fortifications were demolished; and likely enough it was that Hegelandrides hovering so long about Epidaurus, expected some good opportunity to fall on Athens. Hereupon all the Affembly hafted to the Pirans , but the Fleet making towards Eubanat length came to Oropus, which making them very follicitous for Eubaa wherein their hope onely remained, they fent Thymochares with some ships to Eretria, which he joyning to those that were in the Island, made up 26 fayl. He was forced to fight sooner than he intended, by the fraud of the Eretrians, who delayed to bring victuals to fell as they were wont, and thereby drew the Soldiers further off from the Fleet, and made great diforder; so that the Peloponnesians setting upon The Athenians them, whilest out of good order, quickly put them to flight. They took 22 defeated are thips, killing fome, and taking the rest of the men: fuch as fled to Land, and betook themselves to Eretria as to friends, were killed by the Inhabitants; feized with then presently all Eubæa, except Oreus, revolted to the Peloponnesians. great confternation.

When tidings hereof came to Athens, never did so great consternation seize upon them there, no not after the overthrow in Sicily. For the Army at Samus diffented from the Citie; they had neither ships left, nor men to ferve in them, and were broken into factions, of which they could not forefee the event; and the loffe of Eubaa was exceeding great, because that Island furnished the Citie with more Commodities than Anica it self. And their fear was increased by the nearnesse of it, from which the Enemy might presently come and seize upon the Piraus now destitute of ships, which they did not onely think would be ; but imagined to be already done. 74. And had the Enemy been a little bolder, he might easily have done this, and more. Had he besieged the Citie, it would have been more grie-voully broken by seditions, and constrained to call home the Army at Samus, and thereby he might have reduced with ease Ionia, the Hellespont, all the Islands, and all as far as Euboca; and so consequently all the Athenian Do-The contrary minion into his power. But well was it for the Athenians that they had fuch dispositions of an Enemy to deal with as the Spartans, who were of so contrary dispositions: the Athenians they being speedy and bold in executing all their defigns; but these slow, and fomething fearfull, especially in Sea matters, whereby they affoarded many opportunities to the Athenians. These things are confirmed from instance in the Syracusians, who being of the same nature as the Athenians, were good enough for them at all affayes. The Athenians in the midft of all their fears took yet all care possible for their Affairs, furnishing our twenty ships, and meeting together in Pnice, the usual place for popular Assemblies, they abrogated the power of the 400, and gave it to 5000, amongst whom some were to furnish the Commonwealth with Arms, ordering that none should The power of receive any wages for his imployment. Many other meetings then succeed-the 400 abro- ed, in which certain Law-makers were chosen, and other things decreed for gated, and the the good of the State, at which time Thucydides thinketh the Athenian Commonwealth to have been better than ever rempered and qualified, a moderate, and equal way being brought in betwixt the power of a few, and that most equally of the whole people. A decree also passed for the restitution of Alcibiades, poifed. and those with him. Upon this change Pifander and the rest that adhered to Oligarchy fled to the Enemy. 75. In the mean while the Peloponne fian Fleet lying at Miletus, in vain expected money from Tiffaphernes, and the coming of the Phanician Fleet: on the other fide Pharnabazus, Lieutenant to the King upon the Hellespans, promised them all kindnesse, and in particular used his indeavour to draw all the Greek Cities within his Government from the fociety of the Athenians, which Tiffaphernes also had promised, but performed like other things. Mindarus the General of the Fleet moved herewith, went from Miletus rowards the Hellespont, with a Fleet of 73 ships, which Thrasyllus the Athenian understanding, made after him with 55 Sail, labouring to get before him. Some from was made by the way, but nothing very confiderable done till they came towards an engagement at Gnofema. Sixteen Gillies of Athens were first mer with by the Peloponnessans, who took three of them, and burnt another; and at length both the Fleets joyned battel, being inlarged fince they came into the Hellespons by the accesse of other ships. At first the Peloponnesians put to flight the middle battel of the Athenians, and driving the thips to Land had the better of it there; but being too eager in the The Athenians pursure, they brake their ranks, which Thraspbulus and those with him obferving in his wing, wound about and fell upon them with fuch violence, as obtained a. Victory at forced them to flie. They took 21 ships, the rest by reason of the straightnesse of the Sea getting into some Harbour or other, and though they lost fifteen of their own, yet obtained they a feafonable Victory, which made them lift up their heads (having been dejected by so many disafters) and cease to complain of their Fortune. 76. The report of it at Athens, as of an unexpected thing, mightily incou-raged the people also, so that notwithstanding the revolt of Eubera, and in-restine Seditions, they had hopes still, if they prosecuted the War with diligence, to have the better. Four daies after the fight the Fleet removed from Softus towards Craicus, where in their way they took eight Gallies that came from Byzantium, and taking the Town, which then for want of walls could make no refishance, fined the Inhabitants; the Peloponnesians at the same time endeavouring to recruit their Navie. In the mean while Alcibiades having been with Tiffaphernes returned to Samus with thirteen Gallies, bringing word, that he had stopped the Phanician Fleet from joyning with the Peloponne sians, and had rendred the Satrapa more friendly towards the Athenians. Then presently adding nine ships to the former, he constrained the Halicarnasscans to pay a great sum of money, and fortified Cos. Tiffaphernes, when he heard that the Peloponnesian Fleet was gone towards the Hellespont, hasted from Aspendius into Ionia, where understanding that the Inhabitants of Antandrus had received a Garrison from the Peloponnesians of Abydus, because they had been ill dealt withall by Affacus, whom he had made his Lieutenant in those parts, as also that the Peloponnesians had cast his Garrison out of Mileum, and Cnidus (which they did to affront him, laying grievous matters to his charge) left they should proceed any further, and grieving that Pharnabazus in a leffe time, and with leffe expince, should make more use of them against the Athenians, he determined to follow them into the Hellespont, to expostulate with them about Antandrus, and purge himself as well as he could of those things laid to his charge about the Phanician Fleet, and other matters. And when he came to Ephefus he facrifized to Diana. Here the history of Thucydides (a) endeth (with the Summer of the 21st year of the War) (a) Diodorus which afterwards was continued by Theopompus for seventeen years; but by adolymp, 92. Xenophon for 28. The work of the former is loft; and that of the latter extant, ann. 2. but without a beginning, in the judgement of a learned man, who, besides the proeme, will have the history of two years to be wanting; from the end of (b) uffering in that Summer at which Thucydides left, to the conclusion of the Summer of Annal. Vet, the 23 year of the War. But Diodorns placing the last things of Thucydides Test. pag. 216. in the second year of the 92 Olympiad, in the very next relateth those which are mentioned in the beginning of the first Book of Xenophon, so that if the whole was exeant in his time, he either missed these two years, and so inverted the Chronology of all his history succeeding; as else onely the proeme of the first Book of Xenophon is lost (if there was any) and the History

177. Not long after the Athenians and Lacedamonians engaged thrice in Xenoph. fight at Sea, wherein the Athenians had the better first and last, the second Hellanic. 1, 1.

having

Tiffaphernes

. Alcibiades.

Alcibiades

Spartan.

fecureth

SECT. 3. having been fought to no great purpose on either side. Tiffaphernes, after Plutardin this coming to the Hellespont, Alcibiades went to visit him, whom he secur- Alcibiade,

The acts of Thrafybulus the Athenian.

80. The next year in which the 93 Olympiad was folemnized, wherein SECT. 2 Enbotas the Cyronaan got the prize in the course, Enarchippus being Ephorus at Sparca, and Euclemon Archon at Athens, Thrafybulus having obtained the ships decreed to him, with 5000 Sea-men, sailed to Samus, whence after three daies he departed, and took Colophon, made excursions into Lydia, where obtaining much booty, he also went against Ephesus. Tissaphernes

the Persian Empire.

coming in in good time, he was beaten back from the City with double loffe, whence he failed to the Hellespont, and in his way at Lesbus put to flight a Fleet of 25 Syracusian ships, four whereof he took with the men in them. Then departed he to Sellins to the other Athenian Forces, and thence removed to Lampfacus with the whole Army in the beginning of Winter, which Town they fortified, and belieging Abydus overthrew Pharnabazus, who came with a confiderable body of Horse to relieve the Town ; which Victory reconciled the Soldiers, who before this were at odds, because those under Alcibiades being hitherto victorious, would not be joyned with the followers of Thrasphulus who had been beaten. In the same Winter the Athenians made frequent depredations in the territories of the Persian King. Then also the Helots which had fled from Malea to Coriphasium, were upon agreement dismissed by the Lacedamonians; and the Plantation of Heraclea, and Trachinia, were by the Acheans the ancient Inhabitants, betrayed into the hands of the Octeans the common Enemy, and 700 of them flain, together with Laboras the Lacedamonian Governour. Thus the 24th year of the War ended. wherein the Medes having rebelled, were reduced to obedience by Darius Nothus, and the Temple of Pallas at Phocaa was burnt with Thunder and

81. In the beginning of the next Spring Pantacles being Ephorus at Sparta.

Milliades be- and Antigones Archon at Athens, the Athenians with their whole Army freech chalce- and Fleet went into Proconnessu; thence to Chalcedon and Byzantium. and face down before Chalcedon. The Chalcedonians aware of their coming. fent all their booty to the Bribinaans their neighbours, which being known to Alcibiades, he went with a fufficient force, and by threats got it deliver> nour of the Town, troubled herear, fallied out, and fought with that Party that was under I brafyllus, for a long time with ambiguous Fortune, till Alcibiades coming in, Hippocrates was flain, and his men repulsed into the Town. Pharnabazus during the fight came to relieve him, but could not get to them by reason of the Athenian fortifications. He, whilft Alcibiades was absent, gathering Money from the Cities, made an agreement with the other Athenian Captains, that he should pay them 20 talents, that the Chalcedonsans should pay all their arrears, and afterwards as much as they were wont: in the mean time the Athenians should offer them no violence, till the Athenian Ambassadors, which he took upon him to convey, should return from the King, Alcibiades at this time was at Selymbria, which having taken, he returned to Byzantium with a body of Horse and Foot newly raised in Cherronefus and Thrace, where Pharnabazus expected him to have his oath to the

ed up to him, after which returning he compaffed Chalcedon from Sea to Sea with a rampire, and to the River. Hippocrates the Lacedamonian, Gover-who condescended to him, and so they both swore not to hurt each other. Together with the Athenians, others went as Ambassadors to the King from the Lacedemonians; as also Hermocrates and his brother Proxenus now banished from Syracuse. 82. The Athenians then presently belieged Byzantium, which having no agreement. He refused to take his oath except Pharnabazus did the like, hopes to obtain by frong hand, they atempted by treachery, and had it delivered up to them, whilst Clearchus the Governour, a Lacedamonian, was gone to Pharnabazus to follicite him about money to pay the Soldiers, and to gather a Fleet together wherewith if possible he might raise the siege. News hereof was carried to Pharnabazus then wintering at Gordium in Phrygia with the Ambassadors whom he was carrying to the King. In the beginning of Spring when they were on their journy, they met with some Spared, and committed to close custody, pretending he had orders from his Master to make War against the Athenians; but rather for that he feared he should be accused by the Peloponnesians to the King, and therefore thought by this enterprise to redeem his credit. But after he had been secured thirty dayes; he made his escape to Clazomena, where pretending to have been sent by Tiffaphernes, he failed thence to the Athenian Army lying at Cardia. Sailing thence to the Hellespont or Cyzicus, he overthrew Mindarus both at Sea and Land, who died also in the fight, taking all the Peloponnesian thins, Mindarus the after which he forced from the Town a great fum of money, and profecuted the Victory by fineing and fecuring other places. In the mean while letters were intercepted, and fent to Athens, which were to Sparts, written from Hippocrases Lieutenant to Mindarus, and found to contain the distresse of the Fleet in these few words, according to the Lacedamonian custom : All is lost ; Min- A. M. 3394. in these few words, according to the Laceaemonian culton: 22 to 10, 92.41,2 darus is slain, the Soldiers are famished: we know not what to do. But V. 6.34.

Affairs of the Glacians comemporary

Pharnabazus laboured with all his might to encourage the Lacedamonian Army, telling them they had loft nothing but woodden ships, their men being 13. Billi Polin, faved, and that new ones should be built at his Masters cost (who had wood 21. enough on the Mount Ida) in which work he was very diligent, and relieved the Chalcedonians then diffressed. 78. The news of the successe with the letter of Hippocrates coming to Athens, filled the People with excessive joy, who offered facrifice to their Diodonisal gods, and kept holy day. They chose then 1000 of the most valiant Foot, Olymp, 91, 41 and 100 Horse for prosecuting the War, and sent thirty Gallies more to Alcibiades, that he might with greater successe set upon the allies of Sparsa now the Sea was in his power. The Lacedemonians when they understood how things went, dispatched away Ambassadors (the chief of which was Endius, unto Athens) about a peace. They offered that both States might retain such places as they had already in their power, that the Garrisons might be dismiffed on both fides, and the prisoners redeemed man for man; and much in a little was faid by Endins, to shew that the Athenians were more concerned to be for peace, though he denied not but that the War was hurful to Sparta. The most moderate men amongst the Athenians were willing to hear of an accommodation; but such as made their own markets out of the publick losse, and gained by the War, withstood the proposition. Amongst these as principal

The Lacedemonians fend about Peace.

was Cleophon, the most eminent of the Damagogi (or leaders of the People) at this time, though formerly a maker of Harps, whom many remembred to have been bound with fetters, but he was furreptitiously registred amongst the Citizens. He speaking many things fit for his purpose, especially made use of the late successe; which he so improved, as if Fortune now had forgot to (lcophon hinbe inconstant. The People herewith puffed up, and conceiving great hopes dereth it. that by the conduct of Alcibiades they should re-obtain their antient power, refused to entertain the proposals made by Endins; of which ill advice they were afterwards fensible, when it was too late, falling so low from this height of prefumption, that they could never after recover themselves. 79. Arer this, Agu the Spartan King made excursions from Decelea, as far as Xemph. the walls of Athens, at which time it hapned that Thrafybulus was in the City about businesse, who leading out his Athenian Soldiers and others that were present, offered him battel; at which he was troubled, and hasted away, lofing a few of his men in some light Skirmishes. This service got Thrasy-

Agis repulsed

113

bulus such credit, that he easily obtained what he came for; 1000 Foot of heavy Armour which he himself would pick out, 100 Horse, and 50 Gallies, being decreed to him; but Agis feeing that it was to no purpose to besiege Athens by Land, as long as they could bring in what provision they pleased at the Piraus, sent away Clearchus the Son of Ramphius to Byzantium and Chalcedon, to make provision for Sea matters, who got through the Hellefront with much adoe, and with the loffe of three ships our of his fifteen he had with him, came to Byzantium. So. The

and others font to the eredian King never come er bim.

555

SECT. 3. rans, who already had been with him, and faid they had obtained from him for the Lacedamonians what they defired, and how he had appointed his younger fon Cyrus his Lieutenant for the Sea-coasts, whom he had commanded Ambaffadors also to affist the Spartans in the War, bringing a Commission with him whereby he was constituted Governour over all that used to meet upon the plains of Caltulus. The Athenian Ambassadors hearing this defired first to see

Cyrus, and then to go to the King; but if not, to return home. But Cyrus required Pharnabazus, either to deliver them up into his hands, or to fend them back, because he would not have the Athenians privy to what was done. But he neither fent them to the King, nor difmissed them, but kept them of and on for three years, after which he obtained leave of Cyrus to dismisse them, seeing he would not permit them to go to his father, and so procured them by Ariobarzanes to be conveyed through Mysia to sea : and so they sayled to the Athenian Army.

83. Alcibrades having a great defire to return to Athens with the Army, Xcooph, ibid. first betook himself to Samus, whence he went and gathered up 100 Talents Plutach in amongst the Carians, and returned thither. Thrasphulus with thirty ships Alethiade, going into Thrace, reduced feveral places into his power, and Thafus amongst the rest, forely at this time distressed with Seditions, Famine, and Pestilence. Thrafybulus with the rest of the Army sayled to Athens, before whose coming the people had created anew three Generals, Alcibiades, and Thrasy-Alcibiades re- bulns, who were absent, and Conon present in the Citie. Alcibiades enturneth to A- couraged hereby fayled to the Citie, where at his landing multitudes of people came to meet him, admiring his person, and the present posture of affairs, which they ascribed to his good conduct, whom they now acquitted from what was laid formerly to his charge, and excused him for siding with the Enemy, feeing he was thereunto led by necessity. He spoke to the Senate and people in his own defence, and gave such satisfaction, no body opposing, that he was created General with full power, as able to restore the Commonwealth by his own industry to its antient power. He first on Land (which of late had not used to be done for fear of the Enemy) celebrated the Elensinia, and then in the third moneth after his arrival, with a Fleet of 100 Gallies, aboard of which were 1100 foot of heavy Armour, and 150 Horse, he sayled to Andrus, the Inhabitants of which he worsted in fight, and thence departed to Sa-Lyfaudty made mus, intending to make use of that Island as the Seat of War. At this time men.

Lyfander was fent from Sparta to succeed Craissippidas in the Fleet, who the Lacedemo- went to Cyrus to desire him in earnest to undertake the War, blaming the mans, obtain- backwardnesse of Tissaphernes. Cyrus promised him his utmost assistance; eth pay of Cy-yus for his Sea-but he defired that the faylers might have a drachm a day affigued as their yus for his Sea-hour he defired that the faylers might have a drachm a day affigued as their Machaer wages, thereby to entice the Athenian Mariners to forfake their Masters, He answered, he could do nothing against his fathers order, who had appointed for every thip 30 Mine a moneth, it being in the power of the Lacedamonians to furnish out as few, or as many ships as they pleased; but afterwards he condescended to increase their pay to four Oboli a day: Moreover, he paid them all their Arrears, and gave them a moneths pay before-hand, which made them very chearfull, and ready for all

84. The Athenians were much troubled hereat, and fent also to Cyrus to Who refuseth the Athenians, obtain his favour, but could not be admitted, though Tiffaphernes used all Alcibiades go- his interest in their behalf, relating, that his design had been according to the ing to speak wise Counsel of Alcibiades, not to promote the Affairs of either, but to with Thraspone fuffer them to destroy one another. Alcibiades understanding that Thrasplingleaveth his bulm being gone from the Hellespont fortified Phocas, went thither to speak Fleet with his with him, leaving the Fleet with Antiochm his Pilot, who he commanded fighting with expressly not to fight, no, not although he were provoked to it, untill his return. Lyfarder, con- But he being not at all used to command any thing except the Helm of a ship, trary to his could not bear his new power without making tryal of it, and with two Galexpresse com lies went, and provoked Lysander in the Haven of Ephesse (where he was mand, is acted & flain, intent upon mending his Fleet confifting of 90 fayl) who first fent out some particular ships against him; but the whole A honian Fleet coming in to his SECT.3. aid, he was also forced to carry out his, and so ingiging with it, there enfued a sharp conslict upon uneven terms. For, the Athenians came on without order, and so within a short time were discomfitted, Antiochus slain, and fifteen ships lost; the other returning back to Samus. Alcibiades returning within awhile, in great chase for what had hapned, went, and offered battel again to Lyfander, but he contenting himfelf with his former victory would not flir, & not long after the Lacedamonians took Delphinium and Eion, For which Al- two Towns in Thrace. This loffe was at Athens by Thrafybu'm imputed chiader is dif- to the neglect, and luxury of Alcibiades, who thereupon by the people was outed of his Command, and ten other Captains chosen for the management of the War, amongst whom was Thras bulus himself, Coxon, and Pericles the fon of Pericles the Great. He then went and made War upon the Theacians that were not under the command of that King, and thereby enriched himself with great Treasure, having built a Cassle for his security, called Bifanthe, in those parts. Conon, who at this time was Governour of Antandrus, Phanist being affigned his Successor, according to the decree of the people, went to Samus, took Thuria, and made excursions into the Territories of the Enemy. So this year ended, in which the Carthaginians

the Perlian Empire.

with a Fleet of 120 Gallies, and 120000 men invading Sicily, overtheew the Agrigemines, whom after a feven moneth's fiege they also forced to a fur-85. The year following wherein the Moon was Eclypfed in an evening An Eclypse of (April the 25, some three hours after Sun-set, as the Astronomical Table demonstrates) and the old Temple of Pallas was burnt at Athens, Pitaus being Ephorus at Sparta, and Callias Archon at Athens, the 26th year of the War commencing, Callicratidas was fent from Lacedemon as Successor to Lyfander, whose time was now expired. He having furnished himself with money subdued Methymna, and charged Conon the Athenian General to depart out of those Coasts, and when he perceived him putting out to Sea, made after him, intending to stop his passage to Samus. He pursued him to the Haven Callicratidae sacreding Ly- of Mitylene, where he worsted him, took thirty of his ships, and then besieged fute defeat him in the Town, from which he cut off all provisions. Conon sent out two Gallies to carry word hereof at Athens; one of which escaping clear from fiegeth Coana the Enemy, came thither with the news, whereupon relief was presently dein Mitylene. creed to be fent, Callicratidas in the mean time overthrew Diomedon, who came to relieve Conon with twelve thips, ten whereof he took, but when he heard that the Athenian Fleet was now come to Samus, confifting in all of 1 50 fayl, he left Eteonicus with fifty ships to continue the fiege, and with the other 120 betook himself to Malea, a Promontory of Lesbus over The Alberian against Misylene, where he supped, and it hapned that the Atherian Fleet Generals over-coming to Arginuse (a place also over against Lesbus) supped there the fame right. Here they fought the next morning a long, and earnest battel, wherein at length Callicratidas his ship being sunk, and he > nessans lost 79 ships, and the Athenians 19. with most of the men in them. 86. The Athenian Generals resolved that Theramenes, Thras, bulus, and others, with 42 ships should hasten to such Vessels as were as good as lost, to preserve them and the men, and the rest should fayl to Mitylene against Eteonicus; but a vehement Tempest arising they were all hindred, and forced to continue in the same place, during which stay, Eteonicus having notice by a Pinnace how things went, told his men the clear contrary, with which artitifice incouraging them to take the Sea, he escaped. It might have been expected that the ten Captains, who joyntly had the command in Chief over the Athenian Fleet, might have received great honour for fuch a victory: But they were instead hereof, by the especial endeavour of Theramenes, brought to judgement, for fuffering many Citizens to perish in the broken, and funken ships; whereas, as it was pretended, they might have saved them.

in it, his men beggir, to flie towards Chius and Phocea. The Pelopon-

A confulta-

to be done

All of them

pat to death

except A.limantus.

foners.

DOOK II

332

SECT. 3. They alleged juffly for their excuse the Tempest which followed the fight; but after much canvaling, both in the Senate and Affembly of the people, the malice of Theramenes (who fet perfons on to make great lamentations for those that were dead) fo far prevailed, together with the forgery of a certain fellow (who faying that he himfelf escaping in a Meal-Tub, had been intreated by those that were in peril of drowning, to desire the people 8 are reward to revenge their death against the Captains) that against the form of Law

ed with a fen- (contrary to which Socrates the Philosopher onely resolutely refused to act as tence of death one of the Prytanes) eight of them were condemned, and fix being present executed upon were put to death; amongst whom was Pericles the fon of Pericles. Those that were absent escaped, the heady multitude quickly repenting of their rashneffe, and the accusers of them were bound over to answer what they had whom Pericles, done. Afterwards a fedition being raifed, wherein Cleophon was flain, they the fon of Pe- took the opportunity and fled; but Callixenus one of the most faulty returning to the Cirie, and hared of all men, was familhed to death.

87. The Soldiers of Econicus wintring in the Island Chius, where they Kenophillia. wanted both victuals and clothes, most of them conspired together to seize upon the Citie Chius, to which whosoever agreed was to wear a Reed as a diffinction. He having notice of it, was sensible what ill will, disgrace, and damage it would bring upon him if it proceeded, and fearing his own life, he boldly killed one of the Soldiers, whom he met with the Reed upon him, and being asked the reason of it, said as boldly, it was for wearing that mark of Sedition, whereat the rest were so daunted that they for fear cast away their Reeds, and so the plot was broken in pieces. Then received he money of the Chians, and gave them a moneths pay, and taking no further notice of the plot, encouraged them with fair words, and promises, and so sayled away. After this the Allies met together at Ephesus to consult about their affairs,

Allies to refume the Government of the Fleet, fine for by the where it was agreed, that ten men should be sent to Lacedamon to desire that Lyfander might be fent back to the Fleet, of whose abilities they had already sufficient proof. By the Laws of Sparta he could not be twice General, and therefore they found out a middle way, to appoint Aracus to that place, and fend him as his Lieutenant. Five and twenty thips were then delivered to Lyfander, at the end of the 26th year of the War, wherein Cyrus killed his two Coulins Autobasaces and Murans, because they had not given him the honour due to Kings of Perfia, by holding their hands within their clothes when they came to him. For this he was accused to his father. who upon pretence of sicknesse sent for him to come to him.

88. The year following wherein Archytas was Ephorus at Sparta, and Idem ilid. 88. The year following wherein arthur was spirit a spirit, and com. Non o Alexias Archon at Athens, Lyfander gathering his Navy together, went to in Platachit Cyrus for money, which being obtained with fome difficulty he paid his Sol-Lyfand on diers and Sea-men their Arrears. At Samus alfo the Athenians provided for Athinid. fighting; where in the mean time came a Meffage to Cyrus from his father, who now being fick defired to see him, although at this time the King lay incamped against the Thamneri of Media, Neighbours to the Cadusians, who had revolted. Cyrus hereupon fent for Lyfander, and consulting with him about the War, desired him not to fight the Athenians, except he overmatched them in number of men, told him his father and he were able enough to encrease the Fleet upon occasion, and to bind him and the stare of Sparta to him, he gave him all the Revenues he had in those parts, with all the ready money, and so took his journey. Lyfander neither daring to fight the Enemy with so few ships, nor to be idle with so many, subdued some places, and having given Agis a visit in Attica, sayled unto the Hellespont, which finding clear, he belieged Lampfacus, and took ir. The Athenian Fleet, which confifted of 180 Gallies, hearing of this, came from the Cherronefus to Sessus, and thence sayled to Ægosposamos, a River over against Lampsacus, the Hellespons at this place being not two miles broad. Lyfander contained his men in great order, and refuled to fight without an advantage, which was at length given him by the Athenians, who braved him , but were in continual disorder, carelessy running up and down, insomuch that Alcibiades ha-

The Athenian Fleet quite defeated at Agospotamos. by Lyfander.

Lifander beand Land;

ving

ving notice of ir, came and advised the Captains to look better to themfelves, but returned with no other recompence than bad words. But Ly-Cander keeping diligent vvatch upon them, observed his time when they vvere most of them landed, some eating and drinking, others looking for victuals, and others wandring up and down, and fetting upon the Fleet eafi-Iv became Master of it all vvithout any opposition, except eight, vvherewith Conon fled into Cyprus unto Evagoras the King, knowing hovy bad entertainment he should have at home. 80. Such Ashenians as had confusedly got into their ships were shin or taken.

and shofe that were yet on Land by the Land Forces, which Lyfander had in a readinesse for that purpose. He took 3000 men, with the Captains and all the ships, except those eight of Conon, and a Packe Boat, which tacking to his oven thips, with the found of Pipes and the pean fung, he returned in triumph unto Lampfac is. Then called he the allies together to confider what was to be done with the prisoners. Many crimes were objected against them, as that they had done many unjust things, and now had determined, if they tion what is had got the Vistory, to cut off the right hands of the Peloponne stans (or the with the pri-thumbs rather, as Plutarch hath it, of their right hands, that they might never be able more to handle spears, but row with oures) and having taken the two Gallies of Andre and Corine to cast headlong all the men into the Sea; the perswader to this being Philodes. Hereupon it was resolved, that they should all be put to death, except Adimanens who had withstood the Decree of cutting off the hands, which fentence was accordingly executed. Lyfunder then failing about to the Cities under the Atherian power, dismissed the Garrison Soldiers and all others he found, with charge to get them to Athens under pain of death, which crafty policy he used to fill the City with men, that it might not be able long to endure a Siege for want of Victuals. When they of the City heard the news, they were affected accordingly, bewailing not onely the fortune of the flain, but their own also, expecting now that should be done to themselves, which heretofore they had done to the Melians, a Colony of Sparta, and to the Histiaans, Scionaans, Toronaans, Aginetans, and many other Greek Cities, not in way of revenge for any injury, but out of indulgence to their own luft; for that they rejoyced in other mens miferies. Yet as grief would give way to prudence, they took care for fortifying the City against a Siege, in which they could not look for any affistance from elsewhere, all their Confederates, except the Samian, having forsaken them, those places which they had filled with Colonies of their own. 90. Lyfander having taken away Democracy, brought in the power of a few into all the Cities. Herein he dealt with much cruelty and ambition, (putting in such men onely as were his creatures, that he might obtain an unlimited power or Tyranny over all Greece) and sending for Land forces from liegeth Athens Sparta, he befieged Athens both by Sea and Land. The Athenians contiboth by Sea nued so resolute for a long time, that till many were already dead of samine, not a word was heard of asking Peace. Then Ambassadors were sent to Aais the Spartan King about it, who referred them to Sparta, having as he faid no . commission to entertain their overtures. Thither then they went, offering, that they might gain the friendship of Lacedemon, to part with all places befides the City and Piraus, where they would retain the Fortifications; but they had for answer, that if they feriously defired peace, they must repair home, and not return till they had better advised of the matter. Hereat the Athenians were much abashed, thinking now of nothing but servitude; none daring to propose the demolishing of the walls; for the Lacedamonians having offered them Peace upon these terms, Archestraius for advising them to embrace it, was imprisoned, and it was decreed that it should be unlawful to mention it for the time to come. Theramenes then procured to be sent to Lysander to get out what his intention was, whether to enflave them, or to have the walls demolished, and thence he returned not till the fourth moneth, that in this time they might be constrained to resolve of something. At his and fuch as they had banished from their dwellings being again restored to return,

DOOK]

return, he said he could get no other answer, but that they must fend again to Sparta, and thereby he procured himself and others to be sent with full authority for concluding a Peace.

or. The Ambafiadors of the Confederates being affembled at Sparia, many of them, especially the Corinthians and Thebans, urged that no composition was to be made with them, but that Athens should be destroyed; but the Spartans would not give way to it, faying, it was not their intention to destroy a City, which in the greatest dangers of Greece had done the greatest things for it's deliverance. They then without much delay made peace with them upon these terms: That the long walls and the fortifications of the Pirans (hould be demol fled ; that they (hould deliver up all their fhips except twelve, receive their exiles, follow the Lacedamonians both by Sea and Land

Which yield in the Wars, and have the same Friends and Enemies with them. Some at the feturn of the Ambassadors would have resused these terms; but the far major part fiding with Theramenes accepted of them. Lyfander then feized upon the ships, and the walls, upon the fixteenth day of the moneth Munichion (on which they had formerly overthrown the Perfians at Salamine) and went about to alter the Government, which the People frongly refifted, informuch that he fent back to Sparta to complain of them, faying, they had broken the League, in that their walls were not demolished; and though no worse thing was yet decreed against them though pressed by some, yet this The walls de; made them willing to receive any thing. Then fent he for all the Pipers out molified, and of the City, to whom joyning those in his own Camp, at the noise of their instruments he caused the walls to be demolished, and the Gallies to be burnt. the Confederates making great folemnity, as if that day gave beginning to the liberty of Greece. Herewith, the 27th year, and the War it felf ended, which being carried on for fo long a time with most various fortune, dubious and inconstant events, with infinite charges, all forts of contests, and the ruine of fo many Captains, as had not perished in all the Wars of Greece befides, was finished by the politick industry of one man, whom some thought A. M. 1600. thereupon they could not sufficiently admire, in the 780th year after the end ol. 93. 18.4. of that of Troy, in the fourth of the 92d Olympiad, the nineteenth of V. c. 349. Darius Nothus (who died presently after the conclusion of the Peace) Darii Nothing for detesting their wicked-

Belli Peles, 21

SECT. IV.

From the end of the Peloponnesian war to the beginning of the reign of Philip King of Macedonia, containing the Space of 44 years.

1. The year following being that wherein the 94th Olympiad was celebrated, in the course of which Crocinas the Thessalian got the prize, Endicus was Ephorus at Sparta, and Pythadorus Archon at Athens, whom yet the Athenians did not so account, because that the Oligarchy being brought in this year, they esteemed it as anarchical. As soon as the long walls and the Piraus were demolished by the command of Lysander, thirty men were chofen to make Lavys, by vyhich the Commonvyealth might be governed. After their creation and investiture in the povver, they deferred both to publish or verite the Lavys; but constituted the Senate and other Magistrates at their pleasure. Then, first, they laid hold of all such as had under the Democracy lived by informing, and false accusing of others, which was not displeafing to honest men. So that those being condemned by the Senate, they were put to death. But afterwards they began seffoully to lay their for the better government of the City, till they had taken out of the vvay all naughty persons, and had settled the Commonwealth, promising themselves to pay the Soldiers. Lyfander being made use of procured what they desired, SECT. 4. and Callibius vvas sent as Harmostes unto Athens, vvhom they so flattered, that they brought him to consent to vvhatsoever they should act. Novy then they fell upon, not onely naughty and diffolute persons, but on the best, vyhosoever they thought ill affected, and would endeavour to stop their proceedings. Theramenes one of them protested against this cruelty, and added, that it was impossible their power should continue in that State without a sufficient company to affift them. Hereupon they fearing him, left he should make himself Captain of the discontented, which was almost the whole City, chose out of the Citizens 3000 which they thought meetest for their purpose, and gave them some part of the power, with this privilege, that none of them should be put to death without the consent of the Senate; all the rest of the

to seize upon his goods. Theramenes having disliked the election of the 3000,

People being left to the discretion of the thirty, whom they also disarmed at a general muster. 2. Now thinking themselves secure enough, they filled all places with Fill all places murders, not onely of their private Enemies, but such whose wealth might with murders enrich them, of which they were exceffive greedy; and to this purpose they agreed, that every one should name one man whom he would put to death for uttered now also his detestation of this wickednesse, resusing himself to commit it. For this they were more jealous of him, fearing he might croffe their abhominable practices, and refolved upon his destruction; so that hiving provided a Company of young men with daggers to affift them, they called the Senate together, and therein Critias (his once familiar friend, but now his deadly Enemy, because the most cruel Tyrant of the thirty) bitterly accufed him as a turbulent and unsertled man; being novy for the People, and another while against them; he objected against him the death of the fix Captains procured by him, and concluded he yvas not a fit man to live in a Common-vycalth, especially so constituted. Theramenes replyed with undaunted courage, and gave satisfaction to the Senate, as Critica perceived by their muttering, vyho thereupon concluding, that if he escaped it vyould endanholfs, is put to ger his oven life, he confulted with his Companions, and then returning to the Senate, told them, that having first expunged his name out of the Catalogue of the 2000, and hereby he being subjected to their censure, they condemned him to death. Theramenes replied again, that his name was no more easy to be blotted out than any other mans, in consideration vyhereof, he advised them all to make his case their own: but none daring to oppose, for that they knevy the men that were present to be privily armed, he was led away, and compelled to drink poylon, which he did with a refolute and gallant Spirit. After this the Tyrants, as being at liberty to do what they pleased, forbad all that were not contained in the Catalogue, to come into the City, from which they expelled them and the borders, that they and their Affociates might enjoy their Lands. The Citizens betook themselves to the Pirans, but being thence also expelled, they filled Megara and Thebes with their multitudes.

3. This banishment of the Athenians procured their liberty. For, now they entred into consultation, and resolved to hazard their lives for the freedom of their Country; feeing that now what would have been treason at home, would have no danger abroad, but such as might be found in the execu-tion. First Thrasybaliu who was then at Thebes, with but * thirty in his company, seized upon Phyla, a Castle in the Territories of Athens; which the Tyrants understanding, endeavoured to recover, but to no purpose; for he having gotten to him within a while 700 men, put to flight the Garrison Soldiers of Sparta, whom they had fet to watch two miles off from the Castle. killing of them about 120 men. Herewith the Tyrants were fomething difthe possible the couraged, but thinking it best to get Eienpose that were able to hear Arms to go out thinker, and perceiving the Inhabitants that were able to hear Arms to go out their thinker, and perceiving the Inhabitants that were able to hear Arms to go out at the gates, that they might onely as they pretended take the number of their heads, most wickedly murdered them. After this Thrasybulus with 1000 heads together, how they might make themselves Masters of all. They sent Æschines and Aristotle two of their company to Sparta to defire a Garrison

The to Ty. rants at Atheas.

A. M. 3600.

Book II

SECT.4. men seized upon the Piraus, against whom, though the Tyrants came out with their whole power, yet he obtained the victory against them, killing 70, and what more, Critis the Arch Tyrant, with Hippomachus one of his Collegues, and Charmiaes one of the ten Captains which had been placed over the Piraw. When the slain were delivered up to be buried, and thereupon both parties met, Cieocritus a Cryer belonging to the Prieffs, and a man famous for his loud and audible voice, exposulated with those who sided with the Tyrants for expelling them their fellow Citizens, educated together, partakers heretofore of the same things, sacred and prophane, prosperous and adverse, and all for to farisfie the luft of those Monsters, who had kindled such a flame as had already confumed more than the Peloponnesian War did in ten years. His speech produced such effect, that the 2000 fell at difference amongst themfelves; fuch as had been busied in the destruction of other men, together with the Tyrants, vehemently contended that nothing was to be granted to them in the Pirare; but those that were confident in their own innocence, crying out, there was no reason that they should obey the will and pleasure of the thirty, and suffer the Citie to perish, prevailed against them. Then was the power of the thirty abrogated, and ten chosen into their room, one Their power out of very Tribe, after which they quitted the Citie, and retired to Eis abrogated. lenfine.

4. Notwithstanding the change of the Government, yet there was no They fend for accord betwixt them in the Piraus and those in the Town, but several acts of aid from Spar-Hostility they committed against one another. At length the 3000 in the Town, and the Tyrants of Eleusine, sent to Spares to desire aid against the other, faving, that the people revolted from the Lacedemonians; and Lyfander procured them 100 Talents to be fent out of hand, himself ordered to go General to affift them, and his brother Libys General of the Fleet.

Lyfander is fent and bebulius, and his fellows in the Piraus.

Then befieged he the Piraus, both by Land and Sea, and forely straightned them; but Paulanias the Spartan King thinking much that he should ger the glory of Conquering Athens the second time, which he would make as his own, he perswaded the Ephori to give way, that he should follow him with another Army, under pretence of affifting him; upon which account the Corinthians and Bastians amongst the Confederates refused to follow him, alleging they should break their Oaths by fighting against them, who had done nothing prejudicial to the peace. This they did, concluding that the Lacedemonians would lay the Territories of Athens to their own demains. Paufanias, after his arrival, fent to them in the Piraus to bid them depart, and they refufing it, for a colour to his defigns, he lead his Forces against them. But returning without any thing performed, he went to view the Walls the next day, at which time they fallied out upon him, and still fresh supplies coming in on both fides, wrought, and received confiderable damage. 5. Yet for all this he underhand fent unto them about a composure, and instructed them what they should offer. They obeyed him, and he perswaded also those in the Citie to end the controversie, that both might become But Paulanias friends to the Lacedamonians. The two Ephori present with him (for two used alwayes to accompany the Spartan Kings in their expeditions) inclined the Spartan to his opinion, rather than to the feverity of Lysander, and so accordingly King emulathey fent Ambassadors from both parties to Lacedamon about an agreement. ting Lyfander taketh up the The Lacedemonians after audience presently dispatched ten Commissioners with them back to Athens, who, together with Paufanias, might make an agreement. They prefently composed all on these terms: That all should return home to their own habitations, except the 30. and the 10. and 11 men which had commanded in the Piraus : and if any feared the people they might remove to Eleuline. These things being done, Pausanias drew off the Spartan Army, and those that were in the Pirans went up with their Arms into the Citie, and there facrifized to Minerva. Then by the persivasion of The popular Thrasybulus the popular Government was restored, and all things ordered as Government in former times. A lit. 'e after it being heard that they in Eleusine hired restored. Soldiers abroad, attempting new matters, the whole Citie rose against them, took their Captains as they came to parley, and flew them ; the rest by their friends sent to them were perswaded to agree. Then passed a general Act of Oblivion for all that was path, confirmed by an Oath, to keep which they being very carefull, even yet faith Xenophon, joyntly mannage the affairs of the Commonwealth. By which wife order the Citie returned to its former quietnesse, upon this Sedition raised by the 30 Tyrants, who being created by a Decree of the Senate, as * another faith, put so death 1 400 Citizens unheard, Ifocrates in and forced more than 5000 to fly into the Piraus.

6. But this Tyranny of the 30. not onely produced the defluction of Plutach in many in the Town, but of Alcibiades also then living in Alia with Pha - Alcibiades mahakus, whom he intended to make use of to bring him to the King, ho- corn News. ping he might deserve no worse of that Prince than I nemistocles had done of his Predecessor. When the Athenians were deprived or their liberty by the means of Lyfander, and the Tytanny of the 30, they then began again to repent of what they had done to him, judging that if he had been yet at the Helms they should never have made shipwrack of their liberty, and still their confidence was in him, and thought their cause was not utterly desperate as long as he was fafe. The Tyrants also were jealous of him, procuring all the intelligence they could concerning all his actions, and at Tyrants procured Alcibia- length Critica remonstrated to Lyfander, that things could not stand as they did long, if he lived, who yet was nothing perforded to procure his death, till he received a Seziala from the Magistrates at Sparta, who either feared his great abilities, or did it to gratifie Agu, to remove him by some means out of the way. He fent to Pharnabazus, requiring him to dispatch him, who enjoyned his brother Magam, and his Uncle Sufami hres to be his Executioners: They coming to the Village in Phrygia where he lived, durst not enter his house, but compassing it about set it on fire. He perceiving what was done, took some Clothes, and casting them into the fire, which keeping down the flame for some space, he brake out, whereupon the Barbarians fled, not daring to stand to him, but at a distance killed him with Darts, after which his body was burnt (with that matter that was prepared to confume him alive) by the care of his Paramour Timandra, the Mother of Lais the famous Corinthian Courtifan. Thus he died in the flour of his age, fcarce exceeding fourty years, a man very beautifull, of most excellent parts, fit for any imployment, able to accommodate himfelf to all, both times and customs, though never so repugnant, and therein yet esteemed also to excell. Socrates upon him exercised the true Platonick love, labouring to infase such virtue into him as might make him truely lovely; but such were his temptations, and inclination, that counterpoiling the instructions, nature in this man seemed to try what she could do; it being agreed by all, faith * one * coin, Nepos, who wrote of him, that none was ever more eminent, both for vice and

7. After these things Cyrus made War upon his brother Artaxerxes, as Xenoph, lib.3. hath been said elsewhere, at what time he sent to Lacedamon, demanding a return for his kinduesses shewed to them, who thinking it most just, sent their Admiral to keep in play Syennesis the Satrapa of Cilicia, till he passed that Countrey. After his overthrow, Tiffaphernes his greatest Enemy, being a most insolent man before, now grew more haughty (after the King had laid the Province of Cyrus to his Satrapie) and began to be more trouble-Some to the Greek Cities in Asia. They fent to complain hereof at Sparta, which State fent to their relief Thimbron, with an Army of 1000 new raifed Soldiers out of Laconia, 4000 Foot of Peloponnesus, and 300 Horse from Athens, which the Citie willingly parted withill, with no good profperity wished to their persons, for that they had been in the service of the thirty Tyrants. What he did in Afia, and how he returned home after Dercyllidas was fent to fucceed him, and was banished upon complaint of the Confederates, is related in the Affairs of Afia. At the same time as Dercyllidas managed the War beyond the Seas, the Lacedamonians and Eleans reviving their old grudges and complaints, broke out into another War, which was begun by the

XX

Thimbro fent

Lace-

He is fent into Afia by the fame means.

CHAP. II.

Lace amonians at the instance of the Ephori. They sent out Agus their King, who led an Army into the Territories of the Eleans; but an Earth-quake hapning at his first entrance, which was counted ominous, he returned without any thing at all performed. The year after, he underrook another expedition, the Athenians, and all the other Confederates, except the Corinthians and Bossians, following him, wherein he forely afflicted all the Countrey, sparing the Citie Elis it felf, and though he retreated, yet the Garrison he left behind him, continuing these depredations all the next Summer, and the Winter following, the next Summer the Eleans were confrained to receive fuch conditions as their Enemies would give them. The Wall about Paire was demolished, Cyllene relinquished, five Towns delivered into the hands of the Spartans, and three to the Arcadians; the management of the Affairs of the Temple belonging to Jupiter Olympius being onely left remaining to them. 8. Not long after these things Agis died, having falln sick in his return Idem that from Delphos. He had born to him by his wife Timea, a fon called Leuty- Com, Nijos, co.

chides, but conceived at that time when Alcibiades fojourned at Sparen, by Plutarch, in whom there were great prefumptions that he was begotten. He had not been Lylandia Lylandia with his wife of ten moneths before the Child was born; Timas her felf was Xenoth, in Ura wont when the would play with it to call it Alcibiades more commonly than delaydibus 4. Leutychides, as was acknowledged by her maids; and neither did Alcibiades goll. himself forbear to acknowledge that he had to do with her, saying, it was not our of any carnal affection, but out of a defire that those who should proceed from him might reign at Lacedamon; upon these grounds Agis owned not Leutychides for his fon, but told the Ephori he was none of his, divorcing prayers and tears, he owned him for his fon before many witnesses. After his death a great contention infued about the fuccession betwixt Leutychides and Agestaus brother to Agis, a man lame of one foot, but of a most noble and valiant disposition. Agestlans was bred after the ordinary strict way, as not having expected the Kingdom being a younger brother, and yet was in great favour with the people, and preffing the illegitimation of his adversary had their ear; but one thing they much fluck at, which was an old Prophecie much urged by Diophites their Prophet, that it (hould go very hard with Spar-

A contention also his Mother; but when he lay sick, having no Children, and moved by his betwixt Leutychides and Agefilans for the Spartan Kingdom.

SECT.4.

to when it should have a lame King. Yet Lyfander, who had taken a great affection to him, answered, that by a larne King was not meant larne of a foor. rieth it, by the vehich could be no hinderance to virtue, but one of spurions extraction; and herewith, and by his private interest, procured the sentence to passe for Agemeans of Lyfand.r.

9. Agefilans had not been a year in his Office, before that being to facrifize for his Countrey according to the custom, the entrails of the beast three rimes did not permit it, which being viewed by the Prophet, he foretold that a grievous conspiracy was hatched against him, and all Magistrates, both in Town and Countrey. Five dayes after this a notable conspiracy indeed was disclosed to the Ephori by one of the Complices, the head of which was Cinadon. They presently referring it to the Senate, it was thought fit that he should be fent out of the Cirie, under presence of some employment, and that some should go after him to make him reveal his fellows, which accordingly was done, and an ignominious death was executed upon them, After the execution Herodus of Syracufe came with news out of Phanicia, that a Fleet of 200 Gallies was prepared by Tiffaphernes, and the King, but upon what defin was not known. The Lacedamonians moved at this, called the Deputies of their Confederates to Sparta to confult about it. Now Lyfander had a great mind to return into Afia, defirous to relieve those his friends, who being by him placed in the Government of the Cities, ten in a place, were for their violence and great mildemeanours, either killed, or driven into banishment. He therefore perswaded Agesilans to undertake so noble and pious an expedition, and wrote to his friends in Afia, to defire of the State that he might be sent. Being perswaded, he offered his service on condition they would grant him thirty Affiftants, by whose directions and advice he SECT. 4. might manage the War; with 2000 choice men newly to be raifed, and 6000 of the Confederates: These were all decreed to him by the dealing of A.M. 3608. Ly fander, who procured himself to be sent as chief of the thirty, to which 01.95, 101.4, place he might well pretend for the great glory of his atchievements, and his V. c. 357. friendship to Agefilaus, whom as he judged he had more obliged by procuring Adaktish this employment, than by the former courtefie of preferring him to the King. Minimot 8. 10. Having his Army and Provisions in a readinesse, he marched to Aulis, that thence, after the example of Agamemnon, he might passe over into

Asia; but going about to sacrifize a Doe to the Goddesse, with which he thought the would be better pleased than she was with Agamemnon for his daughter, he was hindred by the Barrians from doing that which was contrary to their custom, and was constrained in a great chase to passe over without the Ceremony, the Omission of which he accounted as a bad presage, When he came to Ephefin, it appeared that he onely bore the name, and Lyfander had all the credit and authority, all men making application to him, and observing him as a man of whom they had had former experience to exceed all men in earnestnesse to grarissie his friends, and destroy his Enemies. s Edypfed by This much moved Agefilain, though a man of a most mild spirit (who was famous for hearing with any thing) and troubled also his own Collegues, so that the King resolving to cut off his authority, rejected all the sures he made for any, and plainly shewed that his design was to crosse him in all he attempted. Lyfander hereupon told his friend low the case stood, that they must make no more addresses to himself, and being sensible of the disgrace expostulated with him about it, who let him understand that he could not endure to be overtopped by him; He then defired some imployment of him, wherein he might both fave his own credit, and do him fervice, wherein he promised to be faithfull. He then sent him to the Hellespont, where find-ding Spithridates the Persian to be offended by Pharnabazus, he brought him over to him with a great Treasure, and 200 Horse, although hereas-ter it was found that he took very hainoufly the diminishing of his repu-glory for his wisdom, valour, and courtesie, both at home and abroad; insomuch that the Spareans, in confidence of his abilities, and integrity, committed the Fleet also to his command, judging it most convenient for expedition,

21. Agestlaus in Asia prospered in the War to admiration, gaining great and that both the Armies might joyn the readilier upon occasion, that they should be in the hands of one man whom they could trust. But in this one thing he is accounted to have erred, in that not having respect to the publick good, he passed by many far more Eminent for prudence and gravity, and pitched upon Pifander, his wives brother (a man very bold, but meanly pra-Tibinifes by Etifed in bulinesse) for his Admiral. As he was going towards the Fleet, Gold fent into and Agefiland marching for Phrygia, Tithraustes (who having cut off the head of Tissaphernes had succeeded in his place) considering in how great States to War danger his masters affairs stood, sent Timosrates a Rhodian with much Persian egainst Lace- Gold into Greece, wherewith to corrupt the principal men in the Cities, and procure them to make War against the Lacedamonians. This was effected at Thebes and Argos; and the Atheniaus, though they had no Gold, yet were very ready to imbrace the War, believing that therein they should have the Chief command. Those that were corrupted then grievously inveighing against the Lacedamonians, procured that the chief Cities entred into a Combination against them. The Thebans knowing that they would not begin the War except first provoked, took occasion to 's it by the Locrian Opintians, whom they procured to quarrel with the Phocians, and their other Neighbours, about force grounds in question amongst them, concluding, that thereupon the Phocians would break into Locris. They did so, and did more hurt than they had received; whereupon Audocides, who had received much Gold, procured the Theban's to affift the Locrians. The Thebans then in-ration,

CHAP. II.

He is fent

the fame

into Afia by

SECT.4. Lace amonians at the instance of the Ephori. They fent out Agus their King, who led an Army into the Territories of the Eleans; but an Earth-quake hapning at his first entrance, which was counted ominous, he returned without any thing at all performed. The year after, he undertook another expedition, the Athenians, and all the other Confederates, except the Corinthians and Bassians, following him, wherein he forely afflicted all the Countrey, sparing the Citie Elis it felf, and though he retreated, yet the Garrison he left behind him, continuing these depredations all the next Summer, and the Winter following, the next Summer the Eleans were constrained to receive such conditions as their Enemies would give them. The Wall about Patra was demolished, Cyllene relinquished, five Towns delivered into the hands of the Spartans, and three to the Arradians; the management of the Affairs of the Temple belonging to Jupiter Olympius being onely left remaining to them.

Affairs of the Gracians Contemporary with

8. Not long after these things Agis died, having falln sick in his return Identified from Delphos. He had born to him by his wife Timen, a fon called Leuty- Com, News, or chides, but conceived at that time when Alcibiades sojourned at Sparen, by Platach, in whom there were great prefumptions that he was begotten. He had not been Agefila, 6with his wife of ten moneths before the Child was born; Timan her felf was Xenoth in the wont when the would play with it to call it Alcibiades more commonly than delandibut to Leutychides, as was acknowledged by her maids; and neither did Alcibiades goll. himself forbear to acknowledge that he had to do with her, saving, it was not our of any carnal affection, but our of a defire that those who should proceed from him might reign at Lacedamon; upon these grounds Agis owned not Leutychides for his fon, but told the Ephori he was none of his, divorcing also his Mother: but when he lay sick, having no Children, and moved by his A contention betwixt Leuprayers and tears, he owned him for his fon before many witnesses. After tychides and his death a great contention infued about the fuccession betwixe Lentychides Agefilaus for and Agefilaus brother to Agu, a man lame of one foot, but of a most noble the Spartan and valiant disposition. Agestlans was bred after the ordinary strict way, as Kingdom. not having expected the Kingdom being a younger brother, and yet was in great favour with the people, and pressing the illegitimation of his adversary had their ear; but one thing they much fluck at, which was an old Prophecie much urged by Diophites their Prophet, that it should go very hard with Sparta when it should have a lame King. Yet Lyfander, who had taken a great affection to him, answered, that by a lame King was not meant lame of a foor, rieth it, by the vyhich could be no hinderance to virtue, but one of spurions extraction; and herewith, and by his private interest, procured the sentence to passe for Age-

means of Lyfand.r.

9. Agesilans had not been a year in his Office, before that being to facrifize for his Countrey according to the custom, the entrails of the beast three times did not permit it, which being viewed by the Prophet, he foretold that a grievous conspiracy was hatched against him, and all Magistrates, both in Town and Countrey. Five dayes after this a notable confpiracy indeed was disclosed to the Ephori by one of the Complices, the head of which was Cinadon. They presently referring it to the Senate, it was thought fit that he should be fent out of the Citie, under prefence of some employment, and that some should go after him to make him reveal his fellows, which accordingly was done, and an ignominious death was executed upon them. After the execution Herodus of Syracuse came with news out of Phanicia, that a Fleet of 300 Gallies was prepared by Tiffaphernes, and the King, but upon what design was not known. The Lacedamonians moved at this, called the Deputies of their Confederates to Sparra to consult about it. Now Lylander had a great mind to return into Alia, desirous to relieve those his friends, who being by him placed in the Government of the Cities, ten in a place, were for their violence and great mildemeanours, either killed, or driven into banishment. He therefore perswaded Agesilans to undertake so noble and pious an expedition, and wrote to his friends in Afia, to defire of the State that he might be sent. Being perswaded, he offered his service on condition they would grant him thirty Affiftants, by whose directions and advice he SECT. 4. might manage the War; with 2000 choice men newly to be raifed, and 6000 of the Confederates: These were all decreed to him by the dealing of A.M. 2608. Lyfander, who procured himself to be sent as chief of the thirty, to which 01.95, 40,4, place he might well pretend for the great glory of his archievements, and his V. C. 357. friendship to Agestlaus, whom as he judged he had more obliged by procuring Anaxerxis this employment, than by the former courtefie of preferring him to the King-10. Having his Army and Provisions in a readinesse, he marched to Au-lie, that thence, after the example of Agamemnon, he might passe over into Asia; but going about to facrifize a Doe to the Goddesse, with which he thought the would be better pleased than the was with Agamemnon for his daughter, he was hindred by the Barrians from doing that which was contrary to their custom, and was constrained in a great chase to passe over without the Ceremony, the Omission of which he accounted as a bad presage, When he came to Ephesiu, it appeared that he onely bore the name, and Lyfander had all the credit and authority, all men making application to him, and observing him as a man of whom they had had former experience to exceed all men in earnestnesse to gratissie his friends, and destroy his Enemies. hEdypled by This much moved Agefilam, though a man of a most mild spirit (who was famous for bearing with any thing) and troubled also his own Collegues, so that the King resolving to cut off his authority, rejected all the sures he made for any, and plainly shewed that his defign was to crosse him in all he attempted. Lyfander hereupon told his friend ow the case stood, that they must make no more addresses to himself, and being sensible of the disgrace expostulated with him about it, who let him understand that he could not endure to be overtopped by him; He then defired some imployment of him, wherein he might both fave his own credit, and do him service, wherein he ter it was found that he took very hainoufly the diminishing of his repu-21. Agestlaus in Asia prospered in the War to admiration, gaining great glory for his wisdom, valour, and courtesie, both at home and abroad; insomuch that the Spartans, in confidence of his abilities, and integrity, committed the Fleet also to his command, judging it most convenient for expedition, and that both the Armies might joyn the readilier upon occasion, that they should be in the hands of one man whom they could trust. But in this one thing he is accounted to have erred, in that not having respect to the publick good, he passed by many far more Eminent for prudence and gravity, and pitched upon Pifander, his wives brother (a man very bold, but meanly pra-Tilhauftes by Etifed in bulinesse) for his Admiral. As he was going towards the Fleet, Gold fent into and Agefilans marching for Phrygia, Tithrauftes (who having cut off the promised to be faithfull. He then sent him to the Hellespont, where find-

ding Spithridates the Persian to be offended by Pharnabazus, he brought him over to him with a great Treasure, and 200 Horse, although hereafhead of Tiffaphernes had succeeded in his place) considering in how great States to War danger his mafters affairs flood, sent Timocrates a Rhodian with much Persian against Lace. Gold into Greece, wherewith to corrupt the principal men in the Cities, and procure them to make War against the Lacedamonians. This was effected at Thebes and Argos; and the Athenians, though they had no Gold, yet were very ready to imbrace the War, believing that therein they should have the Chief command. Those that were corrupted then grievously inveighing against the Lacedamonians, procured that the chief Cities entred into a Combination against them. The Thebans knowing that they would not begin the War except first provoked, took occasion to do it by the Locrian Opintians, whom they procured to quarrel with the Phocians, and their other Neighbours, about some grounds in question amongst them, concluding, that thereupon the Phocians would break into Locris. They did so, and did more hurt than they had received; whereupon Audocides, who had received much Gold, procured the Theban's to affift the Locrians. The Thebans then in-X x 2

SECT. 4. vaded Phocis, which they wasted, and presently did the Phocians send to Lacedamon to defire aid, shewing that they had not been the beginners of

340

12. The Lacedamonians not unwillingly imbraced this occasion of falling Newsplanton our with the Thebans, to whom they bore many grudges. They exacted the pia. tench par; affigned to Apollo at Decelea, refused to make War against the Pirate, perswading also the Corinibians, as they judged, to do the same; they remembred also how they had forbidden egelilam to facrifize, casting the facrifice from off the Altar, and would not follow him into Afia. They resolved now that they had no War in Greece, and that their affairs were in so good a condition in Asia, to curb their insolence. Lysander was then disparched to Phocis, where he should gather the Forces of the Confederates together, and thay for Paulanian the King, who was to bring the Forces of Plantaging. Sparta and the rest of the associates to Haliarim. He marching into Buotsa sando drew Orchomenus from the league of Thebei, and impatient of delay tarried not for Pansanias, who hovered about Tegan, but went with such Forces as he had already to Haliarus, which he fummoned, but in vain, the Thebans which already were in the City hindring the furrender. Upon refufal he led his mento the walls, and they of Thebes upon notice hereof hafted out of their City to help their friends, and falling upon Lyfander (whether aware of their coming or not is uncertain) flew him in the place, and routed his Forces, of which were flain 1000 men, and of the Thebans 300. This was the end of Lyfander, which he partly brought upon himfelf by his eagerneffe to make this Expedition, being in his all age fallen into melancholy, which rendred His character, him more pevish than usual. He lest a great name behind him, but purchafed rather by his good successe than Virtue. He would neither spare for cruelty nor falfehood to compaffe his defigns, taking no estimate of any thing by any balance but that of profit. He scoffed at such as said . that those who were descended of Hercules (amongst which he was reckoned, though not of the royal families) ought to manage Wars without deceit, faying, that where the Lyon's skin would not ferve, the Foxes was to be fowed to it. A defign of his was discovered after his death, whereby he intended to have taken the Regal power out of the two families, and have made them common to all in general. To this purpose a writing was found containing a speech he intended to offer to the People; which Agefilans would have published, that it might have been feen what kind of Commowealths-man he was; but was diffinaded by Lacratidas chief of the Ephori, who faid, that Lyfander was not to be digged up again, but rather that speech to be buried with him. Notwithflanding his ambition, yet he died poor, which rendred him the more famous. fo that to do honour to his memory the Spartans imposed a mulch upon certain Citizens, who being contracted with his Daughters before his death, afterwards when his poverty appeared, refused to marry them.

13. The Thebass having loft fo many men in the late fight, thought they had but small cause to triumph, counting their losse equal with that of the Enemy. The day after, when they understood that the Phocians and others had retreated, they took more courage; but again, when they perceived Paufanias to draw near, they effeemed themselves in no small danger. Yet the day following the Athenians joyning themselves to them, and Paulanias not moving forwards, they then had no small confidence in the goodnesse of their Fortune. Paufamas being doubtful what to do, called a council of the confederates to confult, whether he had best by main force or by truce recover the body of Lylander, who for that it lay near the Town walls, and it was very dangerous to fetch it off by firong hand, concluded a truce was to be defired; and the rather, for that the Corinthians refused to joyn with them, and the Enemy had good store of Horse which they wanted. The Thebans refused to give up the dead bodies, except the Lacedamonians would ingage to depart out of Breotia, and therefore to their great grief they were constrained to do it, and in their retreat the Thebans grown very infolent, killed fuch as staid behind never so little in the Villages. The Expedition was unfortunate to Paulanias fen- the Spartans in general; but especially to Paulanias, who at his seturn was Sect. 4. renced to die. accorded capitally for not meeting Lyfander in convenient time, according to agreement, for that he had not by fight but truce recovered the flain, and difmissed such Athenians as had been taken in the Pirans; and listly, had not appeared at his tryal, Being condemned he fled to Tegen, where afterwards he fell fick and died. 14. The Lacedamonians awakened by their loffe, and now knowing for certain that money had been fent out of Afa to the feveral Cities, which had November 12. moved them to take arms, they thought themselves in some danger, and re-Assista, called Agestlam to defend his Country. He having had successe in the War Apothognat, fuitable to his Military skill and valour, was now gathering of greater Forces, Xemph, 14 wherewith he intended to march into the higher Countries against the King himfelf; but notwithstanding this, and that it troubled him to leave Afra, yet he refolved to obey, acknowledging in his letter to the Ephori, that then a General truly and juffly commands, when he is governed by the Lavys and

Agefilaus re-called out of

CHAP. II.

Migistrates, upon which account he faid, he would follow the letter, if not prevent it (feeing they had fet him a day, and that he commanded not for himself but the City and Confederates) although he had subdued a great part of Afia, overthrown the Barbarians, and had made great preparations for the War in Ionia. He left Euxenus the Harmostes of Asia with a guard of 2000 Soldiers, but making all provision for his Country, draw over many out of the Cities to the Service. Having passed the Helle pont into the Cherrone fin, he held the fame way that Xernes formerly had done, when in the mean time the Ephors and Arificdemus guardian to Agefipolis the young King. with an Atmy of 15000 overthrevy that of the Leaguers, confifting of 20000 (vvhereof 13000 bore heavy Armour) making great flaughter, though they loft no more than eight of their number. Care was taken that Agrifficus should have notice of this successe (with the Confederates in Asia) who grieved onely that Greece should destroy so many of it's own Worthies. As he passed through Thrace, he would not ask any of the Barbarians leave to go through their Countries; but onely fent to know whether he should paffe as a Friend or an Enemy. All friendly received and conducted him, except the Tralles, who having formerly fold the passage to Xerxes, now also demanded of him 100 Talents, and as many women. He jeered at them, asking why they came not to receive what was demanded? and going forwards made great flaughter of them. The King of Macedonia, when he asked the question of him, said he would consider of it; so let him, said he; but in the mean time we will proceed in our journy, which boldnesse so awed the King, that he suf-

15. Having passed through Thessalie notwithstanding all opposition, by order of the Ephori he invaded Bæotia, judging alwaies obedience belt, though he could have wished, and had intended first to have been better provided. As he invaded Baotia the Sun was eclypfed (Angust 24 according to vadeth Begita, the Aftronomical Table) and he received the news of the overthrow of Pi-Where he ob- funder upon the Coasts of Asia by Pharnabazus, and Conon the Athenian, taineth a Vi- who being for his skil in Sea-matters in great request with the Persian, imday againt the Leaguers, proved his interest for the restitution of the Fortune of his Country. Upon this report he put on a good countenance, less should discourage his men, telling them Pifander the Admiral was flain, but that his Fleet had obtained the Victory. But now in Bootia, when he was come near to Coronea, the Leaguers opposed themselves against him, being the Bootians, Atherians, Argives, Corinthians, Eubwans, Anianes, and both the Locrians, with whom was fought fuch a battel as had not hapned in that Age. At the fift onfet Agesilaus had the better in one wing, but the Thebans in the other, and being in the purfute were forced to retire to help their friends, where he charging upon the Front of the Thebans, and not on the Rear, as he might have done, did great execution, and was wounded himself, notwithstanding the valour of his Guard, confishing of Fifty stout young-men, lately fent him from Sparta to do him honour. At length he had the better of it, and dif-

The Sun Eclypfed Auguff 24. and Agefilaus infered him to passe quietly.

CHAP. II.

342

ECT. 4. miffed un-hurt 80 of the Enemies, who had taken Sanctuary near hand, after which he went to Delphos, and confectated the tenth of his spoils, which amounted to no leffe than 100 Talents. In the mean time Gylus the Polemarchus brake out into Locris, where the Soldiers beeing greedy of plunder, were fallen upon by the Inhabitants, whom though they repelled at first. yet night coming on they were so intangled, that Gylus himself and very many others were flain, and all of them had been loft, but that the Alarm being taken by the Camp, relief was thence fent to them. After this, the Soldiers were difmissed to their several homes, and Agestians went by ship to Sparea. Yet notwithstanding the War continued, the Athenians, Bastians, Argives, and their Confederates, making excursions from Corinth, which they had made the feat of Warre; and the Lacedamonians with their allies from

16. The Corinthians confidering that their grounds were wasted, and many of them flain, because of their being so near to the Enemy, but their Confederates free from these mischiefs, the most and best of them defired Peace, and began to confider of it amongst themselves. This being understood by the Argives, Buotians, Athenians, and especially by such amongst themfelves as had received the Persian Gold, and caused the War, they fearing Corinth would return again to the Lacedammians, to prevent this, they refolved to maffacre all fuch as were for the Peace. This they performed on a Feltival, when most were got together, sparing none that rook Sanctuary in religious places, so that most of the elder fort were killed, and the younger fled our of the City. Many of them, by the intreaty of their friends, and upon the Oath of the Magistrates, that they should be safe, returned home within a short time; but seeing plainly the City was in the way to ruine by the tyranny of those that governed, as that for Corinth it was to be called Argos, the Laws of which City they must be forced to receive; moreover being fensible that they had no more power at home than meer strangers, some of them resolved it was better, by attempting the freedom of their Countrey, to die in the quarrel, if it should fall out, than to live in that slavish condition.

demonians within the long walls, who having no great force with him, fortified himself as well as he might, which being understood at Argos, they flocked out thence to affift their friends, and the Lacedemonians opposing themselves they came to a fight, wherein after much difficultie and various Fortune, the Lacedamonians were conquerours, making great flaughter of their Enemies. This Victory was the more eminent, for that fo fmall a number had vanquished such multitudes, after which, they put to the Sword a Garrison of Bassians, which held the Haven called Lochaus. 17. Praxitas pursuing his Victory, brake down part of the walls to make a paffage for his men, and then going on in the way towards Megara, took two Towns, wherein he left a Garrison and departed, after which followed onely fome light bickerings, till at length the Lacedamonians issuing out of Lochaus, with their friends belieged Corinth, at which time the Athenians fewing they might paffe the long walls and invade their territories, came out of the City with Masons and Workmen, and repaired that part which was towards them. The Lacedamonians grudging that the Argives should flourish at home, and prosper abroad, sent Agesilans with an Army against them, who laying waste all their Territories, brake through to Corinth, and took Acofilius fent the walls which the Athenians had repaired, his Brother Teleutias Admiral, taking the ships and Arcenals upon the Gulf. Returning home, he was not long after fent out again, who when he came to Corinth, thought to have furprised it, but the Citizens aware of it, called in a Garrison of the Athenians, under the command of Iphicrates, and thereby prevented him. At this time Ambassadors came to him from several parts, and amongst the rest from Burtia, to know what terms of Peace he would propound; but he carried himself so high, that he would take no notice of them; though Pharax interceded out of an invererate grudge he bare towards the Thebans. But against the Argives.

In profecution hereof they let in Praxitas Governour of Sicyon for the Lace-

Stirs at Co-

nath.

before their departure there came news that the party he had left in Lechem SECT. 4 was defeated by I phrevater, at which unufual meffage being much affected he leaped our from his Throne, and in all hafte went to relieve them, but in his way mer with three Horf-men, who acquainted him how face his affistance would be. Hereupon he returned, and the next day fent for the Ambassadors to hear what they had to say; but they something incouraged at what had bapued, and minding to require him for his difrespect, made then no mention of peace, but desired leave to go to Co-18. He easily apprehending them, told them they should the next day see their friends in the Town rejoycing, and the defeat of his men, which was the true cause of their defire to go to Corinth, and accordingly wasting all about the Citie, went to the Walls, and having in vain provoked the Inhabitan's to fight, marched to the Lecham the place of the defeat, after which he dismissed the Ambassadors, not suffering them to go to Cerinih. His Army now beholding with their eyes the monument of the late mischance, were Sorely afflicted, having not at all been accultomed to such a fight, onely the Parents, Kindred, and relations of the flain, according to the Laconian cufrom feemed to rejoyce in the Calamity of their Countrey. Having re-inforced the Garrison of Lecham, he returned home his men, thunning the light and fight of all men, out of shame for what had happed in this expedition contrary to their former fortune. But Iphicrates after his departure, in confidence of his good fuccesse proceeded, and reduce I such places as had been taken by Praxitas & Agesilaus. After these things the Acheans being put to it by the Acarnanians, who endeavoured to wreft from them Calydone, a Town formerly belonging to the Atolians, fent to Lucedamon, and expolulated with them for not affilling them, who alwayes were ready to follow them into all places. The State upon this complaint fent Agefilans to aid them, who invading Acarnania, wasted the Countrey, made prey of most of their Cattel, and being oppored by them, was much put to it on the mountainous and precipitous places, by Darts and Arrows; but coming to hand-stroaks, they were presently put to flight, and 300 of them slain. Then consumed he all things with fire and fword, and attempted fome Towns by the perswasion of the Acheans; but in vain. Now Autumn growing on , he could not be staid by their intreaties to prevent the Acarnanians from fowing their Corn. telling them they were not well advised in their request; for his intention being to return the next year, how much more Corn they should have upon the ground, by so much would they be the more defirous of the report whereof the Athenians seated in a mid-land Countrey, and thereupon more obnoxious to damage in their Corn, and in great danger of losing their Towns, made an agreement with the Achaans, and entred into a fociety of War with the Spartans. This War being over, the Lacedamonians not thinking it fafe to contend with the Athenians and Baotians , whilest the Argives were at their back, they resolved to send their Forces against them, Assemble the The conduct of them falling to Agesipolis, the other King, he would not underrake it, till he had consulted both the Oracle of Inpiter Olympius, and that of Apollo at Delphos, concerning the lawfulnesse of the War, because the Argives defired a Truce, but being satisfied therein, he invaded, and wasted their Territories; yet ere long terrified with divers prodigies, he retreated without any confiderable thing done. In the mean time Pharnabazus and Conon, having overthrown the Lacedamonians in a Sea-fight at Cnidus, freed the Greek Cities from the Lecedemonian Governours, which Conon fuggested to the other as the onely way to make them his own, and not to attempt to deprive them of liberty, which would force them to combine against him, and thereby give him work enough. He attempted Seftm and Abydus; but Dercyllidas having fecured them, he loft his labour, and gave order to Conon to procure a Navy from the Cities upon the Hellespone against the Spring, being

19. And according to his promise, the Winter being over, he returned, at

BOOK II

SECT. 4. much incensed against the Lacedamenians, and resolving to invade their Dominions. At Spring he did so, and having strengthened the Enemies of Sparia, as much as pollible, he furnished Conon with a Fleet, and money to rebuild the long Walls of the Pirami, than which Conon perswaded him he could not do any thing more suitable to his own interest involved in the damage of the L-cedamonians, and gaining the good will of the Athenians, The Spartans understanding that their own affairs must necessarily decline as much as those of Athens were advanced, (notwithstanding Teleptias brother to Agestians had recovered the Soveraignty of the Gulf of Corinth) yet thought it necessary as much as in them lay to prevent it. 20. Lest Conan should again recover the Islands to the Athenian state. they thought good to advertise Teribanus, another of the Persian Satrapaes, hereof, hoping either to draw him to their party, or at least to procure that Analcidas fent no more furtherance should be afforded to the design of Conon. To this purinto Afia by pole they fent Antaloidas to him, to lay open these things, and to try what the propofals could be done with him about a peace, who according to his instructions, to gain it the more easily, fully left to his disposal the Greek Cities in Asia, counter-work provided those without were but lest to their own freedom. Teribazus liked well of this, but the dibenians, Bastians, Corinthians, and Argives, having also disparched away their Ambassadors upon report of his employment, refused to assent upon their own private interests. The Athenians feared, if the Islands should be left to their own liberty, lest they should lose Lemnus, Imbrus, and Sciras. The Thebans, lest they should be compelled to set at liberty the Cities of Beesia, and the Argives concluded, that then they must lay aside all thoughts of Corinth, which they had conceived great hopes to make their own. Their diffention hindred Teribazes from concluding a peace with the Lacedamonians without the Kings special Warrant, but underhand he supplied them with money to maintain their power at Sea, and committing Conon to custody, went to the King to know his pleasure.

21. The King upon his giving account how affairs flood, fent Struthas to take care of the maritime affairs, who being fensible what damage Agesilans had done his mafter, was inclinable towards the Athenians, which being understood at Lacedamon, they fent Thymbro into Asia to keep him in action, who at first forely afflicted the places subject to his command, but at length was flain, and his Forces defeated. At this time certain Rhodians being banithed by the people who had the power in their own hands, came to Sparta, and complained that the Athenians had brought the Island under their power by that kind of Government. The Sparians understood their interest in fo powerfull an Island, and sent Ecdicus with eight Gallies to revive, if possible, the Oligarchy which was agreeable to their own model; and in this Fleet they ordered him to convey Diphridas into Afia, who was to gather up the Reliques of Thymbro's Army, and renew the War against Struthas. He ordered his affairs very well, being a man fitter for the purpose than Thymbro was. But Ecdicus fearfull of the power of the people did nothing at Rhodes, into his room Telentias was dispatched, and with a Fleet of 27 Gal-lies did that for which he was fent. The Athenians hearing of these morions Thrafybulus fent out 7 brafybulus against the Spartans, who despairing of Rhodes went infent againft the Lacedemo- to the Hellespont, where in Thrace he reconciled two Princes, Odryses and nions. Seuther, and made them friends of the Athenian State. Departing thence, he recovered several Cities, and amongst the rest Byzantium and Chalcis, were joined to the Lacedamonians) he had good successe, taking several places, and wasting the Territories of the other. . 22. From Lesbus he fayled victoriously unto Rhodes, where he obtained money from the Inhabitants of Afgendus; but his men after the receit thereof dealing injuriously with them, they issued out in great anger, and killed him in his Tent. This is he who if pirtue be to be valued without fortune, one doubts whether he be not to be preferred before all others, feeling that for faithfulresse, constancy, greatnesse of mind, and love towards his Countrey, whence going to the Island Lesbus (all the Towns whereof except Mitylene

Is flain.

no man is to be preferred before him; and whereas it hapned rarely to any SECT. to free his Countrey, from the flavery of one man, he did it from the Tyranny of thirty. But whereas no man excelled him in worth, many overcopped him in nobility, and hereupon it fell our, that though in the Pelojonnesian War he doing many things of himself, Alcibiades did nothing without him, yet the eminency of that man eafily swallowed the glory and profit of all atchievements. The Lacedamonians having notice of what he had done, and fearfull of what the friendship of Pharnabazus to the Athenians might produce, though they had nothing to fay against Dercyllidas, yet sent Anaxibins out to restore their fortune, who had prevailed with the Ephori for this employment, and promifed great matters if he were but affifted with money and Thipping, They gave him three Gallies, and pay for 1000 men. He coming to Abydus skirmished with Phurnabazus, and then getting three ships more, infested the Athenians. But the Athenians being follicitous for keeping what Thrasjbulus had recovered, though they had nominated Argyrius to his place, yet now fent Iphicrates with eight Gallies and 1200 men, who was lately returned from the Corinthian War. He fetting upon Anaxibius whilest he carelessy went abroad, slew him as he was going to Abydus, and with him twelve more Governours of Towns, and thence betook himfelf into the Charronefus. 23. At this time Legina was withdrawn by Eteonicus from the Athe- Xenoph, lib.5. nians, who thereupon belieged it, but to no effect. At Sea both fides as it Diod. were played the Pyrats with each other for some time : But Telentras being made General of the Lacedamonian Fleet, fell in upon the Haven at Athens, where he took some Vessels laden, with the men, and putting the Citizens into a great fright, in his return preyed upon the Coasts, whence he took many Fisher-boats with other booty, the places being not aware of any such things. In the mean while Antalcidas the Spartan returned with Teribazus from the Persian King, having concluded a League offensive and defensive with him, in case the Athenians and others would not consent to their proposals for a general peace. He coming to Sea took eight Athenian Gallies which came from Thrace, under the Command of one Thrafibulus, and making up the Fleet to the number of 80 fayl, with 20 Syracufian Gallies, and others which he procured of Teribazus, obtained the Soveraignty of the Seas, The Athenians were startled hereat, fearing the issue of this War might be the fame with that of the Peloponnesian, especially the Persian being now Confederate with the Lacedamonians, and the Inhabitarts of Agina infesting their Borders; upon all which accounts they were very defirous of peace. The Lacedamonians also being much straightned in maintaining Garrisons in fo many places, both affected to them, & weary of them, began to have enough of War, having moreover much trouble about Corinth. The Argives not ignorant that War was decreed against them, and that their old shifts and pretences would stand them in no stead, were also ready to imbrace peace, They all then fent their Agents to Teribazus to know what was proposed by Artaxerxes Mnemon.

24. Teribazsu shewing them the Kings Seals, read the Contents of the writing, which imported, that he thought it just that the Cities in Asia , the Islands Clazomenze and Cyprus, should be under his Jurisdiction; and all the rest, lettle and great, should be left to their own freedom, except Lemnus, Imbrus, and Scirus, which having been time out of mind subject to the Athenians, he thought it fitting they (hould fo continue. And fuch as would not admit of thefe conditions, be with the reft of the Confederates would profecute with War, both at Sea and Land, to the atmost ability. The Agents returning home, all the States imbraced the conditions, except the Thebans, who were unwilling to fet at liberty the Cities of Baotia; but Agefilam making preparations to invade them, they were so far awed thereby as to receive them. He constrained also the Argives to leave Corinsb, from which the The peace of Authors of the late massacre then flying, the Exiles returned home. These made betwixt the Lacedamonians and Athenians with their followers, after A.M.3618 the ending of the Peloponne sian War, and casting down of their Walls, being 01.98. 4112. called the peace of Antaloidas; for so it was termed, from the procurer, being V.C.367, indeed the shamefull betraying of those Cities into the hands of Artaxerxes, 18 for which Agesilaus had prosecuted the War in Asia. 25. The Lacedemonians were they who had the benefit thereof, being the Protectors and Patrons of it, and grew so high upon the successe, that now they resolved to chastize such of the Associates as had in the late War born greater affection to their adversaries than themselves. First they fell upon the Mantineans as guilty of this Crime, whom by their King Agest polis (for Agefilaus, because of the friendship that passed betwixt his father and them, defired to be excused) they forced first to break down their Walls by turning the River upon them, which ran through the Citie, and then to divide themselves into Villages. After this they forced the Phliasians to receive their Exiles, and made War upon the Olynchians in Thrace, at the request of the Acanthians and Apollonians, who accused them of clandestine practices with the Athenians and Thebans. By these courses they hoped that all the small Towns in Greece, upon occasion, would willingly follow them in their Wars as Authors of their liberty; and the great Cities, having loft their Dependents, would be unable to make opposition. And in particular they had conceived an emulation against Olynthus, now grown so mighty, that not onely the commanded her neighbour Towns, but was become terrible The practices to places far remote, and to Sparia her felf. The Olynthians had taken a great part of Macedonia, together with Pella the Metropolis of that Kingdom, and now imitating the old pretence of the Lacedamonians to fet at liberty the places over which Amynias did Tyrannife, had almost driven him out of his Dominions, and taken all to themselves. They of Acanhus and Apollonia further adding, that either they must War upon Olynthus, or become subject to it, and fight shortly in its defence, Endamidas was fent before with 2000 men. He arriving in Thrace, fortified the Cities, and recovered Posidaa, which had affociated it felf to the Olynthians, and managed his affairs with fuccesse answerable to such force. In the mean time his brother Phabidas, according as he had requested of the Ephori, was employed in raising the main body of the Army, and having compleated the leavy marched away for Thrace to joyn with him. 26. At this time the Thebans were much divided amongst themselves, be- Xenoth, at sin-

346

The Spartans hercupon grew high.

of the Olya-

ing headed by two Polemarchi, Ismenias, and Leontidas. When Phæbidas pra, Platado, in was come on his journey as far as Thebes , I smenias out of his hatred to the Agashian Lacedamonians would not see him, but his Collegue berrayed Cadman the Citadel of Thebes into his hands, feized on Ismenias, and got the command of the whole Citie, whereat those of the contrary faction to the number of 400 fled to Athens. Then another being chosen into the place of Ismenias, Leontidas went to Sparta, where he found the Ephori and people much dif-pleased with what Phabidas had done, being both against the League, and without any Commission from them; and such as were Enemies to Agesilans, especially aggravated the matter, labouring to draw him into suspition about Cadmea the Citadel of Thebes betrayed.

> it. He otherwise as great both a commender and practiser of Justice as any, yet took upon him to defend the fact, faying, that Phaebidas was worthy to be punished if he had done any thing that was hurtfull to the Commonwealth; but if it was profitable, then according to the ancient cultom he was not The fact is bound, in such cases where haste is required, to stay for a Warrant. Followunjuftly exing herein his ambition, or giving way to his passion (which most shewed it cufed by Agefelf against the Thebans) he not onely indemnified Phabidas, but perswaded filaus. the Citie to own what he had done, to keep the Castle, and prefer Archias and Leontidas, who had betrayed it, to the chief command of Thebes. The rest of the Gracians were fore aggrieved at what was done; but the Confederates durst not contradict it, and each Citie joyned one Commissioner to three fent from Sparta, who all together should take Cognisance of, and judge the cause of Ismenias. He was accused before them of having savoured the Barbarians, and held intelligence with the Persian ; that he had received SECT. part of the money sent from him to corrupt the Gracians, and together with Andocides, had been the great incendiary who kindled and fomented their intestine broils. He answered severally and apart to all; but being believed to have attempted great and pernicious things, was condemned and put to death. Then was the power established in Leonisdes and his Complices, who did more in favour of the Lacedamonians than was defired of

against the Olynthians.

27. Things thus prospering, the Lacedamonians more cheerfully pursued the War against Olynthus. They sent General thither Teleutias, who with the help of Amyntas the Macedonian, and Derdas Prince of Elimea, overby the Spartans threw the Olynchians under their walls, and wasting their grounds, for that Summer was ended, withdrew to their Winter quarters. But the next year when he returned, the Olymbians fallied out against him, whom to repel, he fending a party which drave them back beyond a River which ran by the Town, and followed them over, they then thinking they had his men at an advantage, turned back upon them, and flew to the number of 100. He being in a great chafe hereat, went in to the rescue with all his Forces, and following them within bow-shot from the walls, his men were fore galled by those that stood on the Turrets, and forced to give back, and then being hotly charged he lost his life, with many others, so that the rest clearly put to the rout, and shifting for themselves to several places, the strength of this Army was broken, which defeat Xenophon chargeth upon the passion of Teleutias, shewing how dangerous it is in the Leader of an Army. The Lacedemonians having notice of what had hapned, dispatched away Agesipolis their King with all convenient speed into Thrace, who upon better advantages invathof a Fea- ding the Olynthians, took Torone one of their confederate Towns, and harrazed the Country, but at Midfummer by extremity of heat got a Fever, of which he died the feventh day, being much lamented by Agefilans his Colleague, for their long familiarity, though emulated by him. Being put into Honey and brought home, there he was interred with Royal rices, and Polybiades was sent to command the Army, who besieging the Olynthians, at length forced them by famine to yield on these terms : To have the same Olymbus taken tengen to the three points of the Lacedamonians, and to follow themas affociates whither foever they should lead them in their Wars. 28. In the mean time the Philasians grown considers upon the absence of Agesipolis, began to act very insolently and unjustly against the Exiles which of late they were made to re-admit. The Exiles complained of them at Lacedamon, and they thereupon in their absence put a musch upon them. which understanding, they still continued and praied justice from that State. At length the Ephori resolved upon War, and Agesilans was sent against the Phliafians, who thereupon offering largely to do all things fitting, he refuled them, faying, he must have deeds and not words, to which now without further confirmation he could give no credit. They asking what he would demand, he required their Castle to be delivered up to him, which being utterly refused, he besieged the City. They held out longer than he expected, because the Magistrate suffered them not to eat above half of the ordinary proportion, and by means of one Delphion, who with 300 affiftants, imprisoned such as spake of a surrender. But at length consumed with famine, they defired a Truce, to fend Commissioners to Sparea to treat of Peace. The Philass Agesilans stomached that they should passe him by, and therefore sending his en subdued by friends to the City, he obtained that the matter should be referred back to him. He ordered that so should be chosen of the Exiles, and as many others.

Is flain,

who should determine which Citizens should be suffered to live, and which put to death, and that then power should be given them to make Laws for the Government of the City. Whilst these things should be done he lest a Garrison in the Town, and so departed, having spent Twenty moneths in this

29. All things thus falling out to the Spartans according to their wifh, they Yy2 judged their Empire sufficiently established; but another event (as Xenophon Xenoph. at print gravely discourseth of divine vengeance) taught the contrary, it being clear, Diodorus ad both from the Histories of Greeks and Barbarians, that God suffereth not to escape unpunished wicked and ungodly actions. They had sworn not long be- Plutach & fore to leave the Cities to their own liberty, and yet they kept in their hands com agent the Citadel at Thebes, and therefore being formerly invincible, were now in Pelopide, sufficiently plagued by those alone whom they had injured. There was one Phillidas Secretary to the present Polemarchi of Thebes, who being not at all suspected by his Masters, went to Athens where the Exiles lay, and there entered into a conspiracy with Mello one of them, for the killing of the Polemarchi, and recovery of their Countries liberty. Mello and fix others being let in by Phillidas, were in womens apparrel brought in to the Polemarchi as Courtezans, whilst they were drinking and celebrating the Feast of Venus at the end of their Office, whom they stabbed with daggers hid under their glothes; after which they did as much to Leonides the chief revolter, as he lay in his bed, Mello being easily admitted to him without suspition. Then went they

Thehee reso. vered by the Exiles.

to the common prison, and killing the Keeper ser at liberty their friends, when now they called the people together, and exhorted them to stand in defence of their native liberty. They presently besieged the Castle, wherein the Lacedemonian Governour feeing the alacrity of the affailants, was forced to yield upon this condition, to go out with his Army, and for that was put to death at his return to Sparta. The Thebans then flew fuch as they could come by, who fided with Leontides, and, too rigorously, extended the same punishment to their children.

30. The Ephori follicited by the Exiles that fled to Sparta, and moved by Xenoth, & the authority of Agefilans (who pretended a sufficient quarrel, for that Plutanth. Archias and Leontides were flain) fent Cleombrotus their King against the Thebans now in the depth of Winter. He in his passage slew those whom Phillidas had let out of prison, to the number of 150, who kept watch upon the mountains, but did nothing farther confiderable, onely he left Sphodrias Governour of Thespa to raise new Forces, and be a resuge to the discontented party amongst the Thebans, and so returned. Yet herewith were the Athenians exceedingly affrighted, infomuch that one they put to death, who had conspired with the Theban Exiles, and condemned another who fled upon it. The Thebans also despaired of being able to graple with the Lacedamonians, and therefore betook themselves to a politick device, which was invented by Pelopidas and Gorfidas principal of the late Conspirators. A Merchant was fent to Sphodrias, then lying at Thespis, a rash and ambitious man, to perswade him to fall upon the Piraus or Haven of Athens, as a work very grateful to his superiours, for thereby he should cut off the Athenian power at Sea, and he might be fure the Thebans would not affift them being already too much incenfed. He pricked forwards by these conceits, invaded Action as far as Eleusine; but there his design being known, and his Soldiers unwilling to proceed any further, as not sufficiently pre-

Sphodrias invadeth Attica by the cunning of fome

31. The Athenians cast into prison the Spartan Ambassadors as conscious of xenath. fuch an unlawful act; but they utterly renounced the least knowledge of it, Plutard. and promifing Sphodrias should answer it with his life, they were content to expect the justice of the State upon him. The Ephori called him to account indeed, and yet though he appeared not, was he acquitted, to the great admiration of all men, especially because of the author of his acquirment, which was Agefilaus. For the King, though at first he refused several times to.

yed by his fon hear any thing in his behalf; yet Cleonymus the 18n of Sphodrias beloved by Archidamus, Archidamus, made such means to him, that at length being very indulgent procureth him to his children, he excused the matter, and saying, he held Sphodrias to be indemnity, an honest man, and that the Commonwealth stood in need of such Soldiers, whence the he got him acquitted, to his great dishonour. The Athenians hereupon out joyn with the of indignation joyned themselves to the Thebans, and the Baotians and they fent to the Cities under the command of Sparta, to draw them to their party, pared for fuch an enterprize, he was forced to return.

which they effected with most, they grouning under the yoak of Lacedamon. Sect. 4 They appointed a Common-councel to be held at A hens, for carrying on the War, made up of one out of every confederate City, by which course and other wayes of felf-denial, the Athenians recovered much authority, having constituted their Captains, Timotheus the Son of Conon, Chabrias, and Callistratus.

32. The Lacedamonians to counterwork them, took off their severity Diodonus ad from their Subjects which had not yet revolted, whereby they kept them falt 01. 101. 44. 1. to them, and renewing Military discipline, fent A oefilaus into Bartia with Xemph, a great Army: for Cleambratus liked nor the cause so well see in page in it. Plainto. a great Army; for Cleombrotus liked not the cause so well as to ingage in it; and thereupon he was forced to lay afide his excuse of superannuation (being above 40 years older than one of ripe age) and submitted to the employment. The Thebans opposing themselves against him with the Athenians and others, took an hill, where by direction of Chabias, they received him carelelly, with their shields let down to their knees, and their lances advanced, which courage of theirs as it feemed made him to retreat, and so having done great damage to their Country, and lost many of his men, he returned, leaving the Horse still to make excursions, under the commands of Phabidas. Several skirmishes then hapned after his departure, in one of which Phab das himfelf was flain, with 300 of his followers. This made the Theb.ins take more Arcfilaus unother fruitless against the Bantians, courage, and many then revolted to them. The Spartans fent a party to reinforce the Garrison of Thespis, and in the beginning of Spring prevailed with Agesilaus to undertake another Expedition, which was performed to little purpose. He broke a vein in his sound thigh, and the blood caused such an inflammation, that though opening a vein at his ancle gave him some case, yet at his return he was forced to keep his bed for a long time, the blood at the orifice having ran night and day, till at length he swooned, which stopped the flux of it. The year after Cleombrottu was again fent out; but the The... bans and Athenians disputing the passage with him in his way, after he had lost 40 men he returned. By these consticts the I hebans were so exercised, that they became excellent Soldiers, as Antalcidas faid jeeringly to Agestians at his return, that he was very well rewarded by them, whom without either will or knowledge he had taught to fight.

33. The Confederates being met at Lacedamon, accused themselves of idlenesse, for that they had not stroven with the Athenians at Sea, and being now confident they could starve them in the City, they rigged a Fleet of 70 ships for that purrpose. And hereby they for some time as it were befieged Athens, fo that the Corn-ships durst not approach, till Chabrias overthrew them in fight, and brought in plenty of provisions. The Lacedemonians preparing to fend new Forces into Racotia, the Thebans defired of their friends at Athens to invade Peloponnessus by Sea, to divert them; which they readily did, under conduct of Timotheus, the Thebans at the same time taking feveral Towns upon their borders. The Spartans fent out one Nicolochus to Sea against Timotheus, who not staying for fix Gallies of Ambracia, which he expected, with 55 fail fet upon the Athenian Fleet confifting of 60, and was worked. Hereupon Timothens erected a Trophy, but Nicolochus getting the fix ships of Ambracia, went and offered battel again, and Timothens not stirring erected another Trophy as a Conquerour. But Timotheus mending his thips, made up his Fleet above 70 Veffels, and prevailed at Sea. Xenoph, lib, 6, The Thebans having got all the Bassian Ciries into their power invaded Pho-desirous of a Peace. The Thebans with 500 men went against Orchomenus, held by a Garrison of the Lacedamonians, which fallying out against them, a hot dipute ensued, wherein, although the Sparians were double the number, yet they were beaten, which thing had not happened in former Ages. This added courage to the Thebans, and their military glory daily increasing, it now became evident that they Brove for the Soveraignty of Greece, With

The Lacede. monians beacis, to the succour of which Cleombrotus was sent from Sparta, and there Diodorus. the affociates both of the one fide and the other met; but the Athenians thinking now that the Thebans became too potent by their affiltance, were

CHAP. II.

Ermisordas

him in the tha, wherein

he is flain,

SECT. 4. this year Hermeds of Methymna concluded his History of Sicily, which confifled of 10. or, according to lome, of 12 books.

34. The next being the second of the 101 Olympiad, the 30th of the reign Diedorus ad of Areaxerxes Mnemon, Hippodamus being Archon : Areaxerxes having a Olymp. 101. design to make War upon Egypt, and to use the Gracians therein, sent to and.

The Thebans periwade them to agreement. They being weary of War consented to it, left out of the all the Cities being to be fet at liberty, and the Garrisons drawn out; onely the general peace. Thebans refusing to quit the Cities of Baotia were not comprised in the League, being very confident in their good fortune, and much incouraged by feveral excellent good Soldiers amongst them, the principal of which were Pelopidas, and Epaminondas, who from a poor Philosopher became the most renowned for martial affairs of all Greece. This change produced great Commotions in the feveral Cities, but especially in those of Peloponnesus, which by the Lacedamonians had been subjected to Oligarchy, and now having the popular Government restored, knew not how to life it moderately, but by unjust decrees opposed many worthy men, driving some into Exile, and selling their goods. Great flirs especially hapned amongst the Corinthians, Megarians, and Phliasians, whilest those that were unjustly banished endeavoured by force or policy to restore themselves. Those that were for Democracy were maintained by the Athenians, and the Spartans affifting the Oligarchical faction, the peace was but for a small time observed by these two States, whilest both favoured such as bare most affection to their form of Government, and so they renewed the War: Such is the fruit of Antimonarchical Government, viz. nothing but fedition, confusion, and disorcyra, where the Spartans befieging the Citie, the Inhabitants almost all fa- Diodons ad mished, yet sallied out, and killing Mnesippus their General, with many o- Olymp. 101, thers, the rest hearing of the coming of Iphicrates the Athenian with a ann 3. great Fleer, with such plunder as they had got, disgracefully raised their siege and departed. At this time the Plateans having a defign to commit them-

35. They (a) contested first about the Zacynthians, and afterwards in Cor- (a) Xembias

Platea and Thefpis demo-

The peace

continucth

but a fhort

time.

350

selves to the Protection and Alliance of Athens, the Thebans thereupon demolished the Town, and not long after did the same by Thespis. The ruin of Plataa is by (b) Paufanias referred to the next year when Aften was Ar- thin Benick. chon, in which also (being the fourth of the 101 Olympiad) hapned (c) fuch (c) Diodons al Earth-quakes, and Inundations of the Sea in Peloponnefus, that Helice and Olympion. Bura, two Towns of the Achaans, were together with the Inhabitants swal- am, 4. lowed up. Hereof Diodorm affigneth several causes, laying the stress than injury formerly offered by them to Neptune, in resusing to lend the Ionians paning. their Statues, to which they should have facrifized. Five dayes before the Achaicin. ruin of these Cities, all the Mice, Weasils, Serpents, and such like Creatures came out of Helice in great numbers, and took the way which leads to Coria. The Inhabitants admiring fo strange a fight, had the next night their thoughts diverted by the Earth-quake, which made way for that Inundation wherein Ann. 16.1. they perished, and with them ten ships of the Lacedamonians then lying in cap.19. 36. The next year being the first of the 102 Olympiad, wherein Damon the Diodous ad

Thurian got the prize , Alcosthenes being Archon, Artaxerxes fent his Am- Olimp. 102. bassadors into Greece again to perswade the States to an agreement. The A- ann.i. thenians were now grievously displeased with the Thebans for destroying Pla- Xenoph. at tea and Thefpes, two Cities which had so well deserved of Greece in the print, Median War, and thereupon would no more joyn with them. They fent Ambassadors to Lacedamon about a peace, who used such Rhetorick to that State, specially Callistrates, that they brought the Spartans to assent upon these Terms : that the Cities (hould be fet at liberty, the Armies disbanded , and who soever would not acquie see in the se conditions, it should be lawfull for any of the Confederates, if they pleased (not being constrained to it) to help the difressed. All others except the Thebans subscribed the League, for they were unwilling as before to quit the Cities of Baotia. Hereupon the Spartans ie lous of them, refolved to make War in the behalf of all Greece, and chambraius the gave order to Cleombrains their King (who now lay in Phacis, expecting what Classical King they would command him) to invade Baotia. The Lacedamonians having spains and none willing to affift the Thebans, every one gave them for loft, who yet upon Cleombrotus his Summons refused to fet free the Cities of Baotia, except the Spartans would refore Messene, and permit the Laconians to enjoy their liberty. In summe, they defired they would no more meddle with what they did in Baotia, than they were concerned in any thing done in Laconia.

37. They creaded Epaminondas General, of whose rare skill and valour Diederus ad they had had abundant proof, joyning with him the Baosarcha. He levying and, 1. region men marched away, and possessed himself of the Staights of Coronea, Xcusph, Pluwhich Cleambrous hearing, marched through Phocis another way, and came larth, in Pelainto Bania by the Sea's-fide; coming to Leuttra, he there rested himself, pida, which the Baotians understanding, passed over the Mountains, and came near Paulian, in to him, but seeing such multitudes to overspread the plain, were not a lin- Exolicis. tle discouraged. The Baotarcha then deliberating what to do, were divided in their opinions, three being for fighting, amongst whom was Epamisondas, and as many for departing; but whileft they were still in doubt came in the Ab Era liver feventh, and through the perswasion of Epaminondas cast the ballance on his Patronymice sit fide. Plutarch faith, that Pelopidas first approved of his advice, being Cap- 'E. ac espois tain of the Sacred Company, which was made up (as is most probable amongst das por Syntain of the Sacred Company, which was made up (as is most probable amongst copen Evolus. many opinions) of intimate friends and lovers, who fighting earnefly for road a. one another, when in danger, did great harm thereby to the Enemy. Whilest Epaminondas was several wayes incouraging his men to the fight, came in Jason the Pheraan, the most Eminent leading man of Thessaly, with 1000 horse and 1500 foot, in shew to help the Thebans, but with intention to take up the quarrel; and he perfwaded both parties to accept of a Truce.

38. Cleombrotus was then departing out of Baotia, when a new Army met him from Sparea, under the Command of Archidamus; for the Lacedemonians feeing the courage and refolution of the Thebans, whereas otherwise they could not do it, resolved to oppresse them by their numbers. The General then thinking it to be difgracefull at all to fear the Thebans valour, marched back to Lendra without any regard of the Truce, where they found the Buotians ready to receive them. Cleombrotus and Archidamus (both descended from Hercules) lead the Wings of their battel. Epammondas gave leave to all that would to depart, which was done by the Thespians and others, who bore no good will to the Thebans. His prime men he placed in one Wing, and the other by themselves, whom he ordered to give back, as though they fled. Making then an oblique battalion, he with the floutest men orthroweth began the fight, and whilest the other retired from the Enemy he followed him close, who now brake his order to get into it. The successe remained doubtbattel of Lenfull as long as Cleombrotus lived; but he being flain whilest he most valiantly demeaned himself, first a great and bloudy contest hapned about his body, which at length his men recovered, and gave back in order, and by degrees, But Epaminondas still pressing upon them, and doing great execution, at length Olymp. 102. they fled, having no body to govern them. About 4000 of them were flain, ann. whis and 300 of the other party. This battel hapned in the 34th year after the coad, 383. end of the Peloponne sian War, the second of the 102d Olympiad, the 34th of Artas, Mnom. Areaxerxes Mnemon, Phraficlides being Archon. A. M. 3634.

39. The message of this overthrow came to Sparta the last day of their Kenoph, & gymnick folemnities, wherewith, though the Ephori were fo affected, as those Thutarch, ut that faw now a conclusion of that Principality they had almost enjoyed soo fuprd. that faw now a conclusion of that Principality they had almost enjoyed 500 years, yet suffered not the exercises to be broken off; but sending the names of the sain to their relations, finished the Festival. The day after, when it was known who were slain, and who escaped, one might see the Parents and Kindred of the dead to meet together in the Forum with cheerfull looks and minds, shaking one another by the hands; but on the other side the friends of

CHAP, II.

Megalopolis built.

Boor II. 352 fuch as were living, as in some solemn time of mourning to keep themselves at home, or if they came abroad, to fignifie their fadnesse in their habit, speech and countenance: and this was especially remarkable amongst the wo-The behamen. But when their affociates had revolted, and Epaminondas was thought viour of the to be about to invade Peloponnesus, they then called to mind the Oracles, Spartans after the battel of concerning what should happen to them under a Lame King; yet reveren-Lenttra. cing the valour, power, and glory of Agefilans, they not onely tetained him in his several places of King and General, but made use of him as a Physician in this fad diffemper. Now whereas by the Laws of Sparta, fuch as had fled from a battel were not onely made incapable of Magistracy, and of marriage with others, who thereupon were noted with ignominy; but were to be strucken by every one that merthem, walking in a dejected posture, in Fools Coats, with their beards half shaved; there being many and powerfull who fled from Leultra; lest any inconvenience might follow upon their discontent, Agesilans procured that the Law for his time should be filent, and (without repealing) obtain its antient vigour for the time to come. Then to recreat the minds of the Soldiers he leid them out into Arcadia, where industriously abstaining from fight, he took a little Town of the Mantineans, and made excursions into their Territories, to give his Citizens a little hope, and shew them that the fortune of Sparta was not alto-

40. The Ephori made new Levies, lifting those now that were above 60. the Tegeatans, Mantineans, Corinihians, Phliasians, Acheans, and other Cities sent their numbers, the Conduct of all which was committed to Ar-Archidamus in chidamus, because his father was not yet tecovered. The Thebans presently vadeth Bastia, after the victory fent a Messenger Crowned to Athens, to let them know their successe, and demanded aid; but the Athenians being not a little troubled at what had hapned gave him no audience. Then fent they to Jason the Pheraan Prince of Thessaly, who though he was otherwise employed with the Phocians, yet came, and when Archidamus had now invaded Baotia, procured a Truce betwixt them, and thereupon the Spartan Army returned home. This by Xenophon is related as done after the battel at Lenttra, and because he maketh no mention of any Truce made by Jason betwixt them, before the fight, we may suspect a mistake in the time, either of him, or Diodorus, who relateth the flory as before. Jason returning home was murdred A Truce is by feven young men, having great deligns in his head, after he had, partly by procured by Jafon Prince personnel of the party by awe, caused all The flaty to receive him as General, of Theffaly, who the Lacedamonians having refused to fend them aid to defend themselves is presently after murdred Authors of his death were made Community and Polyphron, Authors of his death, were made Generals, of whom the former was flain within a while by the later, who turning his Principality into Tyranny, held by his brothers. it but one year, being then flain by his brother Alexander, under pretence of revenging the death of Polydorus, and overthrowing the Tyranny. But he proved ten times more Tyrannical, * burying men alive, convering them + platach, is in beatls skins, and so setting them before the Dogs to be devoured, and killing Pelopida, > of allthe brothers succeeded, who continued in the Government when Xenophon wrote his Hiftory. 41. The Athenians confidering that the Lacedamonians still expected Xemph. they should follow them in the Wars as formerly, and would compell them therero if they could, thought it best for faving their credit to revive the peace formerly made with Areaxerxes. They fent therefore fifty men about it, to the Cities, to take an Oath of them to this purpose : That they would observe the Truce established by the King, and confirmed by the Athenians and their Affociates; and if any injury should be offered to any that rook the Oath, to affift them with their full power. All the States willingly admitted of it, and received the Oath, except the Eleans, who after the example of the Thebans, pretended that the Marganians, Scilluntians, and Triphyllians others with Darts, to make himself sport. At length having a plot against his Wives brothers, he was flain by them by her means, and Tifiphonus the eldest ought not to be fet at liberty, Lecause they belonged unto them. All Cities both little and great being by virtue of this peace to be fet at liberty, the SECT. 4. Mantineans taking occasion thereat, made a Decree to build their Citie again, and to fence it with walls, which formerly had been demolished by the Lacedamonians. They were agrieved that this should be done without their confent, and fent Agefilans to them to flop their proceedings; but the Magistrates refused to call the People rogether to give him audience, though a friend upon his fathers account, telling him what was once deceed by the people could not be altered. Some of the Arcadians fent and promifed them affiftance. and the Eleans helped them with thirty talents of Silver. At this time the inhabitants of Teges, fell out amongst themselves, whilst some A Sedition at would have all the Arcadians meet together and choose some one man to be their Prince, but others were for living under their own Laws onely, and the maintenance of their liberty. These at the first had the better of it; but by Alias Diodonus, the help of the Mantineans, at length the other prevailed, and killing some, vide. drove the rest of their Enemies to Lacedamon, to the number of 80. 42. The Lacedamonians thought they were bound by Oath to revenge the cause of the Exiles upon the Mantineans, who by falling on them had broken.

theirs, and gave order to Agefilans to invade them. They by the advice of their friends the Arcadians contained themselves within their walls never built, and suffered him to spoil their Country, wwhich doing with great caution and warineffe, yet without any loffe of honour, he returned home. At this time it must be, according to * Pausanias (who placeth it in the same year with the battel at Leulira) that by the perswasion of Epaminondas the Arcadians built them one City to inhabit (destroying there many small Towns) which thence had the name of Megalopolis. The fame of Ploto being now Alian var.hift. spread abroad, the Thebans and Arcadians sent to him to desire his help, not lib. 2. cap. 42.

onely for the instruction of their youth, and to teach Philosophy, but also to prescribe them Laws for their Commonwealth. At first he intended to go, but asking the Ambassadors how their Superiours stood affected to an equal difiribution of goods and honours, and hearing they were utterly averse to such a constitution, he thereupon resused to go to them. At this same time also Epaminondas fent into Sicilie, Italy, as far as the Islands Eussperites, and all over where the old Messenians dwelt, to invite them home into their antient Pausanias in Country, which was restored to them, and called after the old name Mef. Messenicis. The suffering fene, Which restauration hapned 298 years (reckoned from the first of the surcealled & 28th Olympiad) after the taking of Ira, and their banishment; in the third reschiller, year of the 102 Olympiad, Dyscineras being Archen. During all this time of their Exile they preserved intirely their antient Rites, and the Dorick dialect unchanged, which in our Age (faith Paufanias) by them, and onely by them, is also preserved uncorrupt and natural. 43. The same year hapned such a Sedition and Massacre at Argos, as could Diodorus ad never be paralleld in Greece. That City was then governed in a Democrati- Olymp to 2. cal way; but the Orators fo stirred up the People against the Nobility, that 43.3. Anunprelled some being accused, for fear conspired against the Popular Government, to solution at prevent their own ruine. Being hereupon suspected and examined, some the common fort giveing credit to this acculation, put all those to death unheard, and confiscated their goods, and then many others being accused who were wealthy, they put them all to death, and in this minner made an end of 1600. The Orators themselves now were afraid, lest in this so general a Massacre they themselves also might unexpectedly miscarry, and therefore ceased from their calumniations; which being understood by the multitude, as though they now forfook them, they put as many of them to death as they could find in the City, the vengeance of God thus repaying them. 44. The next year, the Lacedamonians sent 1000 of their Citizens, and Idem ad ann. 4.

Ago, the fault fearing to be tortured made away themselves, and one in the midst of his 500 Argives and Bassian Exiles, under the command of Polytropus into Xenoph, Arcadia, who there fortified Orshomens, but meeting with Lycomedes the

CHAP, II.

Exeminandas

again invad-

The Arcadi-

ith the The-

354

SECT. 4. Mantinean, Genetal of the Arcadians, he was flain in battel with 200 men. The Arcadians after this defiring help of the Athenians in vain , procuted it of the Bavilans, who disparched into Peloponne fus Epaminondas and Pelopldas, to whom the other Buotarcha of their own accord left the command of the Army. When they were come into Arcadia, all the Confederates made up the number of 50000 men; but yet the Thebans were very unwilling to invade Laconia. They confidered that the Country was well fortified, and that the Lacedamonians terrible every where would fight more desperately at their own dores. But the other preffing them much to it, and some bringing word how the borders were desolate of defence, and offering to conduct them into it, at length they invaded it in four feveral bodies, and bearing down all opposition, met together at Sallasia, whence they marched for Sparsa it felf, burning and confuming all things in their paffage. Six hundred years had the Dores now inhabited Laconia, and for all this time not an Enemy had dared Platarthly to appear in it, fo that this unulual fight caused great tumults in the City, Applia the women having never before seen as much as the smoak of War, nor the men able to endure a Siege. Agefilaus contained them within, bestowing them as he found convenient in feveral places, for the defence of the City, which had no other walls than the bodies of it's Inhabitants. He was much moved at the arrogance of the Enemy, who challended him by name, as the cause of these differtions, to come out and fight; yet so contained himself, as taking great pains for the prefervation of his Country, he shewed clearly, that if he had not been, the City could not have continued. 45. The Bassians laboured to provoke the Sparsans to fight, bidding them either do it, or confesse themselves to be inferior to their Enemies ; to which they answered, that when they saw occasion, they would not fear to try a battel withthem for all. They left then the City, and making great wasse of all Laconia, returned into Arcadia. The Spartans in the time of this their extremity, had promifed liberty to fuch of their Slaves as would fight for them, and fent to Athens to procure affiftance from that State, which the Ambaffadors procured to be decreed, especially by this motive, that the Lacedamoniani had faved that City, at the end of the Peloponnefian Wat, when the Tohierates fent Thebans were earnest for it sutter destruction. They made choice of Iphicrates for the General in this Expedition, who otherwise a man of excellent conduct, yet is judged by Xenophon to have been fat overfeen in the manage-being about to return home, he ought to have fortified Cenchren, where they had the most convenient passage, and when he sent to spie whether they had is confured by Xenophon.

Enaminondas invadeth La-

Sparsans.

passed Ones, he sent both all his own and the Corimbian Horse, whereas few had been sufficient to spie, and better for a speedy retreat, and hereby he lost no fewer than twenty men, and the Thebans retuned without any great molestation. The Lacedemonians having got 4000 Auxiliaries, befides tooo Slaves newly manumitred, and many men out of the neighbouring Towns, thought themselves then fit to try a barrel; yet convenient for them first to fend to the Thebans about a peace. They offered it to them on thefe terms; that Meffene should be restored by them, and the Luconians left to their fiberty. Most enclined to receive these terms, till Archidamus rising up, said, that peace was not to be received upon such unequal conditions by them, who were wont to give and not to receive it; that Meffene was juffly deftroyed 300 years before, and could not be restored, but to the great distresse and dammage of the Lacedamonians.

ment of this employment. For having loitered at Corimb, and the Thebans

46. But Epaminondus having to his great honour restored Meffene fully Diedona ad (the grounds being divided, and all things done) after 85 dayes spent in this Olymp. 102. Expedition, returned home, and being in his way molested by Thierates, ann. 4. pursued him home to the walls of Ashens. But there was a Law at Thebes, which made it capital for any one to retain the chief command longer than was in that case provided by the constitutions of the City, new Magistrates being to be chosen the beginning of the new moneth Bacarius. This Epuminondas knowing to have been made for the good of the City, would not keep it to the dammige thereof, and continued his command four moneths longer than his Commission warranted. After his return, he and his Colleagues were accused, and he permitted them to lay all the blame upon himfelf. They being hereby freed, no man expected any defence from him, as having nothing to fay for himself. He appearing, denied nothing that his adversaries objected, consessed what his Colleagues said to be true, and refu-Plutach in Pefed not to undergo what the Law inflicted, onely he made one request to lopida & Cova, them : that this might be written upon his Tomb : Epaminondas was punified Refos in Epawith death by the Thebans, because he constrained them at Leutera to van- minorda. quish the Lacedamonians, whom, before he was General, none of the Baotians durst once look on; and for that in one bastel he not only saved the Thebans from hill lib. 13. ruine; but also restored liberty to all Greece; and brought matters to that cap. 42. paffs, that the Thebans fell upon Sparta, and the Lacedamonians had enough to do to preserve themselves; and left not off till Messene being restored, by be- Pausanin Bite. fleged their City. Having faid this, the People affected with joy fet up a riei. laughter, and none of the Judges dared to passe sentence. 47. In the fame year, according to Diodorus, but the next, according to xenoph. lib. 7. Kenophon, Epuminondas was fent again into Peloponnesus to the affishance of Diodoms. Arcadians, Argives, and Eleans, who afresh had made War upon the Lacedemonians. The Lacedemonians and Athenians had lately established a League betwirt themselves on these terms : That each should command the Army five dayes in their course, which before was folely left to the Spartant. th Peloponne. The Ashenians hearing of the coming of Epamsnondas, fent Chabrias with an Army to flop his paffage. He coming to Corinth, with the Lacedamonians and other allies, made up an Army of 20000, and then all joyning together fortified the passage into Peloponnessus, making a dirch and a wall crosse the Islamus from Conchren to Lacham. But Epaminondas observing at what place the guards were weakeft; there with some difficulty brake thorough, ha: 14žed the Country, had Sicyon and other places delivered up to him, but comeing to Corimib was gallancly repulfed by Chabrias, who fallying out of the City, and getting advantageous ground, not onely sustained his charge, but did good execution upon the affailants. At this time 2000 Gaules and Spaniards were fent by Diony fins Tyrant of Sicilie to the aid of the Lacedamonians, who arriving at Corinth, the Gracians to try their valour led them out against the Enemy. They behaved themselves very well, did good service against the Beolians, many of whom and their allies they flew, for which receiving great commendations and rewards befides, they returned in the later end of Summer into Sicilie. 48. The Thebans being returned home, the Athenians conceived indignation against them, through the complaints of Lycomedes the Mantinean, who urged it was an unworthy thing for the Arcadians, being more noble Olymp. 103. (as the onely antient Inhabitants of their Country) and more deferving, to be aun. 1, commanded by the other, and follow them in the War. Being much puffed up with such conceits, the Thebans began to be alienated from them, and the Eleans bore them malice, because they could not obtain of them the Towns which the Lacedamonians had taken from them. Things being at this passe, came Phylifeus of Abydus, fent from Ariobarzanes the Persian Satrapa, with much money, to perswade the States to Peace. The Thebans yet would not come to any conclusion, alleging that Me fiene ought to be exempted from the jurisdiction of the Spartans, with which he being offended, not enduring that old pretences should be again revived, he left 2000 men already paid to the aid of the Lacedemonians, and returned into Asia. The Arcadians having chosen Lycomedes their General, fent him into Laconia with an Army, where he took by fform Pallene, and therein put to the fword 300 of the Lacedamonian Garrison Soldiers. To return the like unto them the year following (the first of the 103 Olympiad, wherein Pythrostrains the Athenian was Victor) Archidamus was sent into Arcadia with the Confederates; and a new supply of men sent from Dionysius. He took Carya; and put all therein to the Sword, and going on in his attempts, Ciffidat the General of his life.

SECT.4

Evaminondus

questioned for returning

356 SECT.4.

the Sicilian Forces, pretending he had staid his full time fet him by Diony sius, would needs be gone; but in his way was circumvented by the Messenians, and was forced to crave aid of Archiaumus.

49. He hastned to relieve him, and in his march the Accadians and Argives opposed themselves, whom charging with great resolution, he got a most famous victory, killing 10000 of his Enemies without the lose of one mans fo that as the Priests of Dodona had fung (that it should be a fight without rears to the Lacedamoniani) yet the message being come to Sparia, Agefilam, the Senaurs, and the Ephori, are all faid to have wept for joy. As this fuccesse revived the spirits of the Spartans, which had been almost extinct by the battel at Leuitra, fo, as Diodorm telleth us, the Arcadians now fearing their in-roads, for their better fecurity built them one great Citie, twenty of the Menalian and Parrhasian Villages being taken in for the site thereof;

Megalopolis .

now built ac though Panfanias will have Megalopolis built two years before. The The coring to Dio bans and Eleans onely rejoyced in the misfortune of their friends the Areadians, as tending to the humbling of them. The Thebans calling much in their heads how to obtain the principality of all Greece, resolved lipon fending an Ambassage to the Persian King to contract a straight League and Alliance with him, and affembling the Confederates they pretended a necessity Pelopidas fent thereof, because Euthycles the Lacedamonian was now with the King in behalf of that state. They fent Pelopidas, with others for the Arcadians, by the Thebans to the Perfian King.

Eleans, & Argives : the Athenians also understanding hereof fent Timagaras and Lean. Polopidas being very famous even in Afia for his valour, by his demeanour got all the favour from the rest. He urged the King with the merits of the Thebans, who had never of all Greece born Arms against him, or his Ancestors, either of old in the Median War, or of late in affillance to Agestians, and he extolled their valour, shewing that the reason why the Arcadians were of late overthrown by the Lacedamonians, was because of their absence. For the truth hereof he appealed to Timagoras the Athenian, whom being at odds with his Collegue, he drew off rohis party. He obtained of Artaxerxes what he demanded, viz. that Messene should be held exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Lacedamonians, the Athenians should abstain from the Sea, and all the other Cities left to their own Laws: Lastly, that the Thebans should be esteemed the near Friends and Allies of the Empire.

Ambassie,

50. This employment got Pelopidas abundance of credit (who not long Getteth much after was flain in a victorious battel, fought in the behalf of the Theffalians against Alexander the Tyrant) but Timagoras returning home received a great Present from the Persian, and being accused by his Collegue of siding with Pelopidas was put to death. The Thebans, though they had got what they defired of the King, yet their defign came to nothing, for the Commissioners of the Ciries first refused to take the Oath of this new League, and then most of the Cities themselves after the example of Corinth, the answer of which was, that there was no need of this new Engagement. This plot then of Pelopidas having not taken good effect, Epaminondas thought of another to reduce the Arcadians and Allies to obedience; and that was, first xemple, at feby subducing the Acheans, to which purpose he went again into Peloponnessu. pra, Diodonad He easily effected this, and receiving an ingagement from them to continue 015mp, 103. faithfull to the Thebans, returned, for which being much blamed by the Arcadians, and the rest of that faction, Governours were sent from Thebes into the feveral Cities, who bringing in the popular Government, thereupon drove away many of the principal men, who uniting themselves, seized again upon their several Cities, and then stood no more Neuters, but openly declared for the Lacedamonians. So this second device of the Thebans came to nothing, and the Arcadians were pressed both by the Lacedamonians and Achaans. At this time Euphron the Sicyonian, a man of great power in his Countrey, perswaded the people to bring in the popular Government, which done, and he with others being chosen Prators, he murdered some of his Collegues, expelled the rest, and openly established a Tyranny. The associares he put off by doing them pleasures, through which the Argives being incouraged, together with him cell upon the Ph tapans, & brought them to great Sect. A. straights, because of their faithfulnesse to the Lacedaminians, wherein they excelled beyond Prefident, no advertity nor any advantage being able to affright. or allure them from it, as is largely discoursed by Xenophon. The Ashenians fent Chares with relief to them, who overcame the Argives in two fights, and restrained their violent attempts against them;

51. But Eners the Symphalian, General of the Arcadians, judging things not to be at Sieyon as they should, seized upon the Cassle there, and forced Euphron to leave the Town, and give up the Haven to the Lacedemonians.

Sits about Si- Yet a Sedition following in the Town the took occasion thereat, and repossessed himself, joyning with the people against the Nobility, but the Cafile being held by a Garrison of Thebans, he thought there was no long continuing without their leave, and so taking money with him, went to Thebes, to procure the good will of the people there. Thither feveral of his adversaries followed him to withfland his defign, and finding that he wan upon the Magi-Arates and Senite, to hinder the progresse of the businesse, killed him in the Caltle, as fuch time as the Senare was fitting there. One of them taking all the fault upon himself, made such a discourse in his own desence by telling what the Theban, themselves had lately done in the like case, and by other arguments, that Euphron was pronounced juffly flain, and he was absolved. Yet being carried to Siegon he was honorably buried in the Forum, and worshipped by the people as one of their greatest benefactors. The Philasians now had by the affiftance of Chares taken Thymia, which was fortified against them by the Sicyonians, but their Exiles had feized upon Ocopus: the Sicyonians and Arcadians recovered the Haven at Sicyon, and no body affifted the Athenians at Oropus, but all forfook them, forhat it was committed to the trust of the Thebans, till the controversie about it should be decided. Lycomedes feeing them diffacisfied with their Allies, drew the Athenians to enter

The Athenians into fociety with the Arcadians. The conditions were, that the Athenians, in enter into 10-case Argadia was invaded, should send succours of horse, without being con-Arained to invade Laconia. Accadians,

And confult come mafters of Corinth.

52. The Atheniant, as foon as this was done, east in their heads how they might make Corinth their own, through the persivation of Demesion; which being known there, their Soldiers were difmiffed, and the fociety broken betwixt them. This made the Corinthians, who now had gotten fo new and potent Enemies , look about them for their own fecurity; and to this end levying all the force they could, they made also their peace with Thebes, in which they would have the Lacedemonians concluded, faying, they were confrained to this accommodation; but the Lacedamonians giving them, and all other their Confederates leave to provide for themselves (which was accepted by the Phliasians and others) said they would persist in the War, and commit the iffue to God, being resolved never to consent that Messene, which they had received from their Ancestors, should be taken from them. The condition of this peace was onely that each Citie should enjoy its own for the Corinebians flatly refused to enter into a society of Arms, because they would not offend those that had well deserved of them, but presently a contention was revived betwixt the Phliasians and Argives about Thymia, which was feized on, and held by the later, notwithstanding all that could be objected. At the same time were twelve ships, under the Command of Timocrates, fent to the aid of the Lacedamonians by Diony fine the younger (who now had succeeded his dead father) which they used in the storming of Sellafia, and then the Fleet returned back into Sicily. At this time procureth an- Areavernes fent once more to mediate about a peace, which was fubmitted to by the Cities, and so the Laconian, or (as it is also called) the Baotian War ended, after it had continued above five again invad-ch Pelopos-

53. But in the very next year fuch sparks were kindled, (first betwixt the Xenophon, Dio. Eleans and Arcadians) as brake out at length into another mighty flame. dorus ad Olymp. Lasion a Castle of Triphylia first belonged to the Eleans, but being in the 104, and I.

Setsumon

possession now of them, and another while of the Arcadians, continual controversies were moved about it. The later now having it in their hands, the Eleans, by means of the Arcadian Exiles with them, seized upon it. This be-The Eleans and Arcadians ing taken in great disdain by the Arcadians, they procured help from Athens, at odds. and recovered it by force; after which they overthrew the Eleans, and wasted their Territories to the Citie Gates. This put them upon craving aid of the Lacedamonians, and defiring them to invade Arcadia, who accordingly fent Archidamus the year after the first action at Lasion. He took Cromnus, and therein leaving a Garrison returned; but after his departure the Arcadians recovered the place, and going into Elis, gave the management of the

The Pifeans put in possestion of Clym. upon by the Eleans at the time of the folemnities,

Epaminondas

perswadeth

Sea matters.

look after

358

For this purpose they seized on Olympia before-hand, and going on when the time was come in the management of the exercises, the Eleans with all their ftrength fell in upon them, and with incredible boldnesse so laid about them, that they put the Arcadians to flight, and though they could not keep the place, yet with great honour retreated to their Citie, having never before been at all accounted of for valour. This Olympiad, because the Pifaans managed it by force, was not registred in the Annals of the Eleans, neither . is it certain who overcame in the course, Photides the Athenian being named by Diodorns, but Eubous the Cyrenean by Paufanias, in the fecond of his 54. At this time Epaminondas labouring all manner of waves to get the Diodona ind solemnities of the 104th Olympiad now drawing on, to the Pifains, who by old and fabulous arguments pretended it once to have belonged unto them.

Soveraignty of Greece for his Countrey-men, perswaded them as a means hereto first to obtain the Dominion of the Seas. He shewed it was an easte thing for those who were ftrongest at land, to obtain, by instancing in the Lacedathe Thebans to monians, who though in the War with Xerxes they furnished out but ten

Thips for 200 of the Athenians, yet for their power on land were obeyed by them. By this, and other arguments, he got them to ordain that 100 Gallies should be provided, and that the Rhodians, Chians, and Byzantians should be invited to joyn with them in these preparations. He himself going with a little Porce to these Cities, induced them to side with the Thebans, and so terrified Laches the Athenian, who indeavoured to crosse his design, that though he commanded a strong Fleet, yet did he quit these parts. During his absence, some of the Theban Exiles having a great desire to change the Government into an Ariffacracy, drew into their plot 300 horf-men of the Orchomenians, who when they were about to execute their design, it was revealed by some principal contrivers to the Bastareha. The Thebans had conceived a grudge against the Orchomenians of a very long date, ever since that Cirie having paid Tribute to them formerly, was exempted from it by Hercules. Having now then an opportunity to vent their malice, they first destroy Orcho-put to death the 300 horf-men, then taking the Town, they put to the sword had been present, he would have in no case suffered such wickednesse to be Baoticis. committed by the Thebans. 55. The Arcadians having the Olympian Temple in their power, the Ma- xenoph lib.7. gistrates converted the moneythereof to the paying of their Epariti, being all the men, fold the Women and Children, and fo utterly destroyed Orchomenos This cruelty was utterly detested by Epaminondas, who faid, if he Paufaniain

the strength of their Army. This the Mantineans first protested against as Diodonus ad Sacrilege, and fent the money which was due from them for the payment of Olympiot. the Soldiers, which being taken as an affront from the other, they called the ann. Mantinean Magistrates before the Council of the 10000. Who refusing to ap-

Stirs betwire pear, they fent to fetch them by force, but being repulsed, at length others in the Arcadians the Council appeared for them, being of their opinion, that the money was not to be touched, which would brand them for ever with a note of infamy. This was decreed by the Council, which the great ones seeing, and apprehending in what danger they were, sent to the Thebans to tell them, that except they would come in time Arcadia would wholy revolt to the Encedamonians.

The most sober men amongst the Arcadiant hereupon perswaded the Council SECT. to fend to the Thebans, to protest against the coming down of their Army unfent for and by restoring to the Eleans the Temple, to make peace with them. All rook the oath of the League, and amongst the rest the Governour of Tegea, who lay in Garrison with 300 Thebans; but the great ones who feared to be called to account for the money, prevailed with him to lay hold upon the Mantineans and other Arcadians, who at Togea were making merry for the peace. But the Mantineans making demand of their Citizens, promiting if they had done amisse they should appear before the Council, the Theban General was at a stand, knowing not what to do, and at length dismissed the prisoners, purging himself by saying, he heard the Lacedamonians were about to invade Arcadia, and that some of the Arcadians had designed to betray Teres into their hands.

56. Though they believed him not, as knowing the contrary, yet they dif- lidem & paulo missed him, but sent to Thebes to accuse him as worthy of death, for attemp- aliter Polybins ting a matter fo contrary to the good understanding betwirt the States. But like 9. Epaminondas excused him, laying the blame upon the Arcadians, who having drawn the Thebans into the War, would offer to make peace without their confent, and thereby were guilty of treachery and he plainly declared, that the Thebans would march into Arcadia, and there affift their friends. The Mantineans and others understanding this, sent to Athens and Sparta to defire aid, laying open the defign of the Thebans plainly to be this : To weaken Peloponnessus, and bring it all into subjection to themselves. They jealous of this, entred into League with them, wherein it was provided, that each State should have the command over the Army in their own dominions. Whilst this was a doing, Epaminondas marched from Thebes, leading with him, besides the Bassians, some Thefalian Horse, and Soldiers our of Enbas. When he came to Nemea there he staied a little, having a great defire to meet with the Athenians; but understanding that they passed by Sea into Peloponnessu, he arose and moved towards Teges. Having notice in his way that Agesilans with the whole power of Lacedamon were come into Arcadia, and that the City must needs thereupon be desolate, he marched in all haste thicker, and had become absolute Master of it, but that by meer divine Providence (as Konophon himself acknowledgeth) a certain Gracian gave notice of his intention to Agesilaus, who sent word in all haste to Sparta, willing them to stand upon their guard, with promise to be with them as speedily as

57. Archidamus his fon being there left, fet the old men and boys upon the Houses to annoy the Thebans with stones, and disposed so of those that were fit to fight, in the several places of the City, that though Epaminondas had continued his march all night, yet found he that his delign was betrayed, and fuch was the opposition he found, that although he chose the steepest desent spera and re into the Town, to have the upper ground, yet was he repelled, the Lacedamonians tofing the most in their too long pursures. Then understanding the Lacadamenian and Arcadian Forces to be all coming to relieve Sparta, he thought it not wisdom to hazard a battel with them all; but judging that Mantinea would be left naked, and at this time of the year the Inhabitaints would be much abroad in the fields about their Corn and their Cattel at paflure, he thought it fit to try if he could furprise them all, and sent before the Horse for that purpose. At this time it hapned well for the Mantineans, that 6000 Athenians under the command of Hagelochus were come through effeemed of in all Greece, resolved to do their utmost in their behalf. In the engagement they had the better of it, and thereby preserved all that the Mantineaus had without their walls. Epaminondas after this thinking with himit food in re- felf that he must be gone within a few dayes, the term of his commission beferenceto his ing almost expired, was full of various thoughts. If he should leave those, return or stay. for the aid of whom he was sent, to be besieged by the Enemy, he saw he

His Hothe put the Istmus into the City, who upon their defire, notwithstanding they should have to do with fuch Horse as exceeded theirs in the number, and the best

SECT. 4. Should lose the honour he formerly had obtained, especially seeing he had been repulled at Sparea by fo few a number, and now also had miscarried at Mantinea: and he confidered that by this Expedition of which himself was author, he had given occasion to the Lacedamonians, Arcadians, Acheans, Eleans. and Athenians, to enter into a ftraight League of offence and defence. From these reasons he concluded he could not in honour depart without a battel. in which if he overcame, he should make amends for all, and if hee should die, such a death could not but bee glorious, which should bee undergone in an endeavour to make his Country Mistresse of all Peloponnesus. 58. Ere long the Armies of the Lacedamonians and Mantineans appeared.

confifting, with their allies, of 20000 Foot, and about 2000 Horse. To the Buotians were affiftants the Tegeatans, and fuch other Arcadians as were most powerful and wealthy; the Argives, Eubæans, the Theffalian Horse which the I hebans brought, the Meffentans, Sicyonians, and other Peloponne fians : the number of all which amounted to 20000 Foot, and little fewer than 3000 Horse. This is much admired by Xenophon, that Epaminondas should so discipline his Soldiers, that neither night nor day they should shun any labour, refuse to undergo any danger, to be contented with any kind of provifion, and very ready to obey all orders. When he had ranged his men in order of battel, he led them not straight on against the Enemy, but fetched a compasse towards the Mountains of Tegea, and made as though he would there pitch his Tents. This made the Enemy secure, which he well understanding, formed his battalia like a wedge, thereby to break them sooner, and led with speed against them, who now were all to seek, and in a confusion, some hasting to bridle their Horses, others to buckle on their harnesse, and all in a condition rather to fuffer than act any thing. And lest the Athenians should relieve their Companions from the left wing, he placed a Party of Horse and Foot in the hills to keep them in awe, by being continually ready to fall upon their reer. 59. His expectation was not croffed, for on what part he fell he carried all Mantinea mortally wounded.

The battel at before him, the Enemy not daring to stand; but rushing more violently amongst them, the Lacedamonians taking notice of him, flocked to him, and laid at him amain with darts, some of which declining, and fencing himself wherein Epaminoa las was from others, those that stuck in his body he took thence and rerorted. Whilst he heroickly thus contended for the Victory, he received a mortal wound from one Anticiates a Spartan, who gave him fo mortal a stroak with a datt, that the wood of it brake, leaving the iron and a piece of the tronchion in his breakt. By the vehemency of the wound he fank down, and then enfued a most bitter contest about him : but the Thebans inflamed with wrathful in- A. M 3642 dignation at this fad mischance, with great flaughter compelled their Enemies V.C. 390. to give back, but knew not how to improve the Victory. For neither Foot Ante Contract of the C nor Horse pursued them flying, but continued still in the same place, and at christistics length went off carelessly, infomuch that many of the Foot fell into the hands Artan, Mana of the Athenians. Which so falling out, another thing hapned than men gene- 44 rally had expected. For almost all Greece being here gathered together, one State against another, in two factions, every one supposed, that when they should once come to fight, they that overcame would obtain the Dominion over the rest, who should be forced to submit to their yoak : But God so poyfed affaires, faith Xenophon, that both fides, as if they had overcome, erected a Trophy, not being hindred by each other. Both fides also as Conquerours gave up the flain, and as Conquered received their dead by composition. And whereas both fides faid they had the better of it, neither obtained thereby either Countrey, City, or Dominion, other than they before enjoyed; but a greater disturbance thereupon followed in Greece. So much for Xenophon with these matters faith our Author; as for what is behind, perhaps some other

it endeth his will take care to commit them to writing, and so he endeth his History with this battel, though he lived almost three years after it, as we have from Laeretus. Anaximenes also of Lampfacus, who began his History with the beginning of the gods and mankind (and therein in twelve Books almost comprehended all the affaires of the Greeks and Barbarians,) finisheth it SECT. 4.

with the Battel at Mantinea, and the death of Epaminondus. So did Phi-Liftus his Hiftory which he wrote of Dionyfias the younger in two Books. 60. Epaminoudas being caried alive into his Tene, the Phylicians affirmed Vide Diodosson that as foon as the dart should be drawn out of his body he would die. He ut fabril. then called for Diaphanus to declare him General of the Army; but it be- Justin lib. 6. ing answered he was slain, he bade them send for lolaidas, but it being anfwered that he was dead also, he advised the Thebans to make peace, while Valeius Atre with advantage they might, for that they had none left that was able to dif- lib 3, c.ip. 2. charge the Office of a General. Understanding of his approaching end, ext. events, 5.

he inquired of his Armour-bearer if his Shield was fafe; (which to have loft was a great dishonour) It being answered it was , he asked which sidehad Alian was life. the Victory: answer being mide the Bantians, then faid he, It's time for me 1, 12, 500, 3. to die, and comforting his triends who mourned he should die childlesse with this answer, that he left behind him two danghters, the battel of Leustra Paufan in and Mantinea, which should propagate his fame to all posterity) he there- Andicis. upon caused the dart to be drawn out, and so expired. This was the end of the worthieft Soldier that ever Greece brought forth, and hardly to be parallel'd lib, s. c.sp. 12. in any other Country, all the Virtues which in others were but fingular hiving concentred and united themselves in him. In thrength both of body and Enminondas his character, mind; in Eloquence, Justice, Temperance, Wisdom, Magnanimity, and Sincerity, he excelled all men; and to far in Military skil, the art of a General, and in valour, that he could not adequately be called a Valiant, Politick, Wary, Bountiful, Industricus, or Prudent Captain; all these Titles and many others being due unto him. His modefly was incredible, thewing it felf especially in this, that after the Victory of Leustra, and many other rare archievements, he refused not to go in the Expedition into Thessalie, in quality of a private Soldier. He was grave, yet affable and courteous, as a means to all those virtues, having great insight into all parts of Philosophy and Learning, being therein instructed by Lycis the Tarentine, a Pytha- * Corn, Nipos gorean. But * enough will be said in his commendation, if this be added, in vita Epamia, that the City Thebes before the birth and after the death of Epansinondas was ever subject to the command of others; but as long as he had to do in the may be gathered, that this man was of more confequence than the whole City. 61. For with Epaminon las all the strength of the Theban Commonwealth Juffin. was extinct, as if he had not onely died, but all the rest of the Citizens with him, who as before him they did nothing memorable, fo now after were famous for nothing but their overthrows and difasters. After this buttel of Mantinea, all the Gracians being tired out with War, entred into a League Diodorus. offensive and defensive rogether, out of which Agestlaus would have excluded the Meffenians. But Arraxorxes flood for them, as having Territories as large and fruitful as the Laconians, whereupon the Lacedamonians burning with an implacable grudge against them, refused to subscribe, and union of Greece, and the burying of publick quarrels. And he feemed to ty of Greece. But he thought nothing too much wherein he might ferve the Commonwealth, and in this respect undervalued his own honour, and having served in Egypt in a condition far unworthy of him, after he had re-management of the affairs thereof, was the head of all Greece; from which alone by themselves refused to be comprehended in the League, hoping corn Nipos. still to recover Messenia. This reflected something upon Agestlans, who Platited in out of an infatiable thirst after War, had by his utmost endeavour hindred the Agestiao.

increase the infamy, by undertaking an Expedition shortly after into Acres. though it was by his service in his decrepit old age, to get some money for the supply of the now very poor and exhausted State. For it appeared a thing unfeemly, for the best min in Greece, and one who had filled the world with Appliant bla-his fame, to go ferve a mean man, and a Traytor, and venture his life, credit and all, for a little gain, when as because of his old age, he had refused the Office of General at home, and in his own Country, though for the liber-

ceived

SECT.4. ceived 230 talents of Silver as a reward from Neltanba, died in his return. when he had lived 84 and reigned 41 years. A most excellent Captain, in whom Nature inwardly made amends for that wherein outwardly she had been deficient, most ambitious of glory, and yet of exceeding great humility, which he shewed in his house, and in his constant conversation. Though his justice was overruled by his passion in the businesse of the Theban War, yet generally he held it most facred, and as a punishment for his default therein. that great glory whereby he even reigned over Greece till then, was afterwards (together with the splendor of the Lacedamonian greatnesse) much eclypsed by the rifing Fortune of Epaminondas.

62. Areaxerxes King of Persia, and Agesilans of Sparta, died both in Diodorue st the same year, and the next after the death of Epaminondas. And the same Olymp, 104. year the peace of Greece was again broken by some Arcadians, who having an. 3. been translated out of the neighbouring places into Megalopolis, took occafion at some words of the League (which gave leave to all to return home) to quit the City and return to their old habitations. The other Megalopolisans Stirs amongst endeavoured to reduce them by force, and thence insued a great controversie, the Migulopo they calling in to their help the Mantineans and the rest of the Arcadians and Eleans. The Megalopolitans fent to the Athenians for aid, who fent them 2000 Foot, and 300 horse, under the command of Pammenes. He with this Force took some of the Towns, and terrified others into composition, and fo reduced them all to Megalopolis. The year following Alexander the things little akin to Antimonarchical Government.

Pharean Tyrant subdued several of the Cyclades and took thence abundance of Captives. The Athenian Garrison commanded by Leosthenes opposed him in Peparethus, whereupon he set upon the Athenian Gallies, and took them, together with one belonging to Peparethus, and 600 prisoners. The Athenians inraged hereat, condemned Leofthenes, and fent Chares with a Fleet into those parts, who spending his time in scaring the Enemies, but oppresfing the Confederates, thereby contracted anill name. For going to Corcyra he there caused such a Sedition, as could not be ended but in the ruine of many, and committed other things which much tended to the difgrace of those that fent him. With this year Diodorus concluderh his fifteenth Book , having, according to his promife, related fuch things as hapned before the reign of Philip King of Macedonia, and fuch, as together with other affairs of the Greeks related by others, shew that peace, security, and order, are

63. Of Learned Men Contemporary with this period, in the first place is Learned Men to be remmebred Hippocrates native of the Island Cons, Prince of all Phyficians. He was the fon of Heraclidas and Phanarete, the twentieth in descent Sordans. during this from Hercules, and the nineteenth from Afculapius. Some have written period, that he was born in the first year of the 80th Olympiad. But a certain passage mentioned in his life of his curing Perdiceas of an Erosick Feaver, argueth him at this time to have been famous. This Perdiccas King of Macedonia (who having reigned 28 years according to Enfebius, or according to others 53, died about the third of the 93 Olympiad) fell in love with Phila his Father Alexander's Concubine, but modely forced him to conceal his grief. till he fell into a Confumption and languished. Hippocrates by the motion of his eyes found out the cause of the distemper, and told Phylait was in her power to fave the King's life, whereupon the was willing though with the impairment of her own credit to redeem it. The like story is told of Erafistratus the Physician, who discovered that Antiochus the son of Selencus was in love with his Fathers Concubine, which Galen * mentioneth, adding, 7003 HOLDER that he had made the same discovery in a certain woman.

Hippocrates.

64. Hippocrates grew fo famous in his Art, that Artaxerxes Longimanus hearing of him, fent for him, with large offers to come and cure his Army, then seized on by the plague. But he said it was not fit for him to touch any Perfian Gold, or cure the Barbarians who were Enemies to the Greeks. The letters of entercourse betwixt the Persians and him, are amongst others ver extant. Having lived as some said 85 years, but as others 90, or 104, or 109, he died amongst the Lariffaans, in the first of the 94 Olympiad. He SECT. 4 left two fons, Theffalus and Draco; but the fruit of his brain hath been far more effectual for the propagating of his name to all posterity, wherein he hath not onely been a benefactor to the mystery of Medicine by his Writings but also by his religious care of the integrity of those who should professe it. For he framed an Oath to be taken by all that entred into his School, which

His oath.

CHAP. II.

Bookl

for his honour, and the shame of those who have more reason to be convinced of their duty, together with the information of the ignorant, it is convenient to exemplifie. 65. I swear by Apollo the Physician, and Asculapius, and Hyoia : and call all the rods and goddeffes to witneffe, that to the utmost of my strength and judgement I (ball observe what now I swear and covenant by writing. Namely, that I will esteem as my Parents my Master who taught me this Art, and thank fully communicate so, and supply him with all things necessary both for suffenance and convenience, as also account of his issue as mine own brethren, and if they defire to learn the Art, teach them without any wages or contract. That I will communicate the precents, and what I have heard. and the whole discipline to mine own children, to his who raught me, and my Scholars who have given their names and faith in this Oath, and none elfe what foever. That I shall also to my utmost power and judgement prescribe an wholesom course to the sick, and defend them from all harm and injury, Neither through the procurement of any will I give, or cause to be giver, any deadly medicament, Neither in like manner will I procure any Woman to miscarry of he barthen; but preserve my life and age alwaies chast and pure from all wickednesse. Neither will I cut any of the Stone, but leave this work to be done by those Chirargeous who are skilful in it. If I come into any house I will do it for the health of the sick, shunning all suspicion of injurie, or corruption, especially as to the filthinesse of Venery both towards women and men, free persons and slaves. What soever things I shall see or hear . either in administring Physick or othermife in common entercourse. which I think ought not to be told abroad, I will conceal them. Now if I shall religionsly observe this Oath , and in no case break it, let me live in great esteem almaies an happy life amongst all men, and reap ample fruit from mine Art. But if I break it and for wear my felf, may the contrary happen to me. Much skill in Phylick therefore corrupteth nor the conwerfacion: for though a little Philosophy may occasion Atheism, yet a great deal is an antidote against it, not suffering a man to rest in second causes : but discovering a necessity of looking higher. But more concerning this, as also to the praise of this excellent person, may be said in a particular account of the original, cause, professors, succession, progresse and matter of the Art of 66. Besides Hippocrates, there lived at this time (a) Democritus of Ab- (a) Anonymus, dera the Philosopher, who died in the same year, and was well known to him, having alwaies laughed at the folly of men. Four years after, (b) Socrates the Athousan, the Father of Ethick, was made drink poylon for speaking against plurality of Gods and the superstition of his Country-men; Anythis having first procured Aristophanes the Poet, and then Melitus to accuse him. But afterwards the Athenians repenting of what they had done, in a way of mourning forbade all publick Exercises, and then animadverting upon his accusers. condemned Melitus to death, and the rest to exile. (c) Plato at this time being 28 years old, and having heard Socrates 8 years, went to Megara to (c) Lacitius. learn the Mathematicks of Euclide, who now also flourished. The year after, (d) Sophocles died, fix years after, Euripides the Prince of Tragick Poets. (d) Suidas. At this time also flourished (e) Ctesias the Physician often mentioned before, (c) Diodorus.

who concluded his history in the third year of the 96 Olympiad. (f) Aristotle (f) Lacrius, Father of Peripatetick Philosophy was born at Stagira a City of Macedonia, (8) Anonymus. Father of Peripatetick Philotophy was born at Singura a City or venceaonia, (b) Lacritics, in the first year of the 99 Olympiad Inthe third year after, (g) Domost benes the (i) Senera na-famous Orator. (h) Endowns of Cnidus, a famous Altrologer and Geometri- tural, quest. 1,7. cian, flourished about the 103 Olympiad, who (i) found out the supposed c. 3.

CHAP. II.

cratchas.

Ouffes.

Amyntas.

Alexander.

364

SECT. 5. motion of the Stars from West to East, unknown to the Greeks in the time of Democritus. Zens the Citican, father of the Stoicks, was born in the third year of the 104th Olympiad. And we must not forget Thucydides, nor Xenophon the Scholar of Socrates, and equal to Plato, with whom he exercised fome emulation. He was a great Philosopher; the greatest master of eloquence in his time, infomuch that for the sweetnesse of his stile he got the name of Attick Muse ; and so great a Soldier, that his retreat with the Greeks out of Persia after the death of Cyrus, to one who duely weigheth all circumitances, will appear to have surpassed the exploits of Alexander the Great.

SECT. V.

From the beginning of the reign of Philip King of Macedonia, to the Monarchy of Alexander his Son, containing the space of 31 years.

1. Macedonia having been formerly called Emathonia from Emathon a certain King, and afterwards Macedonia from Macedon the Son of Ofria, or as others say of Jupiter and Libra was bounded on the North and Northwest by the Thracians and Illyrians, on the South and Southwest by

Theffaly and Epirius, and on the East with the Ægean Sea. 2. The people were first called Pelasgi, faith Justin, and the Countrey Entitle intern Bæstia. In Paonia, which afterward became part of Macedonia, Telegoniu nico Juliala reigned, the father of Aftriopaus an eminent Warrier and friend to Pria- Velloushist. mus in the fiege of Troy. On another fide Europus reigned. But Caranus Solinus ca, 15. an Argive, the fixteenth in descent from Hercules, some five years after the fall of Sardanapalss, by the command of an Oracle led a Colony into these parts, and having fetled himself by force reigned 28 years. Cansu succeeded him and reigned 12. then Tyrimas 28. Perdiccas a Prince much renowned 51. after him Argam 28. Philip the first as many, Euripm 26. in whose infancy the Illyrians invading his Kingdom, his subjects carried him in his Cradle into the field, thinking he being present could not but be victorious, or that his people durst not forfake him, who was unable to Alcetas. Amyntas. Alexander.

Perdiccas.

Encipus.

defend himself. Alcerai after him reigned 29 years, Amynias the first 50 years, to whom Darim Hystaspis sent for earth and water as tokens of subjection. Alexander his son who slew the Ambassadors sent to his father, reigned 43 years, and by marrying his lifter Gygan to Dubares the Persian, grew into such grace with Xerxes, that he obtained all the Region between O'ympus and Hermus to be united to his Kingdom, and yet during the War held secret intelligence with the Gracians, discovering to them all his intents and purposes. He left three fons, Perdiceas, Alceras, and Philip, the eldelt of which succeeded him, whose story is sometimes by pieces related by Thucydides. Perdiccas left behind him Perdiccas and Archelaus his base son. Perdiceas was drowned in a Well by Archelaus his Guardian at feven years of age, the murtherer to excuse himself alleging to his mother that he fell in by chance as he hastily followed a Goose that

3. Archelaus having dispatched his brother out of the way, did the same Aristal Palis by Alcetas his Uncle, and Alexander his Coufin, fon to Alcetas; and yet lib. 5. though he came in this way, is faid to have done many things to the advantage of the Nation, which is usual with Usurpers. He sought by all means to draw Vide Rabin Socrates to him, and greatly loved and honoured Euripides the Tragedian. lib. 4. cap. 1. He had two fons, Archelaus & Orestes. Archelaus succeeded him, and reigned feven years, some confounding father and son together, and making this, who reigned but seven years, to have succeeded Perdiceas. Archelam at the end of seven years was slain in hunting, either by chance or on purpose by Crate-

Archelaus.

Nephew,

Firft Guardian of his

rus, called by Alsan Cratenas, who relater the cause to have been for that SECT. 5 having married his daughter to him, he took her away and gave her to another. Cratenas had enjoyed the Kingdom scarce two or three dayes when he was Vor. Hill. alfo flain by others. Oreftes then a Child acceeded, who was ferved by his lib. 8. cap. 9. Guardian as his father had ferved his Pupill, being killed by Eropus one of the bloud Royal, who held the Kingdom fix years : the fame who at first denied passage to Agesilans when he returned out of Asia. He lest three sons, med panage to rage man and Alexander. Pausanian when he had reigned one Diodorns ad year was slain by Perdiecas the son of Thaceleus or of Philip, who being son Olymp 56. of Perdicon, and Grand-fon to Alexander the Rich, was preferved when Archelans the Bastard slew his brother Perdiccas, his Uncle Access, and Alexander his Coufin German.

4. (a) Amyntas was by the Illyrians driven out of his Kingdom, but re- (a) Idem ad flored by the Theffalians, held it (though very unquietly) 24 years. Some and 4. wrote how after his expulsion Argaus obtained the Kingdom for two years, wrote now arter in expansion with the was overcome by the Illgrians having (b) Ad olympic till again he recovered it. (b) When he was overcome by the Illgrians having (b) Ad olympic till again he recovered it.

little lope to recover his Kingdom, he gave the Olynthiam a great part of the grounds adjacent; but after his restitution required it again. They resused Xenoph, to reftore what was freely given them. He hereupon gathered an Army, and fent to the Lacedam mians for aid, who fent Phabidis to him with 10000 men at such time as he surprised Cadmea, the Citadel of Thebes, having sent before his brother; but the Olynthians had taken much of his Kingdom, and made themselves Misters of Pella the Metropolis of Macedon. He had iffue by his wife Eurydice, three fons; Alexander, Perdiccas, and Philip; befides one daughter called Euryone or Exione. He had also by his second wife Gygan three fons; Archelaus, Argaus, and Menelaus, afterwards thin by their brother Philip. Aiexander reigned not much above one year, in which time he was invaded by Paufanias the fon of Aropus, but defended by Iphicrates the Athenian, who declared his fidelity in this as well as other things, towards the Children of Amyneas, that Eurydice flying to him with her two Children, Perdiccas and Philip, he defended, and full fined her. Against him Ptolomy Altrites made War, and both called Pelopidas the Ptolomy Alo-Theban to judge betwixt them, who having decided the controversie (as Plusarch faith) took Philip the Kings brother, and 30 other of the fons of the chief Nobility, as Hostages to Thebes. But within a year after Ptolomy murwas Thibes. dred him, not being his base brother as some suppose, faith Scaliger. Justin telleth us he was flain at the procurement of his mother Eurydice, which having agreed to marry her fon-in-law (which must be this Piolomy Alorites, and thence cometh he to be called the brother of Alexander) Consulted in her husbands life time how the might kill him, and transfer the Kingdom to the Adulterer, which being betrayed by their daughter, Amyntas for his Childrens sake would not use any severity towards her, little thinking the would really accomplish her wicked defign upon any of them are

> 5. Ptolomy Alorites held the Kingdom of Macedonia for three years, and Died ad O'rme. then was flain by Perdiccas the brother of Alexander, who succeeded him and 103, and, 4, reigned five. He was then flain in battel against the Illyrians according to Diodorus; but Justin faith he perished by the wicked practices of his mother, as Alexander did. Perdiccas left behind him a young fon, of whom Philip his brother was constituted Guardian in the second year of Ochus King of Persia, in the first year of the 105th Olympiad, Callimedes being Archon, Plutarch maketh him to have been carried as an Hostage to Thebes by Pelopidas. Diodorus writeth that his father gave him as an Hostage to the Illyrians, and that they committed him to the Thebans to be kept, who delivered him to the custody of Polymnis the father of Epaminondas, with whom he was brought up. though Plutarch faith he lived with Pammenes, and thence became an emulator of Epaminondas. Tustin faith he was twice given as an Hostige by his brother; once to the Illyrians, and another time to the Thebans, which mightily conduced to his education; for being three years at Thebes, he laid the the revolt of the Chians, Rhodians, Coans, and Byzantians, from the State of Athens. The Athenians sent against them two Generals, Chares and Chabrias, who when they came to Chius, found their the fuccours fent from other Cities, and from Maufolus the Prince of Caria. They fell upon

SECT. 5. foundation thereof in a Citie full of ancient feverity, and in the house of Epaminondas a great Scholar and General. If he there continued but three years, he seemeth to have returned home at the beginning of the reign of his brother Perdiccas, but Diodorus faith, it was after his death that he made an escape from Thebes. At first, as it seemeth from Justin, he bore but the Office of Tutor, or Guardian to his Nephew; but afterwards great Wars happing, in which the expectation of the Child could nothing avail, he was constrained to take upon him the Dignity of King by the peo-Then King.

6. For, the Macedonians having lately received an overthrow from the Diodorus ad Illyrians, were much deiected thereat. Phe Paones their neighbours made Olympioc. excursions, and the Illyrians prepared for another terrible invasion. The ana.i. excursions, and the Illyrians prepared for another temple invalidity Argens A.M.3645. King of Thrace was minded to set up Pansanias, and the Athenians Argens Olympios. (both fons of the late Usurper Froms) having fent Mantias with 3000 ann i men, and a Fleet readily furnished for that purpose. But Philip seeming no. V.C. 394. thing to be discouraged at these things, by his good language (wherein he odi, a.

was very able) and his courteous deportment, bare up the spirits of his people. He Conquer- He amended military Discipline, and instituted the Macedonian Phalange. Understanding the Athenians to have a great defire to recover Amphipolis, and to have Argans established King, he left that Citie to its own liberty. The Paonians and the King of Thrace he bought off with money, and overthrew Argaus at Methone affifted by Mantias the Athenian, by which victory he mightily incouraged his men. 7. The year after he made peace with the Athenians, who readily accepted Diodonis ad of it, because he was content to quit Amphipolis, giving him great commen- Olymping, dations also for his clemency, in that he had suffered the Reliques of their 400, 2. Army at Methone to depart with their lives and liberty into Atties when he had them at his mercy. Being thus freed from the Athenias War, hearing that Agis King of the Paonians was dead, he invaded, and brought them into subjection to himself. Then entred he the Countrey of the Illyrians with about 10000 foot, and 600 horse, whose King Bardylia sent to treat with him, offering that each should rerain such places as they already held; but he returned answer, that though he was also desirous of peace, yet would he admit of no terms, except the Illyrians would quit all the Cities which belonged to his Kingdom. Rardylis then met with him with a strong Army, and a great and bloudy battel was with great animosity on both fides fought, wherein at length Philip had the victory, and the Illyrians having lost above 7000 men, were forced to relinquish all places belonging to Macedonia. 8. After he had brought under all the Illyrians as far as the Lake Lych- Idem ad as 1. nitis, and made an honourable peace with them, he returned into Maccaonia with great fame. The year after, for that the Inhabitants of Amphipolis had feveral wayes provoked him, and ministred occasion of quarrels, he went against them with a great force, and having cast down the Wall with his battering Rams, entred the Citie, whence banishing all his Enemies he granted indemnity to the reft. This place being very conveniently fixed for his occasions in Thrace, much conduced to the progresse of his affairs. For hereupon he presently took Pydna, and to ingratiate himself with the Olynthians (the friendship of whom was very necessary for such as would grow great) having taken Potidea, he gave up Pydna with the grounds belonging crenide chan-to it into their hands. Then going to Crenide, he inlarged this Town with ged into Phi- an accession of new Inhabitants, and called it after himself Philippi. Here were rich Mines of Gold, which having been formerly neglected he now fo far advanced as to bring him in yearly a Revenue of 1000 Talents, which mightily tended to the advancement of his affairs, and the Majefly of his Kingdom, for now stamped he that piece of Golden Coyn, called the Philipick, raifed great forces, and afterwards with bribes drew many Gracians to betray their Countrey. But he proceeded in his affairs with more confidence and freedom, for that now the Athenians were bufied in the Social War begin this year, and thereupon could not take fuch care as was Sect. 5. necessary, about the preservation of Amphipolis, 9. The Social War, which continued three years, had it's original from the City: Chares on the Land, and Chabrias by Sea, but the later whilst too boldly he ventured by himself into the Haven, was slain, and then the rest retreated without any thing done. One * in his life telleth us, that in this * com. Aspos. Expedition he was a private min, but excelling the Commanders in Military skill and fame, was more regarded by the Soldiers; which thing proved his destruction. For endeavouring first of all to enter the Haven, when he had broken in none followed him, fo that being compassed with Enemies his Gally was funck, out of which casting himself, he might easily, as the rest did, have swom to his friends and escaped; but preferring an honourable death before an ignominious life, fighting alone was flain, in all fights having been daring, though otherwise he was accounted flow and heavy.

The Social

CHAP. 11.

10. The year following, for any thing we understand, was spent altogether, or Diodorus ad for the most part, in preparations on both sides to decide the controverse in a Sea Olymp, 106. fight. The Athenians having fent before under the command of Chares a Fleet 41.1. of 60 ships, fent other 60 after, which they committed to the trust of Iphicrates and Timotheus, two of the most noble in the City, who were to joyn with Chares, and in equal authority to manage the War. On the other part the Confederates with 100 Gallies wasted the Islands Imbrus and Lembus, and coming into Samus, after they had harafed the Country, befieged the City both by Sea and Land, and making depredations upon many other Islands under the jurisdiction of Athens, got much money thereby. But the Athenian Generals uniting their Forces resolved to befiege Byzantium, which the Confederates understanding, raised the fiege at Samus to come and relieve it. They were about to joyn in battel, when sodainly arose a mighty Tempests which made Iphicrates and Timothens decline the fight, but Chares would not acquiesce in their opinion, but sent to Athens and accused them to the People, as wilfully having neglected a good opportunity of doing their Country Service, which so incensed the heady multitude, that they condemned them in many Talents. Corn. Nepos relateth, that Menesthism the fon of Iphicrates, and fon Law to Timotheus, was fent as General, and they two Invites Timoas his Advisers. That the action was about Samus wherein Chares miscarried, their & Iphiand whereupon he accused them to the People. That Iphicrates being quitted, Timothens was fined ten Talents, which he being unable to pay departed to nian Captains, which concluded with the lives of Iphicrates, Chabrias and Timosheus, those that followed being not at all worthy the reckoning. 11. Chares having got all the power into his own hands, affifted Pharna- Diodorus. bazus the Persian Satrapa, who had revolted from his Prince, and was so rewarded for his service after the Victory, that he was enabled to pay his Army, This was very acceptable to the Athenians at first; but when the King had once sent to expossulate the matter with them, and a rumour was abroad that he intended with 200 ships to affift the Enemies in the Social War, they were far otherwise affected, infomuch as they resolved to make peace with the revolters, which was eafily done, they being no leffe defirous of it. Philip having the year before married Olympias the daughter of Neoptolemus late King of the Moloffians, and Niece (not Sifter as Plutarch hath it) to Arymbas or Aribbas the present, was much envied for his good successe by the three Kings of the Thracians, Illyrians, and Paonians. Since they had been overthrown

Chelus, where dying, the multitude repented of their rash judgment, and remitting nine parts of the fine, caused his fon Conon to pay the other, towards repairing of the Wall. So that the Walls which Conon the Grandfather built with spoils, Conon the Grand-son was forced to repair at his own cost and disgrace of his Family. This was the last Age of the famous Athe-

SECT. 5. and fubdued by him, they had no strength severally to encourage them to a revolt; Yet joyning their Forces together they were confident of good fucceffe. But before they had compleated their Army, and whillf they were as yet incomposed, he set upon them sodainly, and easily reduced them to obedience.

12. The same year being the first of the 106. Olympiad, the fixth of Artaxerxe: Ochus, Elpinices being Archon, Alexander the Son of Philip and Alexander the Olympias was born at Pella in Macedonia, in the Artick moneth Bordromion, Great is born, of mpins was both as Aristobulus relateth in Arrianus, that being 32 years and cight moneths old at his death, he died on the last day, but one, of the moneth Thargelion. If this be true, (and Aristobulus, if any, might have A. M. 3649, moneth Thargeton. It this bettue, (and 2) problem, it any magnification to know it) then could it not be on the fixth day of the moneth Heca- V. C. 349. tombeon, as Plutarch relateth, whose error (into which others also fell) arose 0-16. 6.

from thence, because anciently the Macedonian, moneth Lous fell in with the Philipping. Anick Hecatombeon. The same Author telleth us in the life of Alexander. that Philip received at the same time three several messages : One, that the Vide ullion Illyrians had received a great overshrow from Parmenso his General. Ano. in And in ther, that he had got the prize at Olympia with his swift-footed Horse. And Tillion, 111. the third concerning the birth of Alexander: and this was a little after he had taken Poildaa. But Poildaa was taken two years'before, as appeareth not onely from Diodorss, but also from Demosthenes; and strange it is, that Philip (hould not know of his Sons birth a good while b fore he could have inrelligence of the Olympian Solemnities, concerning which judgement was given on the fixteenth day of the moneth : So that the relation of Troom is more true, that he received two meffages at the fame time: viz. one of his julia lie, ii. Vistory over the Illyrians, and another of his prize at Olympia. The fame (all, if. day that Alexander was born, was the (a) Temple of Diana at Ephefus fet (a) Timad on fire by (b) one who defired by fuch an act to be rendred famous to all in Abrasila posterity, as he confessed upon the Rack. But the Council of Asia decreed 1, 8, 14, as that none should dare to name him; and for any thing we certainly know, exam, e his name is buried in oblivion, or at least, their is incertainty in it; for though Gall live Theopompus in his History recorded it, and some (c) tell us it was Herostra- (c) Volime tus, yet by another he is called Lygdamis. (d) This being destroyed by this Strate 1.14. means a more excellent Structure was raised, the women contributing their ornaments, and the men their goods; to this purpose money being also made (d) Stab of the old pillars. Timans as (t) one, or Hegesias the Magnesian as (f) ano- idem, ther, faid the reason of the burning to have been, because Diana that night be- (1) ciunti. ing buffed in Midwives work at the travel of Olympias, had no leifure to look at Distant to het Temple, which Test Plutarch countert so feigid a coro best here all 2 de Rains to her Temple, which Jest Plurareh counteth so frigid, as to have been able Diguing. to have quenched the flame. Perhaps both conceits put together might have (f) Plate 6. 13. The year after wherein Callistrains was Archon, began the Photian Dialogs at or Sacred War (as it was called) in Greece, which arole upon this occasion. Olan 106 The Lacedemonians after their overthrow in the battel of Leuttra, had been add fined much money by the Council of the Amphittiones, to the use of the Thebans, for feizing upon Cadmen their Ciradel, which was exected of them. The Phocians also having plowed up a great piece of the ground belonging to the Temple at Delphos and called Cyrrhan, were also fined by the fame Common-council of Greece, many Talents. This Decree being confirmed by all the Gracians, and about to be executed by feizing on their grounds, Philome. A. M. 3692 lus a min of principal note amongst them rold them the Decree was unjustified of not an perfivaded them by force to referred it, for that they had advantage enough to 0.832. to do, because the Oracle it self was once in their possession, and tuition, pullend citing to that purpose two Verses out of the second Book of the Iliads of Homer. He perswaded them therefore to get it again into their hands, promiling, if they would give him powers to do it; and all other things for their profit and honour. They made him General,) with full power according to his desire, who straight went to Sparia, where he pressed also the injustige of the Amphylliones towards that State about their fine, and shewing how it also concernd them to have the sentence of the Council nulled, he perswaded SECT. 5. Archidamus the King to joyn with him. He supplied him with money, wherewith raising Soldiers he invaded the Temple, and beating back the Locrians that came to oppose him, with great slaughter, pulled the Decrees of the Council from the pillars, and brake in pieces the tables wherein were regiftred the names of the condemned. He caused it to be told abroad, that he neither intended to rob the Temples nor to have any other dishonest intention; but the Bastians not believing him, in their General Council decreed. that the Temple was to be recovered, and gave order for levies for the fame purpose, Philometus in the mean time fortified the place, and made all possible provision for defence. He invaded the Locrians, who killing some of his men, refused to restore the bodies, alleging the Law, that all facrilegious persons ought to be call our unburied : but he on purpose inguged with them in another Skirmish, and with some of theirs redeemed them formerly denied. Then forced he the Prophetesse to ascend the Tripos to give him advice he pleased. 14. The Temple of Apollo Pythius, and the Oracle at Delphos, one of the two chief Cities of Phocis (Elaten being reckoned with it) till made a Commonwealth of it felf by the Lacedamonians, was of antient Original, as appeareth by the (a) Poets making Agamemnon before his Expedition to (a) Odd I. Troy, to have received answer from it. The place thereof was accounted the 75, with Street middle of all Greece, and also the navil of the whole World, a Fable being bo, lib, 9, 9, 417. invented (related by Pindar) that two Eagles (fome fay Crows) being fent D concerning the Warre. She out of fear, told him he might do whatfoever out, the one from the East, and the other from the West by Jupiter, met (b) Diodoins here. The (b) Original of the Oracle is to be fetched from Goats, which and feeding about that cave or hole (where afterwards the Temple was built) were feen to skip and utter voices unufual to others and themselves at other times, which the Herdiman perceiving, went thither himself, and was affected in like manner, withall forerelling things to come. This being blazed abroad, and many who flocked thither experiencing the same thing themselves, it came to be judged an Oracle. For a time one gave answer to another indifferently: but many were transported with the fury; and leaping down into the hole were utterly loft, fo that it was judged best, to fer apart one woman, who should attend constantly, and a certain Engine to be made, wherein standing fafely over the place, the might give out the Oracle. This Engine having three feet, came thence to be called Tripos; the woman was named Pythia, from asking, faith Strabo, and the first of all others was called Phemonoe, Virgins at first were onely destinated to this work, till one of them being ravished by Echecrates the The salian, women of about 50 years, but in the habit of Virgins were onely allowed of. The Temple in more antient times was very famous for the Oracle; for the fitting of the Amphyttiones, the Pythian Games, and the riches thereof; but in the time of Strabo it was decaied in reputation, being nothing so much accounted of, which we may gather from it's poverty, feeing by gifts it was not able to recover the wealth taken out of it in after times, as it did that which it enjoyed in the time of Homer, having been rifled before it was recruited again by the present of Crafus, his Father Alyattes, the Italians, Sicilians, and others. 15. Philomelus sent to Athens, Lacedamon, and the other eminent Cities of Greece, to excuse himself, professing he onely intended the recovery of the Temple into the possession of his Country-men, and not with any defire or defign to pillage the treasures, adding, that he should be alwayes ready to account for the money or gifts belonging thereto. He defired that if any out of ill will to the Phocians bare Arms against them, that they would enter into League with them, or at least to forbear all Hostility. The messengers effectually folliciting according to their instructions, brought the Athenians and Lacedamonians to enter into fociety, and to promife aid; but the Baotians, with the Locrians and some others, thought the contrary, and resolved that the Temple was to be refcued. Philometus feeing what kind of a brunt Idem ad an. 3.

The Phocian or Sacred war.

The original

of the oracle

at Delphos.

Book II:

CHAP. 11.

370

SECT. 5. he must undergo, laboured all wayes to strengthen himself, for which purpose abstaining yet from the Treasures of the Temple, he took a great summe of money from the Citizens of Delphi, wherewith he hired Soldiers. Having got together a confiderable force, he took the field, and overthrew the Locrians who made head against him. They then fent to Thebes requiring aid for Apollo and themselves, and the Bassians thinking their demand to be just, defirous to shew their Devotion, and conceiving it to concern them that the Decrees of the Amphydiones should not be nulled, sent to the

of Amphyllio-War against

The Council Theffalians, and the rest of the Amphystiones to joyn with them in this War against the Phocians. The Council meeting together, then Decreed, that War was to be made upon them, which caused great motions and factions throughthe Photians. Out all Greece,

16. Some thought Religion bound them to relieve the God, and punish the Phocians as facrilegious persons; but others inclined to defend them, according to their particular interests. The Baotians, Loorians, Perrhabeans, Dorians, Dolopians, Athamanians, Acheans, they of Pehiotis, the Magnetes, Enianes, and some others were for rescuing the Temple. With the Phocians stood the Athenians, Lacedamonians, and some others of Pelopenne (no, whereof the Lacedamonians were now more than before concerned, for not having paid their Fine imposed on them by the Amphylliones within the time limited, at the last sitting they were Fined 1000 Talents more, This made them defire that the Decrees of the Council should be invalid, as well as the Phocians, and being unwilling to contract the Odium of making War in their own name upon that account, they were glad to do it as it were in the name of the other, endeavouring withall to get the Temple into their own hands. Philomelus, when there came certain intelligence that the Thebans would invade them with a strong Army, to furnish himself with mercenaries, seized upon the Treasury of the Temple : then offering half as much more wages as formerly, he had multicudes offered themselves to the service. With 10000 he invaded the Locrians, who being affisted with the Bassians opposed him, and having the world of it, afterwards taking some of his men as they were gathering forage, put them to death as facrilegious persons condemned by the Amphyltiones. This the Phocians complaining of, produced of their General, that to stop such proceedings for the time to come, he should punish such prisoners as he took in the same kind. After this the Armies removed into other parts of the Countrey, where ingaging in Woody and difficult places of passage, the Phocians were overmatched with the number of their Enemies, and being put to flight, Philomelus, after he had omir-

Philomelus flain.

O:somarchus fuccedeth him.

consenseth (4) Pansanias as to the kind of his death, though (6) Justin writeth (a) In Plania him to have been flain in the beginning of the fight. 17. Onomarchus his Collegue taking upon him the Office of General after his death, gathering up the reliques of the Army, therewith retreated home, and the Bassians rejoycing they had wrought the destruction of so infamous a man, returned into their own Countrey, hoping his hap would deter others from the like Enterprize. But the Phodians (being perswaded by Diodonis ad Onomarchu, who himself had also been Fined by the Amphyctiones, and ann. 4. therefore for his own ends stirred them up to continue the War) resolved to perfect if possible what was begun, and to that purpose created him General. He as his Predecessor had done, with large pay allured many unto him, corrupted the 7 heffalians to quit the fociety of the Raotians, and invading the Territories of the Enemy took Thronium, forced the Amphissians to submit, and wasted the grounds of the Dorians; he took Orchomenus in Bactia; but hefleging Charanea was worsted by the Thebans, and forced to retreat. At this time the Thebans, though deserted by the Thessalians, sent over forces into Afrato Arrabazus, who had revolted from the King, and now began to decline after Chares the Athenian had left him. The War was renewed betwist the Argives, and the Lacedamonians who had the better in a battel ted nothing worthy of a Captain, for fear he should come into the power of his Enemies, leaped down a Rock, and perished with the fall. With Diodorns times, first at Orchomenus where he lost many men, then at the River Cephifus, and again at Charonea. After this he invided the Locrians, called Epica nemidie, several of whose Towns he took, and received some losse from the Baotians, who invading Phocis he came suddenly upon them and revenged addieth of himself. But having conflicted long with a Consumption, not long after in Consumpti- great pain, as his impiety (saith Diodorus) had deserved, he ended his life, He left for his Successor Phalacus the fon of Onomarchus, who being but young, he joyned as Counsellour to him, one Mnaseas his familiar friend. The Bastians falling by night upon them, flew 200 of the Phocians with their Captain Mnaseas, and within awhile in a fight at Charonea, Phalans himself fought at Ornee. Chares going into the Hellespont took Sestins, and Kerf - Sect. S. blepies the fon of Cotys King of the Thracians, bearing ill will to Philip of Macedonia, drew all the Cities of the Cherronesus to the party of the Achenians, except Cardia, into which the people were about to fend Colonies, 13, a Town fir Philip confidering that the Methymnaans suffered his Enemies to use their Citie sexted in Magnesia for a refuge, and as a place convenient for carrying on the War, besieged it. They held out against him for some time, and in the fiege he loft one of his eyes with a stronk of an Arrow; but at length they defired to be dismissed with one sute of Apparel apiece, and this being granted, he destroyed the Citie, and divided the grounds amongst the Macedo-

18. After this he was called into Theffaly by the Inhabitants against Lycophron Tyrant of the Pheraans, who in like minner desiring aid of the Philcians, Phayllus the brother of Onomarchus was sent to assist him with 7000

men. Him Philip worsted, and expelled out of I hessaly. O. om erchusthen, feated by One who had already attained the Dominion of all that Countrey in his mind, with all his strength marched to the aid of Lycophron, and overmatching Philip, and the I Beffatian:, in number of men, overthrew them twice with great flughter, and forely diffrested Philip, infomuch that hardly containing his Soldiers in obedience, he presently retreated into Mace lon a. Osomarchus improving the credit this victory had got him, overthrew the Bantians, Who getteth and got Charonea. Philip recruited himself, and returned into Thesa's Citagras, but against the Tyranr, who being straightn'd sent again to Onomarchus, promising in again utter-if his affairs succeeded to do his work in the Cities of The falt. Onomarchus y defeated by with 20000 foot, and 500 horse was ready at his call, but ingaging in battel with Philip, and the Theffalians, was utterly defeated by the power and courage of the Theffalian horse, and fled amain with such as could get away towards the Sea. It hapned that Chares the Athenian hovering then about the Coasts with a Fleet, faved many that took the Sea, and swom to his ships. But of the Phocians and their affiltants 6000 were flain, and as many taken, amongst whom was Onomarchus, whom Philip caused to be hanged, and the rest to be drowned in the Sea as sacrilegious persons. This battel hapned in the year wherein Mausolus the famous Prince of Caria died, and Clearchus the Tyrant of Heracles a Citie in Pontus, was flain, to whom succeeded his fon Timotheus, and reigned fifteen years. Clearchus having obtained the Tyranny, and his designs prospering imitated in all things Dionysius Vide Julia. of Syracuse, and inflaved his fellow Cirizens very magnificently twelve lib. 16. veirs.

19. The year after, being the first of the 107th Olympiad, wherein Smi- Diodorus ad crinus of Tarentum was Victor, and Aristodemus Archon, Phayllus Olymp. 107. was made General in the room of Onomarchus his brother. He having plenty of money, therewith allured not onely obscure men, but the principal Cities of Greece to joyn with him in the War. The Lacedamonians fent him 1000 foot, the Achains 2000, and the Athenians 5000, besides 400 horse. Lycrophon and Pitholans the Pharean Tyrants, after the death of Onomarchus being destitute of succour, were forced to quit their power by Philip, and gathering together 2000 men, lead them to the service of Phayllus. With such forces and those of his own he invaded Baoria, but was worsted several was also worked, and many of his followers were flain. Philip of Macedon Bbb a

SECT. 5. having reflored the Thessalians to liberty by taking away the yoak of the Phe-Tyranes (which bound them ever after very fast to him and his son) went towards the Pyle, or Streights, to make War upon the Phocians; but the Athenians hindring his passage, thence he returned with great honour into

20. Whilest these things were adoing , the Lacedamonians being at Enmity with the Inhabitants of Megalopolis, fent Archidamus their King to invade them, who being too weak for them of themselves, defired aid of their friends. The Argives, Sicyonians, and Meffonians helped them with their the Lacedemo- whole frength, and the Thebans fent them 4000 foot and 500 horse. The mans and Me- Lacedamonians had 3000 foot from the Phocians, and 150 horse from Lycophron and Pitholaus, by the affiltance of which forces they took Ornee, a Citie of Argolis, before their Enemies could come to relieve it. The Thebans afterwards coming down, a battel was fought with equal successe, after which the Argives departed to their several homes, and the Lacedamonians invading Arcadia, took, and plundred Eliffu, and returned unto Sparta. After some time the Thebans had the better of it at Telphulfa, and after that in two battels more, wherein they killed many of their Enemies; but then again the Lacedamonians by a notable victory recovered their credit, and the Armies returning home, a Truce was made betwixt them and the Megalopolitans. This was done whilest Phalacus in Baoria took Cheroieda, and prefently lost it again to the Thebans, who then with a numerous Army entred, and wasted Phocis, and then having taken some inconsiderable places with much booty they returned into Buotia. 21. The next year the Thebans being spent with the Phocian War, sent to Iden ad an a. Ochus the Perfiam King to defire a supply of money from him; who wich-

our any difficulty, or delay, beflowed on them 200 Talents. No memorable thing passed betwixt the Phocians and them this year, which was spent in skirmisses and mutual depredations. Two years after (a) Philip cast out again (a) like at Pithblam the Tyrant, who had feized upon Phera, and fetting upon the and Civies of Thrace which belonged to Chalcis, took by form the Caffle Zeira, which he demolished, & forced other Towns to submit to his york, (b) though, upon defire of the Chalcidians . Charidemus had been font from the Athe- (b) Auto wishes to help them , then lying in the Helle font. The (c) year following Ohmidden wherein was federmized the 108th Olympiad, whereof Polycles the Cyrenaun (c) Diede at was Victor, having great defigns in his mind, he hasted to get into his hands ad Olympiol. was victor, having great dengins in his mind, he manted to get into harms that the Cities of the Helleform, and without any finance got Microre and Torone by treachery to be delivered up to him. Now he quarrelled with the Olymbians (because his affairs were improved by successe) whom before he courted as fearing their power, which had been ever too much for his predecessors. 'Tis said he pretended a quarrel because they received his two half brothers, whom after he had taken in the Town he murdred; all things being dawfull to him now that might any way force his turn, all his affections and passions being swallowed up in his ambicion, which made him not flick to break faith himfelf, and by his Gold to tempt others to do it. He thought it to no purpose to practise the winning of Olynshus, till he had first inclosed all their power within the Walls, and therefore he first overthrew them in two battels, and then befreged the Citie, which attempting with many affaults and great losse of men, at length it was botrayed into his hands by Empycrates and Laftbears the chief Magistrates, whom he had corrupted

Philip getteth Olynthus.

372 undertaking, to make his affaults with filver spears ; infomuch that he boatted that his Kingdom was more increased by Gold than Arms. 22. The Athenians being sensible of his incroachments, jealous of his grow- Dialous id. ing power, and warily providing for the liberty of Greece, supplied, as they might, such as he sell upon with war, and now fent up & down to the Cicies to defire them to value their liberty, & punish capitally such as were treacherous with money. He tackt it, and fold the Inhabitants with the reft of the plender, whereby he much enriched himfelf, and was enabled to buy in Cities which he dayly did, having been advised by the Oracle at the beginning of his

The Athenians amongst the m, promiting them their alliance and utmost suffance, in this Sect. 5. hearn to look work. And now at length by the special advice of Demos sheers (the greatest to themselves. Wit and Orator of Greece) they openly declared themselves his Enemies. and undertook the quarrel. But so far were the spirits of the Greeks degenerated, that this endeavour of theirs could not counterwork the efficacy of his Gold, fo that having a mind to take a Town that was strongly fortified, and one of the place telling him it could not be done, he asked him if he thought it not possible for his Gold to get over the walls. He had in all the Cities up and down his instruments and secret workers, who sought for a little gain to undermine the fortune of their own Country. After the taking of O ymbus, he celebrated the Olympick Games, and feathed all Comers; and entertaining them with great magnificence, by this cunning ingaged many to betray 23. The following year the Bactians and Phocians mutually preyed upon Idem ad an. 2.

the Persian Empire.

each other, and several Skirmishes hapned betwixt them, which produced no great losse on either side. But Phalacus the Phocian General, being accused to have stolen the secred money, was put out of his place, and three Generals substituted in his room, Demogrates, Callias, and Sophanes, who were to make inquisition about the money which was stolen, and call the Truffees who had the management thereof to account. The chief of the Truffees was Philo, who being not able to give an account, was racked, and confessed many of his fellow thieves. They had taken out of the Temple 4000 talents of gold after the rate of filver, and above 6000 talents of Silver of fuch presents as Crassus and others had sent: and there wanted not some who affirmed as much to have been rifled out of this Temple, as Alexander afterwards found in the treasures of the Persians. Phalacus was about to fearch in the pavement for treasure, hinted at by Homer; but when the Soldiers came to dig near to the Tripos, such Earthquakes hapned, as deterred them from proceeding any further. The Phocians affifted with these riches caried on the War, and by this time had got into their hand three strong places in Baotia; Orchomenus, Cheronea, and Corfias. The Baotians being much pressed herewith, having lost very many men, and wanting money, fent Amballadors to the King of Macedonia for aid. Philip was very glad to find them in so weak a condition, desiring to abate that Spirit which they had got at the battel at Leuftra, yet he fent them a confiderable number of men, be-

The Bastians crave aid of Aremarkable

accident.

Book il.

cause he would not seem to be wanting to so religious a cause, as vindicating the right of the Oracle. At this time the Phocians building a Castle near Abe, were fallen upon by the Beetians, and flifting for themselves into the neighbouring Towns, 500 of them stepped by into a Chapel of Apollo near Aba. Fire being left in their tents, feized upon some straw there, whence a great flame arising, caught hold at length of the Chapel, and therein burnt alive those that had fled thither, for an example (as Diodorus accounteth it) to ill facrilegious perfons.

24. Philip being now imployed in the War of Thrace, which was to the great damage of the Athenians, to full them afleep, promifed he would enter into a ftraight league and alliance with them, and pretending fair things, To corrupted some of the chief Orators, (4) (Escines accuseth Demosthenes, (4) Orat, conand (6) Demasthenes layerh the load upon Alchines) that a peace was tra flesiphoni. made up which continued feven years. (c) Demosthenes advised them to (b) Orat. negit fend away their Ambassadors to Philip with all speed, to ratisfie the League, 27190118. lest he delaying the matter according to his custom, should still proceed to incommodate their affaires. Accordingly five Ambaffadors were dispatched

Philip lulleth away, whereof one was Afchines; but coming into Macedonia, they the Alle wante were there forced to ftay till Philip had ferled all things in Thrace, according to his own pleasure, and passed through the Pyle or Straights into Phocis. The Athenians hearing of his coming, notwithstanding the place, were in great fear, and caused all their goods to be brought into the City. The The falians and Baotians earnestly now defired of him that he would undertake the conduct of all Greece against the Phocians; and on the other fide the Ambaffadors balladors of the Phocians, Lacedamonians, and Athenians, carnellly de-SECTIS. horted him from the War. He hearing both fides, beeing accustomed to double dealing, promifed them he would do as all had defired, and so making them fecure hereby, feized upon the Straights of The mipy/a.

Justin lib. 8.

374

25. The Phocians having fent to Lacedamon for aid, procured 1000 Foor- Diodorus ad men of heavy Armour, which were commanded by Archidamus, Philip in Olymp, 108 conjunction with the I beffalians with a ftrong Army went down into Lucris, an. 3. where finding Phalacus reflored to his Generalthip, he halted to decide the controversie by action, but the other lying at Nice, and perceiving himself too weak to fight, fent to treat with him, and they agreed that he should have freedom to depart with his men whither he pleafed. Faith being given and received, he departed with his Mercenaries to the number of 8000 into Peloponne [in, and the Phocians being thus deferted, were forced to yield. So the War was ended by Philip without a ttroak, in the tenth year after the beginning thereof, in the third year of the 108 Olympiad, according to Diodorm, when Archias was Archon; but as * Panfanias Writeth, in the first of "In Photicis this Olympiad, and in the government of Theathilm.

He endeth the Phocian War.

26. Philip calling a Council of the Buotians and Theffalians, it was re middent ibid folved to remit the matter of the Phocians wholly to the judgment and fentence of the Amphyltiones. They decreed that Philip as a reward for his Paufas, ut pigood fervice should be inrolled in the number of themselvi, and have the w. double voice which the Phocians formerly had. That the Phocians (hould be debarred from the Temple. That they (hould neither have Horfe nor Arms till such time at they had repayed the money which they had stolen from Apollo. All their Exiles and as many as were quilty of Sacrilege in their own perfons fould be accounted piacular, and it might be lawful to take them out of any place. All their Cities were to be levelled with the ground, and they reduced into Villages, not exceeding the number of Fifty little Families apiece, and distant a furlong one from another. They were to pay to the Temple a yearly cribute of Sixty talents, till the money folen was made up. But from this punishment, Paulanian telleth us the Abaans were excepted, who alone had not contaminated themselves. The Council then took order for restoring of the Oracle, and for the establishment of peace in Greece; and Philip having confirmed their Decrees, imbracing them all with fingular kindnesse, returned into his own Kingdom, flourishing with great glory both upon the account of Piety and Martial matters. This Expedition made not a little for the enlargment of his Empire, and the improvement of his design already laid, to procure himsef to be chosen Captain General of Greece, and to make War upon the Persians.

The Phocians by the Amphyttiones.

27. Two years after, and in the 17 of his reign, he invaded the Illyrians Diadarus at his old Enemies with a potent Army, took therein many Towns, wasted the Olymp, 109. Country, and with rich booty returned into Macedonia. Then went he into an. I. Theffalie, where casting out the Tyrants out of the Cities, he much won upon the People, having a design hereby to make use of their favour, as a decoy to bring in the affections of the rest. And it failed not; for their neighbours led by their example, very readily entred into League with him. The year after he profecuted this design to a further advantage, for Kersoblepies Idem adan. the King of the Thracians much distressing the Greek Cities in Thrace, he exhorted them to joyn together, and with a strong force going against him overthrew the Thracians in several battels, and forced them to pay the tenths of their Lands to the Kingdom of Maredonia. He built Forts in such places throweth the as were convenient for the bridling of their power, whereby the Cities being delivered now from their fear, most gladly imbraced his alliance and society. The year after this, Arymbas King of the Moloffians died, who left a Son Idem ad an ; named Aacides, the Father of Pyrrhu, but Philip deprived him of the Kingdom, and give it to Alexander the brother of his wife Olympias." Ano- . Juffin 17.28 ther faith, that he deprived Arymbas yet alive, and expelling him the Kingdom fetled Alexander therein. 28. The next Expedition Philip undertook, was against Perinthus a strong and 4.

Marcheth thence to Byzaatium, City. fituare upon the shore of the Propantis, the Inhabitants whereof in favour of the Athenians croffed his defigns. With his utmost might, he fell SECT. S.

upon it, continuing the form without intermission, by fresh men sent in the place of the dead or wounded : he built Turrets higher than theirs, and with Beliegerla Pebattering rams and mines brake down a part of the wall. But the defendanes being relieved from Byzantium, minfully refifted, and built a stronger wall in the room of that which was thrown down. By this means the Siege being drawn on in length, and great talk being in Afia of the power of the Macedonian, Ochns the Persian King being now jealous of his power, thought it wildom to ballance him, and for that purple gave order to his Satrapaes upon the Sea Coafts to affift the Perinthians. They uniting their Forces together, gave them their utmost affistance, which with the natural frength of the place inabled them to fland it out. For it was feated upon the cliff of a Peninsula about a furlong in length, the houses were thick and high, rifing one rank above another, according to the afcent of the hill, fo that the whole Town represented the form of a Theatre. Hereby, though the wall was batterd down, yet stopping the ends of the streets, their defence was little diminished, which Philip perceiving, and how all things necessiary for the War were abundantly supplied from Byzantium, he left a strong party under expert Captains to carry on the Siege, and with the rest of the Army halted against that City, the inhabitants whereof having sent their man and arms to the Perint hians, were thereby much ftraightned,

29. By this time the grudges betwixt Philip and the Athenians were for himself being sent Ambassador to the Cities, verought so effectually with them, that besides their ordinary Militia, they raised 1 5000 Foot, and 2000

Horse, and liberally contributed money for their pay; at which time the Asfociates defiring that the fum of the taxe might be fet, Crobylus the Orator faid, that War had no fet rate of allowance. At this time (d) Atea King of Soychia being invaded by the Istrians, sent to Philip for aid, promising him succession in his Kingdom; which being sent whenas the Istrians retreated, he also sent back the Macedonians, and recalled his promise concerning the fuccession. Philip hereupon demanded money to pay the men, but he also refusing it upon pretence of poverty, raised his siege from Byzantium to go against him, and sent messengers before to let the Screhians know he had vowed to let up to Herceles a Statue upon the bank of Ifter, and to defire peaceable accesse and recesse for that purpose. He answered, that if he pleased to send the Statue it should be erected, but refused to give leave for him to enter his borders with an Army, faying, that if he fet it up by force, he would pull it down after his departure, and turn the Braffe thereof into the Sophiais, heads of Arrows, Philip entering Sophia, a battel was fought, wherein he overcame them by craft, who in courage exceeded, and took 20000 women and children, with multitudes of cattel, but neither Gold por Silver. Twerty chousand Mares of the choicest were sent into Macedonia to breed. As Philip returned, the Triballi opposed themselves, refusing to give him passage

CHAP. II.

heightned, that now the peace was held as broken on both fides. Phocian the Athenian was fent against Clitarchus the Tyrant of Eretria, who was made by Philip, and call him out, being by (4) Plutarch called Plutarch. (4) In Photion. (b) They fent aid also to the Byzamians, at the perswasion of (c) Demost he (b) Diodonis nes, contained in the fourth Oration of his Philipicks. With them joyated as 1. the Chiane, Coans, Rhodians, and other Greeks, which so terrified Philip, 48 (c) Plutareb

he was glad for the prefent to yield to neverfity, and made a peace with them, in Demofitien,

For Demosthanes having persyaded his Citizens forgetting all committed in the Social War, to fend relief to the Byzantians and Perinthians, and he

Diodorus ad

He inyadeeh

except he would part with fome of his booty. He disdaining the thing, forced his passage, but received such a wound in his thigh, that through it his Horse was killed under him, and being taken up for dead, so little care was woulded and hid of the prey, that it was left. If or a tes the Orator taking occasion at this sufficiently disafter, sought by his second Epifele to draw his mind to a peaceable inclination; but to no purpose.

30. Two

30. Two years after, having drawn most of the Gracians into society Diodocus ad with him, he longed after the Empire of all Greece, in his way to which the Olympatio. with him, he longed after the Empire of all Orece, the refolved now to daunt them, and atthemians onely feemed the main obffacle. He refolved now to daunt them, Plutarch in and obtain his purpose, and for that end seized fifst upon Elated a Citie of Demostrate

SECT. 5. Phocis, and calling his forces thither resolved speedily to make War upon them, hoping his work would be the leffe, because he should take them altogether unprepared, and secure upon the account of the peace. The Athenians exceedingly flruck hereat for some time stood mute, after they were met together, being come of their own accord, for that the Magistrates caufed an Allarm to be founded all the night after they received the news. At length all their eyes were turned upon Demosthenes, who perswaded them to lend to the Bassians to defire their affiftance in the vindication of the liberty of Greece, and being sent himself by his Oratory perswaded them to it. though they held themselves upon the account of the Phocian War obliged to Philip. The Athenians were incouraged by this accession of the Rustians, which doubled their force, and dispatched their Army under the conduct of Chares and Lysicles towards Charonea in Baotia, all of flourishing age willingly giving their names to the expedition, and the Baotians admiring their readinesse hasted assorthemselves, and joyning to them expected the coming of the Enemy. He fent his Ambaffadors to the Council, one whereof was

Python an eloquent man, to withdraw them from the Athenians, but prevailing not, he notwithstanding resolved to fight them both, and with an Army of 30000 foot, and 2000 horse invaded Barria. He overmatched his Enemies as well in skill as numbers, all the Athenian Captains of note being now dead, and Chares Chief, who was nothing better for conduct than an Heobtsineth ordinary Soldier. A cruel and bloody fight was fought with great animofity a victory over on both fides, and with equal successe, till Alexander, Philip's son, first made the Athonius, his Enemies give ground in his Wing, and then his father had the same suc-&c. at Chara ceffe in the other, and obtained the victory. Of the Athenians above 1000 A.M. 2667. fell, 2000 were taken, and of the Baotians a great number. Demosthenes being 01.110.0813 in the battel made his actions far disagreeable to his words, and cowardly with V. C. 416. the first casting away his Arms (though Good fortune was ingraven upon his Assis.

376

31. Together with this battel was loft the liberty of Greece, and in effect the antient glory thereof here had its period, being never able to recover its power, and first enslaved by one, and then another for ever after. (a) I forra- (a) Phitroin tes the Athenian Orator was fo lenfible of the advantage Philip had got, that will Mulean being ignorant how he would improve the opportunity, and refolved not to fee & Dioplant Athens belieged the fourthtime, killed himfelf by abstaining from all suftenance four dayes, aged 98 years. (b) Prefently after the victory, Philip (b) Disdoor. carouzed for joy, and walking amongst the Captives upbraided the badnesse of their condition, when Demades the Athenian Orator took him short, asking him, if he who had obtained the fortune of Agamemnon shamed not to act the part of Therlites ? with the wit of which castigation he was so struck, that he cast off the former countenance, imbraced the author of it with singular kindnesse, with him gave liberty to all the Athenian personers, and forgetting his pride, made a League and Alliance with that Commonwealth. forgetting his pride, made a League and Amance with that Commonwealth (c) His is also reported to have appointed a Boy every morning to beat this (a) His. into his Ear, that He was a man. He was a great Master of his affections in lib.8 casts deed. He was never passionate to his disadvantage, and upon this account, to procure that with more ease which he had long designed, he might thus gratifie the Athenians, whose interest in the other Estares being the same with the Common of all Greece, he might be unwilling to force them to the urmost. But he placed a Garrison of his own in Thebes; and Justin writeth, how he fold for flaves all the prisoners of that Citie, and the bodies of such as had been flin to their friends for burial : that of the chiefest of the Citizens some he put to death, and confiscated the goods of the rest, being sufficiently sensible of their ingratitude. After the fight, when the Athenians (d) Plutonic fortified their Citie as expecting a fiege, (d) Demost heres at his own charge re- in Dimostrate. edified part of the Wall, for which fervice Ciefiphon thought he was to be honoured with a Garland at the publick meeting of Greece; but Afchines conrended it was against the Law: and so his Oration against Cte/phon concerning the Crown, or Garland, was written this year, Charonides (or Charondas) being Archon, the third of the 11oth Olympiad, and the first of the reign of Arles the Persian King

the Perlian Empire,

32. (a) Philip by his successe having utterly broken the courage of the (a) Diadonas principal Cities of Greece, now gave out that he would undertake a War ad ann.4. against the Persian for the general commodity all the estates, and thereby, and with his great courtefie, gained much upon fome forts of people, At length he called them together at Corinth, and largely discoursing of the War, shewed the certain hope of successe, and earnestly exhorted them to undertake it : to which all either out of love or fear affented. He was cho-

Obtaineth to be named General at Sca for all Grece againft the Perlian.

sen Captain General for the expedition, allowance of men and money were appointed to the feveral Cities, the (b) Lacedamonians alone fcorning both (b) Julia him, and the conditions of his peace, accounting that flavery, and not peace, lib. 9. which was imposed by the Conquerour. The Auxiliaries of G eace amounted to 200000 foor, and 15000 horse, over and above the forces of Macedonia, and the barbarous Nations thereto adjoyning. Whilest he thus prospered in his affairs abroad, (c) great differences arose in his own house by his putting away (c) Plutages. Olympias upon pretence of incontinency, and marrying Cleopatra the Niece in Alexandro, of Attalus. Olympias a woman of an high spirit, and melancholick nature,

Differences in took it exceedingly to heart, & incenfed all the could her fon Alexander, who his house by at the Wedding hearing Attalus in his Cups to exhort the Macedonians to pray for a lawfull Heir of the Kingdom from Philip and Cleopatra, calling him naughty fellow, asked him if he counted him a Bastard, and therewith threw a Cup at him. Philip hereupon with his drawn Sword made at Alexander, but to the good of both, being light headed with Wine, and mad with anger, flumbled and fell. After this Alexander carried his mother into Epirus, and went himself into Illyricum, whence his father shortly recalled him by the procurement of Demaratus the Corinthian. Not long after Pexodarus the Governour of Caria fent to offer his eldest daughter in marriage to Aridaus the base son of Philip, whence great talk being raised that Philip did it on purpose to devolve the Crown upon Aridaus, Alexander fent one Thessalus a player to Pexodarus, to perswade him to neglect a Baflard and a Fool, and transfer his affinity upon himself, which was very well liked by Pexodarus. Philip smelling out the matter, checked Alexander grievoully, as degenerate, and unworthy of this hope of a Kingdom, being ambitious to become fon-in-law to a Carian, who was no better than a flave to a barbarian King.

33. The next Spring having enquired of the Oracle concerning the fuc- Diodorus ad ceffe of the Persian War (which gave him answer as am'iguous, and to the Olymp. 111. fame purpose as formerly to Crasus) he sent three Captains over into Asia and t. under pretence of fetting the Greek Cities at liberty; Analus, Parmenio, Paufan, in and Amynea. He himself, whilest the forces were gathering together, made Julin. a magnificent facrifize to the gods, and celebrated the marriage of his daughter Cleopatra with her Uncle Alexander of Epirus, to which he invited all that would, and gave large entertainment, being willing to show to the Gracians how thankfully he took their making him General of all Greece, Feaffing and Musick there was in abundance, and the Feaff being done for that day (but all the folemnity to be renewed on the next) whileft it was yet night all the people ran together into the Theatre. Thither were carried twelve Images of his gods in folemn procession, and his own next after in a Divine habit, as arrogating to himself a place in the Council of the gods. Then followed he himself apparelled in a white Roab in the midst of the He is stabled two Alexanders, his fon, and fon-in-law. As he thus proceeded in the ruff of his pride, the people sending up loud acclamations to the skies, and Ecchoing his felicity, one Paufanias met him in the thraightest place of his paf-fage, and stabbed him into the side, the wound being so mortal that he fell

Ccc

CHAP. II.

SECT. 5. down dead. This Panfanias having been invited to a Feast by Attalus, had been carnally abused by him after he was drunk, and then profituted to the A.M. 3668. filthy lust of base fellows, for which having complained to the King, partly ol. 110. ann, 4. because of their affinity, and because Philip intended to use him in the War, he could have no fatisfaction, and for this cause took this revenge upon his un-V.C. 417. Arsis 2. Pinlippi 24.

just judge; yet Alexander objected to Darius that his father was made away by his procurement. 34. The murderer having mounted on horf-back had got away whilest the tumult was about the body, but that his shooe catching hold on a Vine he was thereby pulled down, and then flain by Perdiccas and others. This end had Philip after he had reigned 24 years, and lived 46. to which Olympias is reported by some to have contributed, by incouraging Pausanias to commit the fact, and neither knew they how to clear Alexander of the matter. She put a Golden Crown upon Paufanias his head as he hung on the Crosse, and a few dayes after burnt his body upon the Reliques of her husband, and built him a Monument in the same place, and caused a yearly parentation to be made to him. After this having killed Cleopatra's young fon in her bosom, the then hanged her, or as one faith, fried them both to death in a brazen Vessel, and consecrated the sword wherewith Philip was slain to Apollo, under the name of Myrtalis, by which the was called when young. The foundation of a great Empire was laid by Philip, and a great pattern left unto his fon, which to make, was far more hard than what with greater glory was atchieved His great at- by Alexander. The recovery of Macedon when there were two Competichievements. I cors that had such affistants, was a work of much prudence and dexterity. The regaining of fuch places as were loft to the Illyrians and Olynthians, with the overthrow of the neighbouring Kings, and the State of Olynthus, were fuch things as would have feemed too difficult for many ages to 'his predecessors.

The matters atchieved by him required both Mars and Mercury for affistants, and therein he bred so many choise Commanders, as for their skill and valour being worthy to wear Crowns; He feemeth most to deserve that glory which his fon by the influence of his abilities afterwards at-35. Alexander his son succeeded him, aged about twenty years, in the first Diodonnind of the 111th Olympiad, wherein Cleomantes was Victor, Pithodorus being Archon, in the first of the reign of Darius Codomannus, and the year of the 378

Alexander fuc. World 3669. being by the father's fide descended of Hercules, and the mo- Plutade it ccedeth him. ther's from Achilles, neither of which lines he difgraced by the course of his Alexador. fortunes. Of a great and lofty spirit he was from a Child, easie to be perfwaded, but hard to be compelled. His father apprehending his wir, procured Aristole to be his School-master, offering him very large rewards, whose Native Citie Stagera being before by him demolished, he re-edified for his fake. By such a Master he was not onely instructed in morality, but had fome infight into the more abstruce Sciences, and seemed to have some skill in Phylick, being wont to give directions to his friends about their health. Being fixteen years old, Philip undertaking an expedition against the Byzantians, left him his Deputy in Macedonia, where improving his time, he subdued the Medeans who had revolted, and taking that Citie, planted it with new Inhabitants, and called it after himself Alexandropolis. At the battel of Charonea he behaved himself very stoutly, which with other his good parts drew great love upon him from his father (infomuch as he willingly suffered the Macedonians to call him King, and himself General) but Philips mind towards his later end being withdrawn from his mother and fastned upon Cleopatra, thereupon ensued great diffatisfaction on both sides, whilest his mother stirred him to great indignation, insomuch as he escaped not suspicion of being privy to her defigns against his father's life. 36. Yet began he his reign with justice against such as had an hand in the Idem ibid. murther, killing them upon his Grave, and blamed his mother that in his Diadant ad absence she had dealt so cruelly with Cleopatra. Then celebrating the fune- Olymp. 11. ral of his father with royal Rites and Ceremonies, he began to take care of ann.

He beginneth his publick affaires, and being contemned for his youth and little experience, SECT. 5. hisreign well, above all expectation explicated himself out of all difficulties, by imitating his Fathers courtefie, and overcoming many by the invinciblenesse of his fpirit, which through the course of his life bore down all opposition. He renewed the discipline of War, and gained the affections of the Army; knowing alfo that Attalus upon the account of his Niece Cleopatra, lay at all advantages to do him mischief, he sent Hecatans with a band of men with order to attack him and fend him over alive if possible, or else to kill him one way or other, which was at length effected. In the mean time Demo-Chenes having had fecret intelligence of Philip's death, went to the people. and pretending to have dreamt it, stirred up the Athenians all waves possible to contemn the youth of Alexander, and not to suffer him to obtain the Principality of Greece, and to this purpose they sent unto Astalus, and entred into conspiracy with him, how they might best effect it. The Liolians intended to restore the Exiles of the Acarnanians banished by Philip. The Ambraciots expelled the Garrison there, and the Thebans decreed to do the same by ties in Greece, that in Cadmea. As the Arcadians had refused to consent that the Father should be General of Greece, so were they now nothing better inclined towards the Son, and the rest of, the Peloponnesians, as the Argives, Eleans, and Lacedamonians were ready to do anything for the afferting of their own liberty and power. The Nations about Macedonia began to flir, being altogether inclining to renounce their obedience. 27. Alexander as an earnest of his future successe easily removed those obstacles, reducing some by entreaty and good words, others by awe, and some by force of Arms. He first obtained of the Thestalians by a publick Decree to be owned as his Fathers Successor in the Generalship, and then Which he o- easily bringing the neighbouring People to do the same, passing the Pyla, called the Council of the Amphyltiones, and procured by their suffrages to be elected the Captain General of all Greece. Having done this, to bring over the rest by fear, he led down his Army into Baotia, where pitching his tents by Cadmea he affrighted the Thebans and the Athenians also so much, that these getting in all their goods to the City, and forrifying it as well as they might, they fent to beg his pardon, that they had owned him no fooner. One of the Ambassadors was Demosthenes, who came not with the rest to Alexander, but returned back when he was come on his way, either for that he flood in fear of him for the Orations made against his Father, or because he would not crack his credit with the Persian King, from whom Aschines accused him to have received much money. He answered the Ambasfadors to their satisfaction, and then sent for the Deputies of the Estates to meet him at Corinth, where speaking very courteously to them, he was again declared General against the Persian, and aid decreed to him for carrying on the War: after which he returned into Macedonia. Whill he here was in the Isthmu, many Philosophers came to falure him; * onely Diogenes the Si- *Diogenes Lacynopian made no reckoning of him. The King understanding this, went to time & Pluvifit him then at Athens, and finding him funning himself in his tub, salu-tarch, alis. ted him kindly, and defired him, to ask any thing of him vvhatfoever he pleased. He onely defired him to stand out of the Sun, which greatnesse of jeered at the man, he answered, that If he were not Alexander, he would be Diogenes. 38. In the beginning of the Spring he made an Expedition into Thrace, Diodorus eswhere he subdued several People, and afterwards prospered in the same man- Plutarch. ner in Paonia and Illyria. In the mean time came intelligence, that many of the Greeks had a defign to revolt, and not a few Cities, amongst which Thebes was most eminent, and had renounced his authority. Hereupon he returned into Macedonia; the Thebans in the mean while basieging his Gar-ans, Aroadians, and Athenians. The Athenians were perswaded by De-mind Alexander so much admired, that when his followers laughed and mosthenes

But the Theupon and flew many. They implored the affiftance of the Argives, Ele-his fall upon rison in Cadmea, which, being supplied with Arms by Demosthenes, they fell his Garison and One many. They implored the affistance of the Argives, Ele-

SECT-5. most heres to lend them aid, who reigning in the Affemblies by the power of his tongue, wrote allo to the Kings Captains in Afa, thence to oppose Alexander, whom he called a boy and a fool. But Alexander marching with speed into Barria, the valour of the Athenians well abraed, and Defibenes himself grew very cool. The Thebins uncertain what their allies would do, and surprised with the Kings coming, called a Council of Officers to confult what should be done, where it was resolved to fight for their liberry, and this was confirmed by the People, which with great alactity prepared for reliffance, though they might have had good terms of Alexander. Who delayed also to do any thing, that they might have time to advise; for his mind being fully intent upon the Perlian War, he would gladly have been rid of all trouble on this fide of the Seas. But when he faw their wilfulnesse, he fully resolved to make this City a terror to the rest. Yet he first offered indemnity to all fuch as would come over to him, which they to croffe,

Whereupon he befregeth

out of emulation, caused to be proclaimed from an high Tower, that if there were any who had a defire to joyn with the great King and the Thebihi in vindicating the liberty of Greece, and suppressing the Tyrant thereof, they should repair unto them.

39. Then fell he with all his might and skill upon the City, which they as floutly defended, knowing elfe what would follow, and encouraging themfelves with their former successe at Leuetra and Maninea, they made refistance to the wonder and discouragement of their Enemies; till at length Alexander perceiving a little dore to be left unguarded, sent Perdiccas thither with a party, who breaking into the City made way for the rest of the Macedonians. Now were the Thebans on one fide by them, and the other by the Garrison in Cadmea (which like a tempest fell upon them) cut in pieces, the Law of War not being allowed them, because of that Proclamation, they had made from the Tower. The Gracians also that served under Alexander, as the Phocians, Thespians, Plataans, Orchomenians, and others, bearing them malice, spared them no more, so that great slaughter was made, they fighting it out to the last, having no other regard to their lives than this, *Var. lift. file to fell themat as dear a rate as possible. There were slain 6000 (Elian by 13, 169.7. fome millake hath 90000) and 30000 were taken captives, Alexander having buried all his flain (to the number of 500) affembled a Council of the Gracians, to which he referred what should be done with the Thebans. There their Enemies urged against them, that they had conspired with the Barbarians against the Gracians, in the time of Xernes, had fought amongst other allies of Perfia against Greece, and since that been acknowleged and rewarded by his Successors as well deserving of them. By these things they so incenced the Council, as to decree the City to be levelled with the ground, the Captives to be kild, and such as had fled to be sought for and brought to punishment. The King acquiescing in this severe sentence, executed it accordingly, selling all he had taken, except the Priests and those that had entertained his Father when he was young, and their kindred, with the posterity of Pindar the Poet, whose house alone he lest standing. This famous City then was demolished the last day of the Eleusinian Solemnities then celebrated by the Athensans, the twentieth day of the moneth Boedromion , after it had and demolifheth it.

He taketh

> continued in a fetled condition almost 800 years. 40. Alexander publishing an Edict, whereby all Gracians were forbidden to receive the Theban Exiles, the Athenians alone refused to obey it, fetting open their gates to them, being then celebrating the mysteries of Ceres. Hereat he was inraged, and when they had fent to deprecate his indignation the second time, forgave them onely on this condition: to give up to him

The Athenians the ten (Plutarch nameth but eight) Orators who had ftirred them up against receive the him, and the principal whereof were Demosthenes and Lycurgus. The Theban exiles People hereupon not knowing how to demean themselves, Phocios the Good, which maketh a quarrel be- who went ever crosse to Demosthenes in managing State affaires, made a twist him and Speech, wherein he would have perswaded the Orators to kill themselves like good Citizens, rather than to bring their Country into danger; but the People ill refenting this, expelled him in a tumult. At length Demades the Orator SECT. 5. being hired by Demost henes with five talents, persivaded the People to mercy, and so framed an answer to the King, that it should signific their readinelle to punish them if they should find them worthy thereof. They sent him then to alexander, with order, hot onely to take up this matter, but also to entercede for the Theban Exiles, and obtain leave for them to receive them. This he did by the power or his perswasions, faith Diodorn, although Pluearch faith it was done by Phicion , who after Alexander had call away from him the former Decree, and rejected the mellengers, was kindly received by him, after the King had understood that his Father respected him. He not onely admitted of his request but his counsel also: that if he loved an idle life he mould lay afide all thoughts of War, but if he thirlifed after glory he should transfer his Armies from the Greeks to the Barbarians. 3. fin writerh, that he gave them leave to keep their Orators, but forced them to banish their Captains, who going over to Daring much incommodated his affaires beyond the Seas. Arrianus onely mentioneth Charidemus to have fled to the Perfiant.

41. Alexander returned into Macedonia with his Army, where confulting about the Persian War, Antipater and Parmenio his choicest Warriours advised him first to marry, and beget children, and then to undertake the Expedition after he was provided of Heirs. But he being of a most quick and active spirits, and impatient of delay, would not hear of any such thing, seeing as he said, he was now created General of Greece, and had such For ces left him by his Father. After then he had by proposing the commodities of fuch an undertaking, inflamed the minds of his Soldiers with a defire thereof, he facrifized to his gods, and folemnized the playes to Jupiter, formerly instituted by Archelau his Predeceffor. The solemnity continued nine dayes, one being afforted to each of the Muses, during which in his Royal Pavilion which had twenty beds to eat on, he feafted the officers of his Army, and the Ambaffadors of the Cities. In the Spring, all things being now ready, he overinco Alia. marched with his Forces towards the Hellespont. They who account the least, saith Plutarch, reckon 30000 Foot, and 5000 Horse, and who the most 34000 of them and 4000 of these. For the maintenance of such an Army Aristobulus wrote that he had no more than 70 talents. Daris said he A. M. 3671. had provision but for thirty dayes, and Onesicrissis delivered, that he ought U. 11. an. 3. hesides this 200 talents. And though he was thus flendbelly surished yet V. C. 420.

besides this 200 talents. And though he was thus slanderly furnished, yet David Codoma-before his journy making inspection into the electes of his friends, to one he m. 3. assigned a Village, to another a plece of ground, to this a certain rent, and Alexand. 3. to that the Customs of such a port. When he had almost distributed all he had, Perdiccas asked him what he left for himself, and he answered Hope; then replyed the other. That shall be common to us with thee, and refused to receive any thing, which was followed by many; but fuch as would be willingly gratified, and thereby paffed away most of the revenues of Macedo-. nia. He passed over his men in 60 ships to Trom, and first of all cast his Spear upon the fliore, and skipping out, as it were, took possession of Asia, in the second year of his reign, and the second of Parius, Codomannus, the third of the 111 Olympiad, Evanetus being Archon, and in the third moneth before his leaving of the Office, and the fuccession of Ctesicles, under whose Government Diodorus placeth this Expedition, A. M. 3670.

42. To Antipater he committed the Government of his affairs in Europe, with whom he left 12000 Foot, and 11500 Horfe, as Diodorus huth it if * 1500 wiew being be not rather to be read. The Lacedamonians after his departure grudged his crept in. fuccesse, and lay watching for an advantage how to begin a War, and if pof- Diodorus ad fible divert the course of his good fortune, which after the battel of Arbela Olymp. 112. they supposed to be firly presented. For the issue of that battel being reported in Greece, many of the Cities who where jealous of his, power refolved to contend for their antient liberty, before the firength of the Perlians should be utrerly spent, which they might have to their affistance. They Nere incourse ed to revolt from tumults now railed in Thrace, For Memnon

SECT. 5. being fent General thither, having Soldiers at his devotion, stirred up the Barbarians to rebel, and got together a great Army. Antipater hereupon was forced to march against him and leave Macedonia; the absence of whom the The Lacede.

Lacedamonians thinking a fufficient occasion of working some notable fear, monians make excited the Gracians to agree together with united force to recover their listirs in his ab- berty. The Athenians conceiving themselves ingaged to Alexander, who had respected them above all others, resused to stir, but most of the Peloponnesians, and some others, gave their names willingly, and raised amongst them 20000 foot and 2000 horse, which were commanded by Agis the Spartan King. Antipater hearing this composed the matters of Thrace as he might, and with an Army of 40000 men raifed out of the Confederates of Greece marched against them, and joyning battel, after much opposition slew 5300 with the loffe of 3500 of his own men. Agis himfelf fighting most valiantly, after he had received many wounds was to be carried out of the fight But are van- and fo to be conveyed home. But being incompassed with Enemies, and seeing there was no hope to escape, he bade his men shift for themselves, and requished by Antipater his Licutenant, ferve their lives for the further fervice of their Countrey : he on his knees received his Enemies as well as he could, till having first killed some of them, at length he was flain after he had been King nine years.

43. Antipater having obtained this victory, was willing to put an end to the War out of fear of envy, by feeming to proceed further than the modefly of a subject should require. For he knew the high spirit of Alexander, who rejoyced in the victory, but not in him being Victor, which he not obfcurely grudged at, thinking so much to be detracted from his own glory as was added to that of another. The Lacedamonians therefore being con-And fend to him into Afia strained to send to him, he remitted them for answer to the Council of to beg pardon. Greece, which having heard what could be faid on both fides, referred the whole matter to the Cognifance of Alexander. They then gave up to Aneipater fifty Hostages, and sent into Asia to Alexander to beg pardon. Most of fuch learned men as were Eminent during this period have already, upon occasion, been spoken of.

CHAP. III.

The affairs of Sicilie during this Empire.

SECT. I.

The first Names and Inhabitants of this Island, with a relation of fuch things as preceded the Persian Empire.

1. CICILIE is an Island of the Mediterranean Sea, lying over against Ditaly at five miles distance; from which it is thought to have been severed by some Earth-quake, or the violence of the Sea, being joyned formerly by an Ishmus, or neck of Land, to the Continent.

The old Inhabitants of Sicilie.

2. It was first, from the Triangular Figure, called Trinacria, then Sicania, and afterwards obtained the name of Sicilie. The most antient Inhabitants were Cyclopes, or Gyants with one onely eye in their foreheads (as the Poets fancied) and the Lastrygones of the fame Original. After them succeeded the Sicani, by some said to be indigena, or naturals of the place; but by others a people of Iberia, or Spain, and so named from Sicanus, a River in that Countrey, whence they were expelled by the Ligyes, and coming into the Island

Island Trinacria changed its name into Sicania. After these, the Siculi a SECT. I. people of Italie (so named faith Thucydides from Italias a King of Arcadia) being expelled by the Opici, passed into this Island, and overthrowing the Sicani feized upon the best parts of it, and gave it the name of Sicilie, almost 200 years before the Greeks found it out. When Ilium was taken, fome Troians fled by ship from the Acheans into this Countrey, and fixing them-A.M.2821.

selves near to the Sicani, were all called Elymi, whose principal seats were Eryx and Egesta. To these were added some of the Phocensians, of those who in their return from Troy being driven by Tempest into Libya, or A-frick, thence passed into Sicilie. The Phaenicians also inhabited all over the Island in the Maritime parts, and the little Islands near adjoyning for the benefit of Traffick with the Siculi; But after that many Greeks arrived, they removed, and joyned themselves to the Elymi, and inhabited Morra, Soluns, and Panormus, because thence was but a little passage unto Carthage. So Lib.6. ad inimany Barbarians, and after this manner, inhabited Sicilie faith Thucydides, tiam.

with whom in the main of their relations, confent Diodorns, Strabo, Dionyfins of Halycarnassus, Pausanias, Constantinus Porphyrogenneta and others. 3. The first Greeks that came into Sicilie (as Thucydides proceedeth) were A.M. 3278.

Grants in Si-

fome from Chalcis in Eubara, who under conduct of Theocles planted Naxus, V. C. 20. The year following Archias the Corinthian, descended from Hercules, drove Achazi 10. the Siculi from that place where stood the Citie afterward called Syracuse. About the same time Lamis brought a Colony from Megara, which he first placed upon the River Pantacius, in a place called Trotilus. In the 45 year after Syracuse began to be inhabited, Antiphernus from Rhodes, and Eutimus out of Crete, with their feveral Colonies planted Gela, so named from the River by which it flood, the Inhabitants whereof 108 years after erected the great and Magnificent Citie Agrigentum, or Agragas, so called also from a River of the fame name. Zancla was first inhabited by some Pyrates of Cuma, a Citie belonging to Chalcia; but afterwards by a multitude that came promifcuously from Chalcis and other parts of Eubea, under the conduct of Perieres of Cuma, and Cratamenes of Chalcis, and were hence cast out again by the Samians and other Ionians, who fled from the Medes into Sicilie. Zancle was so named by the Siculi, from a Sicle, in their language Zancla, which it refembled. Not long after Anaxilas Tyrant of Rhegium banishing the Samians filled it with a mixed multitude, and called it Messana, after the name of his own Countrey. Himera was planted by the Zancleans, and many Chalcidians among it them, with whom also joyned certain Syracustans being expelled by the contrary faction, and called Myletide. Their language was mixed betwixt the Chalcidian and Dorick tongues. These were the Co-Ionies which from feveral parts of Greece planted Sicilie. As for other Towns that were Colonies of these Colonies, they shall be told whose they were upon occasion. 4. That Gyants inhabited Sicilie (although to some it hath seemed no other than the invention of Poets, who usually speak monstrously of antient things) the discovery of the last age bath made most manifest; at what time were in feveral places of the Island found the bones of such kind of men, and the perfect proportion of one or more within the earth, which upon touch mouldred all into dust. Cluverius in his Description of Sicilie, and Fazellus, herein give abundant fatisfaction, which might be further frengthned from what the discoverers of America relate concerning men of fuch stature; but that the Testimony of Scripture alone sufficeth to make evident the being of Gyants. That they were indigena, or first Inhabitants of Sicilie, is probable, and the very same with the Lastrygones. As for the Sicani, no credit is to be given to the Testimony of Thucydides in this point that they came out of Spain, for that Diodorno being this Countrey man, and certainly rather more concerned in the delivery of the Antiquities of it, than other Nations, averreth the most accurate Historians to have assirmed them indigene, which Timam, who lived under Agathocles the Tyrant, did fully demon-

The Sicani came not out of Spain.

384

SECT.I. demonstrace. Thucydides, who first obtruded this fable upon the Greeks, confesseth that they themselves were of a contrary opinion, and though they in a matter concerning their honour might not be heard, yet this may fatisfie, that in Spain there is no such River to be found as ever had the name of Sicanus, which fome of those who follow the opinion of Thucydides change into Sicoris (at this day Segre) and others speak of a Citie called Sicania, and one Sicanus Captain of the Colony, all which are as true as any. Neither could these Sicani be driven from their seats by the Ligures , whose habitation was not in Spain beyond the Pyrenean Hills, but in Gaul near the River Rhodanus and the Alps. Lastly, that difficult journey which those obscure people must have taken by Land (for the use of shipping was much later in Spain) through the Countreys of the Tyrrhenians, Umbri, Ligures, Ausona, Opici, Oenorrians, and other fierce and warlike Nations, after the passage of the Pyreneans, Alps, and Gaul, may justly induce as to give credie rather to the opinion of Diodorus, and of Demetrius Calatianus a most antient Writer; who, as the Scholiast of Theocritus telleth us, derived the Sicani from the Cyclopes or Gyants.

Neither the Siculi out of Italic.

5. That the Siculi came out of Italy feveral grave Authors relate, as amongst others Diodorus and Diony sins of Halicarnassus from the credit of Hellanicus the Lesbian, Philistus, and Antiochus, both of Syracuse; but they so diversly relate the story, that it appeareth to be no other than dubious, and fo intricate as nothing certainly can be pitched on. In Thucydides the Opici, in Antiochus the Oenotrians and Opici drove out the Siculi : But in Hellanicus instead of Siculi the Elymi and Aufone were expelled, with Siculus their King, by the Omorrians and Japyoes. Again, according to the mind of Philistus, neither any Siculi, Ausona, nor Elymi transported themfelves out of Italy; but the Ligures under conduct of Siculus. Solinus and Martianus make this Siculus the fon of Nopiune, Isiodorus the brother of Italus, Servius Captain of the Sicani, and Antiochus will have him a Roman Exile, whom Morges the Successor of Italus entertained. Further, Dienyfins writeth, that the Siculi were Native Inhabitants of Latium, and thence beaten by the Aborigines, which is plainly out of the road of history, the Siculi never having been mafters of Rome. It would be too redious to recite the feveral opinions concerning the time when these Siculi should make their passage out of Italy into this Island. And what Thucydides bringeth for a confirmation of his opinion, viz. that in his time fome of the Siculi remained in Italy, cannot but be false, no foot-steps of them being to be found out in that Countrey by the discovery of any Geography; so that others, on the contrary, grant that the whole Nation passed over. These arguments drawn from the uncertainty of reports constrain us rather to acquiesce in the opinion of Bochareus, who concludeth that no other stranger came from other parts to inhabit Sicily, but all were Indigena, except the Greeks and Phanicians, the Siculi and Sicani not being diftinguished in Nation but onely in place. From the Phanicians (who especially lived about the Promontory of Lilybaum, though they were dispersed throughout the Maritime Coasts) he sheweth the Island it felf, and every notable Town and River to have been named, in the first book of that admirable work intituled Canaan, 6. Sicily, faith Justin out of Trogus, was from the beginning the Countrey List. 4.

Cocalus. Dedalus. of the Cyclopes, which being extinct Cocalus made himself King of the Island. To him fled Dadalus for protection, from the presence of Minos King of Crete. This Dadalus was an Athenian, of the family of the Erechthida, and a famous Artist in all manner of Graven and Carved works. It happed that he had a Scholar, his own Nephew by his fifter, named Talos, who going beyond him in skill, he privately murdred him, and the matter coming out, was forced to fly for his life, and went into Crete. There being courteoufly enterrained by Minos, he wrought many rare pieces of Architecture, but at length fo displeased the King in some thing which concerned Pasiphae his wife, that he also fled thence into Sicily, where he was entertained by Cocalus King of the Sicani, then reigning at Inyens, called also Camiens. Some companying him in another, and that having invented fails, (whereas before oars onely were in use) learns not managing his with skill enough, his Veffel funk, and thereupon arofe the Fable that they escaped with wines made of feathers waxed together, and of the young man's foaring to high, till the Sun melting the wax, he thereupon fell headlong into that part of the Sea which afterwards bare his name. Others thought Icarus was drowned as he took water. But Minos getting notice whither Dadalus was fled, purfued him with an Army, and required Cocalus to give him up. Cocalus returned him a facisfactory answer, and invited him unto his house, where he stifled him in a bath, or else his daughters, for the love they bore to Dadalus, when they came to wath him (which was the cultom for women and maids to do unro guests, according to Athenaus) inflead of warm water, poured on him scalding pitch. He gave up his body to his men, pretending he had flipped by chance into hor water, and perswaded them to stay and plant in the Island, where they built Minon and Engrum, now Gange, the two first Greek Ciries founded in Sicily, as some note. The Cretans afterwards in revenge for their King's death, came and befreged Camicus five years to no purpose, and were shipwrackt in their return upon the Coast of Italy, where then resolving to stay and hide their disgrace, they built Hyria, betwixt Tarentum and Brundusium, and from them descended the lapyges and Messapii. This passage concerning Minos the younger, happened in the dayes of Hercules the Gracian, an Age before the Trojan War. 7. After Cocalus the several Cities (because they wanted rightful and succeffive Kings, as it feemeth, and lived under loofe Democracy \ became the thought that by the means of Pasiphae he escaped by boat, his Son Icarus ac- SECT. I.

Book II.

prey of Tyranni, whereof no Country was ever more fertil than this Island, faith Fustin. Of these, Anaxilaus his Justice vied with the Cruelty of the rest, and was not unrewarded. For at his death seaving his children young, whom he committed to the trust of Micythus his faithful flave, his Subjects to prized his memory, as they chose rather to obey him, and suffer the Majesty of a Kingdom to be managed by a slave, than desert his sons. But if by these Tyranni be to be meant, such as after the settlement of the Greek Colonies, made themselves Masters of the Cities (as we have no other ground than to believe; the name of Anaxilaus sufficiently declaring it's original) then Cocalus living an Age before the Trojan War, and the first Greek Colony mentioned by Thucydides being planted in the * 11 Olym- * A. M. 2723. piad, this after Cocalus is with great liberty used by Trooms or Fustin : feveral hundreds of years, (viz. five or fix) intervening betwixt Cocalus and those Tyrants. For the Cities were many years after their founding governed by the People, according to the custom of Greece, till Phalaris usurped in the State of Agrigentum, which Suidas writeth to have happened in the 52 O'ympiad, and Eusebius in the 54. This difference betwixt them may well be reconciled, if, with Cappellus, we believe that Phalaris coming to A. M. 3441. Agrigentum, there was kindly entertained for eight years, at the end where- Olymp, 54.an, 1. of took occasion from a guest, and perhaps a Judge of Controversies, to make V. c. 190.

himself Tyrant, and the People slaves.

8. Phalaru was born at Astypalea a City in Crete; his Fathers name was chi, 2. Laodamus, who died whilst this his son was an infant. He married Erythia,

Phalaris the

and on her begat Paurolas, a little before whose brith being banished, and deprived of the greated part of his effice, he continued long in a desolate condition, not knowing what to do, till at length a Sedition being raifed in the State of Agrigentum, he was sent for by the weaker faction, and in conclusion got all the power into his hands. He kept the Tyranny by the same arts he first obtained it, viz. fraud and crueler, for which cause he was grievoully hared by many, and his life laid at by those of whom he had well deserved. Erythia continued all her life with her son Paurolas at Astypalea, where though the was much importuned by many Suters, yet the remained Redfast in fidelity to her husband. The Citizens of Astypalea when they saw Phalaris had so advanced himself, either for that now their hatred was allai-Ddd thaiter and Melagippus.

SECT.I. ed, or out of fear of revenge, fent to him to intimate that they had revoked what had been formerly done against him, as unjust. He despised not this late repentance, but sent them his hearty thanks, and rewarded them. Having obtained a victory over the Leontines, his fon Paurolas fent him a Crown of Gold, which he returned back unto his wife Erythia. She was at length poyloned by Python one of her Suters, inraged at a repulle; which thing

Phalaris took most impatiently. 9. It hapned that one Perillus an Athenian, and an excellent Statuary, came to Agrigentum, where shewing his rare skill, he was kindly entertained by Phalars. He taking notice of Phalars his cruelty, framed a brazen Bull, which being heated and a man put in his belly, would by the roaring of him

Perillus and his brazen Bull,

186

that was thus cormented, imitate the voice of a natural one. Presenting him with this exquisite piece, as incomparable for the torturing of men, he admired his skill, but detecting his wickednesse, caused him first to make a try-1 of it, and excused himself to the Ashenians, who took it ill, as having done nothing but what was just and meet. If Perillus had onely made experiments, Phalaris had fatisfied all reasonable men; but threatning his Enemies with this Engine, and making good his word upom them as often as he could have occasion, he thereby incurred, and slighted the hatred of mankind. At the fame time flourished one Stefichorns a Poet of Himera, who died eight years before Phalaris. He wrote verses against the Tyrant, and raised an Army, animating the Inhabitants of Himera against him, with whom joyned Conon a most leud and naughty man, and divers others, all which, together with the Poet, at length fell into his hands. Conon was presently condemned to the Bull. He doubted at first what to do with Stefichorus, but at length beholding his worth, he not onely difmiffed him unpunished, but with largegifts; and ever after mightily reverenced him both alive and dead; infomuch as he defired the Himerians to build him a Temple, and Altars (offering for that purpose men, money, and all necessaries) and most lovingly comforted his daughters. 10. He was so great a contemner of Popularity, and so conscious of his wickednesse and publick infamie, that he refused the honours offered him by them of Melita, not for any pride, but with a friendly admonition, that it would be to them infamous, and to him not at all advantagious. So when Stefichorus, Cleaneta, Theane, and others, thought of writing in his praise, he seriously desired they would forbear, wishing rather that his name might be buried in oblivion, than celebrated in the Writings of Learned men, and, to no purpose, adorned with false commendations. Being grievously provoked by the affronts of the Meffenians, Catanians, Leontines, Zanclaans, and Tauromenites, he profecuted them to the utmost, often faying, that he most certainly knew they would fall into his hands, which accordingly came to passe. He confesseth that he had tortured in the brazen Engine 27 men, seriously wishing they might be the last; but he foresaw that Lamachus and Epiterfes, though absent, would increase the number. These things are related in the Epiffles that go under his name, which some Learned Men think written by Lucian. But whoever so drew to the life another's dispofition as he there doth his own, infomuch as Suidas accounteth them * very ad- * Sasparla mirable. If one consider their style, accurenesse, and invention, there are waste. no Epistles of any Tyrant, no not of any Orator or Philosopher to be compared with them. But if one look at the disposition of the man, he was a portentous thing, born for the chastifement of the naughtinesse of men, of Phalaris his cruel harred and unparalleld cruelty; yet of a most propense and munificent disposition. mind rowards his Priends, and withall reverencing Virtue fo much in his very Enemies, that for it's fake he would pardon injuries, and relinquish harred.

11. That is scarce credible which Clearchus relateth in (a) Athenaus, that (a) Like. he was transported with so great cruelty, as to have served up to his table suching and new born Insants. (b) Elian hash a more likely story concerning Chariton and Melanippus. Chariton loved Melanippus with an extravagant

travagant and immodely Love, as appeareth from the historian. Melanippus SECT. 2. having a contest with one of Phalaris his friends, was commanded, and at length forced to defift, which taking very ill, he complained of it to his Lover, and defiring his affiftance for killing the Tyrant, thought of taking in other young men into the conspiracy. Charnon defired of him to trust him alone with the matter to take an opportunity to revenge him, unwilling that both of them should miscarry in it if it were discovered; and on a time made at Phalaris with his dagger, but was prevented by his Guard, which he had continually about him. Being examined concerning his Complices, he endured great tortures, fo long, that Melanippus more fensible of them than he himself, went to the Tyrant, and revealed the whole matter. He admiring the courage and love of both, dismissed them, with this condition, that they should depart the same day out of Sicilie. This love which appeareth to have been no better than an unnatural luft, was afterwards by Aprilo called divine, whence, as in other respects, these impure Spirits, the gods of Heathens, betrayed themselves what they were. And hence it is no wonder that the Philosophers of old, fuch as Secrates, Plato, Xenophon, Afchnes, Cebes, and the rest, might approve of this affection towards Males, (e) Val. Mark. which the (c) Romans yer abhorred in some Ages, the (d) Lacedemonians 1, 6, c, 1 held as Capital, and the Lake wherein Sodom and Gommorah were swallowed Plut, in Marup, evinceth to have been contrary to the Law of God and Nature. But as cello. for Phalaris, after he had tyrannized fixteen years, he perished by the fury of (d) Alian all the multitude of Agrigemum, which, as (e) Cicro writeth, fell upon (e) offic. 1.2. him. Some thought that his fub jects conspired against him, being principled thereto by the doctrine of Pythagoras, of which opinion is also (f) Jamblich is in the life of this Philosopher. But the whole relation concerning Pythagorus his entercourse with Phalaris is therefore deservedly suspected, because the Philosopher being yet young had scarce passed into Italy. The death of Phalaris hapned about the first year of the 58 Olympiad, and the twelfth year of Cirus his Reign, reckoned from his first obtaining the Kingdom of Media.

SECT. II.

Of fuch thing as were Contemporary with the Persian Empire.

Free the death of Phalaris, the Cirizens of Agrigenium recovered A. M. 3525. their liberty, and enjoyed it till There again brought them under. Ot 75 an. 1. He was the fon of Anesidamus, and boasted that he was descended from V.C. 274. The Tyranus Oedipus. He got the prize at the race with the Chariot in the Olympick games, Xerxis 6. of Agrigenum, and is celebrated by (a) Pindar the Poet, whose Scholiast teacheth us, that he was Father in Law to Gelon Tyran: of Syracufe, by his doughter D. mine- (a) Olymp, ta, and married also his brother's daughter: At this time Panatius made Herod. 1.7. himself Lord of Leontium, and Cleander of Gela. Cleander, after seven 2.153, 60. years, was succeeded by his brother Hippocrates, who fore afflicted the peo- Sive Eliac. L. ple of Naxus, of Zancle, or Messana, and Leonium, whom he forced to posteriore acknowledge him for their Lord. After feven years, he was also slain in a battel against the Siculi, having before this made war with the Syracuscans, and by composition got from them the City of Camerina. After his death Ge-Gelon of Syralongthe fon of Dinomenes (descended of the race of the Rhodians, who with the Cretans and other Greeks had feated themselves in Sicilie) that had commanded his Forces with great successe, and to whom he committed the trust of his Children, breaking all obligations made himself Lord of Gela. After he was in possession of this Town, a Sedition happening in Syracuse, betwixt the Migistrares and People, he being called in to the assistance of the Governours that were driven out by the multitude, made himself Prince.

Such being the danger and infirmity of all Governments, except rightfully fuc-ceffive Monarchy. This fell out in the second year of the 72 Olympiad, Ddd 2

CHAP. III.

388

The Original of Synt-

SECT. 2. when Hybrilides was Archen at Athens , the 31th of Darius Hyftaspis , and the fame, as some reckon, wherein the battel at Marathon was fought. Now the comportment of Sicilian affairs constraining us to speak most concerning Syracuse, so considerable a place, both as to its self, as a Citie, and as the scene of so great transactions, requireth a more accurate de-2. Stracule was first inhabited by some Greeks of Atolia, and had the name of Ortygia. These were expelled by the Siculi, who possessed themselves of the place, and at length were outed also by a Colony led hither out of Peloponne fus by Archias the Corinthian, in the eleventh Olympiad, Romulus then reigning at Rome, and the Meffenian War being very hot in Peloponness. This new Colony, because of Archias, and for that many followed him from Corinth, owned that Citie for its Metropolis, which at that time was most powerfull at Sea. But many afterwards flocked out of other parts of Peloponnesus, and by little and little the Citie of Syracuse so increased as it became not onely the greatest, and most beautifull of all in Sicily, but of Greek Cities what soever, as Cicero affirmeth. It contained, as he writeth, four great Cities; the Island, Acradina, Tycha, and Neapolis. Its compasse was 180 furlongs, having, besides Suburbs, two Ports very commodious for shipping, being separated by the Island, and grounds about it very fertile. in some places rising into little Hills, but compassed about with Fennes. The first Inhabitants dwelt in the Island antiently called Ortygia; then as the Citie increased the other parts were added, whereof the latest was Neapolis. As for the state of the Citie, after it received a new beginning from Archias. the form of the Commonwealth was without doubt the fame that then was in the Metropolis under the Government of the Bachiada, viz. Oligarchical, bordering upon Aristocracie. Afterwards the common people waxing heady outed the better fort of the possession of the grounds, and seizing on the Government, made bad to be worfe, as the fad changes and defolations will shew. The Exiles (by Herodorm called Gamori) betook themselves to Gelon the Tyrannus of Gela, who coming to restore them with an Army, the people refifted not, but received him into the Citie, whereby obtaining the whole power, he restored it not to the Nobility, but made himself master of Syracuse. This hapned at the time aforesaid, and about 244 years after the Plantation of power of Ge-

Archias.

every way much inlarged, adorned, and inriched the Citie : out of all Conquered Towns he took the Noblest, and worst disposed Citizens, and brought them to Syracuse. He procured the affections of almost all that dwelt in Sicily, and fo greatly strengthen'd himself, that he was able with a Navy of 200 Triremes, and as great an Army as all Greece could fet forth against Xerxes, to help the Gracians in the Median War; and had gone to their affiltance, if they would either have granted him the Command of the Land Army or the Fleet. When he could obtain neither of those, he imployed his forces against the Carthaginians, who had been called into Sicily by the Egestans, and on the same day wherein the Greeks obtained their victory at Salamine, got so great an one over them at Himera a Maritime Town, that his glory is thought to have equalled, if not exceeded, the other of Themistocles. At this time the Carthaginians were very powerfull, and become Eminent; whose affairs being by necessity to be joyned with such matters as relate to this Island of Sicily, a more convenient place cannot be had, to speak something (as this work requireth) of the Original, and progresse of their Commonwealth.

3. Gelon so used his power as he was loved by all, and feared by none. He

His fucceffe against the Carthaginians.

4. Carthage was a Colony of Tyre, and Tyre of Sidon the most antient The Original Metropolis of Phanicia, mentioned by Homer with commendation for ingeof farthage. nious industry (who hath not one word concerning Tyre) and built by Sidon the eldest fon of Canaan. Tyre was built about the 2747 year of the World, and 240 years before Solomons Temple, as (a) Josephin hath ob- (a) Amigi ferved. The Greeks thought it received its name from Tyrm the Founder: A.c.

and (b) some invented a fable of a Nymph, called Tyros, beloved by Her- Sect. 2. cules. But Tfor in the Phanician language fignifying a Rock, the fituation it felf fufficiently declareth the Original of the name, which upon this account (b) Stephanus was communicated to three other place. was communicated to three other places, befides this eminent Citie, viz. Byzontus. (c) two in the Continent, and another in the same Island. Near the Island of (c) Seylax in this famous City flood Palatyrus, or Old Tyre, mentioned by Folhera, and cal- descriptione led a strong Citie even at the division of the Land of Canaan, which happed Phanices vide about 200 years before the building of that whereof we speak. Now (d) 30- Botharti Ca-Sephus maketh the Temple of Fernsalem to have been founded in the ele- cap. 17. venth year of the reign of Hiram King of Tyre, who was fon to Abebaal, by (d) Antiquit, Josephin called Abibalus, and by Enfebius, Abelbalus, Hiram, or Huram lib.8. cap. 2. & according to the Hebrews, (by the Greeks called Irom and Syron (for Ho- Contra Apiorom) by Eupolemus) was a great friend to David, and supplied Salomon his nem lib.1. fon with materials, and work-men for building the Temple. He also propofed hard questions to Solomon to be unfolded, as Menander testified, who translated the Tyrian Annals into the Greek language : He strengthned, and inlarged the Citie of Tyre, as Dins also wrote, and reigned 34 years. After him his fon Beleastartus reigned 7. and Abdastartus 9. who being slain by the four fons of his Nurse, the eldest of them reigned twelve years. Then Astartus the son of Baleastartus 12. his brother Astarimus 9. who was flain by his brother Phelles. Phelles reigned but eight moneths, being killed by Ithobalus the Priest of Aftarta, who reigned 32 years; after him Badezorus his fon 6. then Mettinus his fon 9. and lastly, Premation 40, in the feventh of whose reign his fifter Dido built the Citie of Carthage in Africk. Therefore from the beginning of Hirams reign to the building of Carthage intervened 155 years and eight moneths; and whereas the Temple was founded at Terufalem in the twelfth of his reign, from the building of the Temple to that of Carehage piffed 143 years and eight moneths, as 70/1phus collecteth from the Teltimony of Menander the Ephelian, in his first book against Apion. 5. But Appear in his History of the Punick Wars, writeth that Carthage

The feveral opinions concerning the building of Carthage.

Phanicians to have led out Colonies as far as the Pillars of Hercules, and planted some, a little after the Trojan War, upon the Maritime Coasts of Africk, with which Virgil closing, feigneth Dido to have reigned at Carthage at that time; whereas she was 300 years later, according to the Testimony of the Phanician Annals: fo as Servins upon the Poet affirmeth the whole flory of Aneas and Dido to be a fiction, and utterly against the course of History. Further, Eusebins noteth that some accounted Carthage built 143 years after the destruction of Troy, about the 2966 year of the World, and the 23 of the reign of David, 164 years or more before the time affigned to Dido by Menander. For the reconcilement of these several affertions it must be of three parts, confidered that Carthage confided of three parts, viz. Cothon, Megara, and Byrfa, whereof the first was the Port, and the last the Citatel compassed about by the second, called Magalia and Magaria, but more truely Megara, signifying properly in the Punick language, dwellings in a strange Countrey. 'Tis conceived that these might be built at several times; as that part about the Haven before the War of Troy; the other some time within $44 years after the destruction of it, which might rightly, in respect of the other, be called Carehada, or New Town; and lastly, the Byrfa by Dido 165 years after. For the Phanicians being masters at Sea, might according to their pleasure, as they had occasion, send out Colonies, which they began to do from the time that Johna expelled them out of the Land of Canaan. The Greeks themselves believed that Cadmus made an expedition into Africk, and was built by the Tyrians, 50 years before the destruction of Troy, which precedeth the former date 360 years. He nameth as founders Zorus and Carchedon, according to the opinion of the Greeks, who thought them the

Captains of the Colony; whereas I for, or Zor, was the name of the Metropolis, and Carchedon of the new Citie, Carthada fignifying a New Citie in the Phanician language, as Solinus witneffeth. Strabo again will have the Lib.t. p.48.

8. These Suffeces were more rightly in their own Language called Sophesim, the Hebrew name of those chief Tudges amongst the Ifraelites, who from Johna to Saul governed their Commonwealth, and the History of whose actions by us called Judges, hath the same title of Sophesim, for that interpretation which renders it Sophim (i.e. Overfeers) at the first fight appeareth lesse probable. Their Office was to * assemble the Senate, in which * Living ibid.

doubt lesse they presided and proposed. They decided causes Criminal, but Lege Wibbonem warlike matters, or having command of the Armies. To these Suffeces was Defor. Reip.

their power was confined to home, nothing appearing of their medling with Emmium in the other of Lacedamen, is to be gathered from * Justin, who speaketh of * Lib. 10.

added a Senate, which because Arestotle compareth it with that of Laceda-mon, may be supposed elective out of the best sort and most antient men, and the Senators it's likely, injoyed the dignity all their lives. How many they were in number doth not appear; but that herein this Senate exceeded 100 persons that out of it were chosen for Judges, to take account of the actions of all Generals at their return from the Wars. This Senate, as that at Rome, was the chief member, and as the Soul of the State, wherein the Suffeces propounding, as the Confuls there, all thines of moment were brought to it; especially what concerned those great things of Empire: viz.

Peace, War, and Leagues. The Sufferes deliberating with the Senate, if it was unanimous, and they refolved the same thing, their Decree was Law to

9. In the Concis of Affembly of the People, any one of the rabble might ecticit.

399

SECT. 2. there built many Cities, as appeareth out of Nonins; and he built the Citadel at Thebes about the time of Joshua. In Procopius his age, who lived under Justinian the Emperour, about the 540 year of Christ, the two Pillars were yet standing, which those Canaanites erected that fled from the face of Joshua, in that part of Africk, called Tingitana, as the inscription tellified, which we formerly mentioned, and Enfebius writerh that these same Canaanites led Colonies into Tripo is in Africk. Lastly, amongst several other Cities built by the Phanicians, the most considerable, after Carthage, was Mica, some ten miles distant from it, which Aristotle, from the Phanician Histories reporteth to be 287 years antienter than Carthage, and Velleius Paterculus to have been built by the Tyrians a few years after Gades, about the time of Codrus, who being Contemporary with Saul, this Citie obtained the name of Heica or Livea, that is (faith Bocharius) in the Phanician language, Old or Antient. 6. Dido Was fifter to Pygmalion King of Tyre, & wife to Sicheus, or Sicharbas Menader E. their Uncle the Priest of Hercules. Sicham being murdred by Pygmalion for phofins and his Wealth, the out of harred to, or for fear of her brother fled into Africk, Josephum at with all the could take, & thereby disappointed the murderer of his prey. The lib.18 Hory goeth, that coming into Africk, the & her Companions were repelled by Applian lib de Hiarbus the King of that placestill they craftily defired to buy of him fo much bellis Panisis, ground as an Ox's hide would compafie. The Africans laughed at their folly, Servinsin and out of defire to fee what use they could make of so little ground, swore to Aniad libit make good the bargain. The Phanicians then cut the Hide all into one small thong, with which they encompassed twenty furlong, and thereon built a Cassle, thence, (faid the Greeks) called Byr fa. But learned men explode this story of the Hide as a meer invention, and a fable raised from a false explication of the word, which in the Hebrew tongue is Bofra, and fignifying a fortified place, or Castel, is changed into Byrsa for the better found, because the Genius of the Greek language suffereth not S & R to be joyned together. Infin out of Trogus relateth that Hiarbas King of Mauritama fent for ten of the principal Carthaginians, and required Dido in marriage, threatning else to make War upon them. At their return they told her he desired some one who might teach his people breeding and manners, but none could be found that was content to leave his Countrey, and joyn himself with the Barbarians, whose lives were like to those of wild beafts. She blaming them all exceedingly, that they preferred their private commodity before the good of their Countrey, to which if need required they ought their very lives, they opened to her the whole matter, faying, that what the would impose upon others, the ought not her felf to refule. Being caught with this wile, she long called on the name of Sichaus, her husband, with many tears and great lamentation, then taking three moneths time for the doing of what there was necessity for, the made a pile of wood, as though to make a Parentation to Sicham, and appeale his Ghost before her second marriage. Having killed many beasts, the ascended the Pile with a Sword in her hand, and turning to the people faid, that now she was going to her husband, and therewithall killed her self. Before the name of Dido (which some make to fignific Loved or Amiable, Vide Buchari and others more probably Wandring or Erratick) the had that of Eliffa, be- Cassan, tokening a Divine Woman, or Virago. The Latin Word Virago, in Greek lib. 1646 syritten Ouirago, is in Eulebius corrupted into Ovirago and being applied as Simfon, all written Ouirago, is in Eusebius corrupted into Origo, and being applied as a A.M.3131.

The ftory of Didg.

Government at Carthage.

perplexed Joseph Scaliger and others. 7. Carthage then being re-edified, or inlarged by Dido, and the Colony the brought thither, about the 3132 year of the World, in the dayes of Johas King of Judah, and Jehu of Ifrael, 310 years after the deltruction of The form of Troy, 97 before the first Olympiad, and 120 before the building of Rome, was at first under Monarchical Government; but afterwards rejecting it, indured many hizards and hardships, which followed loose liberty, whereof most are briefly recited by Justin in his eighteenth book, and those that (a) Polit. follow. The (a) Philosopher compareth this Commonwealth with those of libra, cap. 9.

name to the Citie, and not to the woman, by a millunderstanding hath much the Cretans and Lacedamonians, Saying that it was mixed of Arifforiary and SECT 2. Policy, ashe calleth it. (b) Polybus faith it was composed of Kingly, Aristocratical, and Democratical Governments, and (c) Isocrates maketh (b) Lib. 16. it Oligarchical at home, and in War Monarchical. As two Kings at Lace- (c) In Nycocle damon had the first rank of Magistracie with equal power, so at Carthage pag. 61. tolius two persons, by them called Sufferes, and by Aristorie, and Polybius, and Geneve 1636. Corn. Nepos termed Kings, yet onely nominals As the former were for life, fo these were but Annual (in which respect (d) Livie compareth them with (d) Lib. to. the Consuls of Rome) and their dignity being hereditary, those were yearly elected out of any noble Families. Such were especially preferred as were accounted most eminent for Virtue, and able to defray the charges of their place. Ariffetle commendeth this above the Lacedamonian custom, all but that concerning their wealth, imputing it as an error to the Legislator; who ought another way to have provided for Magistrates, that they might attend publick businesse without any detriment to themselves, and so be preferred meerly for their Virtue.

The Suffetes,

the whole State; but if the Senate and Sufferes difagreed, then was the marter referred to the People. Concie or Asspeak his mind freely, and without danger contradict the Magistrates. The People's Decree concerning any thing referred, was taken for the ultimate determination of the whole and State, and being once passed was so binding, > best form of a Commonwealth, affirming this Constitution to have no place in the best modelled States, But * Polybius differring from the Philo- * quo supra, sopher, where he compareth the Carthaginian with the Laconick and Roman Commonwealths, sheweth that it was poised of the three kinds of Government, that the Sufferes were as Kings, the Sanasa held the place of Optimates or Nobility, and the People a convenient power. Yet he addern, that when Hannibal made War upon the Romans, (which happened ten years after the death of Aristotle,) the State of Carthage declined from it's antient and best condition, the People having assumed more than formerly, when the Roman Senate's authority was yet whole. This be, thinketh to have much confule Polyincommodated their affaires, and brought great advantage to the Romans, bium. But what authority the People had during the best and most ancient State, he that it was not lawful to offer any thing against it, which Aristotle reprehenderh (and well may he) as too Popular, and too much declining from the no where in those Books and fragments that are remaining, declareth. Em. thinketh that it confifted in electing Magistrates, making Laws, Leagues,

392

SECT. 2. Peace, and War; in appointing and ordering Negotiations, Cultoms, Tributes, and fuch like things, which concerned the generality, "and respected the profit of the multitude. But some of these things seem rather to have fallen under the confideration of the Kings and Senate; however the diforders that followed, as in all other such Governments, will satisfie the Reader in his opinion of the excellency of Monarchy. 10. Besides the Senate there was a Council of 104 men, whereof Ariforle onely informeth us, and which, according to the round number, from him we may call the Centumvirate. They had power to chuse five men out of their body, who had very large and great authority; Both these forts of Magistrates retained their povver longer than any other, enjoying it both before and after they came to be of the five, which thing was plainly Oligarchical. But in that they were not chosen by lot, but by the Suffrages of the People, and ferved without wages; in that they alone took cognisance of, and judged controversies, and publick actions, none being remitted to others, as the custom was at Lacedamon, this he taketh notice to be Aristocratical. He compareth the power of the Cemumvirate with that of the Ephori at Sparia, whereby he teacheth us, that the power of judging lay in it. And as the Ephori were (acording to him) Conservators of Popular liberty at Sparta, protecting the Plebeians against the power of the great ones, so it is likely, from these words of Aristotle, that those 100 men at Caribage were the Keepers of the Popularity. Herein he prefereth them before the Ephori, Cenfors.

Council of

Pretership.

fome that made inspection into the manners of the Citizens, as Corn. Nepos telleth us in the life of Amilear, the Father of famous Hannibal, from whom they removed a beautiful young man called Afdrabal, because he was reported to be more familiar with him, than modely required. There was also a Pratorship which had authority to look to the Customs and Tributes, and also to prefer Laws, as appeareth by Hannibal, who being chosen into this office, not onely reformed the Customers, but also taking notice of the corruption of Judges, procured a Law for them to be chosen every year. But whether there were more than one of there Officers, is not to be discovered from antient Writers.

that they were not chosen out of the rabble, but the better fort of Citizens, wherein lay also a piece of Aristocracy; for mean persons being preferred to greatest places, do much hure a Commonwealth, faith he, and have already endamaged that of the Lacedemonians. Amonst civil Officers there were

11. Besides the faults besore mentioned, Aristotle reprehendeth the Cufrom of chuling the Suffetes for their riches, which openeth a dore to avarice wealth.

Faults in the and indirect practices thence arising. He also noteth it as a fault, that one and the same man had several Offices, which yet they esteemed as a great honour. One decestable practice they used of old, to sacrifize to their gods humane Sacrifices, when any affliction or difafter fell upon them, and even their own Sons, as Place witneffeth, which custom they seem to have brought with them out of Palastine, every year fending thither such kind of presents unto Hercules, as we find in Pliny. Another absurd Law they had, which Lib 30, call forbad any Citizens to learn the Greek Langage, left they should hold intelligence with the Enemy, because one Suniator had so done with Diony sine the Good Laws. elder, as Tuffin writeth. This indeed was laudable, that this City abhominated Drunkennesse, and severely prohibited Wine as much as to be tasted in in the Camp, as Plate recordeth in his Laws. This also Aristotle commendeth, that, for an incouragement to warfare, they had a Law which gave liberty to a Soldier to wear so many Rings as he had served times in the field. The People were by their natural constitution, morose and surly, obedient on of the peo- to their Magistrates, tyrannical towards their Subjects, most dejected in time ple agreeable of fear, and cruel in anger, refolute in their defigns, notwithstanding all force of flattery, and so infamous for their breach of faith, that the Punick government. faith or trust became a Proverb. As for their greatnesse and Dominion, the description thereof is to be lest to it's proper place. Now must their affaires abroad in Sicily and other parts, be defined with the matters of that Island.

12. At what time, or upon what occasion the Carthaginians first came into Sicilie is uncertain, (a) Livie will have them first called in by the Sedition of the Islanders. in the year that T. Quintius (Sirnamed Cincinnaius, as al- (a) Pecad, I. fo Penno) and Cn. Julius Mento were Confuls, which was in the beginning lib 4. of the Peloponnesian War, the 323 year of the City, 50 years after the pass fage of Xerxes into Greece, and consequently as many from the Victory which Gelon got over them; a groffe mistake. (b) Justin out of Trogus, (b) Lib, 18. having first related their impious custom of pleasing their gods by humane Sacrifices, addeth, that the divine powers being therewith displeased or averse to them, when they had long unhappily made War in Sicilie, they translated it into Sardinia, and there lofing the greatest part of their Army, received a grievous overthrow, whereupon they banished Mazan their General, (by whom they had conquered a great part of Sieilie, and done great matters against the Africans) with that part of the Army which remained. The Army taking this in great disdain, sent to the City to defire a repealing of the A& of banishment, and threatned by force to rescind it, in case they were thereto constrained by a denyal of their sure. Their message being despised, they befieged the City, and after a few dayes took it. Mazans calling the People together, complained of the injury, excused the necessity of the War, and inveighed against the contempt of his Victories. He said he would pardon all, but such as had been authors of the injurious Exile of their fellow Citizens ; and accordingly putting ten of the Senators to death, he restored the City to it's Laws. Not long after being accused of an intention to make himself absolute, he was punished both for his paricide committed against his Country, and his own Son (as Fustin termeth it) whom being a Priest, he had crucified, for refuling to come to him before he had finished his superstitious rites, and when he came appeared in his purple and other ornaments, which Mazans thought unsuitable with the condition of him his Father. Him succeeded Mago, by whose industy the wealth, dominion, and reputation of the Carthaginians, for matters of War, increased. 13. Mago being the first, who by ordaining military discipline, had faid Tuffin lib, 19 the foundation of Empire, and added to the ffrength of the City, as well by introducing Virtue as the Art of War, left two Sons behind him, Afdrubal and Amilear, who by treading in his paths, succeeded as well to the greatnesse as the Patrimony of their Father. Under their conduct the State made War in Sardinia, and fought against the Africans, who demanded Tribute for the ground on which Carthage flood, which also at length they constrained the Carehaginians to pay. Asdrubal died of his wounds in Sardinia, whose death was ennobled by publick mourning, eleven Dictatorships, as Tulin calleth them (by which feemeth to be understood no other than so many times fending out, or commissionating as General, with full power in the field, yet so as to be under the commands of the State) and four Triumphs : and the Enemies of Carthage took heart, as if with the Captain it's force and power was also dead. The Inhabitants of Sicilie then vexed with the continual injuries of the Carthaginians, betook themselves to Leonidas the brother of the King of Sparta, and a great War infued, wherein both parties long strugled with various Fortune. At this time came Ambassadors from

CHAP. III.

Darins (the Son of Hystaspes) King of Persia, commanding the Carthaginians to forbear offering humane Sacrifices, and eating mans flesh, requiring Dainst his them to burn their dead rather than bury them, and demanding affittance mediage to the against the Greeks, with whom he was about to ingage in War. They denied to afford any succours because of their continual Wars with their neighbours ; but obeyed him in the reft, lest they should seem too stubborn , faith Tuffin; yet that they flood not to their word, the testimonies of Plato, Diodorus, and Pliny, do certifie. Whilft these things passed, Amilcar was flain in the War of Sicilie, leaving three Sons : Amilco, Hanno, and Gifgo. Margine ad Aldrubal alfo left fo many: viz. Annibal, Aldrubal, and Sappho. Of 1. 19. excuf. thefe, Annibal is militaken for Annibal the great, by one who hath made Felice Kingliofome short Notes upon * Justin, and Amilear his Uncle, for Amilear Bar- nio. 1651.

Book II.

SECT. 2. chas Father to the famous Annibal, and Mago also for another of this name. that lived * many years after in the dayes of Diony sins the younger, and Timoleon. The Annotator wondreth what came into Justin's mind to make Annibal (the great) the fon of Afdrubal, and well he might, if any such thing had been intended: he also referreth the Reader to the life of Timolean, to find that Mago killed himfelf, and was after his death nailed to a crosse, because he fought unprosperously in Sicilie, which Plutarch intendeth of another person. Of this groffe mistake of one (whosever he was) that took upon him to inform beginners, Students in History are to take norice and beware.

14. For this Amilear feemeth no other than the very same that was slain in the battel fought with Gelan of Syracufe, in the fixth year of Xerxes, Son to Darius King of Persia, from which was made a digression into the as-The great de faires of Caribage. With Amiliar perished $ 50000 Caribaginians; the cufe.

· Vide infra

paragr. $3.

Captives that remained of his Army, filled all the Cities of the Island, and the State of Carehage was conftrained to beg peace, having, as some say, made this War at the instance of Xerxes, that thereby the Greeks in Sicilie might be diverted from helping their Friends. After this, Gelon was offered the Hered. 1,7. Kingdom of Sicilie; but he generously refused it, whereby he obtained the 6-153. greater glory and love. At length, having feeled all things well, he died full lib. 13, 6, 31. of honour at Syracuse, after he had held the Principality about thirteen years. A.M. 3522. In the third year of the 75 Olympiad his elder brother Hieron succeeded 01, 25.44.5

Hieron of Syra- him. He rebuilded Catana, and changed it's name into Atna, the Moun- V. C. 276. tain of which name about this time brake out into flames, as fifty years after Xerair & it did also. In the beginning of his reign he was much unlike to his brother Gelan, being suspicious, cruel, coverous, and surbulent : then caught with a lingering difease, he was much amended by the conversation of most Learned men. After this he fought prosperously against the Carthaginians, who now again returned into Sicilie, overthrew Thrafydaus of Agrigentum in a great battel, and drove him to desperation : at length he incurred the hatred of the Syracusians, uncertain for what cause, and shortly after withdrawing himself to Catana, there died in the second year of the 78 Olympiad, when he had held the Principality from the death of Gelon eleven years

15. After him his brother Thrasybulas seized upon the power, whose

and eight moneths. Thrafybulus.

practices flirred up the Citizens to recover their liberty with the ha-Rening of his ruine. For being fet upon by them, he was overthrown, and V. C. 187. reduced to such a straight, that he fled into Locri on the Coast of Italy, and there killed himself, having held the Soveraignty ten moneths from the death The Syraculi- of Hieron. The Syraculians now gladly refumed their liberty; yet not their liberty.

therewith content, that they might the more secure it, they freed also many other Cities of Sicilie, from Tyranni and forein Garrisons. But not long after they fell into a most pernicious Sedition. For excluding those from ho- Aith Polit. nours whom Gelon had brought into Syracufe for the establishment of his own 1,5,6,3. interest, they themselves bearing all Offices of Magistracy, and governing the Commonwealth, though they took not away from the other the freedom of the City, the lately made Denizons not enduring it, conspired together, being in number 7000 of 10000 which Gelon had brought in. Three years after liberty recovered, they fodainly fell upon two parts of the City: the Island and Acradina. The natural Inhabitants overpowering them in numbers, befieged them close, and overthrowing them in a Sea fight, at length constrained them to acquiesce in the present state of things, or else quit the City, after the Sedition and tumult had endured two years. In the mean time by the conduct of Ducetin a Sicilian, those planters that Hiere had placed in Catava, were thence ejected, and the old Inhabitants restored to the place, whom he had cast out : now also the whole Island was restored to it's antient condition, the Exiles being repossessed, and new comers driven out, who ferled themselves at Messana, the utmost part of the nling them as a Guard, he manifeltly pressed towards the soverainty, but by the Union of those who were in greatest grace with the people, he was repressed, and when the beggerly sort would needs undertake his protestion. killed in a tumult. When others not at all deterred by this example aspired after fuch power as threatned liberty, the people for to humble those that carried their heads highest, in imitation of the Athenians brought in the use The Petalism. of the Petalism. As they by their Ostracism removed such Civizens for ten years, who for their reputation and interest were dangerous to the freedom of the Citie, fo the Syracusians by the Petalism removed such like for five

CHAP. III.

The form of the Spacufian

Common-

wealth.

the better fort returned to the care of the Commonwealth, after which it remained in quietnesse for some time, but again relapsed, as necessarily it must, from the informity of Antimonarchical Governme t. The Wars of Duceins Captain of the Siculi, as also the Agrigentines, Trinacrians, Leonthe Swacu-nished was written in a leaf of an Olive, according to * Diodorus, both which * quem lege ad in the same language were fignified by the word Petalos. But this constitute of your, 81. tion, as the other at Athens, could not long continue. For those Eminent and 2. persons who were most fit for State Affairs, for fear thereof by little and Quickly abro- little withdrew themselves from publick businesse to a private life. Hereby the Commonwealth fell into the hands of bold, rash, unskilfull, and the naughwighty rea- tieft fort of men, whence grievous incommodities and dangers followed. By these things the people were moved to abrogate the Law of Petalism, and

17. Abroad the Syracusians had War with the Tuscans in Italy; with years. This kind of banishment, without losse of honour, or fortune, was called in Greek Pefalismos, because his name whom any one would have ba-

16. That form of a Commonwealth was now established at Syracuse, Sect. 2.

which Aristotle properly calleth Policie, mixed of O igarchie and Democra-cie; which, how dangerous it was, appeared shortly. For, after some years, the State continuing in this form, and the number of Citizens increasing, one Tyndarides, an Eminent man, and very rich, egged on by his ambition, brought it into great danger. For binding to him the indigent rabble by his gifts, and tines, and Egestans in Sicily, wherein most commonly they had the better, and either fully brought under, or bound to them by Leagues, most of the Cities in the Island. Leontium a most flourishing Town was utterly destroyed when it now gaped after the Empire of Sicily, the principal Citizens being removed to Syracuse, and the multitude driven into Exile. Out of these motions they fell into the Athenian War in the first year of the outh Olympiad, concerning which we have already sufficiently spoken. Syracuse was so exhausted therein with expences and slaughters, that upon the brink of ruin it was meerly preserved by the wisdom and valour of Gylippus, a stranger of Sparta; and not onely preserved, but made victorious to admiration, and inabled to return to the Athenians so great overthrows by Land and Sea. This War which begun in the 50th year after the recovery of their liberty (by means of the Egestans, who craved aid of Athens against them and the Seliminion, and are busie to inlarge their bounds, being carried out by the force of ambition rather than reason, often fall into a necessity of defending their own Estate, and sometimes lose all. 18. The multitude grown exceeding high upon this successe, would not rest fatisfied with its former privileges, but so ordered the matter, that the temper of this Commonwealth more and more degenerated. Diocles a man of prin- Lib 2. cap.4. cipal note, who had perswaded them to put to death Nicias and Demosthenes Diod.

nuntians) lasted not fully three years, leaving a sufficient warning to all, of the viciffitude of humane affairs, and shewing, that they who gape after Dothe Athenian Generals, being of a most severe and rigid disposition, eloquent tongue, and great reputation for wifdom, perswaded the people to Olymp, 92. change the Commonwealth, and elect Magistrates by lot, whereas formerly and to they were left to the suffrages of the people. The former way inclined to V.C. 342, Oligarchy; but, by this, admission was given to the meanest and unfittest Davis Nothi, new modelled person; Dut, by this, adminion was given to the of Diocles his wisdom, 12. by Docles.

Some think that the multitude having got a promise from the great ones in Eee 2

CHAP. III.

SECT. 2. the late danger, in case they would well demean themselves, now wrested this Law from them, that Diocles perswaded the Nobility, and the better fort to give way to the time for avoiding some greater mischief, and then he with his Collegues having power from the whole State, as Diodorus addeth, form'd this new Commonwealth with convenient Laws, whereby this liberty was bounded, and other things defined as they thought, but falily, made for publick good. This Diocles was in punishment of vice rigid, and inexorable, and yet most just in what was deserved by any man. His Laws were so well thought of by the vulgar, that many Cities of Sicily received them on their own accord, the whole praise of the invention being given to him, though he had others joyned with him in the work, that were excellent for wisdom and prudence. In after-times one Cephalus under Timoleon, and Polydorus under Hieron, were deputed to the making of Laws, but neither of them were accounted Legislators, but both Commentators upon him, who in the form of his speech was something short and obscure.

19. Diocles amongst other Laws ordained, that it should be Capital for any Died, adolar man to come into the Forum, or place where the people was wont to meet, 91. am,4. with his Arms, and that neither the plea of ignorance nor any other excuse should stand him in stead that so offended. Afterwards it hapned that he himself having issued out against the Enemy who made incursions, as he returned with his sword, heard of a tumult in the Forum, and so went direrectly thither, not thinking what he had about him. Being for this reprehended by a private man as breaking his own Laws, he cried out he would do no such matter, but establish them with his blood, and therewithall killed himself. In the Commonwealth thus new modelled by him, 'tis uncertain what order there was, or what method was observed in acting. There was a Senate confishing of 600 men, as we understand from Diedorus; but the same of it was very obscure, and the power, as may be gathered, exceeding small, which maketh it be so seldom mentioned. The multitude was sole Lord of all, and dayly meeting together created the chief Magistrates, disposed of the Militia, placing, and displacing Officers therein, decreed War, made peace, contracted Leagues and Alliances, exercised power as to life or death, granted Indemnity, banished, and recalled at their pleasure. Other things of leffer moment were left to Magistrates, which were various. as in other popular Commonwealths. They were annual, as the Generals abroad, 2.3.4. or more, as the people pleafed, the General at home who was over the Militia of the Citie in time of peace, and had great authority. Others were chosen by lot, as Judges, Treasurers, Censors, and such like. amongst which were also those that oversaw the matters at Sea, the Citie having an excellent fite for trading. But things could not thus long standthe Government being such, and wherein the wifest fort could do least. and the foolish unexperienced rabble was most powerfull, though having no skill in State affairs they little minded what they did, and onely aimed at their private advantage. Hereby they were eafily led afide by one, who cunningly, though underhand, wrought his own defigns. For scarce were 8 years passed Dionyfins inover from the overthrow of the Athenians, when Dionysins the son of Herflaveth Syramocrates, a man of a subrile head, and deep dissimulation, so sooled the multitude, as obtaining from it a Guard for his person, he invaded the Tyranny in the fourth year of the 93th Olympiad, the very same that the Citie of Athens was yielded up to Lysander. How this was effected must more particularly be related, to let the reader behold the danger of Antimonarchical Government, and the happinesse of a people under that of hereditary Kings.

20. The Citizens of A gelfa (who had entred into League with Athens against the Syracustans, and been cause of the Athenian War, by reason of How this was effected by the controversie betwixt the Selinuntians and them about some grounds) degrees. were in great fear after the overthrow of their friends to be called to account, quitted those grounds for which they had contested. But their adversaries not resting satisfied with the restitution of these Territories, but seizing also themselves into their protection. The Carthaginians were very desirous to SECT. 2. be mafters of this Citie, fo fit for their purpose of Conquering Sicily, but on the other hand they stood in fear of the Syracufians, who had so lately grapled with , and worlted the power of Athens. Yet their ambition prevailing they promised them aid, which they committed to the care of Hannibal, then one of their principal Magistrates, giving him Commission to make War if the of their principal and the cafe should so require. After the death of Amilear the affairs of Carthage Justin, lib. 19. had been managed by his, and his brothers fons, being fix in number, under whose conduct War was made upon the Moors and Numidians, and the Africans were also constrained to remir the Tribute which had been formerly paid them for the fite of the Citie. Now it was, that this greet & numerous family being dangerous to the liberty of the Citie, by doing, and judging all things, 100 ludges were chosen from amongst the Senators, who received an account from the Generals at their return from the War, that by this awe they might so manage affairs abroad, as having an eye upon Justice, and the Laws at home. To Amilear in Sicily succeeded his son Amileo, who having good successe in the War, both by Land and Sea, on a sudden lost his Army by the force of Pestilence, for which disaster there was a sad mourning at Carehage (as it is largely described by Justin) and he at his return killed himself. "Hannibal was his brothers son, being the Grandson of Amilear * Ad Olymp. by his fon Gefco, or Gifgo, as * Diodorus informeth us.

21. Hannibal having an inbred harred against all Greeks, and an earnest A.M. 3595. defire by his own acts to redeem the credit of his family, was glad of an op- Olympa. portunity to gratifie his Countrey, and near upon seventy years after the ann. 3. overthrow, and death of his Grand-father, undertook the employment. He V.c. 344. first fent to the Syracustans, referring the matter betwixt the two Cities unto them, that the Selinuncians refusing to stand to any award, as he knew they would, a more specious pretence might be obtained for the War. They accordingly opposing it, the Syracusians decreed to hold them as Allies and Confederates, and also to be at peace with the Carthaginians; but the two concerned Cities falling upon each other, both Syracufe and Carthage was thereby drawn into the quarrel. Hannibal then having both in Spain Ad ann. 4. and Africk made great preparations, the next year landed at Lilybaum the most Southern Cape of Sicily towards' Africk, and setting upon the Seli-nuntians at unawares with a valt Army, took their Citie in the 10th day of the fiege, wherein he made Captive 7000 persons, 16000 being flain, and Sthan taken 2600 escaped to Agrigentum. He permitted Empedion and his kindred to by the Cartha- people it anew, under condition of paying Tribute to Carthage. This was the condition of Selinuns, after it had flood 242 years from its first founding by the Megarians, who being descended from Megara in Greece first came into Sicily under conduct of Lamis, and built a Town upon the River Pantacius, called Trotilus. Thence Lamis departing with some of his Colony went to the Leontines and Chalcidians, with whom having lived fome time he was driven out by them, and planting some Inhabitants in Thapfus, after his death they left the place, and under conduct of Hyblon the Sicilian King, who betrayed the Countrey, inhabited Megara, and were talled Hyblaans. After 245 years they were driven hence by Gelon of Syracuse. but 145 years before this, they fent out a Colony with Pammilus, which built

And Himera.

22. Hannibal from Solinus marched to Himera, having a particular grudge against that place for his Grand-father's death. Falling on it with all his might, he was repulfed for a little time by the resolute valour of the Inhabitants, but the Wall being beaten down with his Engines, he shortly took it. Many Women and Children had withdrawn themselves out of the Citie; of those men which he took he carried up 3000 to the Hill where his Grandfather had been flain, and there killed them, being before used with all kinds of indignities; then rased he the Citie which had been inhabited 240 years, and difmissing his Mercenaries and Subjects of Sicily departed home, where he was received with greatest expressions of honour and affection for upon part of the adjoyning Region, they fent to Carthage for help, giving up cife.

CHAP. II I.

SECT.2. having done in three moneths what other Captains would have required far larger time to effect. After his departure, Hermocrates the Syracufian (who having been fent as General to the affiftance of the Lacedamonians, was condemned to banishment in his absence, through the malice of his Enemies) returned with a considerable Force into Sietle, and to ingratiate himfelf with his Country-men, repeopled Selinus, and fell upon the tributaries of Carthage. The more still to indear himself, he took up the bones of those Diedarae at Syracustans that fell at Himera, and in a cariage sent them to the City, well Olymp.93 441. knowing, that this would procure as love to him, fo envy and hatred to Diocles his main adversary, who having been the Captain of the slain, had taken no care for their burial. Diocles much opposed their publick Sepulture, but the People resolutely decreed it, then banished him, and yet they recalled not Hermocrates, being lealous lest he should improve his power and abilities to the making of himfelf absolute. He then being in despair of returning by fair means, attempted to do it by force, and getting in to the City, was amongst his complices killed by the multitude.

23. In the second year of the 93 Olympiad, the Syracusians sent to Car- A. M. 3598. thage to complain of the late War, and to defire that for the time to come of 93, 31, 31, they would forbear all hostility, to which they returned an ambiguous an- 1.6cm. starts fiver, and made all possible provision for an Army, wherewith to subdue the whole Island. Before they transported any Forces they sent a Colony thither, which at the hot waters built a City, and called it Therma. The year following they ordered Hannibal to go over as General, who excusing himself by reason of his Age, they joyned with him Imilco the son of Hanno, one of the fame Family. These two Generals then made Levies throughout Africk, Alma hired Soldiers out of Spain, the Islands Baleares, and Isaly; and got together an Army of 120000 men according to Timaus, but after Ephorus his reckoning 200000. As they were passing over, the Syracusians met them, and sunk fifteen of their Vessels, but with the rest Hannibal passed safe over, and fell upon the rich and stately City of Agrigentum, which contained 200000 persons. The Agrigentines wanted not affishance from their friends, all the Greek Cities being deeply concerned in their welfare, and the Syracustans gave the besiegers a considerable deseat, who demolishing the Tombs and Monuments the better to get to the walls, had thereby pulled down a Pestilence upon themselves, saith Diodorus, wherein Hannibal died. But Imilco (or Imilcar) thereby not discouraged, continued the Siege, expiating the offence, as he thought, by facrifizing a Boy to Saturn, and drowning a company of Priests in the Sea as an offering to Neptune. His Soldiers mutinying for provisions, he supplied, by taking of the ships which loaded with necessaries were sent from Syracuse to the besieged. Hereby he starved And Agrigen-them within, and constrained them to quit the City, being guarded to Gela by armed men. Imilear found extrordinary rich plunder in it, whereof fome rarities he fent to Carthage, amongst which was Phalaris his Bull, though Timess the Historian carping at all others, by denying that there was ever any such thing, is justly censured by Diodoriu. For Scipie Africanus the younger, 260 years after, having destroyed Carthage, restored this Engine to the Agrigentines, with whom it was yet remaining when Diodorus wrote

> 24. Imilear having, after a Siege of eight moneths, thus mastered Agrigontum, a little before the Winter solffice, destroyed it not presently, that therein he might quarter his Soldiers that Winter. All the Island was struck with great fear upon report of what had happened; fome of the Sicilians departed to Syracufe, and others transported their wives and children with their wealth into Italy. The Agrigentines being got safe to Syracuse, accused their Captains, as having betrayed their Country, and the Syracufians were also blamed by the rest for having chosen such Generals, as by their dishonesty had brought Sicilie into extreme danger. A meeting being had at Syracufe, and great fear of a War possessing all men's minds, none dated to speak one word, or give any advice. All flicking at the matter, at length flood up Die-nylius the Son of Hermocrates, and accusing the Captains of having hetrayed SECT. 2. Merigentum, carneftly moved the People to punish them forthwith, and not ricks for ma- flag the time prefixed by Law. For this unlawful and feditious motion, the Magistrates fined him; but one Philistus a wealthy man, who afterwards wrote his History, bade him proceed, promifing to pay his fine, though it were a whole day together. Animated hereby he proceeded, urging that the Captains had been corrupted to betray the interest of Sicilie, and accusing others of the better fort of Citizens as affecting Oligarchy. He therefore moved that new Officers might be created, fuch as were not eminent for power, but good will towards the People, for that the other usurping dominion despifed the common fort, and made their own markets out of the publick; whereas those being of lower fortunes, by a consciousnesse of their own weaknesse could not attempt fuch a morrer. 25. Having discoursed these things firly to the humour of the multitude, and his own defign, he made no small impressionin the minds of the Vulgar, who having had the fidelity of the Captains in question before, gave credence to these flanders, and deposing them, made new, amongst which was Dionysius, having got much credit for his valour against the Carthaginians. The foundarion thus laid, he beat his head all manner of waies how to accomplish his device, and refolved if possible to get his Colleagues removed. For this purpose he never would meet in council with them, giving out they hatched clandeltine defigns against the State, and seeingthe Citizens much affrighted at an approaching War, procured the Exiles to be called home, hoping that they being obnoxious to him, and defirous of innovation, would be fit for his purpole, taking great delight in feeing their Enemies killed, and their goods fold, their own Estates being restored to them. At this time it happened that a Sedition falling out in Gela, he had an opportunity to lead thither 2000 Foot, and 400 Horse, where procuring their principal men to be put to death, and their Estates confiscated, he thereby much ingratiated himself with the multitude and Soldiers. At his return he found the People just departing from the shows of the Theatre, which asking him news, he said he knew none, but that their Governours were greater Enemies to the State than the Caribaginians, by whose flatteries they now kept holy day, and who fleecing the Commonwealth, cheated the Soldiers of their wages. Now was an innumerable Army hovering upon the borders, and ready to invade, which they not at all regarded. This he understood a little before, but now fully, having received a meffage from Imileo that defired his connivance. Wherefore for his part he would lay down his Office, not induring that others making merchandise of the Commonwealth, he alone should, together with the Citizens, bear the burthen, and undergo the danger; and yet also be accounted as treacherous as the reft. For this night every man in great fear went home to his house. The next day he called them together, and loading his Colleagues with great invectives, fo flirred the multitude, that fome beginning The milery of to cry out he was to be made Dictator, for that they had formerly had experi-Prople defti-nuc of right, ence how convenient the conduct of a fingle Person was, by the example of foliand here. Gelou his Victory over Amilear, the multitude out of hand created him Ge-diany Prinneral with full power. Then to bind fast the Soldiers to him, he procured a

26. The wifer fort had all along sufficiently understood whither these, actions tended, but the multitude stopped their ears against all accusations, as proceeding from the malice of the great ones. But now upon further confideration they began to suspect him, and repent they had put the power out of their own hands, which he being aware of, left the discontent should so feize upon the generality as thereby to procure him any let or hindrance in the full compleating his defigns he drew out the Army to Leontium, which now was used as a Fortresse or Garrison, and there shutting himself close up, pretended a great confpiracy against his life. The day following he called the

Decree for double pay, alleging it would make them more valiant in that time of danger, and bidding the People take no thought about raising

CHAP. III.

Fruftrared.

His Wars.

SECT. 2. multitude together, and alleging many probable reasons to perswade them of the danger, obtained to have 600 men as a guard for his person, which he should chuse out where he pleased. This number he increased to 1000, picked our, and confifting of fuch as were desperate in fortune, and thereupon backed with stomach and resolution. He called the Mercenaries, and ingaged them to him with good words, then new modelling the Army, gave such commands therein as he knew would best serve his own turn : he gave free admission to all Exiles and malefactors, knowing such would be effectual to all his purpofes. Having thus in imitation of Pififtrain got him a guard, and made himfelf Tyrant, at his return to Syracufe he openly shewed himself such, placing his Tent in the Arcenal. The People murmured in vain, being befer with strangers and mercenaries at home, and in continual fear of a War hanging over them from abroad. To establish himself he took to wise the daughter of Hermocraies, who did such service against the Athenians, and was flain in attempting to seize on the City: he also gave his own Sister in marriage to his wives Brother, thinking it his interest to be allied to so great a Family. Then affembling the People, by his devices he procured Daphneus A. M. 2499. and Demarchus the most potent of his Adversaries to be put to death; and 01, 93, 44,3, fo from a Scribe and a man of mean condition, he became Master of the V.C. 348.

greatest Greek Citie, continuing such for 38 years, unto his end. 27. Imilcar having wintred in Agrigentum, at Spring-time razed the City, and then fell upon Gela. The Inhabitants betook themselves to Diony fins for help; but his indeavours not well succeeding, they were forced to quit the Town, and leave it also to the disposal of the Enemy. Dionyfins made the Citizens of Camarina to do the fame, possessing them with a fear of the Carthaginians; so that departing thence in haste, some with their

Gold and Silver, others with their wives and children onely, and the waves being full of both fexes and ages, who miferably shunned servicude by exile, the Syraculian Horse-men pitied them exceedingly, and accounting this but a fetch of their Tyrant, to make himself Master of the place, conspired how A conspiracy they might kill him in the way, and the rather, because they had observed how remisse, or rather industriously treacherous, he had been in the relief of Gela. He keeping the Mercenaries close to him, they could not execute this design, but rode fall to Syracuse, where being easily admitted, they rifled his Palace, and used his wife very harshly that she died. Being secure of him as at a great distance from them, he conjectured the same, and in post-haste comeing to Syracufe, fet fire on one of gates, and fo got in. Then flaughtered Disappointed, he such of them as he could light on, as also of those Citizens whom he knew to be most averse to him, some he slew, and others he expelled the Town. Scarce were things fetled, when a message came from Imilear, inviting the

against him

Syracustans, though conquered, unto Peace. Dionysius most gladly imbraced the offer, so that it was made upon these terms: The Carthaginians were to have subject to them, besides their old Tributaries and Colonies, the peace with the Carthagi-Sicani, Selinuntians, Agrigentiues, and Himerians, and also the Gelaans, nians. and Camarineans, who might inhabit their Towns unwalled, but be tributary to Carthage. The Leontines, Meffenians, and all Sicilians, were to be free, and the Syracusians subject to Dionysius. All ships taken on both fides were to be restored. These things confirmed, Imiliar passed over into Africk, having lolt half of his Army by the Plague, which fo raged also in Africk, as great multitudes both of the Carebaginians and their Associates > fell thereby. 28, Dionysius knowing that the Syracusians now eased of the War, would busie their heads how to recover their liberty, to prevent such a design, fortified that part of the City called the Island, which he caused to be inhabited with his own confidents: he also divided the publick grounds to such as he thought fit, and admitted strangers to equal privileges with the Citizens. Having thus as he thought secured his estate, he resolved to march against such Sicilians as he thought most affisted the Carthaginians, and was about to besiege Erbefa, when the Citizens of Syracufe now armed, considering what an opportunity was put into their hands, and repenting they had not affilled SECT. 2. the Horsemen in their revoult, resolved to declare for their liberty. The attempt generally took, the Citizens stood upon their defence, and the Tytant was belieged, for whole head a great fum of money was offered. He Another defign against was much cast down, and thought to refign his power, according as some advised him; but Philistus turned his mind, and made him resolve to venture all rather than do it. Bethinking himfelf how he might circumvent the Citizens, he fent to them, pretending a willingnesse to quit all, if they would bur permit him to carry away his goods; and at the same time he disparched a message to the Campanians (mercenary Soldiers of Campania in Italy) offering them large rewards if they would stand by him. The Syraculians consented he should depart with five ships, and then, as if their liberty was fully recovered, grew fecure, remisse, and idle, disbanding some of their men. neglecting their guards, and taking their pleasure in the fields: The Campanians allured by his prowifes broke in to him, fome Troops of Mercenaries also came to his allistance, with which he set upon the Towns-men, and eafily putting them to flight recovered his power. He hindred his men from killing, and a great number flying to Eina, he fent to them, offering them pardon, which fome imbraced, and others refused to venture themselves

29. When he had well re-ferled himfelf, he made War upon feveral Towns in Sicilie, fome of which he took, and having an eye upon the Carthaginians, strongly fortified his City of Syracufe. He resolved with himfelf to make War upon them, hoping that all those Towns which in time of Peace willingly submitted to their yoak, would then revolt to him. Understanding that in the Achenian War a line had been drawn before Syracuse. from Sea to Sea, and thereby accesse into the Country cut off, with admirable celerity he raifed a wall to prevent this for the time to come, labouring himself amongst the workmen, to cause them the more chearfully to undergo the toil: Then did he make extraordinary provisions of all forts of Arms, compleatly furnished himself with shipping, and hired Soldiers from all parts. Thus provided, he caused all the goods of the Carthaginian Marchants. and others dwelling there, to befeized by the multitude of the Syracufians, to whom now he caried himself more mildly, being very ready to begin Died, ad Olymp, the War; especially upon so profitable terms. Other Sicilian Towns sol. 95, an. 3, 4. lowed his example, out of hatred to the Carthaginians for their cruelty, of whom such as were amongst them they unmercifully handled in way of requital, which taught that State to deal more favourably afterwards with such as they took, in remembrance of the viciffitude of humane affaires. Then disparched he a messenger to Carebage, to denounce war from the people of Syracufe. except they would fet at liberty all the Greek Cities of Sicilie. They were much aruck therewith, being exceedingly spent by Pestilence, but rejected the terms, and as they might, mide provision for resistance. Dionyfine besieged Morra one of their Colonies, and chief Fortresse for War; upon whose ships Imileo, as yet not sufficiently provided, made an attempt, and beating up the Camp prefently retired again; so that Dionysius became Master of the Town. 30. Ere he had taken Morra he besieged Agesta, the Inhabitants whereof would not betray their truft, and made excursions into the Territories of Iden ad Olymp. their Friends, But the Spring following the Carthaginians having created 96, and 1. Imileo King, fent him over with a vast Army, wherewith he first wrosted Leptines, whom Dieny fine had commanded to attend his motions; then took Erys, and prefently recovered Mosta. He had Panormus betrayed to him: A. M. 3609. he took Lipara, and after that Messana with his ships, the Inhabitants having Olymp. 96.11.1. fent their Forces out of the Town to meet his Land-Army. When he took V.C. 358. Morra, Diony fins brake up his Siege and retreated to Syracufe; now hearing Artax. Micthat he intended to fet upon Catana both by Ses and Land, he fent Leptines monis, 9. with the Fleet after Mago the Carthaginian Admiral, and he himself murched by Land to meet with Imileo. Leptines according to order mide after as

F f f

CHAP. II I.

SECT.2. fast as he could, and attaching the Enemie's Fleer, at first funk diverse Vesfels; but when he was now almost incompassed with Mago's ships which were in number 500. not able to fight at such disadvantage, he was forced to fly out into the main, and in his flight loft 100 Vessels. Diony sins kept on his march, intending to fight Imileo; but was stopped by the intercession of his friends, who feared left in his absence Mago might with his whole Fleet set upon Syracufe, and take it. He therefore returned to the Citie, and dispatched away Messengers into Greece and Italy for aid.

Syracufe befreged.

31. Mago by Sea with nigh 200 ships, and Imileo by Land with 300000 foot, and 3000 horse, besieged Syracuse, who for that the Citizens refused to give battel, walted their grounds for 20 dayes, and after that took the Suburbs of that part of the Citie called Acradina. His Army was taken with a fudden Pannick fear, and feized by a fore difease; yet notwithstanding he drew a line for the Fortification of his Camp, and built three Forts upon the Sea, wherein he put his provisions, and fent into Sardinia and Africk for more. Afterwards Polyxonus father-in-law to Dionyfius returning out of Peloponnesses and Italy with 30 long thips, and Pharacidas the Lacedamonian, to the affiftance of the Syracufians, they took a victualling ship from the Carthaginians. They doing their endeavour to rescue it, the Syracusians drew our their whole Fleet, and ingaging, took the Admiral Gally, and spoyled 24 Vessels. After this the Carthaginians durft not stir abroad, and the Syraensians puffed up with this victory, thought of recovering their former liberty. Diony sim coming in at the Port, called them together, incouraged them in the War, and gave them hopes of finishing it shortly to their satisfa-Etion. Here before his face, one Theodorus in many words exhorted his feltempt against low Citizens to throw off the yoak, and either take the Militia into their own hands according to the Laws, or deliver it up to the Lacedamonian General. But Pharacidas the Lacedamenian, according to his instructions from his Su-was sent to help them against the Carthaginians, and not to overthrow the power of Dionysiu; so that the people were at so unexpected a thing utterly quelled, murmuring much against the Lacedamonians, who had now twice deceived them in the recovery of their freedom. Dionysius afrighted herear, made shew afterwards of great humanity, to gain the affecti-periours (who had now established an Oligarchy wherever they could, agreeable with their own Government and interest, or gave way to the power of a fingle man rather than that of the people) faid openly, that he Fruftrated.

32. The Carthaginians were at this time feized with a most grievous Plague, which Diodorsu attributeth to their rifling the Temples of Proferpina and Cores, as the Meritorious cause, and to the unwholesomnesse of the place befer with Fens, as the effectual means that wrought the diffemper. A grievous difease had formerly falln upon the Athenians in the same place.

plague seizeth For before Sun-rise, because of a cold vapour that rose from the Fens, a cold on the cartha- and shaking seized on the body, then at noon a suffocating heat. So many men being gathered together into one place, the contagion first began with the Africans, who, though they died in great numbers, were at first all buried. Afterwards the number increasing, such as looked to the fick dying also shortly after them, none would venture to come near the infected. But besides want of attendance, no remedy could be had for the evil. For from the stench of the dead, and putrefaction of the Fennish aire, in the beginning of the disease a Catarrhe, and then presently an Angina, or swelling of the neck, took the patient. These were followed by a Feaver, pains in the Spina, and numnefle of the legs, which drew after them a Dysentery, and Spots over all the body. Some were taken with madnesse, and abolition of memory, who wandring up and down the Camp bear all they met. At length all the endeavours of Phylicians were void, through the vehemence of the difeate, and suddennesse of death, for on the fifth, or at furthest on the fixth day they died in great torment. Diony fine understanding this sad condition of the befiggers, thought it convenient to fally out upon them, and fent 80 ships to fall on their Navy. The Land Army first arriving took two of their Forts, and SECT. 2. diverted them from their ships, which as soon as they saw in danger, they again retired to them; but with little advantage. For the Syracufians boarded and flughtered them in great numbers, and Dionysius, with his Land Army, fired 40 of their Gallies that rode at Anchor in the Haven of Dafco. The night approaching broke off the fight, and then the Carthaginians fent to Diany use 200 Talents, begging leave to depart; which he granted (with exception to all Sicilians and other Mercenaries) being unwilling they should be quite defeated, that through fear of them his subjects might be the better contained in obedience. After the flight of the Carthaginians, the Sicilians departed home, and all the rest were slain or taken, except the Spaniardi, who gathering themselves into a round body, sent to Diony fius to enter into Alliance with him : which he accepted.

37. Diony sus being secure of the Carthaginians for some considerable time, provided against his Mercenaries, which badly affecting him, he prevented, by taking of their Leader, and bestowing on them the Citie and Territories of Leontium. Then did he make new Leavies, and replanted Meffana with its antient Inhabitants the Messenians ; but seeing the Lacedamonians his friends offended with it, he removed them to another place near the Sea, which they called I ynds ides, and wherein they did thrive exceedingly, Conquering, and laying feveral places to their demesnes. Having fortified Diod.ad Olymp. Melliana, the Inhabitants of Rhegium (who formerly jealous of his growth, 96, ann. 3. had shown their bad affection to him) conceived it to proceed from some design against their Citie, which stood over against it in Italy, upon the very

Crag of the Promontory, where Sicily was supposed to have been broken off from the Continent, whence it had the name of Rhegium. They fent Helo-ris to befiege Messana, whereupon he determined to make War against them:

but the Sicilians feizing upon Tauromenium, he first resolved to recover it. He continuing his fiege all Winter, in a dark night got a certain Fort into his hands, and made way for all his Army into the Town; but the Inhabitants gathering together, and refifting, from the higher ground, beat back his men, whereof 600 were flain, and he himfelf escaped very narrowly, after which Displus let- the Agrigentines and Meffort ins for look him. The year after, he fer upon them ad ann.4. techupon Rhe- Rhegium on a sudden; burnt the Gates, and set Ladders to the Walls; but was repulsed by the strong opposition of the Citizens. By this the Inhabitants of these Sea-Coasts of Italy, seeing how far his covetousnesse and ambition extended, made a League amongst themselves, and appointed a common Council, both for the refistance of him and the Lucanians, who made War upon them at the fame time.

34. Mago was yet in Sicily, and was once overthrown in battel by Dionyfins. The year following his Superiours fent over great supplies, gathered as well out of Sardinia and Italy, as Africk, to the number of 80000 men, Iden ad Olymp. wherewith he overran the Countrey, and withdrew most of the Cities from 97. ann. 1. their obedience, till he came to the Agyrinaans, whom he could neither remove by fair nor foul means from their resolution. Dionysius with his Mercenaries and Syracustans marched out against him, sending before to the Agyrinaans to be in readinesse, who thereupon met him, and joyned their Forces with his Army. Mago now in an Enemie's Countrey was fore Braightned for provisions, which made the other resolve to draw out the War in length, and not try his fortune quickly by battel. The Syracusians being earnest for fighting, upon his refusal forsook him and departed home. This put him upon a resolution to make free and list all slaves, but even then came Ambassadors from Mago to treat of peace, which he accepted upon this con-baced to re-dition, that the Sicilians should be under his authority; and so Magazeturned home. After this Dionysius seized on Tauromonium, and then banished the greatest part of the Sicilians from that Town.

Fff 2

35. The next year but one, being the 2615th year of the World, into Ad as 3. dition against which fell part of the third year of the 97th Olympiad, wherein Rome was taken by the Gaules, as some compute, Dionysius once more undertook an expe-

CHAP. III.

His third expedition.

SECT.2. Rhegium.

dition against Rhegium. He landed his Army, consisting of 20000 foot and 1000 horse in the Territories of Locris, wasting all with fire and sword, his A. M. 3615. Navy, which confifted of 120 Gallies, attending his motions all along, till at Olympon, length he pitched his Camp near the Streights. The Italians inhabiting that ann.3. part of Italy called Magna Gracia, hereupon dispatched away fixty ships to V.C.364. help them of Rhegium, upon which he fell, and had taken or destroyed them, Artas, MANIE, but that the belieged iffuing forth, repelled him with Darts and Arrows, and taking the opportunity of a fform, drew the ships to Land; so that in this fight he lost seven ships with 1500 men, and escaping drowning but narrowly, sled to Messena. Then Winter drawing on, he made a League with the Lucanians, who after his departure, for a private quarrel betwixt them, invaded the Thursans. These sending for aid to the rest of the Italian Cities, would not ftry for it, which they might justly expect according to Covenant, but iffuing out against the Enemy, purfued them into their own Territories, who then taking them at advantage cut off many thousands of them. The reft seeing some ships sayl by, cast themselves into the Sea to swim to them, thinking they belonged to Rhegium. But it proved Dionysius his Fleet sent under conduct of his brother Leptines to aid the Lucanians; yet Leptines took pity of them, and landed them fafe ; he also perswaded the Lucanians for a pound of filver a man to release their Prisoners, passing his word for the money, and at length made them friends. But hereby he loft the favour of his brother (who hoped to devour both fides, and make himself mafter of Italy, when they should have sufficiently weakned one another) so that, being displaced, Thearides the other brother was made Admiral in his

36. Diony sine his mind was still upon Rhogium, to which Citie he bore mortal hatred, because some years before having sent to them for a wife, they returned him antwer, that their Hang-man had a daughter, which if it pleased him to accept they would give to him. Therefore the year following 1den ad 488. 4

he fer fayl once more against them, who then looking for no mercy in case & olympsa. he should take the Town, sent to him, desiring they might be moderately ann.t.s. used. He required a Tribute of 300 Talents, all their ships, with 100 Hostages, and then went against Caulonia, the Inhabitants whereof he removed to Syracufe, razed the Town, and bestowed the ground upon the Locrians. But his delign was not thus accomplished against them of Rhegium; his refolution was not to difmiffe them upon the former terms, but by taking away their ships to prevent the bringing in of provisions by Sea, that he might the more easily thave them in a fiege. Bethinking himself how with any shew of credit he might break the League, at length hovering yet about the Straights, he defired a supply of provisions from them, pretending he would Morely return to Syracufe; but he put it off from day to day, excuring himfelf by his own indisposition, or some other pretext, so that plainly seeing his drift, at length they flatly denied to fend him any more victuals. This he pretending to receive with great indignation as an afront, he laid close fiege to the Town, and battered the Walls. The Inhabitans making one Physo their General, armed all that could carry Weapons, and making many brave fallies out upon him, burnt his Engins, and gave him a dangerous wound with a Lance. But the fiege continuing, after eleven moneths they were driven to fuch want, as a Bushel of Wheat was sold for ten pounds, & at length they were forced to come out of the Walls, and there graze like Cattel, whereat he was fofar from being moved with compassion, that he sent beasts thither to eat up the Graffe from them. Great heaps of Carkaffes lying in the Town, and the the Graffe from them. Great heaps of Carkaffes lying in the Town, and the vifages of the living being by famine rendred like unto them, they at last de-He taketh it. livered up the Town. Such as could redeem themselves with a pound of silver V. (. 367 he released, and sold the rest. Physio the General, after grievous corments, he Artar, Man.

His Audies.

drowned in the Sea, with his whole family. 37. After the destruction of Rhegium, Dionysius lying idle at home, applied himself to Poetry, being heretofore much addicted to it. Whilest he lay before Rhegium he fent his brother Thearides to the celebration of the Iden ad an s Olympick games, there to repeat his Verfes, which by their baldnesse drew SECT. 2. the auditors into fuch a diffast, that they rifled the Ambassador's tents. He called together the best Poers from all quarters to judge of his skill. He also drew over to him Plate the Philosopher, whom at first he used very courteoully, but afterwards offended at him for his freedom of speech, he brought him into the common Cage, and there for five pounds fold him as a Slave, The Philosophers coming over on purpose redeemed him, and then sent him into Greece with this memento in his ear, That A Philosopher must either very rarely, or very pleafantly converse with Tyrants. A year or two after this he put out to Sea with 60 Vessels, pretending an intention to clear the Coasts of Pyrates, but wanting money, according to his custome towards the Temples of Sicilie, he feized upon a Chapel near Argylla, on the Coufts of Italy, which being exceeding rich, he plundered of 1000 Talents, and Idem ad Olymp, got much spoil from the Inhabitants of the place, who opposed him. Being 99. an. 1. now furnished with money, he resolved to renew the War against the Carthaginians, and the next year drew divers of their tributary Cities from their obedience. The Carihaginians made great preparations for defense, raising a numerous Army, which they committed to the conduct of Mago. He poured out a great number of men both into Sicilie and Italy. In the Island, throweth the Dionysius overthrew him in a battel near Cabala, wherein were flain more Cathaganas, than 10000 of his men, and 5000 raken: he himself with the rest retired to an hill, where fighting manfully he was flain, and his men fent to Dionylins to 38. Dionysius answered, that the onely way to obtain their desire, was to quit Sicilie, and pay the charges of the War. To this he feemed to affent, but alledged they had no power to deliver up the Cities, and therefore defired a truce for some time to advise about it. During the truce. Mago's son being advanced into his Father's place, trained the Soldiers, and exercised then continually, fo as he brought them into a good condition for fighting, and then at the end of the Truce led them down, and gave battel in stead of receiving Peace. Now were the Sicilians so puffed up by their late Victory, as the other took advantage of their carelesnesse, and so playd the And receivesh men, that though Diony sims in his wing, and Leptines his brother in the oan overthrow ther, fought most valiantly, and the former prevailed; yet the later being flain, his party was prefently put to flight, in which great execution was done, the Carthaginians giving no quarter; fo as 14000 Sicilians are faid > to have been flain. The Conquerours departed to Panormus, and thence fent to Diony fins, offering to have the quarrel taken up, which he gladly imbraced. Both fides were to retain what they already had, onely the Carthaginians took to themselves the City and Territories of Selinus, with so much ground belonging to Agrigentum as reached to the River Helyeus, and required of Dionysims 1000 Talents. Long after this he rested from War, but still grudging the Carthaginians any footing in Steilie. This moved him at length with great preparations both by Sea and Land to invade their Diodor, ad Territories, wherein he took some Towns, wasted the Country, and besieged Lilybaum; but perceiving it very strong presently again rose up from before it. Then hearing that the Arcenal at Carthage was fired, he carelefly behaved himself, and sent 130 Gallies to seize on the Haven of the Erycinians, commanding all the rest to return to Syracuse; but the Enemy unexpectedly with 200 Ships well manned, fell upon them in the Haven, and took most of them; then winter coming on, they made Truce, and each departed to their own places. Not long after, Dionystus died of a Surfet he got by feasting, for joy he was pronounced Victor in Poetry at Athens, after he had reigned 38 years, in the first of the 103 Olympiad, A. M. 3637. 366 before the ordinary Era of Christ. It had been told him by an Oracle, that he should die when he overcame his betters, which he had applied to the Carthaginians. 39. Dionysius married two wives in one day: Doris born at Lorri, and Vide Alive 39. Dionypus martied two wives in one day, and fifter to Dim: By 13.6. to, the GHAP. III.

His wives &

He dieth.

Sicilie.

of Italy. Upon his declaring to the People that he came to restore them to their antient liberty, they made him and Megacles their chief Generals with with full power. Dieny fins feven dayes after returned and got into the Castle. which standing in the Island was severed from the rest of the City, whence he sent for Ambassadors to treat of Peace, that he might gain time. The People overreached, sent their Commissioners, whom he kept with him, till feeing the Cirizens negligent and carelesse by reason of their hopes, he poured our his Mercenaries upon them; but Dion with much libour repelled them, and flew 800 men. After this he fent again to defire a Treaty, but Dion answered, that his onely way to obtain peace was to lay down his power, and content himself with certain honours; whereat he was much vexed, and took now not inferiour to him in number of thips, and lofing the day loft also his life; having either killed himfelf, because he would not be taken, or been

43. Philiseus whom he had made Admiral, fought with the Syracusians, counsel how any way he might revenge himself.

SECT. 2. the former he had a fon called also Dionysius; by the later no children for a long time (for which cause he put to death the mother of Doris, upon suspicion of her having practifed fomething upon Aristomache to cause her barrennesse) but afterwards begot of her two sons and as many daughters. Plutarch & When he lay fick, Dion inquired of the Phylicians concerning his condition, Corn. News is whether he was in any danger, that if so, he might move him about the sha- Diove, ring of his Kingdom; for that he thought his fifters children might justly expest their part therein. The Physicians told this to young Dionysius, who found himself so concernd in it, that to prevent his Father's discoursing with Dionyfius his fon fucceedeth him.

His disposi-

never could awake, and so he folely succeeded him. 40. Dionysius the younger at first g ve such hopes of a pliable disposition. that Dion prevailed with Plato to return to Syracufe, thinking that by his Plutarth is instruction he might be made a good and temperate Prince. But Dion's emu- Negoribid. lators fearing he might be changed from his former course, which though bad in it felf was more convenient for them, recalled Philist hus (one who was A. M. 1612 banished by the late Dionysius, and being a learned man, wrote the history of 103 at 1 of his life) that they might have one to oppose to Plato. He according to V. c. 386. what was injoyned, and his private interest, upheld him in his extravagances, Adax, Oyem, as many other flattering Philosophers did; especially Aristoppus of Cyrene the Scholar of Socrates, who had so great a command of his own temper, that he could apply himself * suitably to all times and persons. Plato, when he pum decuit co-came, found Dion in great troubles, being for his nobility and courage both

Dion, he compelled them to give him that which laid him so fast asleep as he

Omnis Aristiplor & flatus Vide Diog. Laertium in envied and feared by Dionysius, who, four moneths after, seeing the People much addicted to him, banished him to Corintb, pretending he sent him thither for the good of them both, that one might be out of fear of the other. Because he saw that this displeased all men, he sent him all his movables, but kept his wife and his fon, marrying her afterwards by constraint to Polycra- 1, 12, 6, 47, tes one of his Guard. This much startled Dion's friends, and Plate amongst the rest, by whom Dionysius fearing that something might underhand be wrought against him, gave them good words, and laboured to keep Plate. who earnestly desired now that War was begun in Sicilie to be disinissed : especially seeing his mind far remote from the love of Philosophy. By his importunity he got leave to depart, upon condition that, when Peace was made, Dion should be recalled, and he return with him.

41. When the time came, Diony sius earnestly defired the return of Plato. but would have Dion discontinue a year longer, who earnestly befought Place to return to Syracuse, for that it was reported that the Prince now was wonderfully taken with Philosophy. He stifly refused to do it, objecting his age, with the breach of Covenants, but being again urged on all fides, a ship was fent for him, and large letters were written, wherein the Tyrant promifed to deal with Dion as his friends should judge reasonable; many of the best fort also in Sicilie and his acquaintance were fent to accompany him over-Wherefore Plate once more undercook the journy, with intention to reconcile Dion to Diony sins, and reduce the Tyrant to a more first and commendable life. But not long after his arrival Diony fins flopped Dion's Revenues, which Plate taking ill, once prevailed to have the stoppage removed, for otherwife he would be gone; but when the ships were departed, and Plato's pasfage thereby prevented, he again sequestred the Estate. After this he fell plainly out with Plato, for holding that faith was to be kept with Heraclides, who was suspected to have raised a Sedition, and put him out of his Court, fo as the Philosopher was glad to take up his quarters with the mercenary Soldiers, amongst whom also slanders were spred concerning him, whence he fignified his condition to his friends at Tarentum in Italy, who with much adoe prevailed with the Tyrant to fend him home safe. Such was the entertainment of Plato with Diony fins both father and fon.

42. Though Dionysias had left to him an hereditary War with the Carthaginians, yet giving up himself wholly to luxury and sluggishnesse, he was Diedoi. ad Oli unfit to manage publick affairs, and therefore made peace with them. But 95.44.2, 66. Dion force; but he leaving some stout men to defend the Castel, departed in the twelfth year of his Reign, with his treasure and rich stuff into Italy, undif-He expelleth covered by Heraclides, who ere this arrived out of Peloponnesses with a good force, and was fet over the Navy. Heraelides being much blamed for this. that he might re-ingratiate himself, perswaded one to stir up the multitude to an equal division of the grounds, which being opposed by Dion, he out of emulation procured him ill-will, and caused the People to create 25 Prators. whereof he himfelt was chosen one. Dion's Mercenaries by this new Model deprived of their pay, defired him to use their help in revenging himself upon his ingrateful Country-men. He then took upon him to be their Lea-Is disbliged. der, and marched away to Leontium. The Syracufians pursued, and opposed them in their way ; but being forced with losse to retire, the Leontines received him with much honour, gave to the Soldiers their arrears, and made them free of their City. 44. But ere long there was an occasion for the recasting of Dion. The Soldiers whom Dionysus had left in the Castle of Syracuse, being distressed

Redeemeth Syracuse,

by want of provisions, resolved over night, that the next day they would yield it up; but that very morning appeared a Fleet fent to their relief, over which Nipfins a Neapolitan had the command. The Syracufians iffuing forth against it, had the better ; but then growing secure, and giving up themselves to gormandizing and drunkennesse, Nipsins thought a good opportunity to be offered for the redeeming of his credit, and fell upon the Ciey, sending some over the wall, who killing the sentinels, opened the gates for his Soldiers. The new Capcains of the Syracufians being drunk, could take no order for refistance, fo as great flaughters were made in every place, the Garrison Soldiers issuing out of the Castel, and great plunder with many prisoners were taken away. Now the Citizens saw that no help remained

Dion being now at Corinch, together with Megacles his brother, and Charicles the General of Dieny fins, raifed as many Mercenaries as he could, which not in number passing 500, he transported in two ships of burthen in- Plutarch in Then invadeth to Siche, leaving Charicles (or rather Hercules) behind, to bring after Diene. more ships; such was his courage, that he durst venture with so inconsiderable a force upon so great a power. After his landing, muliturdes flocked to him as he passed through the Island, and out of Syracuse it felf, whom Donysius ain suspition had disarmed. To them he gave weapons, having brought many over with him for such a purpose. By the time he got unto the City he was 4000 ftrong, which he easily entred, notwithstanding the opposition of those Captains that Diony fins had left there, who at this time was upon the Coaffs cormented to death, after he fell into his Enemies hands, both which are faid. Then did Dienysin: offer half of his Kingdom to Dien, and afterward was 'content to quir it all; but he was answered by him, that he must leave the A. M. 3649. Castle, and be content with certain goods and honours: and it was agreed, that V. C. 398. with his movables and Mercenary Soldiers he should have I eave to passe into Ochi 6. Italy. The People hardly granted this, as being confident to subdue him by Philip. 5.

GNAP. III.

Zalencus mo-

dellesh the

408 SECT. 2. for them, but onely in Dion, to whom they fent, begging of him, that laying afide all thoughts of private injuries, he would now fuccour his diffrested Country. He being armed by precepts of Philosophy against private grudges, marched for Syracuse, and was met by a number of old men, women, and children, who with lamentable cries implored his help. As the Garrison Soldiers were busie in plunder, and had set the houses near the Forum on fire, he brake in upon them, distributing his men to the several quarters of the City. They fell upon them all in disorder, and burthened with plunder, killed 4000; and so forcing up the rest into the Castel, cleared all. 45. Dion having archieved much honour by this act, was made General of the Land Forces; but Heraclides his emulater still retained his Admiralfhip. This vexed him to, that he gave out fome words that a Common- Com. Neparin wealth could not be well governed by many, which procured him great envy, Dione.

Envice

flain.

as if he thereby fignified that he would get the Soveraignty over all. He studied not how to palliate the matter, but sought to cary on all things by an high hand, and in a way of force; and either procured Heraclides to be made away, or connived at those whom he formerly hindred from doing it; after which he feized on the goods of his Enemies, and distributed them to Plunged into his Soldiers. But presently again money failing him, and having none to great difficul- run upon but his friends, he was constrained either to lose them or his Soldiers, who being also displeased for want of pay, the common People might fafely revile him, affirming that the Tyrant was not to be endured. Whilft he with thoughts of these things tormented himself, came to him one Callicerates (or Callippus) an Athenian, a most cunning dissembler and irreligious person. He told him, that seeing he was in such danger, both in reference to Soldiers and People, his best way was to have fome friend, who counterfeiting himself his Enemy, should hold intelligence with his adverfaries, and thereby discover all their plots and practices against him. This part, by Dion's consent, he took upon himself, and under this pretence really and indeed practifed his destruction, which Dion's wife and lifter hearing of, therewith acquainted him; buthe regarded them not, giving too much credir to what Callicrates had promifed. The women neverthelesse brought Callicrates into the Temple of Proferpina, and there made him swear, that Circumvented by Callihe had not at all plotted against Dion's life; but he minding no Religion, crates, and but being egged on more forward to the accomplishment of his design, sent certain young men, natives, of Zachynthus, in to him, whilft he was private in his chamber, who being easily admitted, for the knowledge his family had of them, fell upon and prefently bound him: but being unarmed could not kill him, till one Lyco a Syracufian reached them a Sword in at a window; his Guard hearing, but stirring not. He died in the 55 year of his age, and the fourth after his retutn out of Pelopopne fus, being much lamented after his death, though before called Tyrant, and what ever elfe could expresse him

46. Callierates after Dion's death seized on the Principality, which he held bur thirteen moneths; for then Hipparinus fon to Dionysius the elder, pelled by Hip- by Aristomache Dion's fifter, expelled him, and placed himfelf in his father's Kingdom, which he enjoyed two years. Callippus (or Callierases) with parinus, and Legimes went against Rhegium, which was held by a Garriron of Dionyfins flain. his Soldiers, which taking, he was there slain by Leptines, and Polyfpherchon, it's faid, with the same word wherewith Dion was killed. After Hipparinus, Nafeus obtained the Soveraignty over Spracuse, and then Diony fine recovered it in the tenth year after his expulsion. In this time of Julian, at.

his exile he made himfelf Lord of Loeri, where his mother was born, and Nasaus. tyrannized over the Inhabitants fix years in a most cruel manner; ravishing their Virgins, and playing other pranks suitable to his disposition. There he Dionyfius reraifed a Company of men, and coming over on a fodain to Syracufe, where Min 1,9.1. covereth Syfinding all men in deep security, he expelled Nasaus, and erected his Tyracuse. ranny afresh. When he was gone, the Locrians expelled his Garrison, and in revenge for his ravishing their Virgins tormented his wife and two daughters to death, by thrusting sharp Needles under their Finger Nails. The SECT. 2. Commonwealth of these Locrians being very famous, is commended much by the antients, not onely Diodorus Siculus and Strabo, but more antient A.M.3658. than they, as Plato and Demost henes; the former in his discourse which he Olios and 2. maketh to have been betwixt Socrates and I imans a Locrian Philosopher of 2chi 1, the Prihagorean Sect, concerning the nature of things, and Original of the Phil. 14. World; and the later in his Oration against Timocrates, an Author of new and pernicious Laws. Something is therefore according to the nature of our design to be said of it.

47. Za'eucus (as he was accounted) a wife, just, and honest man, born of an Eminent family at Locri, was the modeller of this Commonwealth. Litrian Com-Enfebrus thinketh he flourished about the 29th Olympiad, but Dio orus and rest abhasim feveral others making him a Scholar of Pythagoras, who taught in Magna Emmum de Gracia, reckon him as Contemporary with Charondas the Law-giver of the Repub. Lorres-Thurians, another of Pythagoras his Scholars, and who is famous for the ftri- firm. Etnesse and severity of his Laws, which he is said to have confirmed by his death in the same manner as Diocles did his; the same story being told of him. According to their account he must have flourished about the 80th Olympiad. In the beginning of his Laws, or his Preface to them, this to some appeareth to have been his defign; to affect the minds of his people with piery towards God, as the Original of all Right and Justice, the Lord and Governour of Heaven and Earth, as also an hater and punisher of wickednesse. Then mentioned he Laws, not very many in number, but most effectual for the defence of Justice, restraining Vice, preserving concord and tranquillity in the State, preventing innovations, and for the establishment of themselves; which as long as observed (and they were observed long) preof ferved the Commonwealth in fafety. He thought a few stable and unafterable Laws well obeyed, to be more profitable for a State than an infinite multitude of weak ones, which are eafily changed by those that have a mind to innovare, and he concluded, that the spediest way to the ruin of a Commonwealth was by change and innovation. That his opinion was true, the example of Athens abundantly demonstrated, which erring in this point paid dearly for it, as Demosthenes often complaineth; and Rome also, which being infected with this itching diftemper, at length was constrained to submit to the power of one man. It being almost impossible, but that popular Governments should totter, what ever might happen to this inconsiderable Citie. He commanded his Laws to be firicitly observed, and the Magistrate to proceed according to the Letter of them without giving his own gloffe, or pronouncing fentence according to his private fancy. To this purpose is most memorable of all his Laws that which Demosthenes and * Polybius relate concerning one who * Lib. 22.7. should afterwards prefer a new Law, abrogate any old one, alter any thing in it, or dispute concerning the meaning of it. He was to come into the should appear contrary, then was he to be strangled forthwith in the fight of the Council. 48. Zalenem chose 1000 men out of all the people, in whom he appointed the Supream power to refide. It is not to be doubted but he ordained alfo a Senate of a far leffe number, by which dayly and leffer matters should be disparched: that there were also certain Magistrates and Courts of Justice, which had orders prescribed to them, we need not question; though we find one onely Magistrate in * Polybins, called Cosmopolis, who seemeth either to a Quo pital have prefided in the Senate, or the greater Council. Zaleucus took care for

Council of 1000 men with an halter about his neck, where speaking his mind, if to them he should demonstrate his opinion to be profitable for the State, then was he to be dismissed safe, and the Law admitted; but if it preventing diffentions amongst Citizens, pride in the greater ones, and either favour or harred in Courts of Justice. For to cut off the pride and vanity of women, he forbad any to go abroad with more than one waiting woman, except the were either drunk, went out of the Citie by night, or betook her felf to an Adulterer; to deck her felf either with costly apparel, ex-of Diony fins, wrote to Corinih to stop their proceedings, and procured the Carthaginiani to fend to forbid Timoleon from fetting foot in Sicilie. He befieved Dionyfius, but rifing up upon other thoughts and returning home-wards, the belieged followed him, and falling on his rear, forced him to fight. Having the better in this ingagement, he killed 3000 of Diony fins his men : then pursuing the rest to Syracufe, got it all into his hands, except the Island. Timoleon being more earnestly pressed forwards by his fellow Citizens, upon discovery of Iceras his treachery, though he fell into the hands of the Carthaginians fent from him to intercept him, yet escaped, and arrived in Siellie with ten ships, and 1200 men. The several Cities in the Island being accustomed to be deceived and ill used by others, suspected him also:

The form

but finding the Inhabitants of Adran m to be part for him and part for the Carthaginians, he using admirable expedition, fell sodainly upon the Encmies Camp, which taking, he was admitted into the Town. After this diverse other places joyned with him, and with speed marching to Syracuse, he un-

Diony fine, and Iceras, in so many several quarters; moreover the Carthaginians were in the Haven with 150 Gallies, which carried 50000 men. It troubled Timoleon to fee himfelf overmatched, but prefently things turned very well for him. Ten ships came loaden with men and money from Corinth to his aid, and Mamercus Tyrant of Catana, and divers forts joyned themselves to him, which so discouraged the Carthaginians, as they weved anchor and departed into their own dominions: Icetas being destitute of their affishance was quite discouraged, and Messana now also declared for Time - yielded up himself with all he had into his hands, whom he suffered upon his delivery of the Castle, and laying down his Principality, to depart Corinih, A. M. 3662.

fome four years after the recovery of his former estate. Thenceforth, having 01, 100, 40, 2, meeting him on a time, asked him the reason why he kept not that great and through Principality left him by his father; to which he answered, That his 6.60.

loft all by his fluggishnesse, he lived in great contempt and penurie, so as he V. c. 411. Who liveth in would walk up and down in poor ragged cloathes, frequent the Stewes and Ochi 19.

great want at drinking houses, gaze upon that meat in the shambles which he had no money Philippi 18.

(think) in his surface buy, and at last rook upon him the office of a Pedagonie in Jastin at supra.

in his purse to buy, and at last took upon him the office of a Pædagogue, in which he might best imitate his former carriage towards his Subjects, in tyran-nizing over his boyes. Elian reporteth, that Philip of Macedon meeting father left him that inheritance, but not his fortune, whereby he defended both himself and it. This was the end of the Tyranny of Dionysius father and fon, 64 years after the first beginning of it, in the second year of the 109

He expelleth leon. Diony fine, too being terrified at this his successe, sent to him, and

51. Syracuse was now held by three several parties, Timoleon's, and that of expectedly also broke into the City.

Timolcon

SECT. 2. cept the professed the trad of a Strumper. He forbad men in like manner to wear Gold Rings, or a Milesian Garment, under pain of being accounted Whoremongers and Adulterers. Elian * mentioneth a Law of * Van Hills. his, prohibiting one to drink strong Wine, except by the Physicians or- c.37. der though for health's fake, upon pain of death, and another, " command- "Libig.c.a. ing that an Adulterer invicted should lose both his eyes. Concerning the later a notable thing hapned to the Law-giver himself, whose fon being found guilty of this Crime, all the people were willing for his fake to remit the punishment, but he would not suffer his Laws to be broken, but to preserve fight to his son, commanded that one of his own, and another of the young man's should be pulled out. 49. (a) Demosthenes maketh mention of another Law, commanding that (4) Commanding he who struck out his Neighbours eye should be punished with the loss of Timara one of his own, as a Lex talionis. It hapned that a naughty man bearing a grudge to his Neighbour that had but one eye, threatned him to strike it out, though with the loffe of one of his own. The poor man terrified exceedingly herewith, and judging continual blindnesse worse than death, with a rope about his neck came into the Council, and asked a Law , that who foever should strike out his eye that had but one, or deprive him of the use of one who was pur-blind, should lose both his own, or be punished with the like calamity and losse that he should bring upon his Neighbour. This as just he easily obtained, and this was the onely new Law which in 200 years time was brought in, the Infolency of innovators being repressed by the severity of the former constitution, as the Orator observeth. Another there was, that a thing controverted should remain in the possession of him whose it was when the sure him away, possessed him the second time. The Judges referred the matter as an hard case to the Cosmopolis, who determined in favour of the first and last possessor; but the other contended with him about the sense of the Law, to whom he offered that both of them should go with ropes about their necks and dispute about it. The young man rold him, he was old, and expecting but three or four years longer to live, dying now would be no great loffe to him, whereas he expecting a far longer time, according to the course of nature, should have the far worse bargain; with which facete reply he handfomly ended the dispute, and the Judges confirmed the opinion of the Cofmopolis. (c) Aristotle mentioneth a Law of Zulencen, which forbad inheri- (c) Politic. tances to be fold except in urgent necessity, and this was to be proved, which ub. 2. cass. Law being neglected amongst the Leucadians made their Government degenerate into too much Popularity. (d) Heraclides mentioneth other two, (d) in Politica whereof the one forbad mourning for the dead; it being the cultom of the Locrians to feast after Funerals. The other inhibited all retaling shops, commanding Husband-men to fell their own Commodities. This was the form of the Commonwealth of Locri, called Epizephyrii, from the Promontory Zephyrium near adjoyning, being a Colony of Locri (e) Ozola, one of the (e) Let 14 two Locri of Phocis in Greece : whereof the other was called Locri Opuntit bium ilhas, and Epicnemidis. Diony fins the elder having got footing in Italy, made him. Except.3. felf master of this place; but yet left them to their own freedom, but Dianj-his hands two dayes before the tryal, and then the former went and taking fins his fon Tyrannized in the manner aforesaid. 50. When Dionysius recovered his Principality over Syracuse, the Citizens were more inclining to one Hiceras born amongst them, who at that time was Lord of Leontium; yet notwithstanding all their artemprs he kept plutach in his possession. But within awhile the Carehaginians from without invaded Timoleon, them, being thus at odds within amongst themselves, which constrained the Syracufians to fend, and beg aid of Corinth their Metropolis. Hicken with the Messengers sent some of his own, as desiring the same thing; but held fecret intelligence with the Carthaginians. The Corinthians resolving to

The Swien-

firms begaid

thraus

fend aid to their Colony, thed upon Timoleon for their Captain. He was SECT. 2 the fon of Timodemus or Timenatus, of a quiet and loving disposition, but a great Enemy to such as mastered their neighbours, which he shewed effectually against his own brother, whom, having made himself Lord of Corinib by the help of fome Mercenaries, he gave way to have killed, being in the room, and burfting out into tears, whilst his two companions did it. Some accounting this act as unnatural and impious, though others commended it, he thereupon abstained from all imployment for twenty years, till this charge was laid upon him. Whilft he was preparing for the Expedition, Icetas dealt underhand with the Carthaginians, that he might be advanced into the place commenced, till such time as a definitive sentence passed; concerning which (6) Polybius telleth a notable flory of two men that contending about (b) Exempt.7. a flave, the one having had him long in possession, the other got him into lib, u.

CHAP. III.

Olympiad, A. M. 3661.

52. Iceras very unwilling to lose his hopes of preferment, procured the Carthaginians to return to Syracuse. Mago filled the Haven with his thips, and landing 60000 men, pitched his Camp in the City; Icetas then Laid fiege to the Castle, which the Corinebians now held from the refignment of Dionysius. Timoleon relieved them by provisions sent from Catana in little Vessels through the Carthaginian Fleet; whereupon Iceras and Mago drew out a strong party and besieged Catana, after whose departure, Leon Plutaich.

Ggg 2

Captain of the Corinthians fallied out of the Castle, and falling upon the be-

Micolemus &

put out of their po ver.

20 457

SECT.2. fiegers lying in a fecure and careleffe posture, led fome, and, the other flying, took Achradina the strongest quarter of the City. This the two Generals understanding, quicky faced about and returned; but missed of both places, out of defire to possesse both. Timoleon having secured Messana, returned with 4000 men towards Syracufe, whereupon Mago for fear hoised up fails and departed for Africk, having by his lazinesse and cowardize lost a fair opportunity of reducing all Sicilie into the power of his Superiours. Af-thereof.

terwards Tim lean dividing his men, fet upon fuch places of the City as Timplest reco. Hiceras yet retained, and by force got them all into his power, without any vereth Syracu-bloodshed of his own party: then threw he down all the fortifications and fe, and feeleth monuments of the Tyrants, except Ge on's Statue, calling the People to the work by a publick Crier. Then he applied himself to the making of Laws agreeable to a Popular Government, which yet he endeavoured but to little purpose so to restrain, as to prevent the inconveniencies which formerly had their rife from too much popularity. In explaining and illustrating Diocles his Laws, he used the help of Cophalus, and Diony sius, both Corin hians. He ordained a new annual and chief Magistrate, whom he would have called the Servant of Tupiter Olympius, in memory of their recovered liberty, commanding that by his name the year should be figned, as by the Archons at Athens, and the Confuls at Rome. The first that bore this Office was Callimed s, a man of prime note, being chosen by the Suffrages of the People. Now whereas by reason of Wars, Sedicions, and Binishments, the City was even exhausted, he recalled the Exiles out of Sicilie, Greece, and Asia, which being in number 10000, he increased by a far greater, confishing of Sicilians and Italians of Greekish Original, to whom being made free of the City, he distributed Lands and possessions. 53. Icetas having retired to Leonium, Timoleon laid fiege to that City: but finding it strongly manned, rose up from before it, and went about to other places, to which he restored liberty, expelling their Tyranni. In this mean while I cetas went against Syracufe; but was forced to retreat with great losse. Timeleon's renown was by this time so spread abroad, that many towns of the Sicanians, and others subject to the Carthaginians, sent to him, to defire they might be admitted into the social League. The Carthaginians herein were so concernd, as to prepare amain for the renewing of the War, procuring Soldiers out of Gall, Liguria, Spain, and Africk. Mago had killed himself after his shameful return, and his dead body was naited to a croffe for the mal-administration of his Office; therefore in the third year after they fent over Aldrubal and Amilear, with 200 long-ships, and above 1000 of burthen, wherein were so many men transported as made up those already in Sicilie 70000 Foot, and 10000 Florse, which with warlike Chariots marched against Timoleon. He having composed the difference with Hiceras mustered all his forces, and judging it wisdom to transfer the War into the Enemies Country, for this purpose he chose out of all 12000 men, with which he marched away in hafte; but in his journy a great mutiny happened amongst his Soldiers. For one Thrasius a rash impudent fellow, who with the Phocians had rifled the Temple at Dilphos, cried out, that Timoleon being mad, led them into most certain death, for that the Carthaginians in number so far exceeded them: and he advised the Mercenaries to return to Syracuse, and demand the pay already due to them. Timoleon had much adoe to take up the matter, and 1000 utterly refused to follow him. But he rejoyced that the mutineers had already fallen off, before they came to any ingagement, and with the rest hasted toward the Enemy.

54. By the convenience of a mist he got near to the Enemy undiscried, then lying upon the River Crimefus. Ten thousand of the Carthaginians passing the River, he fell down upon them from the hills, and made great flughter, and their friends coming in to their relief, the fight was sharply renewed, and the Carth aginians by their great numbers began to incompasse the other round, when fell fuch a fform, as, together with the valour of the Greeks, forced them to their heels. Flying into the River by heaps, the Foot amongst the thorse, and Chariots, multitudes perished, being either prefied, wounded to death by the fwords of their Companions, drowned The carthagi- through the swiftnesse of the stream then increased by rain, or esse killed interreceive a by the Enemy on their backs: the Sacred band fo called, confitting of 2500 great overof the choicest Soldiers, fig ting most valiantly, all died in the place. Near upon 13000 were flain, and 15000 taken, with 200 Chariots (the greatest part whereof was broken in places) and 1000 brigandines with 10000 shields: though most of the Arms were swallowed up in the water: Those Caribaginians that remained, in great consternation escaped to Litheum. Their friends at Carebage hearing of their defeat, were in no little fear, out of congeit that Timalem would now come over thither. Wherefore they recalled Gifco the brother of Hanno out of banishment, and made him General over the Army, which they raifed with money out of other Nations, not thinking it meet to thrust themselves into such danger for the time to come. But Timoleon returning to Syracuse, found it a convenient time to punish the mutiniers, whom he banished Sicilie, commanding them to depart the City before Sun set. Passing over into Steilie they, seised on a Town amongst the Brutsi, who rifing and befieging them, took the place, and therein put them all to the fword. 55. Hicerasoften mehrioned before, and Mamerous Tyrannus of Catana, joined with the Canthaguniane against Timedeon, perswading them, for fear of lofing their thare in Sicilie, to fend over fome forces. They fent away Gifco, who hired some Greeks, the first which served that Nation. They cut off some hundreds of Timpleon's Mercenaries, and Hiceras invaded the Syracusian Territories, whence getting much booty he marched into Calauria, in contempt of Timoleon, who lay there now with inconfiderable forces in comparison of his, Hicean being pursued by Timoleon, got over the River, Damyria, and then endeavoured to hinderthis passage; but he pressing upon him flew 1000 of his men, and putting him to flight, pursued him into the Territories of Leontium, where he took him alive, with his fon Eupolemus, keth and put and put them both to death as Traitors to their Country, together with Eu-who death thymus his General of the Horse; for that in a speech to the Leontines he Hicetas. had fcoffed at the Corinthians, faying, they needed not to be afraid, though the Corinthian women were come from home, terming Timoleon and his men th Manareus, no other than women. After this Timoleon overthrew in battel Mamercus. killing 2000 of his men, whereof the greater number were Carthaginians, who thereupon earneftly begged neace, and had it granted on these conditions: That they still retaining all in their hands within the River Lycus, it should be yet lawful for any one to remove thence to Syracuse with his goods and family, and to renounce alliance with them, and with all the Tyranni in Sicilie, which at this time had enflaved many Civies of the Island. Mamer. cus fled over into Italy, and Catana was delivered up to Timoleon, who be-Airences put took himself to Meffana, where he befieged Hippo by Land and Sea, and taking him in his flight, delivered him up to the Citizens, who put him to death. Mamercus yielded himself to Timoleon, who having promised him he would not be his accuser, he cast himself upon the People of Syracuse; but perceiving them as he began to speak inraged against him, he attempted to dash cuted as a robber. 36. Timoleon, after this, drove away Nicodemus, who ruled over the Centorippini, and forced Apolloniades to lay down his power, which he exercifed over the Arynneans, whom having reflored thus to liberty he made free of Syracufe. Then did he restore all the other Cities to their desired liberry, one after another, and received them into confederacy with Syracuse: and it was proclaimed by the voice of a publick Crier throughout Greece, A. M. 3666.

out his own brains, and that not disparching him, he was taken up and exe-that The People of Syracuse offered bouses and sand, to all that would joyn Ol, 110, an. 2. themselves as members to their Commonwealth. Hereby it came to passe that V. C. 415. multitudes flocked thither as to a new inheritance. Timoleon feeting him- Ochi 23. felf to the care of the State, corrected and explained the Laws of Docles, Phil. 23.

CHAP. IV.

SECT. 1. and acted other things necessary, as he thought, to the well being thereof, till Timoleon's death.

growing old he lost his fight, which calamity as he bore very moderatly, so by reason of it he intermitted not publick businesse. Not long after, he died, and was buried by the confluence of all Sicilie, the affaires whereof he had ferled; games being celebrated yearly in memory of him, as for an Hero. This hapned in the 58 year of his government, the last of the 110 Olympiad, and the last also of the reign of Philip of Macedon father to Alexander the A. M. 3668. Great; about the year of the World 3668, the second of Arfes King of Ol. 110. 40.4. Persia, and seven before the beginning of the Macedonian Empire, to the V.C. 417. time whereof, what we have further to fay concerning the affairs of Sicilia, Aifis 2. is to be referred; which affaires will shew, that the infirmity of Popular Go- Phil. 24. vernment is greater than that Timpleon by his constitutions could heal the diftempers thereof, and further evince the worth of Monarchy.

CHAP. IV..

The affairs of the Romans contemporary with the fecond Empire.

SECT. I.

From the Banishment of Tarquinius and first change of the Government, to the alteration made by the Decemvivi , the space of 57 years. 1. THE Kingly Office being banished with Tarquinim (though both rebelliously and impudently) that of Confuls succeeded. Who were so Confuls.

Whence fo called.

called a Confulendo. Feftus observeth out of Verrius, that the word Con-[wlas was used by the Antients, not onely for Consilium peras, and percontaris; but also for judices and flatuas: Moreover the word Confulere is many times taken for providere, or prospicere. According to this Etymology various is the opinion of Learned Men concerning this Office. Some derive it from the duty or work of confulring the Senate, which was incumbent upon the Confuls. Others interpret it ofjudging, which, faith (a) Lipfius, I onely (a) De Magreadin (b) Quintilian, who puts the question, whether Conful was so named first pop. Ron. from confulting, or judging, seeing that consulere was used also for the la-cap, 7, ter, whence arose that phrase: Rogar boni Consular, that is, judices; but not only Quintilian, but Festusalso, in the word Confulat, giveth this Erymology. Laftly, fome derive it from the end of the Office, which was con-Sulere, or providere, as (6) Florus and Justinian's Code. But those Magi- (6) Lib.1.69. strates were not first of sall named Confules but Pratores, which name, although it was common to others, yet fluck to them by way of excellency. (d) Fastus (d) In w. faith it expresly; and so doth (e) Justinian in his Novella Constitutiones. Pratona Patt. Konaras faith the name of Prator continued till the Decembers, who being (4) 24, 625. banished, then at length crept in the name of Conful. But he should rather have faid, that then the name of Juden crept in; for it appeareth out of Livie, that they were called Judices next after Prators, before the name of Confuls came in. The Historian in his third Book speaking of such things as happened in the first year after the writing of the twelve Tables addeth : In these times it was the custom not to call the Conful by the name of Judex, but Prator. (f) Varro out of antient Commentaries confirmeth this, and (g) Ci- (f) Delig. cero giveth the Etymology of all these Offices thus, A praeundo, judicando, Laina, lib. confulendo, Pratores, Judices, Consules appellaneur. Some upon good grounds (8) De Ligh. conjecture, that after the creation of Pretors, who were peculiar Judges, the name of Juden was left, and that of Conful succeeded, which continued to the

2. The power of Confuls was at first the same with that of Kings, allayed SECT. 1. Their power. onely by plurality of persons and shortnesse of time, so that Cicero calleth it

Regium Imperium, and Regia potestas, and the Greeks choice to call them Hypatoi, which fignifieth those that are most excellent or chief, as Diony sius telleth us. In the beginning they might impriton and sentence at their pleafure, having the power of life and death over the Citizens, though factor the authority to make peace and yvar, as Lipsius affirmeth. By degrees this great power was diminished, and that especially by two things, viz. Appeal, and Imerposing, called Provocatio and Intercessio. The former was presently brought in after the banishment of the Kings, by Valerius Poplicola, who preferred a Law for taking away animadversion upon Citizens from the Con-Juls, and giving liberty of Appeal to the People as the higher Judge. But by the Interposition of the Tribunes of the people who were afterwards created, all actions of the Confuls whatfoever might be obstructed, as by the voyce of the people it felf, whose power and dignity thenceforth dayly increased, and took authority over all Magistrates. Hereby was that of the Consuls much diminished; Yet not quite broken and dissolved as long as the Commonwealth continued; their Offices being both many and large. For first they were the head of the State, all ordinary Magistrates being subject and obnoxions to them , (except the Tribunes) in whole actions they might interpose. Secondly, they had the chief Command in the War over Citizens and Affociates, as also over Provinces and Subjects, whom they might punish; and Authority to appoint Officers in the Army, as appeareth out of Cicero and Polybius in several places. Thirdly, they affembled the people, confulted with it, preferred Laws also, which if enocted bore their names, Fourthly, they received Letters from Governours of Provinces, from Nations and Cities: gave audience to Ambassadors, and what was to be done either by Senate or people passed through their hands as chief Ministers of State. Fifthly, as the Senate handled and executed all things in peace and year, fo did they govern it in some sence, they affembled and dismissed it : therein they asked the Members their opinions, counted and divided them : and in conclusion they seered the ship of the Commonwealth. This was their power while the free Stare continued; but after it was subjected to the power of one person, their authority was again much impaired, few of all these privileges remaining to them; for that the Prince assumed the rights of all Magistrates, but especially those of the Confuls and Tribunes. Under the Emperours they were employed in consulting the Senate, adminifiring Justice, assigning Tutors or Guardians, manumitting Slaves, letting out to farm the Customs (which Office formerly belonged to the Cenfors) and managing publick Games: besides, they had the honour of having the year Characterized by their names, as formerly. These things will be sufficiently evinced (at least most of them) in the sequel of this History concerning Roman

Certain Rites.

3. There were observed certain Consular Rites, which it will rather behove us in this place to relate, than scatteredly hereafter to give an account of them. First of all the time wherein the Consuls assumed their Office was not fet or constant, but various, till the year of the Citie 532. when both they and other Magistrates entred on the Catends of January , having before, as * Simp. fon and others observe, Commenced on the Calends of Quintilis called Tuly, A.M.3676. as well as at other times. The first day was an high day, and very creditable to them, the Senare and people meeting at their houses, faluting, and accompanying them to the Capitol, where they took their Oaths and Sacrifized. Thence they went to the Senate house, where they were ordered by a Sonaus Confulsum to give thanks to the Prince of the Senate; then fent they gifts to their friends, and threw money to the people, which later expense was afterwards taken away by the Emperours, and appropriated to the repairing of aquaducts. They twice swore to govern according to the Laws (as all other Magistrates did, none being to keep his Office above five dayes, except publickly (worn) when first they entred; once

Roman Affaires contemporary with

SECT.1. in the Capitol, and then again in the Rollra, in their hands to whom they fucceeded : and at the laying down of their Office again at the years end they fwore in like manner, that wittingly and willingly they had done nothing, contrary to the faid Laws. Another Rite there was, as Lipfim termeth ir, about their power, which thereby was so increased as to become as absolute as the Kingly was. This was onely upon an extraordinary occasion, or in extream necessity, when all lay at the stake, and the Citie was in danger. Then a Decree of the Senage passed in this form : Viderine Confules nequid Resp. derriments accipiat, of Dent operam Consules nequid Resp. detriments Capiat, as " Sallust hathit, who addeth, that this greatest power was given by the Se- . De belle nate to thefe Magistraies, to raise forces, make War, all manner of wayes to Catalia, punish Citizens, and associates, to have, both at home, and abroad in War, ab-Solute command and judiciary power. Otherwise without the command of the people no Consul could do any of these things. In a word, by this Decree was restored to them that power (or rather more given) which was taken away by the Appeal, and other Laws.

merly observed out of Dionysius, to which shall be added upon occasion what Office.

may be thought requisite. As for the age wherin a man was capable of this Office, (A) Tacius observeth, that of old it was lawfull at any age to sue (a) Anal. for the Confulfhip, and the supream power of Diltator. But afterwards be- lib.11. ing taught otherwise by experience (in the 573th year of the Citie) the Romans thought fit to fet bounds to juvenile heat and ambition. This was, as (b) Livy writeth, by a Law which L. Julius (or Villius) Tribune of the peo- (b) Lib. to. ple preferred, whereby was limited a certain age before which it was not lawfull to fland for any place of Magustracy; but from Cicero it should rather appear that there were several Laws made for the several Offices; and at length the Lex Julia or Annaria, included, and abolished all the rest. For (c) he maketh them many, calling them in the plural number Leges An- (c) Thillipia nales; and Livy, saying that then first of all a Law was preferred by Julius, 5. in effect contradicteth himself, relating elsewhere a (d) passage concerning (d) Lib.15.

Scipio Africanu:, that when he stood for the Adileship, the Tribunas of the people opposed him, alleging that he was not yet arrived at the lawfull age which was required for that Office; and yet he was many years before Julins or his Law. Cicero (e) declareth the 43th year to have been the (e) Quepilit age of Consulship, saying, that Alexander the Great having died in his 33th year, came ten years short of the Consular age. If his words be taken

4. What the Ornaments and Enfigns of the Confuls were, we have for-

be Thewn, the Emperours neglected it, and Cafar Dictator before them, who

Its duration. made Delabella Conful at 25. Lastly, as for the Term or duration of the Consulship, it was annual, as we before hinted in Brutus his model, and so continued, till Julius Cafar made feveral in one year, so that afterwards Confuls were nominated for three, two, and one moneth, and others substituted one after another. Hence came it to passe that there were two forts of Confuls, Ordinary and Substitute, the former beginning on the Calends of January, and the later at other times. This custom continued till Constantine, who again made the Office Annual, and instead of the Suffetti, or Subfitute, ordained a new kind, called Confulares, and Confules Honorarii, whose Office was not called Confulatus, but Confularitas, having derived firietly, the 43th, but if more largely, the 42th was the year, and this rather as many examples do confirm. A grave age became this most grave and weighty Office; but sometimes the people dispensed with the Law, as will its Original from the Confular Ornaments invented by Julius Cafar. Of (f) 116.46. this titular promotion, (f) Caffiodorus is to be confulted. 5. But (to come to the matter in hand) the first Confuls were L. Junius Bruius, and L. Tarquinius Collatinus, who began this Office, according to The first (a) Dionysius his Computation, in the beginning of the 68th Olympiad, (a) Libs. Confuls, wherein Ischomachus of Crotone was Victor, Sagrus being Archon at Athens. Because they could not deny that many good things had been done by Kings Their Acts. for the Commonwealth, they would have the name preferred for ever in the State, and therefore gave order to the Pontifies and Augurs to chuse out SECT. I. forme one, who taking care of Superficion, and being exempted from War, should be called Ren Sucrificalus, to which Office allotted unto the Patri- AM. 3496. tians, Manilis Papirius of that Order first arrained. Next after this, fearing 01.67, and 4.

the people might have deshey well might an ill ordinion of their inten. V.C. 245. this the people might have, as they well might, an ill opinion of their intentions, and fay that for one they had got two Kings; to diminish envy, whereas each of them had as yet twelve Axes carried before them, as the Kings used to have, they ordered that but one of them should have twelve Axes, and the other twelve Litters with Rods alone, and each his moneth should have the Axes. This contained the people better in obedience, as other things whereby they laboured to render themselves popular. For they revived the Laws of Servins Tullins, concerning publick meetings and affemblies, with other things which conduced to the latisfaction of the common fort, who now looked upon their lawlesse liberties as recovered. 6. Ta quinius after his banishment first stayed at Gabii for some time, whither many of his party flocking to him, after he could not prevail with them of that place to make War in his behalf against the Romans, he betook himself into Tofcany, or Hetraria, where he could claim kindred by his mother, and there winning mens minds by his munificence, and moving them with his tears, he procured Ambassadors to be sent to Rome in his behalf. First they moved that he might be received again, promising on his behalf very good demeanour for the time to come, and when this equity could not be heard, they (or others fent aferwards, as Platarch Writeth) defired he might have his goods, especially such as were descended upon him from Tas quinsus Priscus his Grand-father, who had in no wife ill desgreed of them. Bruss, according to his furious and malicious temper, very vehemently opposed it, saying, that it would shew little forecast in them to furnish him with money to imploy against themselves; but his Collegue was for restoring the goods, and prevailed to have the Decree passe on his side, by one Vote onely overpowering the contraty party, according to Dionysims. The Ambassadors having it in charge to labour with the friends of Tarquinius, that they might do something effectually, drew out the time in length, pretending they wanted carriages, and must fell such things as could not be removed. They stayed so long as to draw over to them some of the two notable families of the Aquillii and Vitellii, viz. two perfons of this, and three of that. Of all these Collations the Conful was Uncle, and Bruins also had married the fifter of the Visellis, by which he had feveral Children, whereof two youths they drew in, having convinced them of their fathers vehemency, madnesse, and folly, and given them good hopes of great things to be done for them by Tarquinius. 7. These men mer in the house of the Aquilli to ripen their businesse,

There in the dark, a certain flave, Vindicine by name, fearing to be found in Lege inter alios that room when they came in, and not with any intent to harken, had himfelf Dionyfium 1. 5. behind a Cheft, and heard their whole debate concerning their purpose of & Flutarch. killing the Confuls; about which they gave Letters then to the Ambaffadors (who lodged in the house, and were present at the meeting) to be delivered to Tarquinias. The Slave in this case knew not how to carry himself; for, to go to Brueus, and to accuse his own sons to him seemed an hard and bold attempt, as also no leffe to do it unto Tarquinins their Uncle; no private person he know to whom he might communicate so great a matter, and yet a thing of such consequence he thought was not to be buried in silence, nor yet the discovery thereof deferred. At length he betook himself to P. Valerini, who had also a great hand in casting out the King. Valeries exceedingly struck with the thing, that he might proceed warlly, first secured the slave to have him forth coming, then fending his brother Marcus to feize the Kings house, and watch the servants there, that they should carry away no Letters, he himself with his Clients and Friends went to the house of the Aquilli, where he got into his hands what was written to Tarquinius. The Aquillis being abroad met him at the Gare, where they endeavoured to recover by force the Hhh

SECT. 1. Letters from him; but he through the help of those about him drew them into the Forum, as his brother also having seized on other Letters at the King's house, forced some of his servants thither. The tumult being appealed by the Consuls, Vindicius related the Story, and the Letters were read. The parties said nothing for themselves; all were associated slient; at length some to flatter Brutus mentioned banishment; Collatinus shedding tears gave the prisoners hope, and this was increased because Valerius held his fome to flatter Bruing mentioned bantinment; Conaining including lears gave the prifoners hope, and this was increased because Valerius held his peace,

8. But furious and implacable Bruing calling both his Sons by their names (Titing and Tiberius) asked them why they faid nothing to what was laid to their charges, and when they according to the third between and when they according to the third to the control of the contr

(Titus and Tiberius) asked them why they faid nothing to what was laid to their charge, and when they answered not at the third time, he turned to the Lictors of Executioners, and faid, Now, is it your part to perform the rest, to death his them then did they bear with rods, and after that beheaded them, he

them; then did they beat with rods, and after that beheaded them, he, whilft others could not behold to abhominable a spectactle, feeding his angry eyes with the object, till all was done. Then left he the rest to the discretion of his Colleague and departed; after which a stupidity, horrour, and amazement, as the things required, for a time possessed all. Collatinus his backwardnesse and delay incouraged the Aquilis to desire time to answer, and that Vindicius their Slave might be given up to them, and not continue in the hands of their accusers. The Consul was about to do both, when Valerius who kept the Slave all this while in the midft of his followers, would neither deliver him, nor fuffer the People to depart without censuring the accused, hough Collatinus was ready to dismisse the Assembly. He laid hands upon the Aquilis, and sent for Bruens, caying out, that Collatinus did unworthly, to impose upon his Colleague a necessity of killing his sons, and think of granting the lives of the other unto women. The Conful being vexed, commanded the Littors to take away Vindicius, so that they laying hands on him, wounded those that kept him, and Valerius his friends fighting in his behalf, the People cried out for Bruins. When he came he faid, that by his full authority he had animadverted upon his own Sons, and Thereft beThere was no need of this, faith Platarch (though Dionysius relateth a great contest betwixt the two Confuls) but the rabble called to the vote, condemned them by all their Suffrages, according to which sentence they were beheaded. Collatinus now, who for being a kin to the King had been fuspected, and whose name was hateful to the People, having by his carriage in this businesses offended the generality, voluntarily laid down his Office and departed from the City, seeing now to what a sad passe he had helped to bring things, and too late repenting of his rebellion. To him succeeded Valerius (the Comitie being held for an election) whom Brows much desired to have had thought the first fruits of his Office due to Vindicius, whom manumitted he made free of the Commonwealth, this privilege being given to him first of all Liberti or Freed-men, according to Plusarch, (which Appius long after communicated to them all) and from him a perfect and full manumission had the name of Vindista. This done, the Consuls gave the goods of the King to be rised by the People, demolished his house, and laid the Campus Mara Dissyl, likes sims which he had to himself, open as before, wherein lying Corn cut down Livinish already, they threw it into the River, and sending trees that grevy there Val, Marin Campus Mara already.

Valerius Conful in the room of Tarquinius Collatinus.

his Colleague at first, but that the greatnesse of Collatinus carried it from 9: Valerius being with the good-will of all the multitude created Conful, already, they threw it into the River, and sending trees that grew there Val. Main. after it, these there with into the River, and sending trees that grew there Val. Main. after it, these receiving gravel and such rubbish as came down the chanel, I. a. a. p. plata, it is at last grew into an Island called Insula Sacra; though some say, this happened in after times, when Tarquinia a Vestal Nun gave the adjoyning field plan, 1.9.01 to the Publick, and for that obtained great honours, as these amongs the Fishain and to appear as a wirnesse in any cause, and liberty Insula to marry, which she resured. But Tarquinus seeing that reason sailed, betook himself to force, and brought a great Army of Tustania against Rome.

The Confus opposed him with another, and when they came to joyn, druns the son of Jarquin, and Bruins the Confus with greater with and fury than discretion, fingled out each other, and so carelessy demeaned themselves, as both of them lost their lives. A great and bloody battel was sought betwick the Armies, which night onely broke up, and that with such equal fortune, as neither party could boast it self, till at length either by a voice out of a grove, A. M. 3497.

as the forty goeth, that the Euroseans had lost one man more, or some other of as as, way, the Romans were for revived, and the other discouraged, that the Larer V. Cas. as, the fortook their tents for fear, and being fallen upon by she, bnemy, were night proportion of the fact of the larer V. Cas. as, the second of the fact of the larer V. Cas. as, the second of the fact of the large view of the large vi was the Author of it.

10. But when the People confidered how Bruins the father of their liberty, as they accounted him, would not govern alone without a Colleague, and yet Valerins mide no hafts to take a partner, they began to complain, that he had not taken to himfelf for much the place of Bruins (which yet not at all belonged to him) but that of Tarquinins, and were much offended with him. They confirmed themselves in their hard opinion, from his him wing all the Rods and Axes caried before him, and with them, in greater flate than Tarquinins used, marched from his house, which was much larger than the Palace that he demolished. His house was very fair, fituate in such a place as afforded him prospect round about, and had a difficult assent; so that the convenience of the site, considered with his Kingly por and acten-dance, seemed to threaten their infant Commonwealth, now an Riphan by Brutus his death. His friends remonstrating to his these particulars, he con-

Cleareth him- tended not; but that very night fent for Carpeffers, who demolished the house ere morning : the next day the People were presented with a new and unexpected fight, which fully afrered their opinion concerning Valerius, who now wanting an house, of his own, was glad to accept of the courtefie of friends, till the People give him a place, wherein he built a munion leffe flately than the former. Further, that he might render not onely himfelf, but also his Office, in stead of terrible, familiar and acceptable to all, he removed Axes from the bundle of Rods, and, the Rods themselves, when he came into the Assembly, he bowed or vailed to the People, thereby intimixing, that In them lay the chief power; which cultom his Successors followed. Hereby, as to his own person, he lested not himself, but cut off envy, and got to much power, as he renounced of liberty, the People willingly submitting to him, because he flattered them, out of which respect they gave him the Sirname of Poplicola, not Publicola, as Sigonius hath evinced. He gave free leave to any to fue for the Confulship; but before a Colleague should be joyned with him, being ignorant what might happen, and fearing he might either through émulation or ignorance croffe his defigns, by his fole duced fuch effects as shewed the excellency of that Government which he had helped to destroy.

11. First he filled up the Senare which had been exhausted, by an addition of 164 Persons, as some delivered the number. Then made he several Laws, which gave beginning to that paramount or rampane liberty, whereof the People was afterwards possessed. By one he gave leave to an accused refon, to appeal from the Consuls to the People. By another, he made it death for any one to take upon him an Office of Magistroy without the People's order. A third gave relief to poor Citizens, by taking any the payment of Itabute. Another punished disobedience towards the Consult, and appointed the mulde to be the price of five Oxen, and two sheep: the price of a Sheep was ten Oboli (each Obolus was worth 1 d. q.) and 1 to the vilue of an Oxe. For at that time the use of money was but rate among the authority, he give birth to feveral Popular Constitutions, which at length pro-

CEAP. IV.

Heratius.

420

SECT. 1. Romans; wealth confifting in plenty of Cattel; whence riches were afterwards called Peculia from Pecus, and upon the antient money an Oxe, Sheep, or Hog was stamped, which gave it the name of Pecunia: and hence they imposed upon their fons (as Plutarch observeth) the names of Smillit, Bubulci, Caprarii, and Porcii. Another Law Valerius made, which gave power to any man to kill him unheard, that affected the Supreme power, if he could demonstrate the crime. The last was a Law for the creation of two Quaffors or publick Treasurers, as Plusarch writeth. For it being necessary that the People should contribute money for maintenance of Wars, he would neither undertake the keeping of it himself, nor commit the care of it to his friends, neither thought it convenient that the Publick money should be kept in a private house: therefore he made the Temple of Saturn the Ararium, or Treasury, and caused the People to chuse out two young men to be The Quaffors. Quaffors. The first were P. Veiurius, and M. Minucius. A great quantity of money was now brought into the Erarium. For at the Cenfus 1 30000 were celled or valued, befides Widdows and Orphans. Thus much Platarch delivereth concerning this Office. When first made.

12. But some give a more antient beginning to the Quastors, making theirs antienter than any Office, except that of the Kings. (a) Grucchanus (a) Lib. 4 a Lawyer wrote, that both Romains and Numa had their Quaffors, created Polefathan a Lawyer wrote, that both Romains and Numa had their Quaffers, created (b) 116. the by the consent of the People; however he faith it is certain that Tulius office Quafter Hostilius had his. (b) Ulpian confirmeth the later, and (c) Tacinus seem- vis. erh to agree with either of them, affirming that under the Kings there were (c) datall, 16, Quaftors, which the Lex carriers sheweth, that was renewed by L. Bruins, 11. He addeth, that the Confuls had power to chuse them, till the People took that honour to it felf, and first of all created Valerius Politus, and Amilius Mamereus, that they might follow the Army, in the 63 year after the banishment of Tarquinius. Lipsius thinketh this number should be read 27, that it might agree with (d) Diony fine, and alfo (e) Livie, who first mention- (d) Lib. 8. eth the Qualtors in the 269 year of the City, 23 years after the banish- (e) Lib 3. ment of the King, and differerhonely in one of their names, having for Amilies, Cafo Fabius. Concerning the antiquity of these Officers (f) Pom- (f) Lib. a.f. ponine allo the Lawyer agreeth with the reft. They had their name a queren de One ? do faith (g) Parrs, because they made inquiry after publick money, and al- (a) De inquire fo Malefactors, or the actions of such, which later employment was after for a wards committed to the Triumviri for capital matters, so that Quastor is Edit 1994. written as for Quaficor. Juffus Lipflus is of opinion, that though the Kings scalig. might have these Officers for the punishment of vice, yet the Treaturers were not created till the change of the Government, when the Publick Treature being increased there was need of such. At the beginning they were but two by consent of all; and those were made for the City, retaining afterwards the name of Urbani. But afterward when they were to look to the paying of the Armies abroad, and felling plunder and booty, then were there other two made, to accompany the Confuli, as Livis faith, which hapned about the

Their num-

232 year of the City.

13. This number long continued, until all Italy was brought in; then was it again doubled, no fewer than eight being thought to suffice for the Tributes of the Provinces; and this hapned when Silver money was first coined, about the 439 year of the City, as may be guthered from the Epitome of Livie's 15 Book. Not long after Sylla procured by a Law, that twenty thould be assured made for the affiftance of the Senate, as Tacleus Writerh, to which he had delivered the judicial power: and for fuch an end did Calar calife fourty to be created. The Quafterflip was the first step to Offices of Magistracy. Their duty, as is clear from several Authors, was to gather, lay up, and pay out the publick revenues, to keep the military Ensignes of Gold, and Silver

Their duty. (for they then used no banners) in the Treasury, to sell plunder and booty, receive, lodge, and carry our Ambassadors. They had alto the government of certain places, as Oftia and Cales. They received from Augustus the privilege of keeping the Senatus confults, which formerly belonged to the Æ diles

Ediles and Tribunes. And the Emperones had a certain Quafter of their SECT. I own called Candidatus Principu, and Quafter Principu, or Augusti, whose Office Moran describeth. This gave original to the Quafter Palaris (faith Lipfins) to whom was granted great authority, as to make Laws and Decrees, subscribe Petitions, return answers, and to be as it were the keeper or Prefident of the Laws, which name is now changed into Chancellour. But, to speak something of the Treasury, the Temple of Saurin was first made use The Ararium of to this purpose, as Fluench cellechus. Here also were kept the Libri or Treasury. Elephaneini, Books wherein the 25 Tribes were written, and the Decrees of the Senate ; but the Libri Linter, or the Annals, were kept by the Pontifices, who therein recorded such things as were memorable. In the Erarum Wis also a more secret place, where the twentieth part of the revenues were referved for cases of extremity onely. The Erarium was afterwards called Fifew, from the Fifcella, or bags wherein the money was kept, according to Varro. The first Advocatus Fifei was instituted by Adrian the Emperour, as Sparsianus Witnesseth. Amongst other tributes, the People of Rome had the twentieth part of all revenues of Corn throughout Italy, besides Salt. which was the device of Livie, thence Sirnamed Salinator. Those that farmed the Tributes or Custom were called Publicans, and the principal of them Mancipes, according to Pedianns, whom Volateranus followeth. 14. Valerius Poplicola having finished his constitutions of Seclement. held the Affembly of the People for the election of another Conful. Luciejunting Con-sins the father of Lucretia was chosen, to whom, as the elder, Poplicala granted the Fasces or bundle of Rods; which respect of age was ever after observed by their Successors, till the time of (4) Placarch, as himself writ- (4) In Poplieth. This granting of the Fafors was yet but for the first moneth, which indeed cola. afterwards was wont to be granted to the elder Conful; but no longer than till the Lex Julia, in the feventh Chapter whereof this privilege was given to him who had most children, either still in his own power (that is to be underRood nor smanicipated) or already lost in War. But if both Confuls had an equal number of children, he who at prefent was a maried man was preferred. If both were husbands and fathers alike, then the antient cultom returned, and he who was eldest had first the Fasces. Concerning such who were both unmaried, had the same number of children, or were both maried and had no children, the Law commanded nothing. But I hear, faith (b) Gel- (b) Noth Attic. lines, that those who were exempted, were wont to yield the Fascos of the lib. 2. c. 15. first moneth to their Colleagues that far exceeded them in age, or in birth, or entred upon their fecond Confulthip. In the mean time that Conful who (c) De Line.

had no Fasces, that he might be known by some note of distinction, had an Lat. pag. 62. Accenfus (a certain Bedle or Crier, concerning whom (c) Varro is to be (d) Lib s.

disturbed

confideed) that went before hims and Litters followed with Rods and Staves, (e) Lib. 3. and fall Diametime. (c) Livits. and (f) Stateming de restricte. as (d) Dionyfins, (e) Livie, and (f) Swetonius de restifie. 14. Lucretius died also a few daies after his creation, to whom succeeded M. Horatins, who continued the Colleague of Poplicola for the remaining part of the year, Novv vyas the Capitol finished which had been vovved by Tarquinias Prifeus, and begun by Superbus his grand-lon. Poplicola had a great ambicion to dedicare it, but the Nobility envied him the honour, and Rifred up Horains to fland for it, whom when the other was confirmed to be absent in the War, they injuried by a Decree to do it, and caried him up thicker, knowing that in the presence of Poplicala they could not have prevailed. Some write, that by lot the War fell to Poplicol's much against his will, and the Dedication to Horacins. On the Ides of September, which fell in with the full Moon of the Greek moneth Metagitnibn (answering to Mugust the 28 of the Inlian year, as Facobus Cappellus computeth) when many flocked to behold the Solemnicy, Horatins having commanded filence.

and finished all the utual rices, couched the door, and pronounced the words of Dedication! Then Marcus the brother of Poplacola standing near for that purpole, and watching for an opportunity, faid, Thy fon O Confut is dead in the Camp', wherear when all others were fruck, Herains nothing

The Capitol dedicated.

The first

Thaginians.

SECT. 1. disturbed answered onely, Then cast him out whither you please, for I admit not of mourning, and wenr on with the matter in hand. Meither was the flory true, but feigned by Marcus to deter him from the Dedication. The fame fortune hapned to the Dedication of the second Temple of Tupiter Capitolinus, after this was burnt in the Civil Wars. For Sylla having rebuilt it died before the Dedication, as Tarquinus was milhed, and so that ho-nour came to Camins. When this had perished in the sedicion of Vitelius, Vefpalian built the thirt's and was herein more fortunate than Sylla, they, as he died before the Dedication of his, so the Emperour lived not to see the destruction of this, which presently after his death was also burned. The fourth which flood in Plutareb's time was both built and dedicated by Domitian. I arquinius, as was reported, frent 40000 pounds of filver in founding his Temple; but the fourth was not guilded for so little as the wealth of the richelt private man. The Marble Pillars Plusarch faw at Athens, being then of a thicknesse answerable to their length, but afterward when they were new cut at Rome, they got not so much splendour, as they lost of proportion, and beauty, being rendred too flender in bulk or substance. 16. In the * Confulfhip of Junius Brutus and M. Horasius (that is in * Pobblike the same year that Horains succeeded, though not immediatly, into the 2.160. place of Bruins, who with I arquinius his Collegue governed but 4 moneths) when the Temple of Inpiter Capitolinus Was Confectated, 28 years before Xerxes his e pedicion into Greece, the first League was made betwixt the League betwixt the Romaus and Our-

Romans and Carthaginians. Herein it was provided, that the Romans should not fayl beyond the Fair Promontery, which lay before Carthage towards the North. Polybins, thinketh the cause was, for that the Carthaginians would not have them take notice of the places about Byzantium, nor the little Syris : which for the fruitfulneffe of the foyl they termed Emporia. But if it hipned that any, either by Tempest or Pirace, were forced in thither, they promifed they would furnish them with all things, necessary, but forbad any thing to be taken by force, and commanded all to be gone thence within five dayes. It was lawfull hereby for the Romans to Traffick to Caribage, and all that part of Africk which lieth on this lide the Fair Promontory, as also Sardinia, and that part of Sicily then under the Carthaginiant, who promise upon their publick faith that all Justice shall be duely executed. From this League is appeareth that the Curabaginians speak of Africk and Sardiwis as absolutely their own , but far otherwise concerning Sicily expressly diflinguithing of that pare thereof which they had lubdued. The Romans also include in this League onely Laturm, making no mention of the rest of Italy, which was not in their power. After this another League was made , or rather this renewed, wherein the Carehaginians comprized the Tarians, and the people of Mica. To the Fair Promonter, were added Maftin and Tarfolam, beyond which it was neither lawfull for the Romans to mike any depredations, nor build a Town. These things Polyhims observerh concerning these Leagues, which he also exemplifieth, and to which we referre, Students in Hi-

17. Tarquinim, after that great battel, wherein he loft his con demer in a Combat with Brunn, berook himself to Clusium, the King whereof Parsana by name (one of great account for his power, and munificence amongs) the Porfess war. Kings of Italy) he procured to take upon him his quarrel, while first fent to Livius libra.

Rome, communding them to receive their thing according to their dury and upon refufal, both threatnests and made Wariupon them. Now were crean plat, in min ted Confuls Populated the second time being absent, and les inserting dress plat, in min pitinus on the Calends of Offahre, according to the Rampilian year , winch antivered to September 14. of the Julian in the 1911 Moon of Jacobs Cappel- Ad Ins observeth that the Confuls Commenced at this time of the year from the A.M. 3491. first of Poplicola, till fifteen years after in the 2 dath years of the fifte. & 300. Sp. Casser and Posl bumins Cominius began their Officer a moneth topier. on the Calends of October. The reason might be, for that the new Moon fell in with the Autumnal Aquincitial on the 29th of Julian September,

V Book II

Horatius Cocles. every one fo much provision as would ferve one for a day, then conferred be killed 5000 of his men. Yet this little availed, the honour of finishing this War being referred for the valour and policy of Mutius Cordus. 19. Musius a man of excellent courage, and no lesse skill in War, resolving with himself to ly in wait for the life of Porfena, put on the Tufcan ha-Mutine Scabit, and using that language, came into the King's Camp, where observing from which the Pompilian, or Numan, September seemeth to have Commenced that year, the Moon increasing, although without order. For the Calends of Ottober ought rather to have been on that day; but fuch errors were frequent in the Pompi ian year, either through the negligence, or wilfull neglect of the Priests. After the third year the Calends (or first day) of January recovered their true place, viz. the next new Moon to the Winter Solftice : but September obtained to be the beginning of the year untill the 278th year of the Citie, wherein the Comitia for Creation of Confuls were call back to the Calends of the moneth Sextilis (afterwards called August) at what time A. Verginius Tricoftus, and Sp. Servilius Structus were made Consuls, in the Summer Solflice, as Dionyfius observeth. 18. Poplicola returning to Rome, first resolved in magnanimity to our-

Ty Porfena, and for that purpose, when the King was now approaching. founded the Citie Siglineia (or rather Signia) which with great expense he fortified, and then planted it with 700 Inhabitants, making hereby a frow that he could without any trouble or fear fultain the War. But Porfena laying close Plut, in Pofiege to Rome, very fiercely with all his might fet upon the Citic. The two plical. Dionyf. Confuls with much ado repelling the Tofcans, at length were both fo wound- Livius lib.2. ed as they must needs be carried off, after which the Romans sled from be- Florin lib. 1. fore their Enemies, who in their retreat into the Town followed them close, c.p. 10. and flocked upon the bridge. There Horains firmamed Cooles (either for Aurel, Villor that he had but one eye, having lost the other in War, or because his Nose de vivis illustr. was so depressed that both his Eyes seemed to go into one, whence intend- lib.3. cap.2,3. ing to call him Cyclops, by ignorance of the language they pronounced it Co- Vide etiam cles) together with Herminius and Lartius, opposed himself against the Tof- Polyb. 11b.6. cans. Cocles stood before the bridge, and repulsed the Enemy so long till it was broken down behind him, which done, he cast himself armed as he was into the River, and swom our to his friends, having received a wound with a Spear. To requite him for the Jamenesse he contracted by this wound. and in admiration of his valour, Poplicola caused all the Romans to give him.

on him to much ground as he could plow round about in one day, and they erected to his memory a Statue in the Temple of Vulcan. But Porfena drawing out the flege in length fore straitned the Citie. Poplicala now executing his third Confulfhip, together with his last year's Collegue M. Horating

Pulvillus, led forth his men, and giving the King battel, overthrew him, and took it with his left hand (whence he had the name of Scavola, which word fignifieth one that useth his left hand, faith Plutarch) and telling the King that he was now overcome by his bravenesse of spirit whose threats he had contemned, he said in way of requital he would reveal a thing to him which no force of corment could have compelled him to discover. He affirmed there were 300 Romans now in his Camp watching an opportunity to kill him. As for his part, having been by lot deflined to make the first attempt, it did not trouble him that he had failed in killing him a right good man, & one much worthier of the friendship than harred of the Romans. Porfena hearing this, inclined prefently to a composure of the difference, not so much or t of fear of the 200, as admiration of the Roman courage. Poplicala having notice hereof, was glad of fuch a friend, and content to make him Umpire the place in which the King was, but being ignorant of his person, he stabbed his Secretary who fare with him amongst several others. Being taken in the A.M 3498. his Secretary who fare with him amongst leveral others. Deing taken in the 01.68 and 2, act, when they went about to examine him, he thrull his right hand into the 10.68 and 2, 247. fire, as intending to punish it for so great a mistake, and whilest it burned be- Dani 15. held Porfena with a Redfast and angry countenance, who admiring his resolution dismissed him, and reached him back his sword from his sear. Mutius

CHAP. IV.

424

SECT. 1. betwise the Commonwealth and Tarquinius. He often challenged Taraninins to put the matter to arbitration, to which the King answered couragiourly, that he would not admit of any Judge, much leffe of Portina, who having promised him aid now basely fallified his word. Porsena hereat dis-

with Parfena. pleased, especially through the solicitation of Arams his son, made peace with the Romans on these conditions : that they should quir those Tulcan grounds they had got into their hands, reflore all prisoners, and receive all their fugitives.

20. For the establishment of this peace the Romans gave up twenty Hoft ges, viz. ten young youths, and as many Girles, amongst which was Valivia the daughter of Poplicola. All acts of Hostility ceasing, the young Virgins event down to the River to wash, and taking an opportunity, when clælia.

none were present to hinder them, got over the water, and returned home. Some reported, that one amongst them named Classia vvent over on horf-back, and perswaded the rest to swim after. When they presented themselves to Poplicola, he neither admired their refolution, nor approved of their return, fearing it would be objected as a breach of faith to the Romans; for that apprehending then all, he fent them back to Porfena. Tarquinius aware hereof placed in ambush a party to entrap them and their Convoy; but Aruns the fon of Por fena hearing of it, came in, and refcued them out of danger. When Por fena faw them, he demanded which had been the cause of their departure, and finding Gladia the principal, bestowed on her one of his own horses sumpruously adorned. Then to give a further Testimony of his respect towards the Romans, besides other things wherein he shewed his magnificence, he commanded his Soldiers to depart out of the Camp onely with their Arms, delivering up to the befieged his Tents furnished with victuals, and all other good things. Therefore for a long time after, when publick goods were fer to fale, first of all the stuff of Porfena was cried, to preferve the memory of his kindnesse: And about the Court-house was erected his Starue in a plain and antient fashion. For the next year Dionysias nameth as Confuls, Sp. Lartins and T. Herminius, of vvhom Livie maketh honourable mention, but not as executing this Office. He veriteth that at the bridge Sp. Largins and T. Herminius both nobly descended, rogether with Horatins Cooles, fuftained the first brunt of the Herruscans. But Learned men tell us that it ought to be vetitten Larmins, not Largins. 21. The year following being the 250 of the Citie, and the fifth after A.M. 3501. the banishment of Tarquinius, the fift of the goth Olympiad, saith Diony sias, Olgg. ann. wherein Ifchomachus of Crotone was Victor, Acestorides being again Archon V.C. 250. at Athens, in the 18th year of Darine Hystaspu King of Persia, A. M. 3501.

Sabines.

M. Valerius the brother of Poplicola, and P. Postumina Tuberius Were Con-War with the fuls. Now the Sabines made depredations in the Roman Territories, and proceeded to far in their injuries that it ingaged the parties in a War: Marcus by the Counfel and affiftance of his brother obtained great honour in his undertakings. He overthrew the Sabines twice, in the later of which battels were flain of them 13000, and not one of the Romans loft. Wherefore befides triumphs this was given him as an addition of honour, to have an house built for him in the Palace on the publick coft. Besides, whereas all the doors of other houses opened inwards, they would have this of his house to open ourwards toward the fireer, as a mark of honour in this respect, that he was ever ready to move for the publick good. Indeed all the Gates of the Greeks are faid most anciently to have opened this way, and that by Testimony of the Comedies, wherein they that are going out first knock within, that such as either go by or stand near, may prevent being hurt of the door, which was cast forward into the street. The next year, wherein Poplicola was Conful the fourth time, and his Collegue T. Lucretius Tricipitinus, the whole Nation of the Sabines with the Latines conspited against Rome, which was also much disturbed by superstition, for that all the women with Child miscarried of murilous births, and nothing came into the World perfect. When these things much dejected the minds of the Romans, another creeked them, and Actius clausus. afforded considerable incouragement to the War. Appius or Attius Clausus. an eminent man amongst the Sabines for riches, valour, virtue, and eloquence, being much against the War, was therefore maligned by his emulators, as favouring the Romans, and defigning to bring his Country under their yoak. His Enemies gaining credit with the Vulgar, he feared to put himself upon trial, and therefore raised a commotion, which retarded the War. Then did Poplicola invite him to Rome, whither he came with 5000 Families of his friends and dependents. The Families were made free of the City, and to every man affigned two Akers of Ground by the River Aniene; but to Claufus himfelf twenty Akers, and the degree of a Senator, Having got this opportunity, he fo improved it, as to become equal to the greateft, and raised his house so much, that the Clausi, afterwards called Claudii, became inferiour to no one Family.

22. His revolt much more exasperated the minds of his Country-men to the War, who coming with an Army to Fidena, placed in ambush 2000 Foot, and then fent some Horse to make incursions, commanding them to retreat, as if they fled, and so draw on the Romans into the snare. Poplicola. having notice hereof by certain fugitives, divided his Army into three parts, and taking the advantage of a mift, fell upon the Sabines on so many sides, and did such execution, as the nearnesse of Fidena onely hindred the destruction of themall. The Romans, beside the advantage of much plunder, obtained that good by this Victory, to be furnished with courage for all affayes; yet imputed they the whole merit to the Conful, and sticked not to five that he delivered into their hands their Enemies, blind and lame, onely to be dispatched with the Sword. Having triumphed, and given up the charge of the Commonwealth to the two new Confuls, Agrippa Menenius Lanatus, and Publius Posthumius, shortly after he died, finishing his life, as he had lived, in great grace with the multitude whom he had so flattered. The People, as if they had nothing at all required him when living, but ought him yet his whole reward, decreed he should be buryed at the publick charge, every one contributing a small piece of money. Some fay, that he was so poor, as he left not enough to bury him. The women by universal consent mourned for him, as formerly they had done for Brutus, an whole year. He was by a special Decree buried within the City, (which honour (faith Dionysius) hath onely happened unto him to this day), and that privilege was also granted to his family. But now, (Plutarch writeth) none of them is there interred: the Funeral is onely drawn out thither, and the coffin being fer down, one puts under fire, and presently again taketh it away, showing, that the deceased hath a right there to be buried, but on his own accord quitteth the privilege, This being done, the body was carried away.

Policola di-

22. The same year than Roplicala died, the Sabines provided of numerous Forces, invaded the Roman Territories, as far as the City walls. The Confuls taking the field against them, Posthumius was entrapped in an Ambush, and escaping narrowly himself, lost many of his men, which defeat struck the Citizens with great terror, who now ran to the walls, expecting the Enemy would fall upon the City. But nothing being attempted in this kind, they marched out, refolving to redeem their credit; and Posthumius, much more concerned in honour than the rest, so behaved himself, as he made amends fully, and both the Confuls obtained a notable victory, which had been compleated by the flaughter of all the Sabines, if the darknesse of night had not with full honour in triumph, fitting ih a Chair, drawn in way of a Chariot, interposed. The Senate ordered the Consuls to return in pomp; Menenius but Pasthumius, because of his late desear, in a more humble manner, which the Romans called Quation, so named (faith Fostus, or Paulus from him, as he from Verrino) from the letter O, which the Soldiers in way of joy were wont to eccho at their return from a Victory; or corruptly pronounted for the Greek word Enaste, as Dionysius conjectureth. Ovation differed herein from a Triumph properly so called, that the General entred not the

Ovation

City in a Charior, but on foot before his Soldiers; for the Robe interwoven pionif.

behalf.

SECT. 1. with Gold, he onely wore the Pratextatoga, the ordinary habit of Confuis and Praiors; neither had he a Scepter, but onely Laurel; and on his head a wreath of Myrtle, when the War had not been denounced, or finished withour bloodshed. The year following, wherein Sp. Cassius Viscellinus, and Opicer Virginius Tricostus were Consuls, the Sabines were overthrown in a great battel at Cures, 10300 being flain, and about 4000 taken, which defeat caused them to beg peace, and purchase it with Corn, Money, and part of their grounds. Whilft Sp. Caffins did this good service against the Sabines, his Colleague subdued the Camarinaans who had revolted, and having put to death the Authors of the injury, fold the rest, and razed their 24. The year that followed, being the first of the 70 Olympiad (wherein Nicam of Opus (a Town of Locri) was Victor, (Myrus executing the Annual Office of Archon at Athens) had for Confuls Posthumius Cominius, and T. Largius. Now all the Latines (to the number of thirty several Cities, faith Livie) conspired against Rome, by the procurement of Mamilias Oftavius, fon in Law to Tarquinius (who at present was with him at Tusculum) though Valerius the Roman Ambastador pretended to answer to such accusations as were made, and laboured to disswade the several People of Latium. In the mean time also the Slaves at home contrived how to seize upon the Capitol, and burn the City, but were discovered, and nailed to crosses. The following year wherein Ser. Sulpitius Camerinus, and Manius Tullus Longus, were Consuls, a Faction in Fidena, having received some men from Tarquinius, killed or expelled their adversaries, and caused the Town to revolt from the Romans. The Senate would not make War upon the Latines it sufficient to block up Fidena, for which they sent out Manins with a strong Army. The befieged implored affiltance of the Latines, who in their generall meeting heard also the complaints of Tarquinius, and though they were much importuned by some amonst them, yet they onely ordered Ambassadors to be fent to demand the reception of the King, and the removal of the fiege from Fidene, which was done also meetly to gain time, giving the Romans a year to confider of the matter, and taking so large a space forto make preparations, in case the overture were rejected. Tarquiniur and Adamilius has ving little hopes to prevail this way, feeing that the minds of the generality in general, knowing many amongst them were inclined to Peace, and thought

The Sahines beg Peace.

Tarquinius his were averse from War, endeavoured to bring his right about in an easier way, for the recovery of his Kingdom.

by raifing in Rome an unexpected and intelline difference betwice the rich and poorer fort-25. For at this very time, as Dienyfens writeth, a great part of the common People, especially the indigent and such as were burthened by usury, did not like of the present state of affaires, which diffarisfaction was caused by the extravagane course of Creditors, who seizing upon the bodies of their Debrors, used them no better than Slaves purchased with money. Tarquinius not being ignorant hereof, fent perrain of his friends with Gold, who gave them some in hand, promising more after the King's restitution, and procured thereby a confpiracy of many poor Civizens, with fuch Slaves as had been offended wich elieir Mafters the year before, for the feverity shown towards their fellows. The matter was discovered to Sulpicius; who afrer he had returned a denyal, though very civilly, to the Lucin Ambassadors, by a wile drew the Confbinators into the Forum; where incompaffing them about, he put them all to the Sword. The thirs being thus allated for a time, the Confuls of chis and the following year tooked abroad, and, in A. M. 3104. the next, Fidene was yielded up to T. Largin Florens. Herear the Latins Ol 196, at 4 were exceedingly flarified, and now all railed on their principal men, for that V. c. 213. no order had been taken for refief of the Town. Tarquining and Mamilius Dani 21. so improved this opportunity, that all the Ciries (as in number, as they Committee are reckoned by Dionyfins) decreed War against the Romans, ingaging that Aniuncus, none should for fake their affociates, nor make Peace without common con- T. Latint fent, fealing it with an oath, and direful corresagainst fuch as should break Ruffus, caff.

the League, who were to be held as Enemies by all the reft. They give li- SECT. I. berty to Carquinius and his fon in Law to levie what Forces they thought convenient, and that they might have some kind of pretence, sent a message to Rome, whence the Senate returned a flout and refolute answer. 26. Great were the preparations of the Latines; the Romans fending round War with the Latines in his about, could make no friends, and yet were not dejected, but trufting to their domestick strength alone, were thereby rendred much more resolute and couragious, as fuch upon whom lay a necessity of being valiant. But a great difficulty was found in lifting Soldiers; for the poor, and those that were furcharged with debt, of which there was a great number, being cited. would not appear, faying, they had nothing to do with the Patritians, except their debts were remitted by Decree of the Senate, nay some talked of leaving the City, and exhorted one another not to stay in that place, where no good thing was communicated to them. The Patritians by good words laboured to appeale them, but all in vain ; fo that the Senare fell into a ferious debate about so weighty a matter. Some were for a free remission of the debts, after the manner of the Athenian Sifachthea, as the onely way to remove all prejudice, and beget a fair correspondence betwixt Nobility and Commons. Others condemned this as too great a condescention, and which would encourage them to like Sedicions for the time to come, thinking it the better way to lift fuch as would give their names, and not at all value the rest, who though gratified at present, would hereafter be unserviceable. Betwixt these extremes several other wayes were propounded; but this at length prevailed, that nothing should now be determined, but the War being happily finished, the Consuls should report it again to the Senate, and in the mean time all futes and processe concerning debts were to cease, that Magiftrates might make effectual provision for the matter now mainly incumbent. This expedient, though something it wrought, had not sufficient strength to end the difference; and therefore the Senate was put upon another exigent. Whereas by the Law of Valerins, power of life and death was taken away from the Confuls, and all constraint, by an appeal to the People, so that no man could be forced to the War; It feemed necessary to create a Magistrate, who for fix moneths should rule as absolute above the Laws, and from whom should lye no appeal. Thus having renounced Monarchy in effect, they had again recourse to it, and shewed as well the necessity as excellency

27. This Supreme Officer was called Diltator, either for that he was dictus, Metius Suffesius we have formerly mentioned. Spartianus faith, it was an Ciccio de Fin. ordinary Magistrate of old Latinm. Dionysius bringerh the testimony of Latin voc. Licinius Macer for this opinion ; yet he thinketh the Office first taken from Optima Lex. the Greeks, who had their Elymnete or extraordinay Kings made upon (d) Lex Anfome urgent occasion, with absolute power. The Distrator was created upon tigan, some urgent occasion of War or Sedition, for fixing a nail in time of a Plague, to hold the Comitia for election of Confuls, celebrate Games, make inquifition, choosing Senators, or in sum, when there was need of a sodain and extraordinary command. The manner of his creation was not, as of other Magistrates, by the Suffrages of the People; but, at the command of the Senate, the Conful named some one of Consular dignity whom he pleased, in the night, and who was approved by the Auspicium, or divination from birds, a ceremony observed ever in the election of some Officers. The occafion being many times fodain, they could not flay for the Suffrages of the People, and the defign being to restrain, or constrain, the multitude, many times, he was not to be chosen out of their body, although sometimes these rules were not fully observed, either through the absence of the Consul, of some other respect. L. Cornelius Sylla alone was named by the Interrex, as

The Distance, or named, by the Consult, according to (a) Varre, or rather from distating, (a) Do Ling, or shewing and commanding what was to be done, which Erymology (b) Distance, (b) Lib. 5. ony sins approveth. He was also called (c) Magister Populi, and (d) Pretor (c) Vario quo Maximus. Both name and thing came from the Albans, whose Dictator prins.

C. Cafar

SECT. 1. C. (afai by the Prator; both which nominations Cicero in his Epifles conceivery done contrary to right and order. The autority of the Dillator was exteeding large. He had power of Peace and War, to levie Forces, lead them forth, and disband them, and act all things according to his pleasure, without referring them to the Senate. So that not onely had he the power of both Confals (whence the Greeks called him Difypaios, or Double Conful) but more alfo, in that upon his Creation all other Magistrates, except the Tribunes, laid down their Offices, and the whole Government was left in his hands. He could punish as he pleased, without all appeal, and for the oftentation of his power, had 24 bundles of Rods caried before him, with as many Axes, or Hatchets, as Plutarch and Polybius do testifie , although Livie differing from them, will have Sylla first of all others to have had 24 bundles. Hence this Office came to be so terrible, as the Edict of the Distair was ever obferved as the command of a Deity: 28. It was necessary, according to the Roman Government, that this ex-The bounds of his Office, traordinary power should be bounded by certain limits, wherein might lie redresse of inconveniences thence arising. Six moneths were the time assigned for it's duration, and never was it lengthned, except for meer necessity, as might be instanced in Camillus, L. Papirius, and Fabius Maximus : for the perpetual Dictatorships of Sylla and Casar were notorious violations of the Laws. And not onely the time but the place also was limited, it being unlawful for the Dictator toffir out of Italy, left being out of fight, he should take advantage at the distance of place, to attempt some new matter; and this constitution was never violated but once whilst the old Commonwealth flood, by Attillius Collatinus. He was not to come on horse-back, but march continually on foot, to shew, faith Plutarch, that the Roman strength lay in the Legions, or rather to teach him humility. Now because in great Expeditions this could scarce be observed, he formally before his departure asked leave of the People that he might ride, as Livie informeth us. But those restrictions were inconsiderable, in respect of the Appeal which after-Appeal from Wards came to be made from him to the People. Festus in these words Optima Lex, faith, that first the power of the Magister Populi, or Distator, was full or absolute, as that of Marcus Valerius; but afterwards an Appeal lay from this Magistrate to the People. Livie seemeth also to hold out the Lib.8. fame thing, where he bringeth M. Fabius in behalf of his fon thus speaking to L. Papirius the Dictator : Seeing that neither the authority of the Senate, nor mine age, which thou goest about to bereave of my son, neither the virtue and Nobility of the Master of the Horse-men named by thy felf, prevaileth with thee; nor yet prayers and intreaties, which are wont to appeale an enemy, and the anger of the gods : I appeal to the Tribunes of the People, and the People it felf which I make our Judge, (seeing thou regardest not the judgment of the Army and Senate) which alone can do more than thy Dictatorship. I shall fee whether thou wilt give place to that Appeal to which the Roman King Tullus Hostilius yielded. Hereupon the People affembled, and the Tribunes were prefent at the meeting. Papirius denieth neither the power of the one nor the other, but continueth resolute for the punishment of the Master of the Horse-men, who had fought in his absence contrary to his command, shewing how all discipline else would be destroyed. A way was found out to preserve the honour of both Offices, the power of People, Tribunes, and Dictator, with the strength of discipline. For the People betook it felf to intreaties, and was seconded by the Tribunes. Whereupon the Dictator pardoned the party, granting his life to the request of those, who, as he confesseth, might have commanded it.

29. At what time this Appeal was brought in , or how long it continued in force, seeing that Sylla and other Distators made use of the old and absofute power, is uncertain. It is probable, that the People being overwitted in ratifying the Decree of the Senate (as Digny fins telleth us they were) grew sensible, how they had thereby given the power again out of their hands; it being lawfull for the Senate at any time when they should pretend Sect.2. a necessity, and that for the bridling of the People it felf, to give orde; to the Consul to name a Dictator, and therefore resumed its antient power of sign peal, without which no lawlesse freedom could be enjoyed. But in the declining condition of the Commonwealth, when Dictitors grew more imperious, their Soldiers more diffolute, and the Tribunes of the people especially more factious, an opportunity might be wanting for it to exert that right which as yet it had not given up to any other. If what Dionyfius writeth of the Dictator's being approved by the people after the Conful's nomination be true, the State flood in leffe need of the Appeal; but it being not poffible for a multitude never to mistike in its opinion of a person, this defect might at length experimentally be discovered, and thence a recourse hid to that remedy which was ever certain whilest it could be applied. By these cautions and restrictions, with the modesty of the Romans, this Grand Office was for 400 years managed for the publick good, as it was accounted, till Syl-, la, and afterward Cafar, converted it into a Tyranny, as the multitude counted it, and rendred the very name the eof so odious, that after Cafar's death, in the 710 year of the Citie, when M. Antonius and P. Cornelius Dolabella were Confuls, a Law was made (fron the former Conful cilled Lew Anonia) whereby it was for ever binished. The Dictitor when he was The Marifter Created mide choice of one who had either b en Conful or Prætor, to be Magifter Equitum, who, faith Varro, had chief power over the horf-men, D. Dies. and Adoensi (Criers, Beadles, or publick Messengers) as the Dictator had Latin, lib, a.

over the Roman people, whence he also was called Magister Populi, p.22, The reft, because they were of tesse value than these Migistri, were named Migistratus, as from albus Albatus." If the Dictator was absent, the Master of the hors-men executed his place in the Army, but if he present, he commanded the horse, yet so as to be obedient to the Dictator's orders, and not to fight, either contrary to, or without his command. In the fecond Punick, War, M. Fabius Buleo was mide Distitor for filling up the Senate, without a Madatorship,

Eurors to be at the same time, nor a Dictitor without a Mister of horsmen, and having perfected his work on the same day laid down his Of-30. Concerning the time of the first Diotatorship, Authors differ in the The time of space of two years, and do not full agree about the person. Dionysius, a grave, the first Difaithfull, and wary Author (by consent of the most learned fort of men) referreth it to the 255 year of the Citie ; but Livy , and most Latine Authors affign it to the 253. Dionysius faith expressly, that T. Largius Flavus was the first Distuor, being Conful that year. Livy faith it could not be certainly known from antient Authors who was the first, yet confesseth that the most ancient mentioned Largius, and upon good grounds approveth of their opinion rather than that which maketh M. Valerius the fon of Marcas yet living, and Grand-son to Volefus the first of all, which Festus Gemeth to follow. Livy mentionerh no other cause of the Original than a falling out with the Sabines, and the conspiracy of the 30 Latine Cities, putting off the Sedition till after the finishing of the Latine War; but as there can little hold be taken of one who uncertainly relatesh marters; so no need would there have been of an absolute Authority for the Latine War, if no stir had been made in the Citie, all giving their names with afacrity, and obeying the Consuls, as in forme: Wars. And if the Consuls had been suspected to fayour the cause of l'arquinius (as some wrote they were) then new ones might have been made in their rooms, nothing being prevalent to after the ordinary form of Government, but a necessity of absolute power for a time; and no ordinary accident about War could make this necessity; fo that compulsion must have been the end, and the taking away that help from the multitude, which was unalterably given to it against the Consuls by the Valerian Liw. Thus might the Nobility, if they had had that duty, have feen cause to repent in time of their Kings bani chment.

ster of hors-men. But he alleged, that he could not approve of two Di-

31. T. LAY-

DOOK II

FSECT. I.

31. T. Largins, the first Dictator, having named Sp. Coffius for his Master of horf-men (who had born the Office of Conful in the 70th Olympiad) c'u-T. Largius the sed Axes to be carried before him with the Rods, as had been wont, till the first Distator. time of Poplicola, before the chief Magistrates, both Kings and Confuls. Having with these & other Ensigns of power terrified the Seditious, he began the Confus after the Pattern of Ser. Tullius, according to the Tribes, taking the names and ages of such as were Cessed, and of Children. In a short space, fear of losing freedom of the Citie, and Estares, so prevailed, as 150700 of fuch as were ripe of age gave their names, which he distributed into four parts, whereof taking one to himself, he gave the rest to his Master of horsmen, and two others, one being to continue in the Citie for the defence thereof. This done, he fent some who underhand dealt with the several Latine Cities, and procured them to suspend the War, and make a Truce for a year, notwithstanding all that Mamilius and Sextus Tarquinius could do to the contrary. Then returned he home with the Army, and ere his 6 moneths were out, the Confuls being appointed, laid down, no Citizen being killed, banished, or otherwise chastized by any grievous punishment; which carriage was imitated by his Successors, untill the thirdage from that wherein we live, faith Diony lins, But in the time of our fathers, 400 years from the Dictatorship of Largins, L. Cornelius Sylla first of all others behaved himself cruelly in this Office, so that the Romans conceived then what before they had cause to be ignorant of , that the Dictatorship was a Tyrannis. 22. When the Truce betwixt the Latines and Romans was ended . both parties prepared for the War : The former were against their wills, 'tis said, Dienys lib.6. drawn in by the interest of Mamilius; but the later with all cheerfulnesse imbraced the opportunity. The Romans thought fit a Dictator should be Created, and accordingly Virginius the Senior Conful named A. Posthumins his Collegue, who chose for Master of hors-men T. Ebutius Helva, and hasting his Levies, divided his Forces into four parts, whereof one he kept to himself, affigned the second to Virginius, the third to Ebutius, and the fourth to Sempronius, who therewith was to defend the Citie. News being come that the Latines had taken the Field, the Dictator with speed marched to the Lake Regillus (at this day called Il Lago di Santa Severa) in the Countrey of Tusculum, where he fortified his Camp against the Enemy, who as yet had not united his forces, & expected affiltance from the Volfci. The Roman Army divided into three parts incompassed the Latines, who indeavoured to beat off Ebutius from an Hill he had seized on betwixt them and home; but he kept his ground in despight of them, and fortified himself. The Latines hereupon being hindred from all Provisions, resolved to fight : the Dictator at first was minded to end the War without bloud, by familhing his Enemies, but understanding that the Volsci were expected within three dayes, changed his refolution. The right Wing of the Latines was led by Manilins, the left by Sexins Tarquinus, and the middle battel by Titus Tarquinius his other son. On the other side against Mamilius stood Virginim, Ebutim was opposite in the right Wing to Sextus Tarquinius, and the Dictator led the middle battel against Titus, and the Roman Exiles. The Romans brought into the field 24000 foot & 1000 horses but the Latines 40000 foot and 3000 horse. When they joyned, both parties missed of their expectation; for the one trusting to their numbers, and the other to their valour, thought to bear all down before them. The Dictator gave the first opportunity of victory by over-powering Titus, after which, though Mamilius and Sextus omitted nothing requifire to valiant and able Captains, yet both lofing their lives, their followers were difcouraged and overthrown; fcarce 10000 escaping home of the whole number. Of the Romans fell M. Valerius, whose dead body his two Nephews by his brother Poplicola, Publius and Marcus, endeavouring to get off, were also flain in the attempt.

The Latines overthrown at the Lake Regillus.

33. After the fight, the Volfes, whom the Latines had expected, arrived at the Camp, which seeing full of dead bodies, and learning the issue of the battel, fome of them were for falling on the Romans now weary; but another party prevailed to fend Meffengers to the Diction, to tell him they SECT. 1. came to his affiftance, thereby to ingratiate themselves with the Conquerours. But the Dictator convinced them of falshood by their Letters which he had intercepted, and giving leave to the Messengers to return, whom the multitude would have pulled in pieces, refolved on the morrow to fall on them; but in the night they deferted their Camp and fled. From the place of this action the Dictator obtained the firname of Rhegillenfis. The Latines fent to deprecate the anger of the Roman State, laying all the blame upon their Nobility. The Ambalfadors managed their work with fuch earnestnesse and humility (casting themselves at the Feet of the Senate, and making great limentations) that the motion of Largius prevailed in their behalf for the former League to be renewed. This was the end of the War which in behalf of the Tarquinii had been carried on for fourteen years: 7 arquinius himself being onely left behind of all his stock, now almost ninery years old , for that the Latines, Herruscans, and Sabines, resuled to harbour him, as also all other neighbouring Cities which were free, went into Campania to Aristodemus the Prince of Cume, with whom he shortly after died. Of the man we may judge charicably, because his story was onely related to tosterity by his bitter Enemies. However, his banishment our religion must censure as rebellion. And such were the stirs, seditions and tumults afterwards, and so many changes and rechanges, as if the Reader seriously consider them, he will see that the Romans suffered much for want of Monarchy, and the contrary Government did not contribute to their happinesse. That this may appear, he hath here a fuller view of their changes than in any other modern Writer.

24. The Romans now freed from this War, fell into a grievous fedicion

Great stirs in in the Citie, the Courts of Justice being again opened by the Senate, and the processe against debtors revived. The Plebeians alleged they were not able to pay their debts, by reason of their losses sustained in the late Wars through want of tillage, and plundring of their Cartel by the Enemy. Their Creditors replied, that these losses had also befallen them, which made the remission of the debts impossible; and so neither fort would yield at all. bur many tumides were raised, wherein the parties did not abitain from blows. Posthamius the Dictator perceiving some expedition to be necessary for the quier of the Citie, created Confuls for the following year, and laid down his Office. The Confuls were Appins Claudius the Sabine, and P. Servitims Prifeus, who being of the Dictators mind as to the War, resolved to go out against the Volsci, who had affished the Latines against the State, and now were making new pneparations for War; when they came to make Levies none of the Plebeians would give their names, complaining that they having already undergone the hear, and danger of the War, both for liberty and dominion, they were by their fellow Cirizens at home kept in bondage (it being the cultom then for Creditors to make use of them as Slaves bound in ferters) and many cimes cruelly beaten, till they could pay their debts. They enied our, that the fecurity of the common fort was more provided for in War, and amongst their Enemies, than in peace, and with their friends. The difagreement of the Comfids amough themselves added to the present distemper ; Servillus being willing to comply fomething with the defire of the poor, but Apping inveighing against them with great bitternesse, and earnessly urging force and rigour to be the most switchle means for appealing these tumults. The Senare was forced to betake it felf to the popularitie of Servies, who with fair words drew the people our against the Sabines, and when he had by this good fervice deserved a Triumph, the honour was denied him through the suggestions of his Collegue to the Fathers, for that by bearing with the multitude he impaired the Dignity of their

33. After the finishing of the War the common fort thought again of their own concernments, and expecting performance of what Servilles had promised, Appins exacted the payment of debts as rigorously as ever c This

Diverted by Order.

432

SECT.1. doubled the people's rage, and made them carry on all things by force, so that they refcued their Companions out of the hands of Sargeants, and holding fecret councils by night, denied to the succeeding Confuls to take Arms, till they could have a relaxation of their burthens. This putting the Senate to a ftund, app as full urged that nothing was to be granted to the rabble, and procured a Dictator to be created. When most looked upon him as fittest for the time, the Confuls judged quite otherwise, and made choice of M. Valerius the brother of Publius, and fon of Volesus, a popular man, being perswaded that the terror of the Office alone would do the work, and that a man of mild temper would best manage it. The Dictator promised the People, in case they would freely follow him, not onely what they justly required concerning their debts, but other rewards also, and by this means lifted ten Legions against the Volsci, Agui, and Sabines, who were all up in Arms, which being brought under, he divided amongst his soldiers some grounds taken from the Volfei, but requesting of the Senate, that his and their promise might be made good, was checked for his love to the multitude, and because he was an old man above 70, being unfit as he said to contend, he laid down his Office. The People hereat much inraged, kept private meetings, and confulted how to separate themselves from the Patritians, which when the Senate perceived, they gave order to the Confuls not to difband the Armies, pretending that the Sabines and Aqui had conspired against Rome. The Soldiers being bound by the Oath taken at their lifting (called by them Sacramentum, and ever strongly observed) could not forfake their Standards, but the Confuls having their Camps near to each other, they all went into one by the advice of one Sicinius Bellulus, and taking away

the Enfignes from the Confuls, departed to the Mount called afterwards

The first feparation of the Commons.

Mons Sacer, lying three miles from the City beyond the River Aniene, now called Taverone. 26. Notice hereof being brought into the City. filled all places with marvelous tumults. The Pairitians were in great fear lest War should be made upon them; the Plebsians grew exceeeding high, and many flocked to the Army, though the other hindred it as much as possible. The Fathers had also great strife amongst themselves, while some pleaded for the multitude, and others would hear of nothing but carrying the matter through by strong hand. But the former fort prevailed to send a message to the Armies defiring them to return home; promiting that for the future all things should be forgot, and the Senare would be ready to reward their faithfulnesse and fet iceableneffe to their Country; withall, the Ambaffadors had it in charge to know the utmost of their desires. To the message nothing would be returned but disdainful words, and high complaints, something mixed with threatning language, which more grievoully afflicted the Fathers, not knowing what way to procure a reconcilement; and now would not fuch as they had by their authority and interest hitherto retained in the City, be with-holden from going to the Army. The time for creation of new Confuls was now at hand. The old ones appointing the Comitia, no Candidates (fo called because they appeared in white garments) would stand for the Office, nor any accept of it, till at length the Confuls appointed by their fole authority Post burnius Cominius, and Sp. Cassius, who had born it before, and were equally in favour with the Nobility and Commons. They having entred on the Calends of September (sooner than usual) in the 72 Olympiad (wherein Ten ficrates of Crotone was Victor, and Diognetes Archon) first of all consulted the Senate about the return of the Commons, Agrippa Menenius a man of great wisdom and remper, being first asked his opinion, by all means posfible exhorted the Fathers to a composure. He shewed what necessity there was of it in regard of the Roman Dominion, which could not be either preferved or increased without the inferiour fort of People, and made it clear, that they could not expect to have any of better temper than the present were, for as much as all, who loever they were, who by their labour and blood obtained power and Soveraignty for the City, would expect to be sharers in it's advantages. He pressed the danger they were now in from their Enemies round about, and having used other motives, concluded with his advices that they would fend messengers with full power to treat and conclude what they should find convenient, without any more consulting the Senate.

37. After Menenius spake M. Valerius, and upbraided the Senate for not giving him credit when he forecold these distempers, He advised them to cure the wound while it might be healed, shewed what reason the Commons had to be concerned more of lare, because of the Dictatorship, which took from them their former Appeal, as also for that the Senate had denied the honour of triumph to Servilius when they defired it for him, because he was suspected to favour them, and for that neither he, the Consul, nor he himfelf the Dictator, could at all profit them in what had been promifed. He inveighed against the avarice and cruelty of creditors, and particularly fell foul upon Appins for his rigour, and raising a Faction, which if others were not wife to prevent, would utterly deftroy the Commonwealth. Lattly, he commended the advice of Menenius, and defired it might speedily be executed, so as whatever the Commons required might be granted. Apprus a man of an high spirit, most studious of the Patritian dignity, and also of a fober and venerable cariage, being asked his opinion next, in excuse of himfelf recriminated Valerius. With great animofity he noted the ambition and fenselesnesse of the multitude, admiring that any of the Fathers should be so absurd, as having denied remission of debts to them when friends, would grant it to them now Enemies, who would not * rest here, but require also a * Nore communication of honours, and what not? fo that at length the power would

The Prophecy of Appius concerning the lawleffe

CHAP. IV.

come into the hands of the rabble, and the Commonwealth degenerate into a Democracy. He leffened, or rather endeavoured to remove, the danger which threatned either from the Armies revolt, or the holdlility of old Enemies, He endeavoured to perswade them, that they were able enough to reduce them by force, having their wives and children in the City; and alleging for further confirmation of this, that the multitude were without any persons of good conduct, whereas the Patritian order abounded with experienced commanders, concluded with this advice, neither to fend any me flage to them, nor remit them their debts, nor do any other thing which might shew the least fear or trouble: If they would lay down their Arms and returns ig into the City, Submit to the Senate, then moderately to determine concerning them; feeing that all fools, especially the Valgar, are insolent against such as condescend, but cowardly towards those that resolutely demean themselves,

38. The wife speech of Appius so inflamed those of his purty, especially the younger fort, that nothing could be determined for the heat of contention. This put the Confuls upon difmiffing the Senate for that time, admonithing the younger fort to carry themselves more respectfully and modestly for the time to come, or else they would neither use them as Advisers nor Judges, but prefer a Law for limiting a certain age for Senators. The graver men they exhorted also to concord, letting them know they had a way to end the controversie, by referring the matter to the decision of the People, which had right to judge of it, as a case about Peace and War. At the next meeting the ancient men were of the fame opinion as formerly, but the younger modefily referred themselves to whatsoever they should determin; so that the major part by far, being wearied with the cries and follicitations of those who had relations in the Army, rather than any reason, notwithstanding Appins fluck close to his former resolution, resolved to follow the advice of Menonius, who with nine others were commissionated with full power, both by Senate and People, to compose the difference. At first the offers of the Commissioners could not be heard through the instigation of two cunning and turbulent fellows, Sicinius, and L. Junius, who conceited of his abilities, affected the name of Bruens also. Menemus, to give full fatisfaction, promised that such as were unable to pay their debts, should be discharged both from obligation and imprisonment, and for the time to come matters of this nature should be ordered by the joynt consent both of People and Senate. Kkk

Gemiso, Coll.

CHAP. IV.

(g) Gellius telleth us, that they could not be absent from the Citie one day;

434

SECT.E. Then adding the Fable of the several members falling out with the belly, as confuming all which they provided, and thence the ruine and decay of the whole body, he so improved it to the present occasion, likening the Senare to the belly (which digestern and distributeth sustenance to all the rest, though they provide it) that the whole multitude convinced of the necessitie of Union, cried out, He should lead them home without delay. 39. Little wanted of their departure without any other security than the bare word of the Commissioners. But Junius Brutus a Plebelan formerly mentioned with-held them, Raying, that they were gratefully to acknowledge the kind offers of the Senate; bur whereas fome men of tyrannical spirits might referve their anger to a convenient opportunity, the Commons wanted fuch good security for the time to come, as might defend them from the unreasonable malice of great ones, and he moved, that they might have certain Officers created yearly out of their own bodie, whose power should onely be to give relief to such Plebeians as were injured, and suffer none to be defrauded of their right: and therefore not to refill the Confuls, as some thought. This being received by the multitude with great approbation, was infifted on to Menenius, and his fellows, who thought not good to admit of a matter of fuch large consequence, without leave from the Senare, and demanded time to know the pleasure thereof. The Consuls reporting the mattet, Valerius thought this favour was to be granted to the Commons, and, though Appins opposed it earnestly, crying out, calling their gods to witnesse, and truly foretelling what calamities they would bring upon the Commonwealth, yet the major part inclining to Peace, it was caried for them, and the Commisfioners were fent back with the resolution of the house. The Commons by the advice of Menenius, first fent to take from the Senate a religious A. M. 3511. A composure confirmation of this privilege, and afterwards in the Affembly of the 01.71. at 3. by bringing Curia elected L. Junius Bruius, and C. Sicinius Belluius, to whom they V. C. 160.

afterwards joyned C. and P. Licinius, and Sp. Ioilius Ruga. Thefe five Danis S. first entred this new Office on the fourth of the Ides of Becember, accor- Menian. ding to the History and computation of Diony sins, fixteen years after the T. Vetain expulsion of Tarquin. 40. These Officers were called Tribuni Plebis, there having been from the beginning other Tribunes in the City named Tribuni Celerum, so called from the Peoples being divided into three parts at that time, from which fo many were fent into the Army, as (a) Varro and (b) Pomponius derive the (a) Ling. La.

word; or because they were elected by the Tribes, or oversaw them, as 1.4.9.21 others. Varro feemeth to hold that the Tribuni Plebis were called Tribu- (b) me on nos, because they were first made of the Tribunes of Colonels or the Soldiers. Livie nameth C. Licinius, and L. Albinus, for the first two, to whom were shortly after added three more, viz. Sicinius, the Author of the departure, and two others, concerning which, faith he, Authors differ. In the 297 year of the City five more were added, and this number of ten fo continued. As these Officers were elected by the Commons, so ever out of their body, except where we read in Livie (in his third Book) of two Patritians; Nay most commonly of the lower fort, rill a Law ordained that they should be created out of the Senate; that is, out of such Plebeians as were admitted into the Senate. What time this Law was preferred, cannot certainly be discovered. (c) Appian faith, it is not certain whether Sylla (c) Bd. mil did it. It should appear from (d) Gellins, that there passed a Plebiscium ib.

or Decree of the People, for this purpose, called Ptenscium Atinium; but (d) Lik. 11.
what Atinius this should be is also obscure, there being one P. Atinius Tribune of the Commons when Julius Cafar and Bibulus were Confuls. As (e) De Ligit concerning their power, (e) Cicero faith, they were opposed against the Confuls: but this is not true, the occasion of their making not rifing from the Consuls. At the beginning their power was onely to relieve the oppressed, as a shield to keep off evil, and not as a weapon to inflict it. They nulled the unjust (as they accounted them) Decrees, and Commands of the Senate and Magistrates; and to show their readinesse to protect the not an hour faith (h) Dion; and (1) Appian going further, confineth them (f) Plutace, within the Walls. They interpoled by this one word Vero folemnly pro- probl. 81. nounced. They procured themselves afterward to be accounted Saere. (g) Lib3. c.c. fantti, so as by a Law confirmed with an Oath, none might compet a Tri- (i) Debell. Privilege. bane to do any thing, as one of the vulgar, neither strike, nor command him to (ivil. 1.2. be beaten; neither kill, nor command him to be killed. If any did contrary, he was to be held as Sacer, and his goods being Confiscated unto Ceres, it should be lawfull for any to kill him. And lest afterwards the people should abrogate this Law, they made all the Citizens take the most solemn Oath that could be devised, both for themselves and posterity, to preserve it for ever inviolable, as (k) Dionylins writeth, who hath also exemplified the (k) Lib.6. Law it felf. To this (1) Cicero addeth, that they were not onely by facred (1) Pro Sect. Laws fortified against Force and Arms, but against words also, and interruption of speech.

41. But as their power of Interposing was most powerfull against Consuls and Senace, so also against themselves; the diffent of one man being sufficient to The ballance hinder whatever all his Collegues defigned. This appeareth to have been the onely constant effectual means for moderation of that power which afterwards they afflimed, when the Patritians could prevail with one of the College to interpole. By that awe which their Sacrofant Magistracy struck into all men, improved through their prompt boldnesse (very common in men of meanest condition) they took advantage to inlarge their bounds. * Va- * Lib.2. cap.2. lerius Maximus writech, that at first it was not lawfull for them to enter into Exemp.7. the Senate, but they had feats placed before the door, where examining the Degrees of the Fathers, such of them as they suffered to passe they signed with the letter T. But nothing in Dionysius is more common than their speaking in the Senate, and their contentions with the Members thereof in that very place at the very time, and that in the infancy of their Office. However, there fellows at first presumed not to Tyrannise and disturb all, as afterwards they did, they prefumed not at first to assemble the Senate, which afterward they did in the 277 year of the Citie, & in processe of time to dismisse it also, when called by another. Within a small time they assembled the people, gancy of their preferred Laws, executed their fawcy Decrees against the Magistrates themsalves, commanding the Consuls to be carried to prison, (especially after the enacting of the Hortenfian Law, whereby the Plebiscita obliged the whole Roman people) for that they were the chief Officers of the Com-

411 Great were the Seditions and Tumults, which turbulent spirits backed with futh liberty, ftirred up; fo as notwithstanding their first end was to preserve right, Lucan rightly termeth them Turbantes jura. Sylla was the first that bridled their extravagancy, by depriving them of liberty to prefer Laws, to make Orations, and obtain any Office of Magistracy; but after his death Aurelius Certa by a new Law restored the later privilege to them, and all the rest they recovered when Pompey and M. Crassus were Consuls. Their power thus recovered they kept till the Emperours swallowed it up themselves, and lest them little more than a name, which continued till the time of Constantine. As for the Ensigns of their Office, they were not the Pratexta, had no Littors or Sargeants, neither used they a Curule Chair : onely a fort of Beadle, called Viator, went before them. For want of these Gerechonies, as because they entred not at the beginning of the year, and laid Plutarch writerh that some held them to be no Magistrates, but rather a curb Several other and restraint to such. Lastly, besides these Tribunes, and the Tribuni Celerum: formerly mentioned, there were afterwards many other forts, as Tribuni Militum, and Tribani Ararii, during the Commonwealth: under the Emperours are found Tribunus Voluntainm, Tribunus Matrimoniorum, Tribunus Chartariorum, Tribunus Provinciarum, Tribunus Fori, and Tri-not down their Office upon the Creation of a Dictator, which others did,

Kkk 2

Power.

Their num-

Velfci.

SECT. I. bunu. Scholarum, concerning which Caffiodorus in his Epistles, and Liffins in his Commentary of the Magistrates of old Rome are to be con-43. The Commons having got from the Senate a confirmation of the Office of Iribanes, obtained further, that they might yearly chuse out of their own body two, to be as Ministers to these Officers; to Judge certain causes referred to them from the Iribanes, take care of publick buildings and provisions. These were first called the Ministers and Assistants of the Tribunes ; but afterward faith Dienysius from one of their Duties had the name of Ædiles. Many things of great confequence were committed to their truft, being very much like to the Agoranomi amongst the Greeks. Feftus acknowledging that in the beginning Ldiles was a Magistrate who took care both of publick and private buildings, yet faith he was so called, quod facilis ad eum plebis aditus effet. Truer is the derivation which Varro giveth, agreeable to that of Dionysius; that they were named Adiles, from Ades the buildings, of which they took care, or those particularly, wherein the Plebiscita were kept, of which they had the over-fight. This later Etymology is rendred by Pomponias, who in his fecond book of the Original of Law, describing the several Offices of Magistracy, maketh the end of the constitution of the Adiles to have been, that they might take care of that house where the Decrees of the people were laid up. Whence foever the word was derived it came out of Latium, being a name of certain Magistrates in the Latine Towns, as was also Dictator and Duumvir, as some observe out of Spartianus. To these Ædiles Plebis, who were instituted in the 271 year of the Citie, at the same time with the Tribunes, were added two more out of the Pairitian order 117 years after , called for diffinction Adiles Curules, because they used the Curule Chair, whereas the other onely sare on Benches, as the Tribunes and Quaftors. The occasion of creating those shall be shewn in its place, the end was onely then for celebrating of Games.

The Adiles created.

44. This number continued till the time of C. Julius Cafar, who in the 710 year of the Citie added two more, whom he would have created also (a) Died. out of the Patritians. They were called (a) Cereales from Ceres, being ap- 116.41. pointed to take care of, and make provision for Corn. This number of fix thus distinguished, continued till the time of Constantine, as is probably conjectured, and were as most other Offices of Magistracy taken away by him.

Their Office.

should be vvorshipped.

The Ediles, faith (b) Cicero, are the Curators of the Citie, of provisions, and of (b) 2. de folemn Games. Of the Citie, because they looked to publick works and Tem- Legibia. ples; made provision against fires (which Augustus seemeth to have charged upon them faith Lipfius) had inspection over Funerals, and such like Rites of smaller moment; over Marriages and Adulteries, Baths, Aqueducts, Sinks, and Streets, both for repairing and cleanling of them. Of Provisions, for that they had the over-fight of all things to be fold, men, and other creatures, determining, judging, and censuring by their words and edicts. Of solemn Games, and onely folemn (not votive and private ones) as the Ludi Florales, Circenfes, Megalenfes, Romani, &c. Sometimes at their own charge they made these shews, and ever examined the Fables written before they were acted. And (whether from this inspection of Play-books it came or no is uncertain) they feem to have been Licensers and Judges of other writings, being ordered by a Decree of the Senate, as (c) Taciens telleth us, (c) Analis to burn the Papers of Comminas Cordus. It is further (d) observed, that the lib.

Generals when they returned home after some victory, delivered up the Corn (d) fame and Provisions which had been made prize, to them, as the Captives to the Guilleman. Prater, and the money to the Quafter. All such Victuallers as offended against the Laws, as also Monopolizers and others that transgressed in this kind, they accused to the people, and with the Fines celebrated Games, made Presents to their gods, or some publick works. Lastly, 'tis observed, that they took care that none but Roman gods, and those after the Roman manner onely,

45. But, to return to the flory, the rabble having obtained these Officers, SECT. I. War with the willingly gave their names to the Expedition against the Volsei, under conduct of Posthumius Cominius the Conful. He took Longula and Polustia Dionis lib 6. with no great difficulty, and presently laid frege to Corioli a strongly fortified Plularch, in Town, and the head of the Nation. The Antiates coming to the relief of Coniulano.

Marcius.

this place, he left part of the Army to continue the fiege under the Command of Titus Largius, and with the other went to give them battel. Lirgins attempting to storm the Town, the Inhabitants fallied out, and charged the Romans so furiously, that they forced them back into their Camp : all but a few whom C. Marcius, a Patritian of great Nobility, and greater Valour, kept about him. This Marcins with fo small a Company received the violence of the Enemy, and doing great execution, forced him at length into the Town, and following himself rushed in with him, whereat the besieged were so afrighted, that not confidering their own numbers, they fled to the contrary part of the Citie, and suffered him to let in the rest of the Army. When the Soldiers now fell to plunder, he suffered them not, but hasted to the battel to help the Conful, and with the good news of his successe to chear the Army. 46. He defired of Cominius that he might be suffered with his men to fight against the middle battel, wherein the chief strength of the Enemies lay, which obtaining, he shewed there more valour than formerly, and was the greatest cause of the victory. The day following the Conful gave him extraordinary commendations, and a good share of booty before it came to be divided amongst the Soldiers; but he would accept of nothing except an horse, which gained him greater honour from the whole Army, and moved A.M.3512.

Sirnamed Cariolamus. Posthumius to bestow the sirname of Coriolanus upon him for his incompa- 01.71, and 4. rable valour shewn at that place. The Volsci were by this overthrow forced V.C. 261. to submission, and made their peace. This year was the League of Amity Sp. Cassio 2. and Confederacy renewed with the Latines with all chearfulnesse, because Pollumo Comithey had been faithfull in the late Sedition and War, and had fent to congra- no coff. tulate for the peace made betwixt Nobility and Commons. The Senate for this Civil Union decreed supplications or thanks to their gods, a third feria, or Holy day, to be added to the other two Latine Feria, whereof Tarquinius had dedicated one, when he Conquered Hetruria, and the People the other after the banishment of Tarquinius. In this Consulship died also Agrippa Menenius, whom the People out of gratitude resolved to bury at the publick charge, every man contributing fomething, because he died poor, and when the Senate would needs defray the charge out of the Treasury, they beflowed the money upon his Children. Now also the Census being celebrated above 1 10000 heads were Ceffed.

47. The year following wherein T. Geganius Macerinus, and P. Minucins were Cousuls, a great dearth fell upon the Citie, the effect of the late Sedition. For, the Commons having departed a little after the Autumnal Æquinoctial, about the time of fowing, the Countrey was forfaken of huf- Disays. 1.7. band-men; the richer fort betaking themselves to the Patritians, and the poorer to the Army, and the division continued till a little before Mid-winter.

All the middle space of time there was no tillage, though it was most proper for fowing, and for some time after the agreement, it could scarce be renewed, for that Slaves had run away, and there was great fearcity of Cattels

by these means for the year following they were little beforehand in Corn, either for feed or provisions. This put the Senate upon sending into several parts of Italy, and also into Sicily, to buy Corn. But notwithstanding their care, the multitude being exceedingly pinched with Famine, raised tumults, getting together by companies, and laying all the fault upon the Fathers, as if by their wilfull neglect they had in this way revenged themselves. The Volfei being acquainted with this new Sedicion, and the weak Estate of Rome, conspired how to improve the advantage; but were diverted by a grievous plague, which so raged, as Velime a Noble Citie of that Countrey was almost utterly exhausted, the small remnant of the Inhabitants whereof gave up

Which caufeth a Sedi-

45. But

A dearth.

Put all into a flame.

SECT. 1. themselves to the Romans, defiring they would fend a Colony thicher. 48. Of this advantage the Senate was very glad, to lessen the multitude of the City: and the poor were content to inhabit to fertil a place; but when they confidered the danger of infection, they were again discouraged, and wrested this to so bad a sence, as to make it a design to destroy them. But the Senate laying a great penalty upon fuch as refused to go, many obeyed and went thither, as also to Norba a Latin Town. This intaged more luch as staid behind, being still pinched by the famine, so that raising great multitudes, they called the Tribunes into the Comitium. Great strife hapned betwixt the Confuls and them. The Tribunes affirming they had promifed not to interrupt them in their discourses to the People, to which the other answered, that it was onely when they called the People together, not when the Confuls themselves did it, as now they had done, to promise them all fair accommodation from the Senare. Hereupon Brutus, who being fo great a sticklet before, was chosen one of the first Tribunes, devised a Law, which under fuch a penalty as the Tribunes should impose, forbad any one to contradict or interrupt them, when they spoke to the People. Such as could or would not give fecurity for the payment of the fine, were to be put to death, and their goods be facred to Ceres. If any controversie arose about the fine, it was to be determined by the judgment of the People. 49. This Law being enacted by the Suffrages of the Tribes, caused greater disturbance; the Senare refusing to ratifie the resolves of the People, and the People the Decrees of the Senate; ver proceeded it not to any greater inconveniency than words, and some blows without weapons. For the poor broke not into the store-houses of the rich, but were content to purchase victuals at an excessive rate; and when money failed were contented with roots and herbs: neither did the rich deal harfhly with the poor, but carried it rowards them as indulgent fathers, fo that we mult fay, it was the infirmity of the Government, and not any bad disposition of the People which caufed the Seditions. The Confuls, to divert their minds, and eafe the charge, offered to lead them out into the Enemies Country, but few or none would give their names; fo that Marcius Coriolanus with some Patritians, and a few of their Clients made incursions, and returned home loaden with booty; the knowledge whereof made the poorer fort murmur against their Tribunes, who had diffwaded them from the Expedition. The following Confuls M. Minucius Augurinus, and A. Sembronius Maranina, famous for their abilities both in War and Peace, bent themselves, by making provision for Corn, to allay the prefent diffempers; though not with wished successe. They procured much to be imported, and this Summer returned those that were Corn brought fent into Sicilie, with a great quantity of Whear, whereof half they bought at a very cheap rate, and half was bestowed on them by Gelon, the Son of Dinomenes. Now the Pairitians confidering how to dispose of the Coin; fome were for felling it to the poor at easie rates, thereby to win upon the multitude, but others urged they were to be harflily used and afflicted, and the Corn to be fold to them on dear rates; that by necessity they might be brought to fobriety, and become subject to the Laws. 50. Amongst these was Coriolanus the chief, being offended with the counfel thereupon,

And this a new Law in behalf of the Tribunes.

Commons, as was given out, for a repulle at the last election of Consuls. He had been ever an extraordinary affertor of the power of the Nobility, which made the People afraid to chuse him; but now incensed he much more shewed his inclination, openly declaiming against the innovation of the multitude, and exhorting others to refult the petulant endeavours of the Tribunes and rabble. The Confuls calling together the Senate, he inlarged himfelf in a fet speech to this purpose, and pressed that by force they should take away the Tribune (hip, as the onely means for the recovery of the State; concluding with his opinion, that no favour at all should be shewed to the multitude in the fale of Corn. Some were offended with this freedom, perceiving what inconvenience it would bring ; but others approving of it; the Tribunes who were present (say both Dionysia and Plasarch) ran forth, and crying out, called the People together, and declared to them the effect of SECT.I. Marcan his speech. The multitude inraged, would have violated the Senate instantly, but that the Tribunes stayed them, laying the whole blame upon Marcins. They fent some Beadels for him to come and answer it before the People, but they returning with nothing but ill words, they went themfelves, and commanded the Ediles to apprehend him. These were Braim and Icilim the first Tribunes, who going to do what was injoyned, were repulfed and beaten by the young Parritans he had got about him. This put all into a flame, the whole City being gathered together and ready to deffroy it felf : but by the wifdom of the Confuls the matter was put off till the following day. Then the Confuls laboured to heal the breach, confirming as from the Fathers, what was formerly granted to the Commons, and palliaring as much as might be the supposed offence of Marcine. The Tribunes answering, inveighed against the Senate, as desirous to break their faith, and laying open the fault of Marcau, concluded the action with a Decree of their College, That he should be forthwith east down headling from the Tarpeian Rock. For, hiving given him liberty to speak, he was so far from recanting his former speeches, that he flew out into the same invectives, as they were termed.

The Adiles laying hands on him, the Patritians again rescued him, the soher part even of them taking it ill he should be condemned to death without due processe, and the more understanding fort of the Commons not approving of the attempt; fo as a great tumult being raifed; the Tribunes nulled their former Decree, and fer him a day wherein to answer, and stand or fall by the judgement of the People. In the mean time the Senate, by felling the Corn at moderate rates, and by intreaties, fought either to procure the tryal to be utterly laid afide, or at least to defer it till the wrath of the multitude should be appealed, which was also to be imployed in a War against Antium. When the former could not be done, and the War was blown over, the Confuls being very unwilling to let the People take so much upon themselves, as without Decree of the Senare first had (according to the antient custom) to passe their judgement in any case, procured the Tribunes first to sue out such a Decree, on this condition, that they might be heard freak their minds, and each Senator before he gave his judgment, fwear folemnly, as was usual in judicaturie processe, to deliver what he thought most behoveful for the Publick. The Tribunes then argued much in behalf of the Commons, who they faid had undergone the hear of all Wars, both in the time of Kings, in the expulsion of them, and fince in the inlarging the Roman Dominion; in confideration whereof, they could not in conficience have leffer privileges than of late they had obtained. They aggravated by feveral circumstances the crime of Marcine, who in so high a manner had gone about to infringe them, and therefore as well for maintenance of right, as the fafety of the City, they defired he might be left to the justice of the People. Apprin Clandiu Stiffy impugned the Decree, arguing that the Senate would be enervated, and the Commonwealth betrayed, if they granted to the People power of judging Patritians.

12. M. Valerius, and other popular men made a better construction of the People's defire, thinking they would use this power moderately, and in opposition to Appius hispolitick reasons, strangely conceived it would make for the security of the Commonwealth, and particular members thereof, if the Commons were admitted to some share in the Government; that so it might neither wholly lye in the Patritians not Plebeians, but be tempered and poised betwire both. He urged, that they had alsaied the Kingly power. by giving it to two annual Magistrates, and that therefore there was no fear of it's degenerating into Tyranny, being also awed by the overlight of 300 most prudent and worthy persons, of which the Senate consisted. But for the Sentre it felf, there was no curb; for that it might afterwards (though of the present members he had no cause to judge so) draw all things into excremity, and indeed ruine the State, except the People might be admitted

SECT. 1. to have an hand in the judgment of fuch faults as concerned the Commonwealth, as when any was accused of moving Sedition, affecting Tyranny, Treason, or the like crimes: because the more solemn and severe the tryal was, ambitious men would be the more terrified from such attempts. The generality inclining to give up the man, Marcius demanded of the Tribunes whereof they would accuse him. They consulting with themselves apart, knew not well how to form an impeachment out of his former words, which might passe with the Senate, and therefore answered, they would lay the affectation of Tyranny to his charge. Hereat he very chearfully put himfelf upon tryal, not refusing the severest punishment, if it could be proved; and a Decree of the Senare passed accordingly, time being given him till the the third Market day, to prepare for it. For a Market was kept once in nine dayes, at which time the People that lived in the Country, came either to traffick, receive justice, or give their Suffrages in such matters as either primarily concernd them, or were referred from the Senate. When the day came, a greater multitude of Country-men than ever formerly was feen. early in the morning placed it felf in the Forum, and the Tribunes called the People to the Comitia Tributa, or Assemblies of the Tribes, severing each Tribe from another by cords. Now it having been the custom for the People to give their suffrages by Centuries in the Campus Martius in arms, and under their Centurions, the Pairitians called hard for them, and protested against this innovation; but by the other way of Centuries brought in by Servius, the ordinary fort of People being excluded, (for that most commonly the two first Classes carried it from the other four) the Tribunes would in no case suffer it, and the crime of Coriolanus seeming to concern all alike, at length they obtained the confent of the Patritians to this innovation.

People.

53. Minucius the Conful beginning the action, declared the worth of the person now to be judged, and exhorting the People to mildnesse, signified He answereth that the Senate became petitioners in his behalf. Sicinius one of the Tribunes faid, he would neither betray the liberty of the People, nor fuffer another to do it; therefore if the Patritians would, as they pretended, subject him to their judgment, he would give forth the balls without any more to do, to which the Conful replyed, they did so, but on this condition, that he should answer to the charge of affected Tyranny, and therewith protesting, went down. Sicinius then ripping up all that ever Coriolanus did, that might any way make for his purpose, laboured to put a bad construction upon it. But when the party came to speak, he so related what particular services he had done the State, and shewed the skars received all over his body; withall, those that he had saved in the Wars, made such Ismentation in his behalf, that the People generally cried out he was to be discharged. Then Decius another of the Tribunes Repping up, faid, that feeing the Senate, as the Conful alleged, had absolved Marcins from those words he had spoken in their house, and suffered him not to be accused for them, he would wave his words, and come to actions, by which he would make good the charge. Their was a certain Law, that all booty and plunder got in War, should be appropriated to publick use, so as no General was to meddle with it, but give it up into the hands of the Quafter. Now, whereas no man ever brake this Law, or so much as spake against it, this Marcins, saithhe, hath dared to contemn it: for when in the late incursion into the Territories of Antium, we had got great plenty of Slaves, Cattel, and Provisions, he neither delivered these things up to the Quastor, nor payed any money unto the Treasury, but divided all the booty amongst his friends, which could not but be taken as an argument that he intended to inflave his Country; it being the custom of Tyrants, this way to procure themselves instruments for their purpose. Though he had done this not with any finister intention, but for the fervice of his Country, at such time, as all were full of Seditions at home, and the Enemy from abroad wasted the Roman Territories; yet the multitude interpreted it in the same sence as Decims, and the whole matter was quite changed; he being abashed at so unexpected a charge, and the Confuls

Consuls and Patririans utterly to seek what to answer. The Tribunes then SECT. 1. te banished. named perpetual banishment, and gathered the suffrages of the Tribes, which being 21 in number, 9 onely absolved him, and so he stood condemned by the major part.

54. This was the first sentence passed by the people upon any Patritian, and henceforth the Tribunes were wont to set the day to whomsoever they pleased; whereby the power of the Commons was inlarged exceedingly, and the interest of the Patritians was more and more diminished; Plebeians at length being admitted into the Senate, Offices, and Priesthoods, which in former times were onely communicated to the other: the Senate partly against their wills and by constraint, partly by a wife forefight giving way to it, as will be feen in due place. Marcius being accompanied home with the lamentations and tears of many, faluted his Mother, Wife, and Children, as they made pitifull complaints, and without any appearance of trouble, bidding them bear their condition cheerfully, straitway departed out of the Citie, attended onely by a few Clients, and without any thing to bear his charges. He went to Antium, and there in the habit and posture of an Dionysius Haliobnoxious suppliant betook himself to Tullus Attins, a min of royal condi- carnaff. 1.8. tion amongst the Volsci, both for Nobility, Riches, and Valour, whom he knew to be his greatest Enemy in that Nation, because in battel they had often challenged each other, and out of Æmulation added a private to the publick hatred. But knowing him to be of a magnanimous mind, and most willing to catch hold of any advantage against the Romans, he cast himself at his feet, bidding him either avenge his Countrey of him, or else him against Rome, which by her unnatural carriage toward him had forfeited all duty and service that she might have expected at his hands. Tullus imbracing him with fingular kindnesse, resolved to make use of his great abilities. Marcius advised that some fair pretext might first be sought for War, and for that purpose sending many of the Volsei to behold the solemn Games at Rome, caused one to go to the Consuls, and accuse them of having some design against the Citie, that so they forcing them out on a sudden, might be said to have broken the peace. This accordingly succeeding (for the Consuls commanded all by Proclamation to be gone before Sun-fet) Tullus fo aggravated the matter to his Countrey-men, that he procured them to fend to Kome to demar back all the Towns and Territories which by War had been taken from them. 5. The Senate taking the meffage in great fcorn, answered, that if the Volsci first took up Arms, the Romans would last lay them down. Tullus then perswading the Vosci to the War, procured Marcius to be joyned with him as General, with full power, who presently invading the Roman Dominions, wasted all such grounds where ere he came as belonged to the Plebeians, not suffering any thing to be touched which belonged to any of the Nobility. His defign was accomplished; for this raised great envy and malice against the Patritians, who upbraiding the people that they had banished unjustly so considerable a man, were accused with greater indignation, that to be revenged for former injuries they had procured Marcius to invade the Countrey, feeing they were idle spectators, when others were undone, and kept their goods, being out of all danger of the War. Coriolanus leading home his men richly laden with booty, was fent out shortly after with one half of the Forces, and taking by furrender the Town of the Circeians, a Roman Colony, thence invaded the Latines, who being Confederate with Rome fent thither for relief; but the common people were averse to the War, and the Confuls being almost out of their Office were unwilling to begin any thing; so that the Messengers were dismissed without any satisfactory answer. Marcius then by storm took Tolerium, Lavici, Pes, and Bola, which he plundred, and made the Inhabitants Slaves. Such as yielded he mildly treated, but having stormed Bola, which lay within thirteen miles of Rome, he put almost all to the sword that were of age. The Volsci now so admired him, that fuch as were left to defend the Towns would not stay, but all flocked to him, owning him onely for their General. At Rome there was nothing but confusion, all being in despair, and seeking no relief any other way than by venting their spleen one against another; but when news cam that Lavinium was befieged, it made a marvelous, yet abfurd change in their minds. The people now cried out that Coriolanus was to be reffored by a repeal of the Decree for banishment; but the Senate utterly refused to affent to it, and plainly forbad it in full house; either for that they defired to oppose the people in all things, or would not have his restitution ascribed to the Commons: or else were incensed against Marcine, who was become Enemy to all, though but injured by some, and had declared against his own Countrey, wherein he knew the greater and better fort to sympathize with him, and account his no other than a common grievance.

Stirreth up against Rome.

CHAP. IV.

Invadeth ire

He marcheth . 56. The resolve of the Senate being published, the people could do notowards Rome, thing as to his restitution, the custom requiring that the Fathers should propound. Marcius hereupon rose from before Lavinium, and marching to-

